Hebron in the box and, as usual, he pitched a very fine game, striking out eight of the Hebron batters. Vannetter pitched a classy game, but not equal to that of Rogers, he made nine of the locals go to sleep. Snyder, who was on the mound for the second time, was out of the game, but he was safe on an error by Snyder. Rogers struck out, Kelly safe on a double, Snyder safe on a single, and the locals were out. Clore made an error on Vance's grounder and made a safe throw to a hit, and Mr. Clore was safe on another wobble of Clore and then Vannetter singled putting two across for the visitors. CAUGHT BY CAMERA

By MILDRED CAROLINE GOOD-RIEDEL

"Doughnuts!"

Ned Travers sniffed the air delicately, snatched his lips and through the trees towards a neat little farmhouse on the edge of the town. From its kitchen there came a constant odor of steam. It made Ned think of home and mother in its past suggestiveness of brown, crisp dough popping up into cozy nooks and crannies. Then he saw through an open window a dainty bustling young lady with tucked up sleeves and aproned and Ned thought of his sister. And then as the pretty maid set a great earthen bowl in the window, piled high with the creamy golden-baked morsels of her labor, Ned caught a full view of her winsome face. It gave his heart a warning thrill—and then a twinge.

Wherefore the latter? His pride answered promptly. Contrast brought a sudden blur to a manly longing heart. The picture before him was so sweet, so salacious that he would have liked to become a vital part of it. Of course the lovely face influenced this particular sentiment.

Ned was fairly down and out. Worse than that just at this special moment he was dust laden, travel worn, thirsty and hungry. He had but one possession of value with him, oddly out of place for negotiation just here and now. This was his rather bulky outfit for taking moving pictures.

Ned had been out for a month with a "movies" crew that had gone to pieces for lack of capital. A lesson well learned at heart, he was returning home, wiser, though chastened.

So he had little part in or claim to the social or esthetic phases of life just at the present time. With a sigh, for he was a poet and a dreamer at heart, he started in the direction of the near village. Just then, however, the fair came out of the house and went to the well near by. An inverted goblet decorated the pump post. She drew it full of water with a healthy farm girl's will, drained it and returned to the house.

The sight of the clear, sparkling water aggravated the thirst of the weary wayfarer. He boldly entered the yard and took half a dozen cool refreshing draughts. There was a rattie bench near at hand. He sat down to rest, appreciating the haven of peace about him. Then his glance fell upon the piled up heap of rich cookery set to cool on the window sill.

"What I was a boy again," murmured Ned. "It makes me think of the old happy days," and then he arose quickly from his careless attitude of repose. Either the young lady was lonely or she had noted his ardent glance at the doughnuts. She came tripping towards him, a plate in her hand well loaded with the product of her labor.

"I thought maybe you would be obliging enough to test my first attempt at doughnuts," she said quaintly.

"I am hungry enough," admitted Ned in love with that bonny face twice as much as before.

She stood near by as he devoured the first of her kindly offerings with a bright satisfied smile.

"Well, what is the verdict," she challenged with teasing eyes.

"More," answered Ned gallantly. "This must be the original hand of milk and honey."

"I was flattered, I feared I might have spoiled them," said Eva Dodge with a tinge of relief.

"They will be spoiled quick enough if you are as liberal with others as myself," she responded and then Miss Dodge told of a prospective barn dance with the accompaniments of doughnuts, cider and chicken sandwiches.

She pointed anon as she looked at the sun and told of how her brother, Alan, should have reported two hours ago to help trim up the barn.

"Suppose I try to earn the most famous meal I have enjoyed in a year by acting as his substitute," suggested Ned.

staggered her pretty pink cheeks in dismay at the general effect, brother Alan approved.

Nothing could do but that the stranger must stay for the evening and for the night and when they learned that Ned played the violin they were more insistent than ever.

Ned told as if he was leaving prepared as he departed from the farmhouse the same afternoon. He carried with him a memory of his charming hostess that he knew would be abiding.

It was probably an hour later when he passed down a lane to notice a large barn belching with smoke pouring from its lower story. In a flash the business instinct assailed him. Any odd or picturesque scene was worth the money in the "movies." He ran within the right focus and set his machine going. Absorbed in getting it in correct operation, he looked less at the burning building than to the details of operation.

"It will work in well in some good 'movies' story," he told himself, and ran a full reel, taking in the gathering crowd and the varied incidents of excitement in the episode.

A month later when the film was produced, Ned chanced to see it. Then for the first time he observed that the first scene showed a man in full view leaping from a window near the door, a burning piece of paper in his hand.

"There was an incendiary, then," he reflected, "just as I heard it hinted. Ah, me! how all this brings back that beautiful day in my life—pshaw! I must forget that."

But Ned could not forget. Eva—the name was on his lips in his dreams. That sweet face floated constantly through his mind. He had secured new and better work. He could afford a week's vacation. He resolved to see Eva, at least once more.

Ned reached the Dodge home to find it in a state of great commotion. All hands were anxious and troubled.

Alan, the brother of Eva, had been accused of burning the barn Ned had caught with his camera.

His pocket knife, it seemed, had been found near the structure. Then, too, his owner had quarreled with them and did not like him.

Alan claimed he had loaned his knife to a young fellow who worked for the owner of the barn, who had been beaten by the farmer in a quarrel and had afterward disappeared.

Ned felt that he was going to be of some use when he got a description of the missing man. It tallied to the one shown in the fire film. Ned went to the city for a duplicate. Half the town was at the motion picture playhouse the night it was shown. Half the town recognized the one figure in the foreground.

"You have saved my brother from disgrace," spoke Eva warmly to Ned. "How can I show my appreciation?"

"Some more of those wonderful doughnuts would be a grand reward," suggested Ned, smiling. And because her hand was just then resting within his own, he had the courage to tell Eva also how much he loved the maker of those same famous doughnuts.

And Eva blushing agreed to let him contract of supplying his favorite dainty for the remainder of their mutual lives.

MUST BE ABSOLUTELY CLEAN

Hands of Surgeon, Before Performing Operations, Are Washed in Most Thorough Manner.

Most people attribute the immense decrease rate of mortality in cases of severe surgical operations to the increased skill of the profession, to their greatly improved instruments, and the more skillful nursing which is obtained in these days. But the surgeon himself would tell you that it is almost all a matter of absolute cleanliness, the fact that nothing is left undone to insure absolute freedom from infection of any kind. This fact is emphasized by the extraordinary hand-washing regulations which are in force at the various hospitals. Everybody who is even remotely connected with an approaching operation is supposed to spend 20 minutes in the all-important process of washing his hands.

For five minutes the surgeon washes his hands with soap and water, and then cleans his finger-nails. When he has done this he spends another five minutes doing it all over again. But this is but a preparation for a third and far more drastic solution, for this time he must wash his hands in alcohol. Not content with this cleansing process, he must dip his hands through a process of sterilization, soaking them for at least five minutes in a wash of corrosive sublimate. By that time he may commence his duties, which mean life or death to some patient, with the satisfactory feeling that he has done his best to approach his task with clean hands.

Family Secrets

A man with an uncanny mania for figuring with figures produced pencil and paper and commanded a friend to "put down the number of your living brothers. Multiply by two. Add three. Multiply the result by five. Add the number of living sisters. Multiply by ten. Add the number of dead brothers and sisters. Subtract 150 from the result." It was done.

"Now," he said with a cunning smile, "the right-hand figure will be the number of deaths, the middle figure the number of living sisters, and the left-hand figure the number of living brothers."

And it was so.

IN SPORTING CLOTHES

DESIGNERS SHOW SOME GOOD NEW EFFECTS.

"Dressing the Part" is a Thing in Which Women Take Vital Interest, and the Fact Has Been Recognized.

By MARY DEAN

Sporting clothes are a matter of the moment and each new sport that is taken up by women means an additional costume, or perhaps several additional costumes, in the summer outfit. Dressing the part is the cornerstone of the average woman's interest in sports, and though each year the designers turn out sporting costumes more appropriate as well as more becoming than those of the previous year, attractiveness must not be sacrificed to practical utility if the model is to succeed in winning feminine approval.

There are rough necked suits for tramp and tramp, and various short skirts with the accompanying blouses and sweaters and proper boots.

The skirts for tramp are very short, and there is no choice of footwear at least, as the boots must always be made of short tan leather. These heavy boots must have wide thick soles and flat heels, and if they are well made, the sole should be perfectly flexible.

For the general utility tramp costume, nothing has ever taken the place of the old standby—the Norfolk suit. This has been modified and varied in a number of ingenious ways, but it retains the characteristic Norfolk cut.

This serviceable suit can be had in various materials, in the durable corduroy, khaki, which is durable enough in reality and handsome when new, but soon grows to look shabby under hard usage, and in the new English worsteds and tweeds, homespuns and did not like him.

Alan claimed he had loaned his knife to a young fellow who worked for the owner of the barn, who had been beaten by the farmer in a quarrel and had afterward disappeared.

Ned felt that he was going to be of some use when he got a description of the missing man. It tallied to the one shown in the fire film. Ned went to the city for a duplicate. Half the town was at the motion picture playhouse the night it was shown. Half the town recognized the one figure in the foreground.

"You have saved my brother from disgrace," spoke Eva warmly to Ned. "How can I show my appreciation?"

"Some more of those wonderful doughnuts would be a grand reward," suggested Ned, smiling. And because her hand was just then resting within his own, he had the courage to tell Eva also how much he loved the maker of those same famous doughnuts.

And Eva blushing agreed to let him contract of supplying his favorite dainty for the remainder of their mutual lives.

serges which seem to have been in vogue for this particular purpose.

The skirts of these suits are always short, at least from six to nine inches from the ground and are never killed, except in some cases there is an inverted plait.

One trapping out of the modified Norfolk cut shown by a firm which makes a specialty of sporting garments was of khaki. The suit was a three-piece affair. There was a blouse with a roll collar and fastened down the front with a single row of buttons, and a belt of the material which buttoned a little to the left.

The skirt was fastened to the blouse by means of small steel clasps. The skirt was fastened at either the back or front.

There was an inset place at the back and front underneath the buttoned plait to give more width to the skirt if desired.

Two large patch pockets trimmed the skirt. The coat was made of a warm wrap for the yoke.

After the game, the coats were attached, back and front, two box plaits running from yoke to the bottom of the coat. A belt of the material surrounded the coat at the waistline—running underneath the box plaits, and fastened at the front with a single button.

This is a general utility cape called the Lancaster cape, made of Scotch tweed. Such a wrap as this would be found useful in the out-door outfit—for either mountain or shore.

Slip MAY BE ELABORATE

Dainty Work Altogether Permissible on Garment for the Smallest of the Small.

There is but one joy greater than making one's wedding outfit for the mating with the one man—that of making a layette for the first little one.

The materials must be of the softest and finest and the stitches of the smallest. The little everyday slips will, of course, be necessarily rather simple; but it is now permissible to have a rather elaborate dress for baby's dress-up time, even though she is the tiniest of the tiny. Some of us do not approve of much elaboration for children, and so there is, for us who do approve, a compromise between elaboration and simplicity—the little muslin garment.

The small yoke will be so tiny that but two rows of the smocking will be required to form it. The neck is cut low and square; not low enough to expose the little chest, but a trifle lower than the collar. The whole garment is made in one and the yoke defined only by smocking. On the left side is placed a streamer rosette of ribbon. If desired, a row or two of smocking may be put about the bottoms of the sleeves. White thread and not silk should be used for smocking, as silk will yellow and form an unsightly contrast with the white material.

Girdles and Belts.

Wide girdles of soft colored satin are worn with white frocks of batiste or book muslin. These girdles are shirred or gathered into corselet effect. Another fancy is a sash of white silk braided with border of roman stripes. These are very smart with white cloth suits. Elastic worsteds belted with buckles are worn with sporting clothes, and for the same purpose are wide suede belts finished with patent leather.

Advice on Pasteurization.

The Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington has issued a monograph dealing with the cost of pasteurization from an engineering point of view. It contains desirable information for proprietors of creameries and milk plants and for designers and manufacturers of pasteurizing apparatus.

PRIZE FOOD.

Palatable, Economical, Nourishing.

A Nebraska woman has outlined the prize food in a few words, and that from personal experience. She writes:

"After our long experience with Grape-Nuts, I cannot say enough in its favor. We have used this food almost continually for seven years."

"We sometimes tried other advertised breakfast foods but invariably returned to Grape-Nuts as the most palatable, economical and nourishing of all."

"When I quit tea and coffee and began to use Postum and Grape-Nuts, I was almost a nervous wreck. I was so irritable I could not sleep nights, had no interest in life."

"After using Grape-Nuts a short time I began to improve and all these ailments have disappeared and now I am a well woman. My two children have been almost raised on Grape-Nuts, which they eat three times a day."

"They are pictures of health and have never had the least symptom of stomach trouble, even through the most severe stage of whooping cough they could retain Grape-Nuts when all else failed."

"Grape-Nuts food has saved doctor bills, and has been, therefore, a most economical food for us."

Net Slips.

Summer attire makes all that is worn underneath of additional importance. Rise of toes again, stick to floor, and continue for five minutes, or until you feel an active sense of fatigue. Be sure to inhale while rising off toes, and exhale while dropping heels to floor again. Rest for five minutes after this exercise.

Princess Slip is worn by many women in preference to the separate petticoat. The slip fits with kindly deference to the lines of the figure and are intended to take up as little room as possible under the outer garments.

Net, either plain or figured, is delightful for slips. There is little for the sheer orandy which fashions so many of the new undergarments. Whatever trimming is used on the slip is applied flat about the top and in the form of a lace or net trim all the way.

WOULD HAVE SUNDAYS DULL

British Member of Parliament Sees Mistake in Nonobservance of the Sabbath.

"I think Sunday ought to remain what some people call 'dull,'" said J. Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., speaking at Leicester. He appealed to religious institutions to see that Sunday is not secularized. People talked a lot of nonsense about the Scottish Sabbath, and did not know what they were talking about. If they were only trained to appreciate the Scottish Sabbath—it would take some amount of training—they would not be sorry if they had it.

All the talk about turning Sunday into a day of recreation was humbug and dangerous. In trying to do it they were beginning at the wrong end of the stick. They should not sacrifice the blessings they had got.

He looked forward to the time when everybody would have sufficient time for recreation during the secular days of the week. An enlightened democracy should value a day of spiritual rest so much that their hands would be lifted up against any man or movement that desired to secularize the Sunday.—London Chronicle.

Hero of War of 1812.

One hundred and eighty-five years ago, Capt. David Porter, one of the naval heroes of the War of 1812, was given a great popular ovation by the people of Philadelphia. Ten days previously Captain Porter had reached New York after a long and hazardous voyage from Valparaiso, where on March 28, he had commanded the frigate Essex. Her gallant, but unsuccessful fight against the British ships Phoebe and Cherub. Upon their arrival in New York, the surviving officers and members of the crew of the Essex were given an enthusiastic welcome. From New York, Captain Porter proceeded to Philadelphia, where another popular ovation awaited him. On his arrival in the suburbs of the city the horses were taken from his carriage and it was drawn to the hotel by the populace.

Airmen's Dinner Gong.

One of the strangest dinner gongs in the world hangs outside a mess tent at the army flying camp at Netheravon, on Salisbury Plain, England. It is an old cylinder of a Gnome aeroplane engine, strung between two posts. When sharply struck the cylinder gives out a clear, resonating gong, which calls the airmen to their dinner as effectively as an ornate dinner gong.

Makes Trouble for Berlin. The father of unrest, as Bal Gangadhar Tilak, a Chitpavan Brahman, and at one time a member of the Bombay Legislative council, has been styled, has lately been released from prison. In 1908 he was prosecuted on a charge of seditious incitement in connection with articles in the Kesari, a newspaper owned and conducted by himself. This was just after the Muzafferpur outrage, when two English ladies were killed by the explosion of a bomb, and in the articles which formed the basis of the charge assassination by such means was spoken of with approval. A high court jury found Tilak guilty and he was sentenced by Mr. Justice Davur to six years' transportation. In view of his age and health this was commuted to simple imprisonment at Mandalay.

And the Preacher Mused. A mother sent her little daughter down to open the door and entertain the minister, Mr. Black, while she finished dressing. When she appeared the little kitten ran in ahead of her, and the tiny maiden jumped up and down and screamed to the top of her voice: "Oh, Kitty, witty, go out, quick."

The mother was horrified, and said: "Daughter, what makes you act so?"

"Well, mother, did said last night that Mr. Black's sermons were enough to make a cat sick; and I don't want mine sick."

On the Revival of Business

O. Cheever.
Dear Friend: How's business you ask me.
Well, business is getting worse and worse for some parties, especially the Republican, the Socialist and the Centrist; also the Progressive, if you can call what's left of it a party, which means that business is getting better and better for the country.

You may have noticed that one of the world's foremost undertakers, V. Huerta, has made an assignment, with no assets, and "suspended the ranch," as they say down there. According to reports this was largely due to psychopathic conditions.

The well-known firm of O'Gorman, Reed & Hitchcock, reports great activity in the wrecking business, but so far they have nothing to show but a deficit.

On the other hand, there has been a lack of activity in the suit department of the Attorney General's office at Washington, but as it was purely psychological it has been remedied by the Chief Psychologist in the White House.

The steel and iron business continues firm, but there seems to be no inflation in gas—at least, I have heard nothing from Sulzer for a long time.

I was talking the other day with a Republican business expert of the old school and he told me that the trouble was that the country was flooded with the cheap foreign products underselling our home products, while the price of everything was going up. So, it wasn't the Colonel, altho it sounds like him.

Along the line of the New Haven road the dividend crop has been a failure, but there has been a crop of the country is big enough to have made it a serious problem in the old days for wheat carrying lines to invent a system whereby after paying dividends, they could conceal the surplus from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Money, I am told, is easy. It always has been with people who have it. But what is more important is that the people who have it are easier in their minds, which makes them easier for those that haven't it.

The only sign I see of slack business outlook is in the old and once prosperous firm of Barnes & Murphy, experts in wire pulling and pipe-laying. I doubt if they can long survive the present policy of outside wiring and visible plumbing.

Our true business policy will not be completed until the Administration business bills in the Senate are passed. By these bills I believe the President is doing for business what has been done for the aeroplane—providing a stabilizer. When it is through I shall not be surprised to find that even big business, the most modern flying machine, is not only safe, but fool-proof.

The Peoples Deposit Bank of Burlington will give $25.

The docket for the coming term of circuit court which convenes next Monday is very light—only nine new cases filed since the last term—two of these are divorce suits, the most important cases to be tried at this term are the Commonwealth vs. J. C. Byland, and the Stephens-Kelly murder trial, brought to this county on a change of venue, and which resulted in a hung jury at the April term of court.

A. B. Renaker, the local real estate man, sold one day last week, to B. E. Hume, the house and lot in Burlington belonging to Harry Roberts, and Eric Rouse's house and lot in Hobson to C. H. Youell and W. L. B. Rouse. Consideration on both sales not known.

Autoists like good roads, and where you find a community with autos you'll generally find good roads. Why not apply the road money to buying each fellow an auto, and then there will be no trouble about keeping the public thoroughfares in condition?

Prof. Elbert S. Ryle and wife left the latter part of last week for Fredonia, Caldwell county, where the Professor will take charge of a high school as Principal. Their many friends in Burlington and vicinity wish them success in their new home.

Ex-County Assessor T. G. Willis has been dangerously ill at his home in Eulithia neighborhood for several days.

G. T. Gaines has a fine lot of Fultz seed wheat which he will sell at the market price to any one wanting wheat.

Miss Beessie Jones, who united with Gunpowder Baptist church some time ago, was baptised last Sunday.

Where is the man who predicted that it never rained during the month of July?

The growing tobacco crop in the county is doing nicely since the recent rains.

WALTON.

Hon. Wm. H. Hind of Covington spent Sunday here with his many friends.

Miss Elizabeth Bracht, of Williamsstown, spent part of the past week here with her sister, Mrs. E. H. Boutwell.

Wm. D. Kennedy and Dr. C. C. Metcalfe spent Monday at Burlington, taking over the primary election returns.

Mrs. R. W. Carpenter is spending the week at Georgetown and Lexington with friends and attending the fair.

John Wood of Louisville, spent Monday here with friends and in the interest of his wire fence business.

J. D. Renaker and son L. D. Renaker of Dry Ridge, spent part of last week here with friends, and buying building material and the improvement of their property.

Mrs. Chas. H. Yoing of Folsom, who formerly resided here, has been in the Bethesda Hospital at Cincinnati the past week, undergoing a surgical operation last Friday for an internal trouble, and she is now rapidly improving.

Dr. G. F. Holloway who takes considerable interest in religious matters, filled the pulpit at the Walton Baptist church last Sunday night in a most acceptable manner, preaching a very interesting and entertaining discourse.

The Royal, the Al-dome Moving Picture Show, opened for the public patronage Tuesday night, and is going to meet with popular favor as the proprietor Roy D. Stamler is up-to-date in all of his methods, and with the aid of the electric light the pictures are as well presented as any in the large cities, and the high class of the pictures will insure the show a good patronage.

The celebration last Saturday night in honor of the advent of the electric light enterprise in Walton was a most successful affair, and was very largely attended, some estimating the crowd to be from 1,500 to 2,000. There was plenty of free lemonade, and a brass band from Cincinnati discoursed sweet music during the whole evening. Edwin M. Johnson officiated as the chairman and he performed his part well and to the satisfaction of all. Judge J. G. Tomlin made the opening address, and was followed by Hon. Emmett Orr, of Covington, who entertained the crowd with an address of a most enjoyable nature, interspersing the speech with humorous anecdotes that were pleasing to everybody. Jno. L. Voss, Judge Chas. Strother, M. W. Mayfield and others made speeches. It was at the conclusion of a happy hit by Mr. Orr that Mr. E. H. Yoing, who had been given the honor, touched the button that turned on the electric light and made the right as well as the left light machinery worked to perfection and there was not a single item to complain of, and the public are now enjoying the acquisition of the splendid system that Mr. Mayfield has established for the lighting of the town.

The Clover Leaf Creamery is turning out about 1200 pounds of butter per week. Pretty good considering the weather conditions for the past few months.

Last week wheat jumped to $1 a bushel, and those farmers who had sold for eighty cents do not now believe that its the early bird that gets the worm.

The interior of the Circuit Court room, the Superintendent of Schools and county judges offices have been repapered and they now present an up-to-date appearance.

The tobacco in Boone is very spotted. The farmer who got his crop out early and worked it will grow tobacco. The crop is looking much better since the rains of last week.

The Lawrenceburg, Ind., fair is in progress this week. The next on the program is the big fair at Erlanger. Then comes the good old Boone County Fair at Florence, where everybody loves to go.

A petition was circulated in Burlington, last week, soliciting aid for Leslie McCallion, who had one of his team of mules killed by lightning a few days ago. Everybody was willing to contribute to so worthy a cause.

A "spottier" is said to be going over the State taking a list of those who are owners of motorcycles and autos who have not paid their State license. Every motorcycle owner must pay $5.00 and auto owners must pay from $10 to $20.

The whistle of the threshing machine has been heard in this vicinity for the past week. The grain is yielding very well. J. E. Smith and G. F. Gaine's crops of wheat yielded about twenty bushels per acre. Mr. Smith threshed 400 bushels and Mr. Gaine 390.

The weather last Saturday was ideal, and quite a large crowd of young people from all parts of the county spent an enjoyable afternoon under the shady forest trees, tripping the light fantastic to sweet strains of music at the picnic at Harvest Home grounds given by the young men of Hobson neighborhood.

If those women who appear on the streets in one of those "stay-in-the-shade-dresses" could see themselves or others as they are, it would certainly curb their tendency toward making their appearance in one of those transparent frocks.

A great deal of complaint is being made by farmers in different parts of the county about thieves stealing their chickens. Some say that their flocks of two or three hundred fowls have been reduced to about 50 or 60. If this thing keeps up some one is going to need the assistance of a physician soon.

The greatest damage done by the drouth in this county is to the gardens. It is so late now that the rains will not help the garden truck very much, but will revive the pastures, which in some parts had nearly burned up for the lack of water. The water supply for stock was also getting low and the rains have replenished the supply.

Edwin M. Gaine, who is manager of the National Cash Register Co., with headquarters at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, was visiting his relatives in the Idlewild neighborhood the latter part of last week. He was in Burlington last Saturday meeting his many friends, who were glad to see him looking so well. He came through from Milwaukee in his automobile.

The annual basket meeting of the colored Baptist church was held at the church in Burlington, last Sunday, and was attended by the largest crowd ever in attendance. They were here from every part of the county. Covington, Erlanger, Ohio and Indiana, coming in automobiles, auto trucks, buggies, carriages, road wagons and horse back. Good order prevailed.

While the recent rains were not of sufficient quantity and quality to be worth many thousands of dollars to the crops. A great change can already be noted in the tobacco and corn. It has put fresh hope in the hearts of farmers and they now feel that their years work will not prove such a failure after all. When you see the farmer prospering you will be pretty apt to see many others in such condition as a result.

As a rule the farm boy who has been properly raised makes a better showing in life than his city cousin. He is preferred in most of the occupations in life, because he is usually free from bad habits, has more nerve, is willing to work and more reliable. The farmer boy spends more time in study and less time in frolic and when he reaches manhood he is a safer charter and makes a more desirable employee and citizen.

What are you doing to increase the attractions of your county fair? Consider with the directors or managers. Tell them what the farmer wants to see at the fair, what he desires to learn at the fair. The fair should be both a pleasure and a profit. The farmer does not have many holidays and his days at the fair should be holidays. He wants amusement, but with it he wants instruction. Say that to the managers of your fairs.

Commissioner of Agriculture Newman says that from reports received he is of the opinion that the rains have been more or less general throughout the State and the corn crops, especially the late corn, will not fall so far below the average.

The drouth has worked havoc with the Burley tobacco, but the shortage in the crop will be made up in the price received for the tobacco. Commissioner Newman has received a report from the Federal Government as of July 1, which states that there will be a shortage of 200,000 pounds of tobacco this year. The price of tobacco, however, will be much higher than if a full crop was made.

Prof. E. L. Dix and family left last Monday for their new field of labor at Mayslick, Mason county, where the Professor will take charge of the Mayslick Consolidated school as Principal. During their five years sojourn here they made many friends and the people of Burlington and vicinity regret very much to lose them. Prof. Dix as Principal of the Boone Co. High School was a faithful and hard worker and earnestly and intelligently applied himself to the work which was his to do, and his intelligence and ability as a teacher were appreciated by every aide. The Recorder wishes them happiness and prosperity in their new home and congratulate the people of Mayslick who were so fortunate in securing them as citizens and teacher.

Last Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gaine entertained for their guest, Miss Selma Brel, a charming young lady from St. Louis, with a lawn party. Japanese lanterns strung around the yard gave it a very festive appearance. Sweet music by Messrs. Clifford McWethy and Christie led charm to the occasion. The party was given by Misses Kreylich, Thompson, Porter, Asbury, Brel and Mrs. Gaine were highly enjoyed and appreciated the many guests who came from Petersburg, Burlington, Ludlow and Burlington, to enjoy the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Gaine. It is certainly known how to entertain in a royal manner. An elegant lunch was served. At 1 a. m. all reluctantly went to their homes, regretting that the time could not be extended indefinitely. All were unanimous in pronouncing Thursday evening the most delightful event ever.

MME. GAILLAUX IS ACQUITTED
OF THE MURDER OF EDITOR
GASTON CALMETTE.

VERDICT CREATES UPROAR

Friends and Opponents of the Former
Premier Cheer and Revile Him—
Result Is No Surprise in City of Paris.

Paris, July 30.—"Not guilty" is the verdict of the jury in the sensational trial of Mme. Gaillaux for murder, a case that has kept Paris excited and the world interested. The verdict was reached in less than an hour.

Mme. Gaillaux killed Gaston Calmette, editor of Le Figaro, not in cold blood, according to the jurors, but while temporarily insane through fear that he would publish letters which had passed between herself and Calmette before they were husband and wife.

It is probable that the unwritten law also plays its part in bringing about the acquittal of the beautiful wife of the former French premier. The verdict is a "point of honor" was dwelt upon at length by Maître Labori in his plea for the prisoner, who sat weeping softly as he talked. And the plea had its effect. Before he finished several of the jurors were in tears.

The verdict was no surprise to the thronged courtroom, but its announcement by the jurors was greeted with an uproar which seemed to shake the very walls of the palais de justice.

"Caillaux! Caillaux! Vive Caillaux!" screamed the adherents of the one time "strong man of France."

Murderers—let us spit on her," Calmette's supporters cried back. Out in the corridors, and in the streets, where throngs were jammed awaiting the verdict, there was still another uproar. Caillaux and his wife were alternately cheered and hissed, lauded and reviled. Crowds of Caillaux supporters cried his name and cheered wildly, then shouted cheers for M. Labori. Other crowds shouted cheers for Calmette and for the slain editor and hissed out curses at every mention of the former premier's name.

Mme. Gaillaux was sitting crouched in her chair, her face buried in her hands, when the jury entered with the verdict. Throughout the entire day she had been listening to alternate demands that her head pay the forfeit for her crime and pleas for her life. She had heard herself excoriated as a woman without shame, a murderer whose filial passion was dearer than human life. Then she had heard herself defended, heard mercy begged in her behalf. But through it all, her life—the things she held most sacredly secret—were laid bare.

All during the summing up, Mme. Gaillaux sobbed. At one time, during a particularly virulent attack on her character by Attorney Chenu, she fell in a dead faint and a recess had to be taken while physicians revived her. When the jury finally filed out to its deliberations, her entire body was withering, her cheeks were stained with tears and her eyes sunken.

Mme. Gaillaux looked up quickly as the jurors re-entered the court room with their verdict and clenched her fists so tightly that her finger nails cut into the flesh.

Then, as the words "Not guilty" were pronounced, with a wild, almost insane laugh that seemed half a sob, she rose with arms extended toward her husband. Her hair, already disheveled, came unfastened and fell about her shoulders.

"Joseph! Joseph!" she cried and then fell fainting into the arms of Maître Labori.

Sixty Are Wounded—King's Own
Scottish Borderers Fire Murderous Volley After Attack.

Dublin, July 28.—Two men and two women were killed and at least sixty persons were wounded in the first actual battle of the Irish embargo. It was a fight between Irish nationalists and the King's Own Scottish Borderers, and has aroused great excitement.

All the wounded are in hospitals and it is reported that at least seven are dying. Among the most severely hurt was M. J. Judge, prominent officer in the nationalist volunteers.

The fight was caused when the soldiers seized a consignment of contraband arms destined for the nationalists. The arms had been landed at Howth, a suburb not far from Dublin, and were brought to this city shortly after noon.

The authorities, having received secret information of the arrival of the rifles and ammunition, confiscated them as soon as they were brought inside the limits of Dublin.

The nationalists, who had hoped that the arms would be available for use in the threatened clash with the Ulster army, bitterly resisted the seizure, first in riots then in actual battle with the troops.

The King's Own Borderers, one of the "prize" regiments in the British army, formed a hollow square about the confiscated arms. Presenting a stone wall front to approach from all directions, the soldiers stood on guard awaiting the onslaught of the nationalists.

When the expected charge came, some of the nationalists bearing arms and others provided with stones and similar missiles with which to pelt the soldiers, the command was given to fire.

Only one volley was fired, two men and two women falling dead in the forefront of the attackers while the wounded dropped all about them.

The nationalists then retreated bearing their wounded with them and order was immediately restored. It is feared that other clashes may follow, the opening skirmish of the home rule warfare, as there is intense bitterness throughout Dublin over the loss of life.

Denver, July 29.—The noted mining town of Telluride was practically destroyed by a torrent that descended upon it, almost without warning, from Cornet creek. The flood resulted from a cloudburst about four miles up in the mountains.

Two women are known to have been drowned, and 15 children were rescued after a wall of water from eight to twenty feet high had hit the city.

That the loss of life was not heavier is considered almost miraculous. Cornet canyon runs a precipitous course directly into the city of Telluride. The town has a population of 4,000.

The physical loss is greater than any in Telluride yet realized. Experts declare that the property damage cannot be under $275,000. Not a residence or a business house in the little city, except a few cottages scattered along the sides of the hills, remains whole.

The dead are Mrs. John Johnson, wife of a miner, and Mrs. R. B. Blakey, a jeweler's wife. Thomas Welsh, mine owner, is missing.

When the flood hit the city proper there was no death of heroes. John Sands, teamster, and Harry Lyle, a miner, rescued 20 children who had been literally washed out of their homes.

L. & N. BRAKEMAN SHOT TO DEATH IN COLD BLOOD.

Passenger Train Held Up Near New Orleans—Robbers Get Small
Sum and Escape.

New Orleans, July 27.—Two bandits held up the New York flyer of the Louisville & Nashville road, just outside of New Orleans, killed brakeman Thomas Elgin, shot at the porter of one of the sleepers, robbed the conductor of $19.50 and a transfer man of $3.50 and then disappeared in the darkness of the surrounding swamps.

The police of New Orleans sent a posse of 50 men to hunt down the pair, and the railroad company sent out a special train with deputies.

The men boarded the train at New Orleans and remained in one of the sleepers until the limited slowed for the crossing. Then one of them pulled the bell cord, bringing the train to a stop. Instantly the leader, a tall man, who appeared wearing a dark suit of clothes and a white bandage around his face, pulled his revolver and commanded the conductor to throw up his hands. While Potter was covered with the gun, the smaller bandit went through his pockets, taking $19.50. Just as they finished this work and were starting toward the rear of the train, a transfer man from New Orleans entered the car. The robbers searched him and obtained $25.00.

Elgin came in about this time, and one of the robbers coolly fired at him, putting a bullet in the brakeman's abdomen and killing him almost instantly. One of the negro porters also entered the car, and was fired at, but dodged out of sight unharmed.

By this time the train was humming like a bee hive with angry passengers. The leader of the band, blew a whistle that hung around his neck and ran to the door of the coach and sprang to the ground. His partner followed. Standing there in the dark they fired half a dozen shots down the length of the cars, driving everyone inside for a time. Then they ran down the road for a distance and vanished.

Many Crushed Between Pier and
Steamer—Passengers Fight Way
To the Deck Railings.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.
New York.—At least four and possibly six persons were drowned and it is feared other casualties occurred when the river steamer Majestic, of Newark, returning home with 1,000 excursionists on board from a day's outing at the Coast Point, Long Island, collided in the East river with a stone-laden barge, capsizing the freight craft.

The steamer was not damaged, but in a panic on board after the crash the Majestic's passengers rushed to the deck railings, fighting and pressing for points of vantage as the steamer was headed for the nearest pier.

When the Majestic touched the pier hundreds jumped together off the decks. Fears that many were crushed between the steamship's side and the facing of the pier will exist until the excursionists check their lists at Newark. Rescuers came to find the loss of life in all probability would reach 10, possibly 20, as many persons are missing. Frantic scenes took place at the pier. Relatives of the missing rushed through the crowd, searching for loved ones. A mother, hearing that her two daughters were missing, leaped into the water and perished.

BUTTERINE PLANT IS SEIZED.

Columbus, O.—United States government officials swooped down on the Capital City Dairy Co., which has one of the largest plants of its kind in this country, and took charge. Internal Revenue Collector Beriah E.
Williamson, of the Columbus District, is in charge of the squad of men.

The company officials were asked to turn the entire property over to the officers. Without protest they complied, and three inspectors, under Captain William Hamill, of Cincinnati, were stationed at the plant. The exact reason for the action was not disclosed.

BIG EXPLOSION OF FIREWORKS.

Tudela, Spain.—Twenty-five persons were killed and fifty others injured, many fatally, by an explosion of fireworks during a local festival. Most of the dead were decapitated by the force of the explosion.

RUSSIA'S ULTIMATUM.

St. Petersburg.—President of the Council Goremykin issued this ultimatum in the form of a statement on the European impasse. "Russia is determined not to allow Serbia to be crushed, and will fulfill its duty in regard to this small kingdom, which has suffered so much at Austria's hands. Russia will not be frightened by any threats Austria may address to her, as she knows her obligation to her Slavic brethren in the Balkans, and will not consent to Serbia becoming an Austrian vassal."

Western Newspaper Union News Service. St. Petersburg.—An Imperial ukase issued by the Emperor Nicholas calls to the colors 4,000,000 reservists. The call came after a conference of ministers which lasted all night.

London.—Reports reached here that Belgrade is being swept by flames, following the bombardment of the city by two Danube monitors and small warships of the Austrian navy. The shells destroyed the exposed portions of the city and also battered down the fortifications. The King's palace was damaged badly. Servians blew up the remaining part of the bridge spanning the river Save, between the Austrian town of Semlin and Belgrade. The Austrian infantry and artillery, stationed at Semlin, in conjunction with monitors on the Danube, fired on the Serbian positions beyond the bridge. The Servians retreated after a short engagement with small losses.

London.—The day's events brought neither relief to the suspense nor any diplomatic achievements to restrict the Austro-Serbian war to these two nations. The feeling throughout England and the continent, as reflected by the correspondents of the London papers, are distinctly more anxious than ever. Two events have made for Belin.—At present the situation looks about as black as it can be. Apparently news has been received in official quarters that each step of mobilization have been decided upon in Russia as to make it necessary for Germany, under its treaty with Austria, to put its army on war footing. An important official conference on the Austro-Serbian situation was begun here and continued until a late hour. When it adjourned it was announced that nothing concerning the conference or its results would be made public.

Belin.—Direct negotiations between Russia and Austria, which gave the other governments hope of a compromise, have failed and are ended. An interchange of messages by Czar Nicholas and Emperor William resulted in naught. Russia is mobilizing against the Austrian frontier four army corps in each of four districts, consisting of 1,200,000 men. Russia's resolution to stand by Serbia appears to be fixed, and the Russian censor has approved dispatches declaring that Russian sentiment is all for taking up arms. Other nations are massing armies at strategic points it was reported here. The huge navies of the Powers are congregating ready to strike. Diplomatic representatives have not yet despaired. All say there is hope yet, and base their belief on the fact that Germany, France, Great Britain and Italy—the last two named most of all—do not want war, and do not think the Austro-Serbian quarrel important enough to justify it. Reports here say Russia asked Austria for a direct exchange of views and that Austria refused this offer. The refusal appears to have been to extend the much discussed negotiations which were considered in the chancelleries as the principal known basis for optimism. Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to whom all look as the foremost conciliator of Europe, is attempting, it is believed, to frame fresh proposals for settlement. The diplomatic world of London clings to the belief that a means can be found whereby Austria may satisfy Russia that she can attain her ends without recourse to measures which the Russian government and Russian public opinion can not accept.

There is the greatest anxiety as to whether Russian mobilization will be confined to the Austrian boundary, or is proceeding secretly against Germany, but between mobilization and war there is a gap which the two nations bridged in 1909, and may again. Councils of State were held at St. Petersburg, Berlin and Paris. The British government continues the attitude that the crisis does not yet concern Great Britain save as a spectator and peacekeeper. Austria-Hungary and Serbia resumed with the march of troops toward positions of attack and defense, while military violators on both sides fitted through the air along the frontiers in an effort to discover their opponents' positions. No idea of the plan of campaign could be obtained by the general public, however, owing to the rigidity of the censorship in regard to military movements. It was known that the Austro-Hungarian government had requisitioned the entire train service and that private transportation in the dual monarchy had ceased.

In Russian eyes the die is cast. Only a political miracle can avert a great European war. Russia does not swerve from her determination to support Serbia, and mobilization has been ordered. The whole vast military machinery of Russia will soon be in motion.

Should Emperor Nicholas become generalissimo of the forces, as it is understood he will, an immense wave of enthusiasm will sweep over Russia. His second cousin, Grand Duke Nicholas, Nicholas-Vladimirovich, and Gen. Soukhomlinoff, the minister of war, would be seconds in command.

The political parties have sunk their differences. The general attitude is not "jingoistic," but one of resolute confidence in the justice of the country's cause and readiness to make all sacrifices.

Cleveland, O.—Six thousand members of the Austro-Hungarian reserves here are ready to leave for war the minute they receive personal notification of mobilization orders. The order for 2,000 of them are expected soon. Four thousand Servians in and around Cleveland are pledged to join volunteer forces the minute the call goes out. That's the war situation here in a nutshell. Eight corps of Austro-Hungarian reserves are being mobilized. Consulates of Austro-Hungary and Serbia are the centers of in-

PARTY AFFILIATION QUESTION SETTLED

BY AN OPINION SUBMITTED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL GARNETT, OF KENTUCKY.

QUALIFICATION OF VOTERS

As To Their Past—Question Was Determined by the Provisions of the Law—When You May Vote.

(Special Frankfort Correspondence.)
Frankfort.—Replying to an inquiry made by Shelton Bauley, representative from Lincoln county, Atty. Gen. Garnett held that a voter, having supported a majority of the Democratic nominees in the November election, is entitled to vote for candidates seeking the Democratic nomination in the state primary August 1. This decision settles the qualification of voters as to their past affiliations. The inquiry as to whether a voter expressed his intention not to support the Democratic nominees would disqualify him from voting for the candidates for the Democratic nomination in the state primary was asked the department by E. B. Coomes, of Bardonia. Assistant Atty. Gen. Logan held that a statement by a voter that he would not support a Democratic or Republican nominee in November would not disqualify him from voting for candidates seeking Democratic nominations. The question put to the department by Coomes follows: "If a voter states that he will not support the nominee of his party in the November election in the event the candidate of his choice is not nominated, do the election officers have the right to swear him as to his qualifications, and in case he declares that he will not support some candidate of his party, if such candidate is the nominee, may they deny him the right to vote in the primary?" Logan's opinion in answer to this query follows: "This question must be determined by the provisions of the law, and not by what the writer of this letter may think ought to be the law. Section 19 of the primary election law, as it now appears in Chapter 83 of the acts of 1914, defines the qualifications of voters in the primary with great particularity. The voter must be a member of the political party for whose candidates he offers to vote, and this alone is not sufficient, as he must have supported the nominees of his party."

No Bid for Camp.

At the state encampment of the Department of Kentucky, G. A. R., held in Barboursville, June 9 to 11, a singular event happened. Not a city or town in Kentucky sent in an invitation for the encampment for next year. It was the department officers and council of administration to decide the matter. They would like to make choice of a place in season to make announcement before the approaching national encampment to be held in Detroit August 31 to September 5. The plan of the department is to select the place from the list of cities and towns of the state. It affords many old comrades a chance to visit the encampment who would not otherwise have the opportunity. All that the G. A. R. committee asks of a city desiring to be the site of the next year's encampment is to furnish free halls in which to hold the business meetings of the order and separate rooms for its auxiliaries.

Extend Time for Reports.

Thirty days more have been given industrial institutions in which to file information concerning the nature of their business, the number of employees and the pay-roll with the workmen's compensation board under the act of 1914. This information should have been filed with the board 30 days after it was organized. That would have been July 17; but allowing for misunderstandings the board decided to extend the time until August 17. The board sent out 1,096 blanks to concerns listed by the labor bureau of the department of agriculture, and so far only 251 have replied, though the blanks continue to come in slowly.

Not To Meet in August.

Owing to a congestion of the dockets, the commission which is to decide the question of the railroad commission has decided not to hold an other regular meeting until the first Wednesday in September, but will hold several consultations in August at Louisville or Lexington for the purpose of disposing of the cases now before it. Every case has been passed to the September docket.

Many Concerns Affected.

The Clerk Fork Coal and Coke Co., of Kende, Bell county, has raised the question whether under the workmen's compensation act it can include mine "unit" in Kentucky, but its coal mines are all in Tennessee. Robert T. Caldwell, of the attorney general's office, advised the company to include in its report to the compensation board only the men actually employed in the mine. This opinion has caused a great many concerns located on the borders of the state.

Experts Will Go Anywhere.

Testing the dairy herds for tuberculosis will be conducted in the future under regulations of the State Live Stock Sanitary board, without cost to the owner and without the total loss of such cattle as may be infected. This object has been preserved in the rules prepared by the board. All cattle found to be infected must be killed, quarantined or isolated. Such cattle may be shipped for slaughter to any market under government inspection. Dairy cows, so infected, may be located in the place, their calves being taken from them as soon as born. "The destruction of tuberculosis-infected cattle has been the cause of greatest complaint against inspection," said Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newmark. "Our rules provide that after a dairy cow has been proven to be infected, her milk shall not be given or sold for human consumption; not even to the family of the owner. But I would roughly guess, that there are in Kentucky 500 cows that cost $1,000 each. It is not necessary, if one of them is infected, for the owner to lose her entirely. The cow can be bred. Her calf need not necessarily have tuberculosis, if it is taken from her and given to another cow. So, while the public is protected, the owner is also given a chance to recoup."

New Law Is Interpreted.

"Officers or employees of the commonwealth of Kentucky, who have offices located at the seat of government, shall be permitted to be charged for expenses except from Frankfort to the place where the business they are transacting is to be transacted, and from that place back to Frankfort. In no event shall the auditor allow any claim of any official for expenses going from the seat of government to the place where the official is assigned to duty to the claimant's real place of residence, or in return therefrom, unless it is shown that it was necessary for the claimant to make said trip in the discharge of business for the commonwealth."

"That" said Atty. Gen. Garnett, in reply to inquiry from Assistant State Auditor G. B. Likens as to the application of the act of 1914 to specific cases, "applies without discrimination to all public officers unless specific exception is made in some law referring to the particular office." It is a section of the act to require officers and employees of the commonwealth of Kentucky to furnish an itemized statement to the auditor of public accounts of their traveling and incidental expenses while in the performance of public duties required of them by law.

Will Save Thousands.

Thousands of dollars will be saved parents of school children by a ruling made by Barksdale Hamlett, superintendent of public instruction, regarding the exchange of schoolbooks under the state textbook adoption. Hamlett holds that under the act of 1914 all publishers will be required to take up and exchange books in any condition provided they are of the same grade. The ruling was made to correct an impression that has gone out that such books offered in exchange would have to be in good condition. Hamlett's interpretation of the law is that the "good condition" clause applies only to such books as are held by dealers on their shelves, which, of course, must be in good condition. Books that are in poor condition at the original net price. Regarding this the law says: "Such new books as are held in Kentucky now, or at any future adoption, by purchase by dealers; and in good condition, shall be taken in exchange at the original net price by successful bidders from such dealers as hold in stock such books."

Express Appreciation.

The following letter was received by Mayor Rupert from the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce: "On behalf of the members of the Trade Extension club of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, may your business trip to Frankfort on the 14th was completed, I wish to thank you for the courtesies extended to us at Frankfort and to express our appreciation of the treatment received. Cincinnati has always taken a very deep interest in the welfare of the merchants of Kentucky—in fact, we feel that we are inseparably bound to the state of Kentucky by use of friendship and business relations running back for many years. Assuring you that we shall be very glad to have you visit Cincinnati and permit us to return your hospitality. Very truly yours—Carl Dehoney."

Honorary Vice President.

As governor of one of the seventeen states in 1914, when Francis Key wrote the national anthem, Gov. McCreary has been made honorary vice president of the celebration at Baltimore, September 6 to 15, of the centenary of the writing of the anthem by the National Star-Spangled Banner association. J. H. Preston is the president and R. E. Lee, secretary.

Rules Governing Shipments.

Rules governing the importation and interstate shipment of live stock in Kentucky are giving the State Live Stock Sanitary board considerable bother. The act of 1914 created the office of state veterinarian and provided for local veterinarians and invested the board with regulation of the movement of stock, for the purpose of preventing the spread of disease. The sanitary regulation of stock cars and the stock yards is included in the program of the board. The board advised

COMPARISON OF ARMIES ON WAR FOOTING

TWELVE MILLION SOLDIERS MAY BE IN CONFLICT

General European Struggle Would Make Wars of Napoleonic Era Small.

SERVIA NOT TO BE DESPISED

Little Country Has Large Army of Veteran Fighters—Germany's Wonderful War Machine in Readiness to Begin War at a Moment's Notice.

Americans unacquainted with the elaborate military organizations of foreign powers can have but little idea of the tremendous number of combatants who would be involved in any general European war which might arise from Austria's imbroglio with Serbia. Austria, large as she is in territory and population, does not outnumber Serbia in available trained men so heavily as might be expected. But the seriousness of the situation lies in the fact that, once hostilities between the two principal belligerents in the Balkans might be inevitable. And it is safe to say that not even the Napoleonic wars rent the fabric of European civilization as would a war between the powers of the triple entente and the triple alliance.

Always supposing that Russia makes good her reported threat to aid Serbia in case the Austrians persist in going to extremes, it is believed that Germany and Italy would come to their ally's assistance. In such a circumstance, it is assumed that Great Britain and France, the two remaining powers of public opinion, would not permit their ally, Russia, to fight such a serious battle alone. This might mean the arraying of Russia, France and Britain—possibly Rumania—on the side of Serbia, and Germany and Italy on the side of Austria, with the possibility that the other Balkan nations and Turkey may be dragged into the quarrel.

Austria's Fighting Forces.

Austria's army is credited with a peace strength of 415,000 men and 1,870 guns, which the first-line reserves would increase in a few days to 820,000 men. Behind these could be mustered hundreds of thousands of men of varying ages who have had some military training, and who would fill the gaps in the field army. Little Serbia can mobilize all of her male population trained to bear arms to the number of 324,000 in a fortnight's time, although she maintains only 36,000 men in time of peace. As Austria must guard her Russian frontier and leave some troops in the great Slav area of her territory to restrain outbreaks of revolution, it can be seen that any army she might attempt to throw across the Danube into Serbia would not be of overwhelming strength. Then, too, the Serbian army is largely composed of veterans, and a splendid record of record of brave achievement in the Balkan wars.

Germany's field army in time of war numbers 1,220,000 men, and her entire system of mobilization and strategy is based upon an invasion of France and a simultaneous resistance to a Russian attack upon her back door. Behind this field army stands an active reserve of 600,000 men of the Landwehr, and behind them still 1,500,000 men who have had military training and are available to make good battle losses. Germany's strong point, as compared to Russia, is of course in her superior mobilization. The vast distances which Russian reservists must travel, and the scanty railroads in the czar's empire all tend somewhat to neutralize the preponderance of Russian troops.

On a peace footing, the Russian army numbers 1,300,000 men of all ages, distributed over the European and Asiatic possessions. Many of these men would not be available for use in a European war. But military experts concede that Russia could hurl a great army of 1,500,000 men across the German and Austrian frontiers, these men comprising the regular European army corps and the first-line reservists. Behind them, in turn, are several million trained and partly trained men for use in making up the ravages of battle and disease.

France, too, would be an effective ally of the Servians on land. The French army is a different weapon from what it was in 1870. The active army within continental France is thought to number about 600,000 men, and although France's military power tion does not allow her the immense amount of reserve strength which Germany possesses, the outbreak of war would mean the instant increase of the field army to a strength of 1,300,000, which might be still further increased by the recall of troops from Algeria, and drafts from 700,000 trained reservists of the second line.

Strength of Italian Army.

The Italian army is more or less an unknown quantity. Its value to Austria and Germany would much in the diverting of some of France's attention to her southern frontier. On a peace basis, the Italian army consists of slightly more than 300,000 men. The field army in time of war would number nearly 600,000 men, and could be raised to 800,000 by the recall of troops from the colonies. Behind these troops stand the territorial militia, partially trained, forming what the French call the levee en masse, more than 2,000,000 men, mostly of doubtful worth.

Needless to say, Great Britain is not expected to count for much in military operations on land in a general European war. Her allies would expect her to smash or bottle up the German fleet, and then lend her navy to assist France in wiping out the Austrian and Italian squadrons in the Mediterranean and Adriatic seas. Doubtless, several divisions of the so-called expeditionary force of the British home army would be sent over to France. But Britain's most efficient help would undoubtedly consist in attempting to destroy the German navy and mercantile marine and in blockading the German ports of the North sea and the Baltic.

When it would all end and the wisest wisecracks could never say, and the industrial and economic havoc such a war would wreak would probably set the world back a half century, at least, its expense would run into the millions—well beyond computation. The figures of armies given here, it must be remembered, except in the case of Italy, include only the active army now in service, and the first and second classes of reserves. Every country in Europe which practices conscription contains a vast number of young and old, who are regarded as possible food for cannon. Within a month between six and twelve millions of men might be engaged.—New York Evening Post.

British Sentiment Is Not in Favor of War

London.—England shows no enthusiasm over becoming embroiled in a war which might prove a great calamity to her interests. As far as opinion can be gathered, sentiment tends towards Austria. This is based on the belief that Serbian intrigues for undermining Austria by a Pan-Slav movement have been so open that no nation could tolerate them any longer. The present state of Serbian national pride only the sharpest and most peremptory measures could have any effect.

One result of the sudden threat of international complications is to thrust Ireland from the center of the stage. It may even force the British cabinet of a compromise, which even the king could not accomplish, and a general election under the present circumstances appears out of the question. It is doubtful if even the government's bitterest enemies would want a change in the cabinet in the midst of a political campaign while the nation needs to keep a cool head and free hands for the protection of its European position.

U. S. to Remain Neutral in Servia-Austria Crisis

Washington.—In accord with a policy of absolute neutrality, should the Austro-Serbian crisis develop into war, any attempt by any of the interested powers to purchase American warships would be promptly turned down by the United States, in the opinion of officials here.

It was pointed out that the recent sale of the battleships Mississippi and Idaho to Greece could in no manner serve as a precedent for further sale of ships to any European government. These battleships were built in the American navy and on that account congress consented to their sale.

President Wilson might issue a proclamation of neutrality which would cleverly set forth just what commerce would be permitted between this country and the parties of the conflict which European chancelleries fear is imminent.

"Holy Hay," or Sainfoin.

Sainfoin, in common with the clovers, is a member of the natural order Leguminosae. It has been known and cultivated as a fodder crop for over 200 years, having been introduced into Great Britain about the middle of the seventeenth century. From France it came to the United States, where it was first introduced by the French in 1870. The active army within continental France is thought to number about 600,000 men, and although France's military power

OF THE MURDER OF EDITOR
GASTON CALMETTE.

VERDICT CREATES UPROAR

Friends and Opponents of the Former
Premier Cheer and Revile Him—
Result Is No Surprise in City of Paris.

Paris, July 30.—"Not guilty" is the verdict of the jury in the sensational trial of Mme. Gaillaux for murder, a case that has kept Paris excited and the world interested. The verdict was reached in less than an hour.

Mme. Gaillaux killed Gaston Calmette, editor of Le Figaro, not in cold blood, according to the jurors, but while temporarily insane through fear that he would publish letters which had passed between herself and Calmette before they were husband and wife.

It is probable that the unwritten law also plays its part in bringing about the acquittal of the beautiful wife of the former French premier. The delicate "point of honor" was dwelt upon at length by Maître Labori in his plea for the prisoner, who sat weeping softly as he talked. And the plea had its effect. Before he finished several of the jurors were in tears.

"Murderer—let us spit on her," Calmette's supporters cried back. Out in the corridors, and in the streets, where throngs were jammed awaiting the verdict, there was still another uproar. Calmette and his wife were alternately cheered and hissed, lauded and reviled. Crowds of Calmette supporters cried his name and cheered wildly, then shouted cheers for M. Labori. Other crowds shouted cheers for Calmette and for the slain editor and hissed out curses at every mention of the former premier's name.

Mme. Gaillaux was sitting crouched in her chair, her face buried in her hands, when the jury entered with the verdict. Throughout the entire day she had been listening to alternate demands that her head pay the forfeit for her crime and pleas for her life. She had heard herself exonerated as a woman without shame, a murderer to whom illicit passion was dearer than human life. Then she had heard herself defended—heard mercy begged in her behalf. But through it all, her life—the things she held most sacredly secret—were laid bare.

All during the morning up, Mme. Gaillaux sobbed. At one time, during a particularly violent attack on her character by Attorney Chauveau, she fell in a dead faint and a recess had to be taken while physicians revived her. When the jury finally filed out to its deliberations, her entire body was twitching, her cheeks were stained with tears and her eyes sunken.

Mme. Gaillaux looked up quickly as the jurors reentered the court room with their verdict and clenched her hands so tightly that her finger nails cut into the flesh.

Then, as the words "Not guilty" were pronounced, with a wild, almost insane laugh that seemed half a sob, she rose with arms extended toward her husband. Her hair, already disheveled, came unfastened and fell about her shoulders. "Joseph! Joseph!" she cried and then fell fainting into the arms of Maître Labori.

Sixty Are Wounded—King's Own
Scottish Borderers Fire Murderous Volley After Attack.

Dublin, July 28.—Two men and two women were killed and at least sixty persons were wounded in the first actual battle of the Irish embroigle. It was a fight between Irish nationalists and the King's Own Scottish Borderers, and has aroused great excitement. All the wounded are in hospitals and it is reported that at least seven of them are dying. Among the most severely hurt are M. J. Judge, prominent officer in the nationalist volunteers. The fight was caused when the soldiers seized a consignment of contraband arms destined for the nationalists. The arms had been landed at Howth, a seaport not far from Dublin, and were brought to this city shortly after noon.

The authorities, having received secret information of the arrival of the rifles and ammunition, confiscated them as soon as they were brought inside the limits of Dublin.

The nationalists, who had hoped that the arms would be available for use in the threatened clash with the Ulster army, bitterly resented the seizure, first in riots then in actual battle with the troops.

The King's Own Borderers, a British army, formed a hollow square about the confiscated arms. Presenting a stone wall front to approach from all directions, the soldiers stood on guard awaiting the onslaught of the nationalists. When the expected charge came, some of the nationalists bearing arms and others provided with stones and similar missiles with which to pelt the soldiers, the command was given to fire.

Only one volley was fired, two men and two women falling dead in the forefront of the attackers while the wounded dropped all about them.

The nationalists then retreated bearing their wounded with them and order was immediately restored. It is feared that other clashes may follow, the opening skirmish of the home rule warfare, as there is intense bitterness throughout Dublin over the loss of life.

TELLURIDE RUINED

NOTED COLORADO MINING TOWN
PRACTICALLY DESTROYED
BY SUDDEN FLOOD.

TORRENT FROM CLOUDBURST

Two Women Are Drowned—Scores
Saved by Miner's Warning—Inhabitants
All Camp Out on the Hills Round About.

Denver, July 29.—The noted mining town of Telluride was practically destroyed by a torrent that descended upon it, almost without warning, from Cornet creek. The flood resulted from a cloudburst about four miles up in the mountains.

Two women are known to have been drowned, and 15 children were rescued after a wall of water from eight to twenty feet high had hit the city.

That the loss of life was not heavier is considered almost miraculous. Cornet canyon runs a precipitous course directly into the city of Telluride. The town has a population of 4,000. A Gregory Sanchez, a miner who lives at the mouth of the canyon, has been ill and was not working. Sitting upon his humble porch he heard the roar of the torrent. He ran half clad into the town, warning everyone he passed.

He was thousands of saving scores of lives; for, soon after he had given the warning, hundreds of families were fleeing to the hillside.

All Telluride's 4,000 inhabitants are huddled in upper stories of houses on the sides of the hills. Many of them know that their little homes have been wrecked beyond repair; but, with the stern heroism of the miner and his own, they do not complain.

The physical loss is greater than any in Telluride yet realized. Experts declare that the property damage cannot be under $750,000. Not a residence or a business house in the little city, except a few cottages scattered along the sides of the hills, remains whole.

The dead are Mrs. John Johnson, wife of a miner, and Mrs. B. B. Blakeley, a jeweler's wife. Thomas Welsh, mine owner, is missing.

When the flood hit the city proper there was no death of horses. John Senda, teamster, and Harry Lyle, a miner, rescued 20 children who had been literally washed out of their homes.

KILLED BY BANDITS

L. & N. BRAKEMAN SHOT TO DEATH IN COLD BLOOD.

Passenger Train Held Up Near New Orleans—Robbers Get Small
Sum and Escape.

New Orleans, July 27.—Two bandits held up the New York flyer of the Louisville & Nashville road, just outside of New Orleans, killed Brakeman Thomas Higin, shot at the porter of one of the sleepers, robbed the conductor of $15.50 and a transfer man of $3.50 and then disappeared in the darkness of the surrounding swamps.

The police of New Orleans sent a posse of 50 men to hunt down the pair, and the railroad company sent out a special train with deputies.

The men boarded the train at New Orleans and remained in one of the sleepers until the limited slowed for the crossing. Then one of them pulled the bell cord, bringing the train to a stop. Instantly the leader, a tall man, who appeared wearing a dark suit of clothes and a white bandage around his face, pulled his revolver and compelled Conductor Potter to throw up his hands. While Potter was covered with the gun, the smaller bandit went through his pockets, taking $19.50.

Just as they finished this work and were starting toward the rear of the train, a transfer man from New Orleans entered the car. The robbers searched him and obtained $2.50.

Eigin came in about this time, and one of the robbers coolly fired at him, putting a bullet in the brakeman's abdomen and killing him almost instantly.

One of the negro porters also entered the car, and was fired at, but dodged out of sight unharmed.

By this time the train was humming like a bee hive with angry passengers, and the leader of the band blew a whistle that hung around his neck and ran to the door of the coach and sprang to the ground. His partner followed. Standing there in the darkness they fired half a dozen shots inside the length of the car, driving everyone inside for a time. Then they ran down the road for a distance and vanished.

Many Crushed Between Pier and

Steamer—Passengers Fight Way
To the Dock Railings.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.
New York.—At least four and possibly six persons were drowned and it is feared other casualties occurred when the river steamer Majestic, of Newark, returning home with 1,000 excursionists on board from a day's outing at College Point, Long Island, collided in the East river with a stone-laden barge, capsizing the freight craft.

The steamer was not damaged, but in a panic on board after the crash the Majestic's passengers rushed to the deck railings, fighting and pressing for points of vantage as the steamer was headed for the nearest pier.

When the Majestic touched the pier hundreds jumped together off the decks. Fears that many were crushed between the steamship's side and the facing of the pier will exist until the excursionists check their lists at Newark. Rescuers said that the loss of life is all probability would reach 10, possibly 20, as many persons are missing. Frantic scenes took place at the pier. Relatives of the missing rushed through the crowd, searching for loved ones. A mother, learning that her two daughters were missing, leaped into the water and perished.

RUSSIA'S ULTIMATUM.

St. Petersburg.—President of the Council Goremykin issued this ultimatum in the form of a statement on the European imbroglio. "Russia is determined not to allow Serbia to be crushed, and will fulfill its duty in regard to this small kingdom, which has suffered so much at Austria's hands. Russia will not be frightened by any threats Austria may address to her, as she knows her obligation to her Slavic brethren in the Balkans, and will not consent to Serbia becoming an Austrian vassal."

Western Newspaper Union News Service. St. Petersburg.—An Imperial ukase issued by the Emperor Nicholas calls to the colors 4,000,000 reservists. The call came after a conference of ministers which lasted all night.

Vienna.—Reports reached here that Belgrade is being swept by flames, following the bombardment of the city by two Danube monitors and small warships of the Austrian navy. The shells destroyed the exposed portions of the city and also battered down the fortifications. The King's palace was damaged badly. Serbians blew up the remaining part of the bridge spanning the river Save, between the Austrian town of Semlin and Belgrade. The Austrian infantry and artillery stationed at Semlin, in conjunction with monitors on the Danube, fired on the Serbian positions beyond the bridge. The Serbians retreated after a short engagement with small losses.

London.—The day's events brought neither relief to the suspense nor any diplomatic achievements to restrict the Austro-Serbian war to these two nations. The feeling throughout England and the continent, as reflected by the correspondence of the London papers, are distinctly more anxious than ever. Two events have made for Berlin.—At present the situation looks about as black as it can be. Apparently news has been received in official quarters that such steps of mobilization have been decided upon in Russia as to make it necessary for Germany, under its treaty with Austria, to put its own army on war footing. An important official conference on the Austro-Serbian situation was begun here and continued until a late hour. When it adjourned it was announced that nothing concerning the campaign or its results would be made public.

Cleveland, O.—Six thousand members of the Austro-Hungarian reserves here are ready to leave for war the minute they receive personal notification of mobilization orders. The orders for 3,000 of them are expected soon. Four thousand Serbians in and around Cleveland are pledged to join volunteer forces the minute the call goes out. That's the war situation here in a nutshell. High corps of Austro-Hungarian reserves are being mobilized. Consulates of Austro-Hungary and Serbia are the centers of interest.

PARTY AFFILIATION QUESTION SETTLED

BY AN OPINION SUBMITTED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL GARNETT, OF KENTUCKY.

QUALIFICATION OF VOTERS

(Special Frankfort Correspondence.)

Frankfort.—Replying to an inquiry made by Shelton Bauley, representative from Lincoln county, Atty. Gen. Garnett held that a voter, having supported a majority of the Democratic nominees in the November election, is entitled to vote for candidates seeking the Democratic nomination in the state primary August 1. This decision settles the qualification of voters as to their past affiliations. The inquiry as to whether a voter expressed his intention not to support the Democratic nominees would disqualify him from voting for the candidates for the Democratic nomination in the state primary was asked the department by Atty. B. Coomes, of Bardonia. Assistant Atty. Gen. Logan held that a statement by a Democratic or Republican nominee in November would not disqualify him from voting for candidates seeking Democratic nominations. The question put to the department by Coomes follows: "If a voter states that he will not support the nominee of his party in the November election in the event the candidate of his choice is not nominated, do the election officers have the right to swear him as to his qualifications, and in case he declares that he will not support some candidate of his party, if such candidate is the nominee, may they deny him the right to vote in the primary?" Logan's opinion in answer to this query follows: "This question must be determined by the provisions of the law, and not by the writer of this letter may think ought to be the law. Section 19 of the primary election law, as it now appears in Chapter 83 of the acts of 1914, defines the qualifications of voters in the primary with great particularity. The voter must be a member of the political party for whose candidates he offers to vote, and this alone is not sufficient, as he must have supported the nominees of his party."

No Bid for Camp. At the late campment of the Department of Kentucky, G. A. R., held in Barboursville, June 9 to 11, a singular event happened. Not a city or town in Kentucky sent in an invitation for the encampment of the old soldiers to the department, officers and council of administration to decide the matter. They would like to make choice of a place in season to make announcement before the approaching national encampment to be held in Detroit August 31 to September 5. The purpose of the old soldiers is for the local regions, away from the center of the state, to afford many old comrades a chance to visit the encampment who would not otherwise have the opportunity. All that the G. A. R. committee asks of a city entertaining them is to furnish free hall space in which to hold the business meetings of the order and separate rooms for its auxiliaries.

Extend Time for Reports. Thirty days more have been given industrial institutions in which to file information concerning the nature of their business, the number of employees and the pay roll with the workmen's compensation board under the act of 1914. This information should have been filed with the board 30 days after it was organized. That would have been July 1; but allowing for misunderstandings the board decided to extend the time until August 17. The board sent out 1,096 blanks to concerns listed by the labor bureau of the department of agriculture, and so far only 251 have replied, though the blanks continue to come in slowly.

Not To Meet in August. Owing to a congestion of the docket with the commissioners, wish to dispose of this summer, the railroad commission has decided not to hold an other regular meeting until the first Wednesday in September, but will hold several consultations in August at Louisville or Lexington for the purpose of disposing of the cases now before it. Every case has been passed to the September docket.

Many Concerns Affected. The Clifton Fork Coal and Coke Co., of Ponce, Bell county, has raised the question whether under the workmen's compensation act it can include mine employees over the Tennessee line. Its mine unit is in Kentucky, but its coal entries are all in Tennessee. Robert T. Caldwell, of the attorney general's office, advised the company to include in its report to the compensation board only the mine actually employed in Kentucky. This opinion affects a great many concerns located on the borders of the state.

Experts Will Go Anywhere.

Testing the dairy herds for tuberculosis will be conducted in the future under regulations of the State Live Stock Sanitary board, without cost to the owner and without the total loss of such cattle as may be infected. This object has been preserved in the rules prepared by the board. All cattle found to be infected must be killed, quarantined or isolated. Such cattle may be shipped for slaughter to any market under government inspection. Dairy cows, so infected, may be isolated and bred, their calves being taken from them as soon as born. "The destruction of tuberculosis-infected cattle has been the cause of greatest complaint against inspection," said Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newman. "Our rules provide that after a dairy cow has been pronounced infected, her milk shall not be given or sold for human consumption; not even to the family of the owner. But I would roughly guess, that there are in Kentucky 500 cows that cost $1,000 each. It is not necessary, if one of them is infected, for the owner to lose a hundred dollars. Her calf need not necessarily have tuberculosis, if it is taken from her and given to another cow. So, while the public is protected, the owner is also given a chance to recoup."

New Law Is Interpreted.

"Officers or employees of the commonwealth of Kentucky, who have offices located at the seat of government, shall not be permitted to charge for expenses except from Frankfort to the place where the business they are transacting is to be transacted, and from that place back to Frankfort. In no event shall the auditor allow any claim for any official expenses except from the seat of government or the place where the official is assigned to duty to the claimant's real place of residence, or in return therefor, unless it is shown that it was necessary for the claimant to make said trip in the discharge of business for the commonwealth."

"That," said Atty. Gen. Garnett, in reply to inquiry from Assistant State Auditor G. B. Likens as to the application of the act of 1914 to specific cases, "applies without discrimination to all public officers unless specific exception is made in some law referring to the particular office." It is a section of the act to require officers and employees of the commonwealth of Kentucky to furnish an itemized statement to the auditor of public accounts of their traveling and incidental expenses while in the performance of public duties required of them by law.

Will Save Thousands.

Thousands of dollars will be saved parents of school children by a ruling made by Barksdale Hamlett, superintendent of public instruction, regarding the exchange of schoolbooks under the state textbook adoption. Hamlett holds that under the act of 1914 all publishers will be required to take up and exchange books in any condition provided they are of the same grade. The ruling was made to permit the state to purchase books that have gone out of use but which are in good condition. Hamlett's interpretation of the law is that the "good condition" clause applies only to such books as are held by dealers on their shelves, which of course are to be taken up by contractors at the original net price. Regarding this the law says: "Such new books as are held in Kentucky now, or at any future adoption, by purchase by dealers, and in good condition, shall be taken in exchange at the original net price by successful bidders from such dealers as hold in stock such books."

Express Appreciation.

The following letter was received by Mayor Rupert from the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce: "On behalf of the members of the Trade Extension club of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, we take up to you our trip to Frankfort on the 14th was conducted in a most pleasant manner. We wish to thank you for the courtesies extended to us at Frankfort and to express our appreciation of the treatment received. Cincinnati has always taken a very deep interest in the welfare of the merchants of Kentucky—in fact, we feel that we are inseparably bound to the state of Kentucky by ties of friendship and business relations running back for many years. Assuring you that we shall be very glad to have you visit Cincinnati and permit us to return your hospitality. Very truly yours—Carl Dehoney."

Honorary Vice President.

As governor of one of the seventeen states in 1914, when Francis Key wrote the national anthem, Gov. McCreary has been made honorary vice president of the celebration at Baltimore, September 8 to 10, of the centennial of the writing of the anthem, by the National Star-Spangled Banner association. J. H. Preston is the president and R. E. Lee, secretary.

Rules Governing Shipments.

Rules governing the importation and interstate shipment of live stock in Kentucky are giving the state live stock sanitary board considerable bother. The act of 1914 created the office of state veterinarian and provided for local veterinarians and invested the board with regulation of the movement of stock, for the purpose of preventing the spread of disease. The sanitary regulation of stock and the stock yards is included in the program of the board. The board's labors are

COMPARISON OF ARMIES ON WAR FOOTING

TWELVE MILLION SOLDIERS MAY BE IN CONFLICT

General European Struggle Would Make Wars of Napoleonic Era Small.

SERVIA NOT TO BE DESPISED

Little Country Has Large Army of Veteran Fighters—Germany's Wonderful War Machine in Readiness to Begin War at a Moment's Notice.

Americans unacquainted with the elaborate military organizations of foreign powers can have but little idea of the tremendous number of combatants who would be involved in any general European war which might arise from Austria's imbroglio with Serbia. Austria, large as she is in territory and population, does not outnumber Serbia in available trained men so heavily as might be expected. But the seriousness of the situation lies in the fact that once hostilities between the two principal belligerent states were inevitable. And it is safe to say that not even the Napoleonic wars rent the fabric of European civilization as would a war between the powers of the triple entente and the triple alliance.

Always supposing that Russia makes good her reported threat to aid Serbia in case the Austrians persist in going to extremes, it is believed that Germany and Italy would come to their ally's assistance. In such a circumstance, it is assumed that Great Britain and France, the two remaining powers of the quadruple alliance, would permit their ally, Russia, to fight such a serious battle alone. This might mean the arraying of Russia, France and Britain—and possibly Rumania—on the side of Serbia, and Germany and Italy on the side of Austria, with the possibility that the other Balkan nations and Turkey may be dragged into the quarrel.

Austria's Fighting Forces.

Austria's army is credited with a peace strength of 415,000 men and 1,875 guns, which the first-line reserves would increase in a few days to 820,000 men. Behind these could be mustered hundreds of thousands of men of varying ages who have had some military training, and who would fill the gaps in the field army. Little Serbia can mobilize all of her male population trained to bear arms to the number of 324,000 in a fortnight's time, although she maintains only 38,000 men in time of peace. As Austria must guard her Russian frontier and leave some troops in the great Slav areas of her own territory to restrain outbreaks of revolution, it can be seen that any army she might attempt to throw across the Danube into Serbia would not be of overwhelming strength. Then, too, the Serbian army is largely composed of veterans with a splendid record of record of fratricide achievement in the Balkan wars.

Germany's field army in time of war numbers 1,220,000 men, and her entire system of mobilization and strategy is based upon an invasion of France and a simultaneous resistance to a Russian attack upon her back door. Behind this field army stands an active reserve of 600,000 men of the Landwehr, and behind them still 1,500,000 men who have had military training and are available to make good battle losses. Germany's strong point, as opposed to Russia, is her system of superior mobilization. The vast distances which Russian reservists must travel, and the scanty railroads in the czar's empire all tend somewhat to neutralize the preponderance of Russian troops.

On a peace footing the Russian army is 1,034,000 men of all arms, distributed over her European and Asiatic possessions. Many of these men would not be available for use in a European war. But military experts concede that Russia could hurl a great army of 1,500,000 men across Germany's Asiatic frontiers, these men comprising the regular European army corps and the first-line reservists. Behind them, in turn, are several million trained and partly trained men, for use in making up the ravages of battle and disease.

France, too, would be an effective ally of the Serbians on land. The French army is a different weapon from what it was in 1870. The active army within continental France is thought to number about 600,000 men, and although France's naval power tion does not allow her the immense amount of reserve strength which Germany possesses, the outbreak of war would mean the instant increase of the field army to a strength of 1,300,000, which might be still further increased by the recall of troops from Algeria, and drafts from 700,000 trained reservists of the second line.

Strength of Italian Army.

The Italian army is more or less an unknown quantity. Its value to Austria and Germany would consist in the diverting of some of France's attention to her southern frontier. On a peace basis, the Italian army consists of slightly more than 300,000 men. The field army in time of war would number nearly 500,000 men, and could be raised to 800,000 by the mobilization of the so-called expeditionary force of the British home army could be sent over to France. But Britain's most efficient help would undoubtedly consist in attempting to destroy the German navy and mercantile marine and in blockading the German ports of the North sea and the Baltic.

Where it would all end the wisest wisecracker could never say, and the industrial and economic havoc such a war would wreak would probably set the world back a half century, at least. Its expense would run into the billions beyond computation. The figures of armies given here, it must be remembered, except in the case of Italy, include only the active army now in service, and the first and second classes of reserves. Every country in Europe which practices conscription contains additional divisions of men, young and old, who are regarded as possible food for cannon. Within a month between six and twelve millions of men might be engaged.—New York Evening Post.

British Sentiment Is Not in Favor of War

London.—England shows no enthusiasm over becoming embroiled in a war which might prove a calamity to her interests. As far as opinion can be gathered, sentiment tends towards Austria. This is based on the belief that Serbian intrigues for undermining Austria by a Pan-Slav movement have been so open that no nation could tolerate them and in the present exuberant state of Serbian national pride only the sharpest and most peremptory measures could have any effect.

One result of the sudden threat of international complications is to thrust Ireland from the center of the stage. It may even force the British cabinet to a compromise, which even the king could not accomplish, and a general election under the present circumstances appears out of the question. It is doubtful if even the government's bitterest enemies would want a change in the cabinet and the furtherance of a broad political campaign while the nation needs to keep a cool head and free hands for the protection of its European position.

U. S. to Remain Neutral in Servia-Austrian Crisis

Washington.—In accord with a policy of absolute neutrality, should the Austro-Serbian crisis develop into war, any attempt by the United States to intervene would be promptly turned down by the United States, in the opinion of officials here. It was pointed out that the recent sale of the battleships Mississippi and Idaho to Greece could be no manner serve as a precedent for further sale of ships to any European government. These battleships were misfits in the American navy and on that account congress consented to their sale.

President Wilson might issue a proclamation of neutrality which would cleverly set forth just what commerce could be permitted between this country and the parties of the conflict which European chancelleries fear is imminent.

"Holy Hay," or Salpêtre.

Salpêtre, in common with the others, is a member of the natural order Leguminosae. It has been known and cultivated as a fodder crop for over 200 years, but has been introduced to the United States in the middle of the seventeenth century, from the name of "Holy Hay," or Salpêtre. The name "Salpêtre" is derived from the Latin word "salpêtre," which means "holy hay." It is a member of the natural order Leguminosae. It has been known and cultivated as a fodder crop for over 200 years, but has been introduced to the United States in the middle of the seventeenth century, from the name of "Holy Hay," or Salpêtre.

lyn, New York, spent the past couple of weeks here the guest of her brother John C. Bedinger and wife.
Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hudson left last week for Oklahoma on a visit to their sons who reside near Broken Arrow, and expect to be gone several weeks.
Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Metcalfe of Covington, and Dr. and Mrs. C. C.
Metcalfe and two little daughters enjoyed a delightful outing at Big Bone Springs last week.
Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Rouse spent part of last week with their daughter Mrs. Jos. P. Harris and husband at Covington, where Rev.
Harris is the pastor of the Scott Street Methodist church.
Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Tompkins enjoyed the week at Lexington attending the Blue Grass Fair and visiting friends. Their daughter Miss Marian Brookings spent the week in Covington with friends.
Mrs. Chester Stephens of Covington, and L. R. Miller of Landing, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Miller the first of last week. Mr. John Miller is still confined to his room with sciatica.
Mrs. Benj. F. Stanfield of Brant-Station, and Mrs. Elmer B. Stansfield of Piner, left Monday morning on an extended tour to Canada, via Niagara Falls, and will visit other interesting eastern points.
Edwin L. Johnson sold his suburban property consisting of about 23 acres to J. B. O'Neal of Dry Ridge, consideration $3,000.00 and possession to be given Sept.
1st. Mr. and Mrs. O'Neal are welcome additions to Walton.
Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Stephens of Chicago, are spending a couple of weeks with his mother at the O'Neals' home in Kenton. They are in company with his brother and sister-in-law who are here with their home. Mr. Stephens is enjoying the Chicago home.

W. C. Readnour of Cincinnati, spent part of the past week with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Readnour, near town. Mr. Read-nour who travels for a Cincinnati firm had just returned from a visit to relatives in northern Illinois, and reports a fine corn crop there.
Samuel C. Hicks sold to Chas.
S. Chambers the lot adjoining the Electric Light Plant for $500 and Mr. Chambers is arranging to have a town hall for general amusement purposes erected on the lot, using it for a moving picture show during the inclement weather when the air dome cannot be utilized.
Edgar F. Kipp, administrator of the estate of Jacob Kipp, deceased, sold through Geo. B. Powers, real estate agent, the Walton property belonging to the heirs and consisting of a two-story dwelling and lot, to Edwin M.
Johnson, consideration $2,500. Mr.
Johnson occupies a part of the property as a residence and Dr.
B. K. Menefee has his office in the ground floor.
Prof. Chas. F. Chambers, who is spending his vacation here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. F.
Chambers, was elected as the appointed of the Commercial Department of the Covington-Night Schools at a salary of $1,400.00 for the term of about 9 months, with sessions of three nights in each week. The day and night schools pay a salary of $1,775.00 and Prof. Chambers signed a contract at that price Monday.
Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Botts, of Chattanooga, Tenn., spent part of last week here with their many friends, and a part of the time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs.
Walker Wilson, of Kenton county. Judge Botts was the L. and N. Railroad agent at Walton for many years, and was the possession of Walton for several terms, and his intelligence and ability won him praise on every side. He and his estimable wife are very popular with our people and it was regretted that their stay was confined to such a short visit.
Judge Botts is a trusted employee of a large railroad system at Chattanooga and has won the same high esteem that he enjoyed at Walton.
Miss Lora Diers, who is employed by the L. & N. P. & O. Bros., large dry goods establishment in Cincinnati, left last Saturday for New York City to spend a couple of weeks in the interest of the firm, doing some of the buying of the fall stock and attending the demonstration in the corset department, having charge of that department in the store. Miss Diers has gained several promotions since she accepted a position with this establishment, and to be sent to the eastern market as one of the buyers is another evidence of the confidence that her employers have in her ability.
Saturday night a week ago a party consisting of Ernest McElroy, Jno. L. Vest, Roy D. Stamler and E. M. Johnson were going to Verona to attend the institution of the new masonic lodge at that place, the colored chaffeur, who was driving the automobile in trying to make a short turn in the road going to a bridge over a creek, ran into a stump and damaged the machine badly, so that they could not pursue their journey. All of the occupants of the machine were injured but not to a serious degree. Robt. Coffman was telephoned and safely conveyed the party to Verona. It was a narrow escape from a plunge of about ten feet into the creek. Sylvanus Johnson was the young colored man at the wheel of the automobile and it was the property of Rivette DeMoisey, who in consequence had to make his rural mail trips this way.

Reimer lost all of his household goods. Origin of the fire is unknown. While working in his mill last Friday S. N. Biggs became entangled in the machinery and narrowly escaped serious injury. He was wearing a pair of pants that were old and easily gave way which was all that saved him. He was badly shaken up but escaped without being hurt.

To further the interests of the town in which you live, it is necessary to vie with each other in the matter of public affairs. Let us each do our best to make our town a better place. Let us each do our best to make our town a better place. Let us each do our best to make our town a better place.

The question as to whether or not lightning rods really protect buildings is a question that has been asked many times. There is a pup. Now the most reliable informed claim that rods of proper character, properly installed, and properly maintained, do protect but they also increase the danger. However, they claim that the protection afforded by rods is not the extra hazard of the condition. Any metal connection made to the earth acts as a conductor. Two strand cable is galvanized iron fence wire furnished a good material for cheap lightning rods.

Tuesday evening as Stephen Gaines, of Petersburg precinct, and one of the petit jurors, was going home from court, a dog belonging to Chas. Birkle, who lives a little over a half mile out on the Bellevue pike, ran after Mr. Gaines as he passed the fence and made his horse jump which ran about half a mile before it could be stopped. Mr. Gaines escaped injury but the dog was badly injured it had to be abandoned. Rex Berkshire who was riding with Mr. Gaines jumped out of the buggy and skinned his nose slightly.

Tuesday Dr. M. A. Yelton purchased of O. P. Phipps his house and lot and all the furniture and property he bought several months ago of J. F. Blyth and converted into a garage. The two purchases taken in the entire square across the street opposite the Boone House. Prices private. Several of the old buildings on the lot will be moved and given a different position on the lot.

Mrs. Sarah Pace and granddaughter have returned to their home in Indianapolis after a visit of several weeks here with relatives. Arthur Terrill, of Belleville, Kansas, is the guest of his niece, Mrs. Edgar Riley. Mr. Terrill is 74 years old and is the last member of the old Terrill family at one time so large in this county. Sherman W. Riggs, who moved from Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, to Long Beach, California, several years ago in visit to his friends and relatives in Boone county. Mr. Riggs was in town last Friday and looks as though the climate of California agrees with him. He reports his health as all well.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Goodridge entertained at dinner, Sunday, for Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Davis and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Elizabeth Gaines, of Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Davis, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Riggs and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Gaines, of Idlewild.

John S. Gaunt Dead.

Tuesday afternoon Atty. S. W. Tolm received a telegram announcing the death of Hon. John S. Gaunt that morning at his home in Louisville. Mr. Gaunt had many friends in this judicial district in which he was an active member of the Louisville A. T. U. and there after one of the districts leading attorneys. He was a high toned, christian gentleman, a true friend and his death is deplored by all. Mr. Gaunt had been in poor health for several years, but a few months since he seemed to be regaining his old time vigor and had resumed the practice of law to which profession he was devoted. The announcement of Mr. Gaunt's death was a shock to his friends here.

Run Over by Hay Press.

Frank Aylor, who resides near town, was badly hurt Tuesday while assisting in moving Frank Rouse's hay press. The press weighs about 7,000 pounds and is mounted on low wheels. The team was backing to the load could not start it and Mr. Aylor had his shoulder against the front wheel pushing when the load started. Suddenly the horse fell on the ground; the rear wheel catching one of his feet and followed up his leg to his body before the team could be stopped. It took the united strength of several men to handle the machine so he could be released.

The Army Of Harvesters.

Seventy-five per cent of the men who answered the call to the Western harvest fields were of "the army of the unemployed," the per cent of the students leaving work during the summer vacation and the remaining 10 per cent were immigrants, according to the Department of Labor. The opinion was based on Oklahoma's report that of the 11,000 men who came to her fields, 95 per cent were laborers from New York, Chicago and other Eastern centers temporarily out of work. Approximately 100,000 men have obtained employment as harvesters in the Middle Western States.

The Boone fair will begin on Thursday, the 21st inst., for a three days exhibition. The square across the street opposite the Boone House. Prices private. Several of the old buildings on the lot will be moved and given a different position on the lot. Eddins Bros. will erect a commodious garage on the lot owned by the father in the southern part of Burlington. They are working up a good business.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The August term of the Boone circuit court convened last Monday at 10 a. m. Judge J. W. Cammack presiding and Common Pleas Attorney John J. Howe on hand to look after the interest of the Commonwealth. The first business was the organizing of the grand jury, which is composed of the following gentlemen: H. H. Grant, Petersburg, foreman; Edgar Graves, Bullittsville, W. E. Rice, Bellevue; John W. Dolwick, Constance; Sam Shinkle, Constance; Charles Kelly, Burlington; E. L. Aylor, Hebron; Stephen Gaines, Petersburg; Ramon Kyle, Burlington; Harvey Tanner, Hebron; E. N. Withers. The court gave the jury a lengthy and very emphatic charge dealing with night riding, automobile driving, carrying pistols and boot-legging in vigorous terms. The petit jurors are composed of the following gentlemen: No. 1. W. B. Walton, Chas. Shinkle, W. L. Presser, C. A. Berkshire, G. W. Sandford, C. J. Craven, W. F. Bradford, Judging the number of Henry Jenkins, J. J. Tanner, E. C. Carroll.

No. 2. J. H. Moody, Jesse Louden, R. L. Brown, James Blankenbaker, George Gordon, D. T. Riggs, Junius Bell, Elmer Kirkpatrick, Bert Berkshire, Lloyd Weaver, James Craven.

Alvin Steiger, clerk of the Owen county circuit court, is keeping the record for Circuit Clerk Chas. Maurer. Mr. Steiger is suffering greatly with hay fever. The criminal docket was called in the afternoon and several cases were disposed of by continuance. Judging the number of witnesses on hand Monday the grand jury will do some business. The trial of Gus Stevens charged with the killing of Joe Kelly, brought to this court on a change of venue from Court county, will be called next Monday. If tried there it will be Great week in the Boone circuit court. The grand jury has had quite a number of witnesses before it, and a great crop of indictments may result. The case of the Commonwealth against J. C. Byland was continued until the second day of the next term of the court. The petit jurors were excused Tuesday afternoon until Thursday morning.

Death, which spares not, loves a shining mark and comes with deepest shadow and darkest contrast to the dwelling of the great. Coming to the house of the President it touches the hearts of all the people. The death of a lovely and beloved wife, the one friend dearer than all—the one blow which crushes the soul of man. It seems irreparable. To no man could it be more crushing than to Woodrow Wilson, to whom this noble lady was all that one being can be to another; wise and gracious and sweet, for nearly thirty years sharing a life of aspiring toil; crowned at last by resplendent fortune to be dashed to earth and scattered by untimely catastrophe. She was sprung from a race of gentle-folk—the Axons and the Hoyts—people who united to the culture these gifts of nature which make life best worth living. May God give the stricken husband strength to meet this terrible trial which Heaven can send; for whilst the passing of her life comes as a personal bereavement to the people, the taking of her life would be a national calamity. The Courier-Journal tenders him and his dear daughters the assurance of its profound sympathy and heartfelt sorrow.—C. J.

It may be news to our readers that the Mississippi river each year carries out to the ocean 600,000,000 tons of the best part of our soils, which would cover 200,000 acres one foot deep says Wallace Farmer. If the report of the United States War Commission is correct, which we have no reason to doubt, the total annual soil wash and erosion of the United States amounts to 1,000,000,000 tons or five hundred thousand acres one foot deep. This means a loss of 1,300 acres of soil one foot deep per day, or fifty four acres of soil one foot deep per hour, or nearly one acre a minute.

Farmers are in very much better spirits than they were a week ago. Besides refreshing vegetation the rain refreshes the growth of crops as well. Only a few weeks until young wheat will be wending its way to school again. Rising Sun's centennial celebration this week is proving a great success. GOOD ROADS

DISCUSSION OF GOOD ROADS

Most That Has Been Accomplished in Thirty Years in Iowa Is Sentiment—Face Problem.

Gov. George W. Clarke, in a message to the Iowa legislature, touching on good roads, said:

"For thirty years the discussion of the good roads problem has been going on in the state. Many of the governors of the state within that time have called attention to the question and some of them have urged constructive legislation. Some progress has been made both in the way of better laws and in the improvement of the highways, but the most that has been accomplished is an aroused public sentiment in favor of better roads—perhaps in favor of permanent roads. Iowa will have permanent roads whenever she wants them. She will have better rural schools whenever she wants them. She will not have either before. Legislation awaits public sentiment—generally aroused, organized public demand. The next great era in the development of western civilization is going to be called by the historian The Era of Permanent Road Building. We are now at the very threshold of that era. We are face to face with the problem. No state can longer allow herself to be handicapped by mud. The economic waste is enormous. Not in the future can there be such a thing as a really great up-to-date state without good, permanent roads. The cheapening of the cost of transportation of the markets of the country waits on permanent roads. The instant great increase in the value of land awaits the coming of the permanent road. There can be no complete solution of the country's problem in advance of the permanent road. The consolidated rural school will go halting and crippled until the permanent road passes the door. This is an ideal that will be realized in the future. How far distant it is depends upon the people of the state. This generally assumed ought, it seems to me, to take hold of the problem with the end in view to ultimately realize this ideal. Nothing could contribute more to the greatness of the state and the welfare of all of the people. All that is done hereafter in the improvement of our roads ought to be with the view of permanent. Permanent highways and bridges, permanent systems of drainage, permanent establishment of grades—all with the view of eventually receiving the permanent road. With this purpose in view the law should provide for the appointment of a county engineer. He should be a thoroughly competent and not necessarily a resident of the county where appointed. There should also be created a permanent highway commission, composed of expert road men and engineers with such powers and duties in the way of the preparation of plans and specifications, estimates of costs, advertising for bids and general supervision and control as may after careful consideration be deemed wise. I can see no reason why provision should not be made for a referendum to the people of the question as to whether bonds of the state should be issued for the purpose of raising money for permanent road building. It would not incur a great expense to determine whether or not the people are ready to enter upon this work which would add more than anything else to the greatness of the state, and it would at least be of great value in causing universal discussion of the subject which must always precede any movement involving the change of long-established methods and of thought. In the meantime our road laws, which now exist in a disconnected and patchwork form, should be revised, rewritten and strengthened for the purpose of securing the best possible temporary roads and for devising methods of administration looking to the coming of the permanent road. Selfish interests clinging to old methods and advantages, may be found in covert opposition. Permit me to suggest that you look carefully to this, as a body, you will, to the end that private interests may not prevail against the common good."

Reduce Width of Roads.

The suggestion of the governor of Iowa that public roads should be reduced in width is a very sensible one. The governor proposes to make the roadway 40 feet wide and turn the rest of the land back into the farms. While this would add many thousands of acres to the tillable land of the state, the best feature of the plan is that it would greatly reduce the cost of keeping the road in good condition. I never could see the reason for maintaining a 70-foot highway with a little tract of 10 feet in the middle and 30 feet on each side growing up to weeds.

Considerable Benefit.

If good roads from the producer to the consumer were general the benefits to both would be considerable.

What War Is.

War is an attempt on the part of one country to shoot justice and reason into another. When the customs of nations have exhausted every effort to agree with each other, the job is turned over to the boys and young men of these countries. After these brave youngsters have argued with each other for a few hours, using smokeless and magazine logic, they are a very bad sight.

Sometimes a hundred thousand young men are used in one of these arguments. The pity of it is they are not useful for anything else thereafter. A battlefield covered with the bodies of 50,000 citizens is a great indictment of the common or loose-jawed variety of logic used in international diplomacy.

There are still a few brands of logic which were popular two thousand years ago, when the common citizen was of little value except as fertilizer. What we need is an improved method of logic, which will enable two nations to discuss points of honor without creating standing room only in the orphan asylums.

Nothing can exceed the glory and grandeur of war in literature and history. Every young man who has been torn into twenty irregular fragments is not a grand and glorious thing. He is a great pity. He represents the most striking evidence of the greatest natural resource.

There is nothing grander about war than there is about the box car which carries the citizen who didn't hear the train coming. War is brutal, messy, and unesthetic. It is more extravagant than the most extravagant of the old fashioned nations which still thresh wheat by driving an ox over it. But when we desire to make an obscure piece of international diplomacy we often do it by shooting holes into half a million young men, and spending millions of dollars to pay old age pensions to the entire nation.

War is a big fool performance, because it is such a waste of perfectly good heroes, who are willing to go out and die in defense of a nation which would not be put to bed by a worn out and back number system of argument.

The Horse Still King.

A recent issue of Our Dumb Animals, a publication devoted to the cause of the prevention of cruelty to animals, contains the following interesting item on the horse and the motor truck. It seems to throw much light upon a subject that is being earnestly discussed by horsemen in all sections of the country, and, in fact, the world.

"The Rider and Driver published in its issue for March 1, twenty-eight replies from team owners of Philadelphia as to their experience with auto trucks compared with horse teams. The replies appeared in one of the Philadelphia papers. We select fourteen of them though all were to the same effect:

Kolb Baking Company: "Work 400 horses, six autos; no trouble at all with the horses, and you can't make that assertion too strong; all sorts of trouble with the autos; bought more horses today."

Freihofer Baking Co.: "Two hundred and eighty-four horses, twenty autos; every horse working, except those of the autos out of repair."

Gimbel Bros.: "Two hundred and seventy-six horses at work, eleven automobiles; haven't had an unsuccessful trip with the horses during the storm, nor a successful one with the autos."

United States Express Co.: "Two hundred and fifty-nine horses, no trucks, and best all, not going to have any; have profited by the experience others are having with their trucks."

N. Snicklen & Co.: "One hundred and twenty-eight horses at work, fifteen trucks. All horse delivery made satisfactory. Many of the trucks had to be unloaded and towed home."

National Biscuit Co.: "Ninety-three horses, no trucks. Horses so satisfactory no danger of our substituting them."

D. B. Martin & Co.: "One hundred and twelve horses, fourteen trucks. The trucks are absolutely worthless during the snow storm; horses working every day."

The Tomato Enemy.

The tomato crop is being destroyed by a new enemy. A worm, evidently a borer of some description, very much resembling the ordinary tobacco worm, but varying in length, is destroying the crop. The worm enters the tomato which immediately begins to rot and is of course rendered useless. They evidently attack only ripe fruit, those about to ripen, but they are here in large numbers and unless something is done to check their ravages, the already drooping tomatoes will be damaged at least fifty per cent.

STICK TO THE PUNCHCOIN.

If you play ball, play ball if you get defeated. In a squall and play ball. We know of men who are taking part in our congressional race who would not support the man who they have to lose. This is not square fair dealing and such demagogues are very careful about entering the picture. We have no need to say about the politics of any one but when a man participates in a primary we believe now and have always believed he is bound to support the nominee whether he be his choice or not. If he does not intend to do this he should stay out of the primary. —Owen County Democrat.

A Livestock Exchange.

The Live Stock Exchange recently organized by the Extension Department of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has information to farmers and others on listing stock for sale and also at listing stock in touch with prospective buyers of live stock; however, like every other business worth while, it meets with its difficulties. For example it has some requests that it has not as yet been able to fill and on the other hand it has some excellent stock listed for which buyers have not been secured as yet. It is surprising, however, in view of the dry weather and other unfavorable conditions to notice the heavy demand for both grade and pure bred stock.

By way of explanation to those not familiar with the workings of the live stock exchange of the Experiment Station, the following information might be made. The Extension Department of the Station was organized to devise efficient means of carrying helpful information to farmers and others, wise operating to improve the condition of the Kentucky farmer. Among the activities engaged in by the department have been the issuing of special press notices, conducting short courses both at the Agricultural College and in various places.

State where the interest is great enough to warrant it, the organization of farmers' and breeders' associations, conducting educational agricultural exhibits at county and other fairs and exhibitions, the conducting of boys' encampments, etc., for agricultural instruction, the introduction of agricultural agents, the organization of boys' and girls clubs, the organization and systematic instruction of clover and alfalfa clubs demonstrations in reclamation of worn out soils, itinerant advisory work, the rejuvenation of old orchards, spraying and pruning demonstrations and general horticultural improvement work, the building of barns and silos and general dairy improvement work, the introduction of agriculture into schools, and other such enterprises too numerous to mention.

One of the most recent undertakings is the above mentioned live stock exchange which acts as a medium for those who wish to buy and sell. No fees are charged. No responsibility is assumed by this department, as its only effort is to put the prospective buyer and seller in communication leaving them to make their own trade. This is a service that should interest and help every farmer in the State but it takes cooperation to make such a thing go. The farmer can help not alone by listing stock or offering to buy, but if he knows of a prospective buyer or seller he should so inform this office and likewise the interested party. Farmers have been accused of being indifferent as regards the betterment of farm conditions but this should not obtain when it comes to an enterprise whose success depends upon the cooperation of the farmers themselves.

Just now we are in great need of a grade Shorthorn or Red Polled bull, several young Hereford heifers, four grade Percheron mares, twenty calves of beef breeds or grades, a number of pure bred Angus cattle, Southdown and Shropshire sheep, about twenty Duroc and Berkshire sows and a number of Jersey heifers and cows. On the sale list is a large assortment but none happened to suit the above prospective purchasers. The farmers of Kentucky can make this exchange their most valuable medium or they can make a quick failure of an organization intended to help them.

7,500 Years Old.

Owing to the world-wide interest manifested in the discovery of the Nipper tablets giving the oldest extant version of the creation, flood and fall of man, many persons imagine that the documents themselves are the most ancient in existence, but such is not the fact. They are comparatively recent, although they date to 2600 B. C. They are the golden age of Sumner literature and represents a very long development of history and writings are found in documents which are many years older. There are four tablets which are estimated to be the oldest human writings in existence, and one of them is at the University Museum. It is only about 3 inches square and is imperfect and is assigned with some probability to about 2600 B. C. though it is impossible to make a close estimate. It may be older or younger. This is written in cuneiform characters, the picture writing of all primitive peoples, and with great labor it has been translated by Prof. Geo. Barton, of Bryn Mawr College, although some of the words are doubtful. These convenient pictures form a document dealing with the cleaning up of a landed estate and the exact purpose of it is not wholly clear, although it is a document which was killed and the property put in order it may have served the purpose of a deed.

It is known that in this irrigated land of plenty, where wheat was said to have reproduced two hundred fold, any failure of crop was said to be demography, and it was important to remove the spell of witchcraft apparently the spell had been lifted from his piece of land.

No other human writing has been found older than the 4 specimens mentioned. The present records back of them consist of stone tablets, which were fashioned with great skill. There are flint razors in the University Museum with which modern people can shave, while flint knives which may be fifty thousand years old are still sharp. Anthropologists estimate that the oldest flint razors are from 200,000 to 300,000 years old. There are some pictures in caves and bone carvings which may be 10,000 years old, but 7,500 years is the present limit of writing. It may be that other discoveries will go far back of this and naturally be much more difficult to cipher. At present the task is exceedingly difficult and meanings often doubtful.

Next Wednesday the Erlanger fair will begin its ninth annual meeting.

FARM POULTRY

ARRANGEMENT OF NEST BOX

Canadian Expert Recommends Use of Earth or Overturned Sod, Covered With Straw or Chaff.

A nest can be made out of an old box about 12 inches square and six inches deep. Professor Graham of the Ontario Agricultural college recommends that "some earth or an overturned sod be placed in the bottom of the box, taking care to have the corners very full so that no eggs can roll out from the hen and get chilled. Next put on about two inches of straw or chaff; and then put a few earthenware eggs into the nest. Place the nest in some pen where nothing can disturb the hen, and put her on after dark. Feed and water must be within easy reach, and a dust bath should also be convenient. If the hen is settling quietly the next day it will be safe to put the eggs under her."

Another nest box that has given considerable satisfaction is made in three compartments. A 12 inch board used for the top, one for the back, and the other for the bottom. The partitions and ends are made of the same material cut in one foot lengths. Along the front is a four inch strip to keep in the litter. To this is hinged a slatted door, which, when opened forms a platform in front of the nest. The work of filling the nests and setting the hen can be proceeded with as already described. These boxes may be piled one above the other.

When the hens are let off the nests to feed, the doors of the nest boxes should be closed, which compels the hens to remain on the floor until they have had a chance to feed. The hens will not return to the same nests, but this is rather likely to be of benefit than otherwise. All hens do not set at exactly the same temperature, and an occasional change averages up the temperature for all the settings of eggs.

No hen should be allowed to set, unless she is free from lice. The insect of the bird is conducive to rapid multiplication of any lice there may be on her. These will make her irritable and a poor setter. In addition, should she bring off a hatch in such a condition, the chicks will be open to infection. Dust the hen well with flowers of sulphur or some other insect powder before setting, and again a day or two before the hatch finishes.

About the seventh day the eggs should be tested, the infertile ones removed, and the balance put back in the nests. After testing it is usually found that the eggs from four hens can be put under three. This leaves one hen with no eggs, and a new setting can be put under her.

When the chicks arrive two or three batches can be put with one hen, which leaves more hens at liberty to sit, or if there is no more hatching to be done they can be put back in the laying pens.

POULTRY NOTES

The day before shipping live fowls, feed hard grain.

Satisfying the appetite adds greatly to the thrift of the flock.

It is estimated that five chickens will yield a pound of feathers.

Cleaning dropping boards is a chore that cannot be done too often.

Whatever interferes with growth retards and diminishes egg production.

On cool, damp, rainy nights close all the ventilating windows of the hen house.

The very first thing to do on noticing signs of illness in a bird, is to isolate it.

The best nest for laying hens is close to the floor, darkened, and easily movable.

Feed plenty of charcoal, as it is one of the best things for keeping the poultry healthy.

Eggs cannot be produced without nitrogenous food in some shape. Bones are absolutely essential.

Do not forget that your fowls need green food. If it is impossible to give them a change of yard or run, see that they get some kind of green food during the daily feed.

FEW PRACTICAL FARM HINTS

Field That Will Grow Crop of Strong Weeds Will Likewise Produce Crops That Are Profitable.

Did you ever realize that the field that will grow an immense crop of big strong weeds will likewise grow a good crop of farm produce if the soil is richly taken care of? Weeds use plant food just as much as corn or small grain.

The weed is the one crop that never stops growing. It is right on the job from spring until fall and it doesn't need much cultivation either. Potatoes should never be handled with iron forks or shovels. If any tools are used they should be made of wood, because the least abrasion of the skin will often start decay.

The home water system is no longer an impossibility. It can be installed in practically any farm home and it does not represent prohibitive cost.

Farm management is the thing that

Take up good strong roots of rhubarb; two-year-old seedlings being best in autumn; leave them out until after exposure to freezing, then crowd them together in boxes with a little soil between and under them and set them wherever wanted, or plant them out on the cellar bottom.

determines the profit of the farm, efficiency is just as important here as in an office.

A good fence is a necessity for a good garden. Some people grow garden vegetables for their live stock, but no wide-awake gardener does it. Sweet potatoes or root crops may be kept in good condition by putting them in the cellar between layers of sand. Let the sand fill all spaces.

The celery for winter use should be hearted up gradually, banking the hearth well up against the stalks, nearly to the top of the leaves.

Gardens should be cleared from all remains of the season's crops and prepared for the next year.

Rotation of crops in the garden has the same arguments favoring it as rotation in farm crops.

HOW A GARDEN MOLE LIVES

Little Creatures Have Remarkable Appetite, Feeding Entirely on Earthworms, Grubs and Insects.

Moles feed entirely on earth worms, burrowing grubs, and on insects, and have a remarkable appetite, together with love, passion and hatred in energy and voracity.

They are built particularly strong, full of muscle, and have a hand, spade-like, supplied with claws, making a capital digging machine.

In observing a mole when put on the ground after being caught, it will immediately plunge its sharp snout in the earth and give two or three full strikes of fore-paws enough to bury most of his body—the hind feet give a comical kick in the air and the mole gets out of sight with a startling quickness and find him if you can.

The mole hills which we see are not homes but composed of material which is worked over in forming temporary passages looking after prey.

A mole's only true home, fortress or kingdom, is located at a distance from the hunting grounds with which communication is kept up.

A mole will consume the weight of its body in a remarkably short time.

Snails and slugs it seizes from behind before they know of its life for a living, and especially is this true in the winter.

Swill for Pigs.

There is no reason why good, clean swill from the family table should not be fed to the pigs but it is a bad practice to force the pigs to eat sour and fermented swill.

Success With Sheep.

Success with the ewes and lambs during pregnancy and lambing in no small measure depends upon the state of health of the ewes previous to and throughout the mating season.

Foundation of Fattening.

The care of the young pigs is the foundation of the fattening of the market animal.

A Beautiful Tribute To Grass.

Eloquent John J. Ingalls, of Kansas once paid the following beautiful tribute to Grass: "Lying in the sunshine among the buttercups and the dandelions of May, scarcely higher in intelligence than the minute tenants of that mimic wilderness our earliest recollections are of grass; when the fitful fever is ended and the foolish wrangle of the market and the forum is closed, grass heals over the scar that our decent infirmity has made, and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead—Grass is the forgiveness of nature—her consoling benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of cannons, grown green again with grass and carnage is forgotten. Streets abandoned by traffic become grass grown like rural lanes and are obliterated. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal. Beleguared by the sullen hosts of winter it withdraws into the impenetrable forests of its subterranean vitality and emerges upon the first solicitation of spring. Sown by the winds, the wandering birds propagated by the subtle agriculture of the elements which are its ministers and servants, it softens the rude outlines of the world. It bears no blazonry bloom to charm the sense with fragrance or splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air, and yet should its harvests fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world."

What Mules Can Do.

A pair of small mules can do as much general farm work as a pair of big horses and will keep in good condition on less than half the grain that the big horses actually need. That means a big saving in a year at the present prices of grain.

You can work a pair of mules to a cultivator, or among tobacco tomatoes or any tender plants and they will not injure as many plants in a day as a pair of big horses would in an hour.

Generally speaking, the mules are much quicker than the horses. They learn faster, are more prompt and give better satisfaction in every way excepting as a "Sunday-go-to-meeting" team, and thousands of them are being used for that purpose.

The mule is the best friend of the farmer. Many men are prejudiced against the mule because they claim a mule is "treacherous and you can't trust him." If you are afraid of a mule keep away from him, for he will be almost certain to give you trouble. Many make the mistake of starting in with a club. Judging from experience and observation, the best use they could make of their favorite badge of manliness would be to apply it to their own heads; it would do far more good.

Senator Bryan's good roads bill, a substitute for the Shackleford bill already passed by the House was reported to the Senate this week by the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Postroads.

Under the terms of the Bryan bill the federal government would issue fifty-year, per cent. bonds to the amount of $500,000,000, in lots of $100,000,000 each for five years. Before a state could participate in the funds they would be required to issue an equal amount of 4 per cent. bonds, which, when deposited in the Treasury Department, would be exchanged for cash. The one per cent. difference would make up a sinking fund to aid the States in retiring the bonds.

Creation of a Federal highway commission to supervise the expenditure of highway funds is a feature of the Bryan bill.

Soybeans Versus Cowpeas.

As between soybeans and cowpeas, farmers are divided. Many like cowpeas because they know more about them. John K. Sapp, of Cedar township, Mo., has tried both crops, says the Columbus Herald-Statesman, and his experience should be worth something. Two years ago he planted two acres of soybeans—now he has twenty-five acres. The crop, he says makes more feed with less expense than any other forage crop he has ever tried. "I think cowpeas are just as good when once the crop is saved, but I find it less trouble to save the beans. You have to cut cowpeas before frost or they are ruined; very little rain will also damage them. I use a binder to harvest soybeans—cut just like wheat; it is easily handled, and altogether it is a very desirable crop."

Scarce Labor a Blessing.

The fact that labor upon the farm is scarce should be encouraged. The disposition with many is to hire their work done when in most cases it should be done by the owners which they must do, if they can not hire it done. When a man does his own work, he knows more about it and is in closer touch with his own affairs. When labor is scarce the farmers should move grass and cultivate less soil which they should do. When labor is scarce wages are high and more attention must be given to the work. When labor is scarce the boys are forced to work early upon the farm and soon become useful, learning lessons that otherwise they would never know. Hence we believe that the scarcity of labor is a benefit and not a detriment to a community.

It is estimated that a million bushels of bluegrass seed will be shipped from Central Kentucky this year to Europe.

Notice the Beds on "Thornhill" Wagons

The beds of "Thornhill" wagons are designed and finished with excessive care. The sides are made of first class plating, because it holds paint better and gives better service. The bottom of the beds are of Southern pine tongue and grooved and reinforced over front and rear bolsters. A system of construction is employed that prevents the reinforcing from ever falling out and insures longest wear. Throughout the "Thornhill" Wagon, you will find the features that have proved themselves worthy. The long, close, malleable skin (non-breakable) prevents the axle from breaking at the skin. The strength of the bolsters is multiplied by the construction employed. The front hound plate is so made that the gears can never get out of line. You will find in this wagon six big points of superiority that no other wagon possesses. Come in and let us show you the "Thornhill" wagon sold on a guarantee. Do it to-day.

Home grown watermelons are on the market.

Now watch blue grass pastures come to the front again.

The grain in this part of the county is about all threshed.

The rains this week have destroyed a great many bunnies.

Quite a large crowd attended the funeral of John T. Craven, last Thursday.

Waterloo base ball team defeated the Limaburg team 6 to 4 last Saturday.

Mr. Buchert has built a considerable bridge across Woolper creek on the highway to his residence.

The Lawrenceburg fair last week was a success from every standpoint, and the management is elated.

So far as heard from the rain descended upon the just and the unjust last Tuesday morning in this county.

A handsome monument was erected on the lot of James W. Kite in Odd-Fellows cemetery, one day last week.

Wilber Kelly and wife, of Covington, were Sunday guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Kelly out on the Bellevue pike.

All that is known certain about the European trouble is that an ugly war is in progress and that a good many people will get hurt.

There seems to be a pretty fair crop of apples and peaches which the farmers' wives should not fail to preserve and can for winter use.

Charles Kelly, residing on the headwaters of Middle creek, says he has as fine prospects for a crop of corn as he ever had at this time of the year.

The first load of home-grown watermelons made their appearance on the streets of Burlington, last Thursday. They came from the Bellevue river bottoms.

The Recorder received the following compliment from Rev. S. S. Lappin, formerly of Erlanger: "I see the Recorder frequently; it is the best county paper I know of."

The rains the past week have been a great relief to many of the farmers in this county who feared they would have to begin feeding their stock at an early date.

Every farmer should sow his best land in rye and wheat this fall and raise a good crop of corn next year. The war abroad will greatly increase the price of products.

An order has been entered in the county court for a vote at the November election on a bond issue of $75,000 for the purpose of building roads and bridges in Boone county.

Erlanger will play ball at Burlington next Saturday. This will be the first game Erlanger has played on the local grounds this year and will doubtless be a good game. Come out.

W. S. White, who resides down on Gunpowder creek, has been suffering for a week or more from an abscess in the right groin. It was lanced a few days since which he has improved some.

A party of business men from Rising Sun, Indiana, canvassed the county one day last week in an auto, advertising the Centennial and Home Coming at that place which is in progress this week.

Dogs made two raids on W. L. Kirkpatrick's sheep in a pasture near town, last Sunday, the last raid resulting in the killing of two of the three dogs that participated in the hunt for meat.

Card of Thanks—We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to the good citizens of Boone county for their assistance in our recent troubles.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie McMullen.

Last Monday Undertaker Scott Chambers' auto skidded on the Burlington pike near Florence and turned turtle, going over a small bank. Mr. Chambers escaped injury while the machine was damaged none to speak of.

Local rains have fallen in several neighborhoods in this county the past week but there are several very dry districts where it begins to look impossible for rain to fall, and farmers there are very much discouraged over the crop outlook.

"It's an ill wind that fails to blow some one some good." The great war of Europe will put millions of dollars in the pockets of American farmers and manufacturers and no telling how high things will sell ere long if the war keeps up.

During the storm that visited the community last Friday morning lightning struck the chimney on Asa McMullen's residence and shattered it considerably. Mr. McMullen had just left his residence remodeled a few months ago. Two cats and a chicken were killed.

A check for $139 on the Verona Bank was received at this office a few days ago. The check bore no signature and nothing accompanied it to show who drew it. If the party who sent the check sees this item he or she will please send another and oblige.

To clean willow furniture scrub each piece well with a coarse brush and wash it in a strongly saturated with salt, then dry with a soft cloth. Salt not only cleans willowware, but prevents it from rotting. Willow furniture may be most successfully cleaned the same way.

E. H. Surface and Mrs. Carrie P. U. were united in marriage by Rev. Wallace at the Lutheran parsonage near Florence last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Surface are very popular people, well acquainted and have the best wishes of a host of friends, and among them is the Recorder.

The marriage of Herbert McKim, which took place in June was not known to many of his friends here until recently. He is the youngest son of W. F. McKim and was born and raised in Burlington, where he was an especial favorite with everyone. His wife is to be congratulated on her choice of a husband.

A week or ten days ago Ransom Ryle, who resides in Locust Grove neighborhood, was at this office, complaining because of his very poor prospects for a crop. Tuesday morning he was in this office again and declared he never had so fine a prospect for a crop. A good rain soon makes a change in crop conditions.

The much hated dog days are now with us and parents should exercise due caution with their children. All dogs should be muzzled and the utmost caution should be taken to prevent mad dog scares. It is better to keep all dogs out for awhile rather than to have some children bitten and die from the rabies.

Fred Stuey, of Ghent, Carroll county; F. M. Wingate, W. A. Gaines and this writer, of this county, returned last Friday from Prescott, Arizona, where they went to investigate a gold mine in which they are interested, and report that they found conditions better than they anticipated. The mine is not a prospect but a reality and they believe results in the future will be entirely satisfactory.

Myron Smith, of Union, and his auto figured in an accident, last Friday afternoon that might have been serious. He had one of his neighbor boys in the machine with him and was backing to make a turn. The boy, who was a passenger, refused to take hold and the machine went down a bank, turning over twice without hurting the occupants, who the wind shield and one boy in the top were broken. Mr. Smith has been in five such accidents and has never been injured beyond a few scratches.

Burlington base ball team visited Florence, last Saturday, where it was defeated 8 to 5. Florence making four hits while Burlington made 13 hits. Three hits were made off of Ryle in four and half innings and one off of Rogers in five and a half innings. Huey could not find the plate and a support was rotten. Rogers had perfect control. It is horse and horse now with these two teams, and the next game will be a battle royal. Florence came very near getting Burlington's scalp the first game these teams played.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius E. Rouse, of Paynes Depot, announce the engagement of their daughter, Dora Conner, to Rufus Lisle. The marriage will be a beautiful event of October. The announcement was made Friday at a beautiful luncheon given by Miss Rouse at "The Pine," her home near Paynes Depot. The bride is beautiful and charming and one of the most popular and admired young ladies in the Blue Grass. Mr. Lisle is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lisle, of Versailles, formerly of Lexington. He is handsome and attractive and a rising young business man. Both young people represent Kentucky families of prominence and the news of their approaching marriage is of wide interest.

Miss Dora Conner Rouse gave a beautiful luncheon on Friday at "The Pine," her home near Paynes Depot, to announce her engagement to Mr. Rufus Lisle. The house was prettily decorated with plants and a quantity of pink flowers, and the table appointments were of special beauty. In the center was a large basket filled with pink Killarney roses encircled with silver candelabra holding pink candles. At each place were lovely little French chandeliers filled with roses, and the flowers in each were miniature hearts embossed with a little gold and the names of the attractive couple underneath. The place cards were beautiful little hand-painted designs, and on each were appropriate verses suggesting the interesting news. Many bright toasts followed and a delicious course lunch was served. —Blue Grass Clipper.

FOR SALE—FINE BULL

Pure St. Lambert Bull, dropped July 21st, 1913. Sire, St. Lambert King Mella Ann. Dam, Lucy's Pure St. Lambert. A splendid young cow. She is a half sister (same dam) to Lucy's Roter of St. Lambert, the noted show bull first at six State fairs, including New York and Ohio. Conceded by experts to be the best pure St. Lambert bull now living. His Ma Gr. Dam has a record of 18 pounds and 6 ounces of butter from 278 pounds and 4 ounces of milk in 7 days; 21 pounds and 9 ounces as a 3 year old.

For further particulars and price address J. E. MURRAY, Proprietor Stringtown Jersey, Florence, Ky. This is the season of fairs. All that can be thought of these organizations and by the public support should be done to sustain these associations—they are the center of rural life. Each week of fair day is the farmer's holiday. At the fair men of the city meet the men of the country and get to know each other better; get to understand the purpose back of the labor of city and farm. Another good purpose of the county fair is to bring the farmer in touch with the kitchen doors of the consumers, so that the dwellers in the cities can get fresh fruit and vegetables at less than they have been paying for the stale article, and the farmer can realize more for this transaction than he could by other methods he has heretofore adopted.

Next week the Erlanger fair will be in progress and the following week the Boone Co. fair at Florence. Let everybody that can attend these fairs.

The Erlanger fair which begins next Wednesday will be the best in the history of the association unless the great effort being made to make it such fails. There will be no dull moments from the start to the finish. The flights of the air ship will be something new in this part of the country and with the new drawing card, while the fine stock that will be exhibited by owners from far and near will delight the thousands who attend every day. Erlanger will be in gala day attire and will make an especial effort to make welcome every person who comes within her gates during the fair.

SAVE THE BEST SEEDS

Utmost Care Is Needed for Successful Results.

Amateur Will Do Well Not to Raise Several Varieties of Any Vegetable as They Are Sure to Mix and Deteriorate.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)
"No occupation," says Burbank, "requires more accuracy, foresight and skill than does scientific plant or animal breeding." This specialist has found out that it requires more than one generation of plant life to establish a cross that is permanent; that the union of two distinct types may prove a cross that is valuable or the reverse.

In our own seed saving the utmost care is necessary to bring the result up to the standard. We have all seen two pieces of grain sown side by side, with seemingly similar conditions.

The one was treated with extra seed, thoroughly cleaned to remove all weeds. The other had only fair seed, sown as it was gathered from the field. Perhaps it had been tested and proof given that it would "grow." And this was deemed sufficient. But the harvest was on the side of the good seed.

If you have an extra good crop of corn, the best ears, carefully selected, both as to the number of ears on a stalk and the size and shape of each ear, will bring much more next spring when sold by the bushel.

They must be carefully dried. If put in the bin with the bulk of the corn they may "grow," but the vitality will be impaired, and they will not bring the price that can be commanded if properly cared for.

It is the last end that is often the losing one. After a thing is raised it pays to care for it in the best possible manner and get the greatest profit.

Some think that pumpkin seed are pumpkin seed, no matter what pumpkin they came from. It is a safe rule that like begets like.

If you want to perpetuate your stock and have something that is really worth saving always select the best and the earliest for saving seed.

Select the smoothest tomatoes and scrape the seed into a can of cold water. Put it in some out-of-the-way place and let remain several days or until the seeds have sunk to the bottom of the dish. Pour off the water and dry the seeds.

They will be found covered with a dark fuzz and when dry may be kept in paper packets, as supplied by the seedsmen. This is much preferable to the old fashion of keeping them on a cloth.

Cabbage, beets, parsnips and other biennials are best purchased direct from the seedsmen. If your time is worth anything it is more profitable to buy than to raise these varieties.

If you have any left-overs in the seed box, be sure to date each packet as saved, then there will be no chance of wondering which is best.

If among several tested varieties one is decidedly the best, save seeds from this only. The amateur will do well not to try to raise several varieties of any vegetable as they are sure to mix and deteriorate in quality.

If your seed is not up to the standard do not save it but buy next season of some reliable dealer. It is money ahead in the end.

LADDER FOR PICKING FRUIT

Much Inconvenience Avoided by Attaching Support for Basket—Both Hands Free to Work.

In picking fruit from a tree one is often, inconvenienced by having to hold a basket with one hand and having only one hand for picking. The illustration shows how a basket support can be attached to the right hand-board of the step-ladder. This support is constructed of rod iron.

Support for Basket.

about a half inch in diameter and bent while red-hot into shape, as shown at "A." This is inserted in the two holes shown in the ladder, so that the two ends pass closely below the step, which holds them firmly. On this the basket is set, and both hands are free to work. Smaller rods may be used if pieces are welded across at one or both places shown by the dotted lines.

Pigs on Rape.
Pigs will live and grow on rape without a supplement of grain, but a small addition of the latter is profitable. Dry sows will, however, do well on rape alone.

Best Insect Destroyer.
The guinea fowl is the best insect destroyed among fowls, as it eats many insects that other fowls will not.

PLEASURE IN KEEPING BEES

No More Interesting or Profitable Business Connected With Farm—Best Keepers Are Women.

(By C. M. BENTLEY.)

As a side line, considering the expense of installation, there is no more interesting and profitable business than beekeeping. Not only is this true for the fruitgrower and farmer, but to the residents of cities, those in mercantile and professional lines. Some of the best beekeepers are women. True it is that time and attention and preliminary knowledge are necessary; but experience will be gained rapidly when the living bees are studied in connection with printed instructions. A visit to an apiary conducted by a practical beekeeper will furnish valuable suggestions and interest in the work. No one who wishes to derive the greatest pleasure and profit from his bees should expect the little fellows to do good work unless provided with suitable hives. Do not for a moment attempt to keep bees in hollow logs or plank boxes; instead have modern hives which, when opened from time to time, will show the true condition of your bees may be studied. Surplus honey may be taken off without destroying your bees, or even disturbing them. Should your bees become diseased it will be an easy matter, with a separable hive, to inspect them and determine the cause.

Like all other industries when first undertaken, beekeepers should begin in a simple way. If you are not acquainted with bees it is best to begin with one colony and one or two good books on beekeeping, and subscribe for one of the best bee journals. Study the living bees and your publications together. It will take only a comparatively short time—about one season—to increase your colonies and prepare for making honey.

Simple, But Modern Equipment Necessary.

Simple, But Modern Equipment Necessary.

SOME LESSONS IN PLOWING

Furrows Should Be Kept Straight as Possible, Avoiding Triangles or Bellows-Shaped Pieces.

(By J. G. STEIN.)

There are different ways to plow. One way is straight, and the other must be crooked, of course.

By the straight way is meant keeping the furrows straight as possible, and square each piece so there will not be any triangles or bellows-shaped pieces.

Have the field true on all sides; that is, it may be longer one way than the other, but each side should be straight, so if you plow straight when you start you will have the dead furrows even and no wedges at the end.

There will also be no odd shaped pieces in the center to make a lot of extra turning.

The crooked way is used by many, who start a furrow any old place on one end of the field and drive to the other end, without a mark to go by. A little crook with people of this kind does not seem to be of much importance, but crooked furrows take extra time and are a nuisance in general.

Another thing which saves much time, particularly in harvest, is a space which should be left between the fence and the field unplowed. This should be about 15 feet wide, and should be sown to grass. This strip will save going through the grain with a binder, and back, and it also saves the hired man a lot of extra work in shocking, as he can start as soon as the reaper does and will not have to wait until a swath is cut in which to place the shock.

INJURY DONE BY HEAD LOUSE
Insects Are Very Destructive to Little Chickens and Must Be Controlled or Exterminated.

(By A. C. SMITH, Professor of Poultry Husbandry, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

The head louse attacks young chicks generally before they are feathered out, and is first found on the head with its claws or feeders sunk into the skin of the head. As they become more numerous, they attack the throat and neck as well. The remedy is simple, but it takes a little time.

Each chick must have its head greased with lard, cottonseed oil or olive oil. You will have to look closely to see these insects. They are very destructive to chickens, and must be controlled or exterminated if the chick is to be healthy.

Mule Unappreciated.
Often we do not appreciate the virtues of the modest, unassuming mule. He costs no more than a horse cost to feed and raise and is less trouble and expense to put in the harness. He is not as susceptible to disease as the horse, and he is not so easily made stiff or lame. He requires less feed than a horse of the same size, yet will do as much or more work with less fatigue. He will do you 20 years' faithful service.

MAKE-UP OF THE COW

No Animal Can Look Good If Not Kept Clean.

Most Important Features Are Shape, Head and Udder—If Heifer Does Not Milk Creditably First Season Cast Her Aside.

The color of the cow is chiefly a matter of taste. Almost every color has its devotees, but "roan" appears to be the most fashionable. The promoters of the various breeds lay down rules regarding the color of their favorites, but in actual practice no really good cow is ever a bad color.

For my own part I like a white cow with a black nose as well as any, but she must be a white one. A dirty white, which is neither white nor yellow, "my soul hate." This reminds us that no cow can look her best if she is not kept clean and even a black one. Give the cattle plenty of clean dry bedding to lay upon during the winter months, and other things being equal, they will be a credit to their owner.

As I have already pointed out, fashion in color appears to have changed considerably, and thus it comes to pass that when the roan cow gives birth to a white bull calf, her owner becomes exasperated. Agricultural science is progressive, but we have not yet attained to such a high standard of perfection as to be able to secure roan female calves to order. There are certain compensating circumstances, for the white cow frequently gratifies her owner by giving birth to a roan female calf. Why, then, should we despise her?

The most important features of the cow are shape, head, and udder. If she possesses a well-developed frame; if she carries a good head upon her shoulders, and a good udder between her hind legs, she will do good service on the farm, though she may not please the fastidious prospective buyer in the matter of color.

Some cows live too long before the final drama of their lives is enacted. They present the appearance of being good animals, but they do not fulfill the promise of their youth. They are a source of revenue to the trader, but they disappoint the farmers who buy them for milking purposes. They change hands frequently, and are only saved from final disgrace because, though they are a complete failure so far as producing milk is concerned, they possess a faculty of putting on flesh rapidly. These cows have simply misused their proper vocation in life. A little guidance at an early age of their career would have put them on the right track, and they ought to have been directed towards the butcher's block.

If the heifer does not milk creditably the first season, don't allow her to be served a second time. Life is too short, and agriculture too serious a business, to waste time milking cows which do not give sufficient milk to pay for their own keep. If she is a good thrifter why not feed her well and get her ready for the butcher as quickly as possible. You will be conferring a favor upon the agricultural community generally by so doing.

The cantankerous, ill-tempered cow, is not usually a good milker. The good milking cow is generally placid and kindly in disposition, and how she likes to be milked! There is no kicking or "strutting" about. The so-called soothing tub of provender is forgotten, and she stands patiently chewing her cud until the operation is complete.

If the cow will not stand to be milked unless she has a tub of provender under her nose, it is because she has been brought up that way. Animals and human beings are alike in one respect at least, and a habit once commenced is difficult to break off. Some farmers make it their custom to give to each cow her ration of provender before sitting down to milk her. This appears to me to cause needless labor. Unless there is some other person present to do it, the milk must make a journey round into the fodder bag every time he milks a cow. Thus, if there are twenty cows to milk twenty journeys are made, which must involve considerable waste of time. The whole business can be done more expeditiously by feeding the cows altogether before commencing milking operations, and if the laborious habit referred to is never started, the cows will never make that to which they have never been accustomed.

FARMERS BECOMING WIDE-AWAKE TO POSSIBILITIES OF NEW CROPS

Carefully Studying Means of Improving the Old—Good Time To Select a Field For Alfalfa—Requires Good Supply of Limestone

This is a time when farmers are becoming wide awake to the possibilities of new crops as well as carefully studying the means of improving the old. The need of growing leguminous crops for improving the soil and balancing feeding rations for livestock is also fast coming to be realized. As a result the acreage of cowpeas, soy beans, sweet clover and alfalfa upon Kentucky farms is increasing very rapidly. Cowpeas and soy beans fit easily into crop rotations and are easily grown. Sweet clover is a wonderful plant for reclaiming washed and depleted soils and can be grown wherever there is good drainage and a plentiful supply of limestone. Alfalfa is not so easily grown as cowpeas, soy beans or sweet clover, but can be successfully produced in Kentucky when the requirements of the crop have been met.

The United States census reports of 1909 show that in that year 20,223 acres of alfalfa were grown in Kentucky on 3,678 farms. There is good reason to believe that the number of farms growing alfalfa and the total acreage have doubled since that time.

This is a good time to select a field for alfalfa. The stubble ground from grain can be prepared for this crop. Potato ground after the first crop has been removed is a good place for alfalfa. When cowpeas or soy beans were sown early these crops may be removed early for hay and the soil quickly prepared for seeding. There are instances where tobacco is removed in August, in which case the ground can be quickly prepared and a successful seeding of alfalfa may result. Corn ground is not suitable. The heavy moisture and plant food requirements of the corn crop leave the ground in poor condition for alfalfa even if the corn were removed in time for seeding.

To be suitable for alfalfa the soil must be well drained. There are many instances where second bottom land is better for this crop than up land. Bottom land soils are apt to be open and consequently well drained and aerated. In addition these soils are usually fertile. While alfalfa will enrich the soil, yet it requires fertile soil to begin with in order to grow successfully. Like corn, wheat, or tobacco, alfalfa may make some growth upon thin land, but to make a successful crop for several years alfalfa requires rich soil. Alfalfa requires a good supply of limestone. If this is not present in the soil, lime in some form should be applied. As with red clover, weeds are a great menace to alfalfa when the plants are young and are just becoming established in the soil. For this reason spring sown alfalfa in Kentucky is apt to suffer a great deal from the ravages of crab grass in July. It is better to make a thorough preparation of the seed bed for some weeks before sowing and to sow about the middle of August. About twenty pounds of seed per acre should be sown.

In most instances it is necessary to inoculate to be most successful with alfalfa. This is a very simple matter. Bacterial cultures may be secured from the State Experiment Station or the U. S. Department of Agriculture or from commercial firms. A satisfactory inoculation may be effected by spreading from two to three hundred pounds of surface soil from a healthy field of alfalfa or sweet clover.

It takes some earnest effort to grow alfalfa successfully, but a good field should yield from three to five tons per acre for a period of from six to eight years.

Write to the Experiment Station for Bulletin No. 178 which gives full instructions concerning alfalfa and sweet clover.—H. B. Hendrick, Assistant Agronomist, Ky. Experiment Station.

IDEAL PLACE FOR TOBACCO GROWING POULTRY RAISING IS TO BE TAUGHT

SYSTEMATIC REARING OF FOWLS MUCH DESIRED IN EASTERN PART OF STATE.

NATURAL POINTS OF ADVANTAGE

Statistics Now Show That the State of Kentucky Contributes Largely in Exportation.

One of the most important facts about the poultry industry in Kentucky is that we are one of eleven states in the union that exports eggs and poultry. Statistics show that eastern Kentucky contributes its share for exportation. Among the produce and commission men the eastern Kentucky eggs are watched very closely in summer for a large per cent of these eggs come to market in a very bad condition, especially in the hot weather. It is very important and too much stress can not be laid on the fact that the males should be taken away from the flock and sold or placed in a separate pen so that infertile eggs should be produced. As an illustration the egg will become utterly useless for food purposes in twenty-four hours in hot weather. If infertile, it will still be in a good condition for seven days under wrong conditions of temperature and transportation, the greatest change being in shrinkage or evaporation. So it is easy to see that if the males were removed and the eggs were, infertile this section would soon be recognized as one in which the best eggs are produced just as several other sections in the United States, and they would command a premium price should be sown.

The unfortunate type of house found on many Kentucky Farms.

The inexpensive buildings that are necessary for poultry keeping will enable any one to make a start and proper care and management will enable the owner to build and equip a plant with his earnings. It is possible to use much spare time in the poultry work and no lands need be set aside, especially if the buildings are spread out over the field and when spread out the possibilities are unlimited as to the size of the plant, and the number of fowls which should be kept in perfect condition under one manager. In this connection I wish to say the incubator is the salvation of the poultryman, and once the user becomes skilled in the operation he or she will never return to hatching with hens, providing one hundred or more chicks are to be raised each season. Under this number it would hardly warrant the expenditure of even the small amount of money necessary to use artificial means. It is just as easy to run an incubator to care for a hen correctly, and then the owner can have the use of the hen for laying while the incubator is in operation and the chicks are being reared.

As to selecting males and females for breeding stock, this is one of the most important steps in building up the flock. The method of selecting the first hens that go to setting and using them for hatching has the tendency to make the flock begin laying later each year. Incubators can overcome this and the very first eggs can be used from the first February layers and thereby you can begin to bring your flock to early layers.

Then the selection of the male of the flock is much more important than the female on account of the corresponding number. Therefore a good strong vigorous male bird should be selected and much trouble will be eliminated. In selecting the male secure if possible one that is strong and vigorous, large of bone, deep-breasted, well shaped, broad backed, head well filled out and alert eyes, and you will have taken quite a forward step in building up the flock. Eastern Kentucky is the logical place for poultry and is adapted in every way to its culture.

KENTUCKY COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE ANNOUNCE INSTRUCTION AT EXPERIMENT STATION.

EVERY STEP IN PRODUCTION

From the Preparation of the Seed Bed To the Stripping and Grading of the Cured Leaf.

A special course in tobacco growing, covering every step in production, from the preparation of the seed bed to the stripping and grading of the cured leaf, will hereafter be a regular part of the curriculum of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, and no fees will be required of persons living in the state who desire to take the course. The importance of the tobacco crop to Kentucky's prosperity, and the many complicated details entering into its production, decided Dr. J. H. Kastle, Dean of the College and Director of the Kentucky Experiment Station, some time ago to give more attention to instruction regarding this crop. For some time past a shorter course in tobacco growing has been conducted by the Agricultural College and has attracted students from a number of other states and from several foreign countries, and in extending the course to cover almost the entire production of tobacco it is that it will make the Kentucky Agricultural College the foremost authority on tobacco growing in the country if not in the world.

The Kentucky College enjoys a number of peculiar advantages in making a specialty of tobacco. It is located in the center of the white burley district, where students can find an immense territory for study and comparison of growing crops. The Experiment Station is maintained in connection with the United States Department of Agriculture, and many of the problems in tobacco growing submitted to the department are referred to the Kentucky station for experiment and remedy. As a result the Kentucky station is under the direction of men who have made the closest study of the science of tobacco growing and marketing, and their work in attracting worldwide attention.

Close To Greatest Market. The student of tobacco growing will also have the advantage of being close to the greatest markets of loose leaf in the world, where experts from all parts of the United States assemble during the season to make purchases for the manufacturers. There is no more complicated process than that of tobacco classification, nearly every manufacturer having his own methods according to the grades and qualities of tobacco he manufactures. In Lexington also are located the redriers, which play so important a part in the modern manufacture of tobacco. It is the hope of the Agricultural College to give the student such accurate and detailed information and instruction, and such practical experience that he can fit himself to make profitable use of the instruction given, whether as a grower, a dealer, a buyer or a manufacturer.

Course Begins March 1. The course will begin the first of March in each year, with practical instruction in the preparation of the seed bed, seed testing, cleaning of tobacco seed, and the preparation of the soil. Each student will be given a small tract for an experimental patch of tobacco, and at the end of the season his crop will be graded by an expert tobacco buyer on the Lexington market. The first three months of the course will be devoted to the earlier life of the tobacco plant, the second three months to its cultivation and harvest and methods of fighting disease and insects, and the third three months to its handling, curing, stripping and marketing. The special course will be concluded in Christmas week, with practical instruction in the local markets.

The demand for skilled and trained men in all branches of the tobacco business is greater than the supply, and it is expected that the special tobacco course will enable young men to fit themselves for a profession, as well as to give practical farmers a thorough scientific knowledge of tobacco growing and marketing so that their own crops may be grown with a better idea of what the trade demands.

The Kentucky College of Agriculture is the first to establish a full course in tobacco culture, and its course promises to attract national attention.

TO MAINTAIN SOIL FERTILITY.

The first care of the farmer should be to maintain the fertility of the soil. To do this he must first know what is in it. The best way to do this is to learn how to test the soil by growing various kinds of plants under various combinations of applied fertilizers. If he can learn farm chemistry, so much the better.

SHOULD FURNISH FRESH WATER

Don't forget that the hens want plenty of fresh water, even if the weather isn't hot. Laying hens are heavy drinkers, so much of the egg is composed of water.

GRAIN FARMING AND STOCK RAISING

Farm scene where crop residues are returned.

There has always been a strong belief among farmers in general that soil fertility can not be maintained unless stock raising is a part of the farm practice. They have recognized the necessity for returning to the land at least part of what has been produced from it, and the only practical way to do this has seemed to be by the use of animal manures.

While we continue to recognize the great value of manure, we now know that fertility can be maintained just as easily without its use as with it, and that exclusive grain farming is entirely practical where the topography of the land does not compel most of it to be kept in pasture to prevent erosion. Where this is the case, stock farming is a necessity and no other system should be attempted.

Grain farming is different from stock farming chiefly in the manner in which the supply of organic matter and nitrogen is maintained.

When a mineral element, such as phosphorus or calcium is deficient, both the stock farmer and the grain farmer must make up the deficiency by using commercial plant food, for the supply of mineral plant food where limited can not be maintained by manure alone. In both systems of farming rotations must be practiced and clover or other legumes must be included in the rotation; if the nitrogen supply is maintained. The stock farmer feeds his clover and part of the other crops and the manure supplies the required nitrogen and humus. The grain farmer depends upon crop residues such as straw, cornstalks, etc., and green manures to maintain his humus and nitrogen supply. His chief difficulty is in the disposition of the leguminous crop. Part of this must be returned to the soil, for rotations including legumes will not maintain the nitrogen supply if the entire crop is sold off. The grain farmer must usually handle his legume crop as a seed supply, and return the straw to the land. In the case of clover the first crop should be cut and allowed to remain on the land. The second crop can be cut for seed. The straw of beans and peas should always be returned to the soil.

Another important point for the grain farmer is growing many catch-crops to plow under as possible. These should be leguminous crops when practical. The following rotation will illustrate more clearly the general plan that it is necessary to follow. First year wheat with clover sown in wheat. Second year corn with clover sown between the rows at last cultivation. Third year, oats or wheat; if oats, a cover crop of some kind should be planted. Vetch or crimson clover are both useful for this purpose. Fourth year, clover grown for the seed. All crop residues in every case to be carefully returned and evenly distributed.

Another rotation which is practical is wheat with cowpeas sown after the wheat is removed, vetch cover crop; second year corn; third year soy beans followed by wheat.—E. J. Kinney, Agronomist, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

The Boone Co. Christian Bible School met in convention here last Friday, and six out of the eight schools were represented. Forty-seven delegates in attendance, and there were quite a number present from neighboring counties. The subjects discussed were helpful and instructive. Such live wires in Bible school work as Bros. Walter C. Frazer, H. C. Runyan, P. H. Dunlap, Henry Webb, N. S. Munger and G. E. Holder were on the program. The secretary's report showed a gain of much value over the previous year in both offerings and work. The convention will meet at Pt. Pleasant next year.

He will conduct a good hotel at moderate prices and would appreciate the public patronage of the many people who visit Sanders Blue Lick Springs as he has the privilege of all of the medicinal waters of the place.

Estill Holder, of Cincinnati, well known here where he was rearred, was arrested here Monday morning charged with forgery. The day previous he had hired an automobile from the Kentucky Motor Car Company at Covington, and after enjoying a ride over the city came to Walton, where he gave a check for $15.00 to the driver for the hire of the car, the check being on the Walton Bank and Trust Co. and signed by the name of A. K. Johnson. The check was pronounced a forgery and next morning Town Marshall Bruce Dudgeon placed Holder under arrest on a warrant sworn out by the Motor Car Co. who afterwards agreed to dismiss the charge if they were paid their money. Relatives paid the amount of the check and Holder was permitted to go. A. K. Johnson is the postmaster at Walton and a Baptist minister and had been away from home for some time and had no occasion to give a check to Holder or the Motor Car Company. Since then a couple of checks with the name of V. L. Gaines have come to the Walton Bank for collection and both have been pronounced forgeries by Mr. Gaines.

To Apply Pruning Knife.

Frankfort, July 13.—The pruning knife is about to be applied to the expense accounts of state officers whose duties are in Frankfort, but who live elsewhere and charge their railroad fare to the Capital and return and their board and lodging while here to the State. Those affected are mostly members of the State Board, which meets here only once or twice a month, and not to all of them. Members of some important commissions do not draw any salaries, but are allowed expenses, and they belong to the expected class, as do some of those who draw salaries.

White Lewis county may not be the first in Kentucky to participate in the State good road fund as several others have applied and will draw next year, but will be the first to draw in the large degree made possible by the recently voted bond issue of $150,000, and unlike the people of other counties, the inhabitants of Lewis will be enjoying good roads while paying for them.

County Judge W. E. Shackelford of Madison county, called on Commissioner Terrell today to arrange for making plans and specifications this year for work contemplated for 1913. Madison has applied for $10,000 from the State fund.

Primary election officers must be named this month by the County Boards of Election Commissioners, said R. L. Greene clerk of the Court of Appeals and chairman ex-officio of the State Board of Election Commissioners.

FOUR SPECIAL DISHES

SELECTED RECIPES THAT ARE OF MERIT.

Mushrooms With Eggs Always Appreciated—Salmi of Lamb a General Favorite—Stewed Plums Excellent Dessert.

Mushrooms With Eggs—Break a dozen fresh mushrooms and put them into a stewpan with a tablespoonful of butter, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste and a few drops of lemon juice. Cover the pan and steam slowly for ten minutes. Then add one cupful of cream and a little chicken or veal stock, and cook slowly until the mixture begins to thicken a little. Then stir in six eggs well beaten and stir until the whole is of the consistency of scrambled eggs. Serve on well-browned toast.

Salmi of Lamb—Cook one tablespoonful of butter with one-half tablespoonful of finely chopped onion five minutes. Add 1½ tablespoonfuls of flour and cook until well browned. Then on gradually one cupful of stock and season with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper and one teaspoonful of walnut catchup. Reheat slices of cold roast lamb in sauce, arrange on a bed of lettuce, having slices overlap one another, and pour sauce over meat.

Union Cake—Two cups sugar, one cup of sweet milk, one egg, one-half cup of flour, four eggs, three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of ground mace. Rub butter, sugar and eggs together, rubbing one egg in at a time; sift in the cornstarch and one cup of flour and mix alternately. Lastly the two cups of flour and the baking powder. Bake in a large pan in a moderate oven, with a paper cap over the top till it's half done.

Stewed Plums—Wipe each plum with a soft, damp cloth and prick it with a fork to prevent bursting. Place the water in the preserving kettle a little more than lukewarm and gently boil the fruit in it. Bring to a gentle boil, cook just long enough for the plums to become tender, but not long enough for the skins to crack. They must be watched carefully. Remove to a deep dish, add a cup of granulated sugar to every quart of liquor, boil to a syrup and pour over the plums.

Venison Steaks and Hash.
To hash cold venison, cut the meat in thin, small slices and put the trimmings and bones into a saucepan with barely water enough to cover them. Let them stew for an hour, then strain in liquid into a stew pan, add to it some bits of butter, rolled in flour, and whatever gravy was left of the venison the day before. Stir in some currant jelly and let it boil up, then put in the meat and keep it over the fire just long enough to warm through, but do not allow it to boil, as it has been once cooked already.

Venison Steaks—Cut them from the neck or haunch. Season them with pepper and salt. When the gridiron has been well heated over a bed of bright coals, broil the steaks and lay the steaks upon it. Broil them well, turn them once and take care to save as much of the gravy as possible. Serve them with some currant jelly laid on each steak. Have your plates warm.

Baked Onions in Ramekins.
Peel and parboil 12 medium-sized onions; drain; chop. Melt two tablespoons butter; add two tablespoons flour, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one and one-quarter cups cream, four tablespoons soft bread crumbs, one tablespoon chopped parsley. Boil five minutes, add one egg slightly beaten and the chopped onions. Cook slightly, add whites of two eggs, beaten stiff—more seasoning if needed. Bake in buttered ramekins 20 minutes. Serve immediately.

How to Cook Dried Peas.
Place a lump of soda the size of a walnut in a saucepan of cold water, add the peas to this and bring to the boil; allow them to boil for 40 minutes. They will then be beautifully soft and well cooked. If for soup, add to the stock, otherwise they should be drained in a colander, buttered and peppered, and set aside for a few seconds for the butter to melt well into them.

Fine-Grained Cake.
I use it for Washington pie or whipped cream pie. One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one egg, one-half cup flour, one-half cup milk, one and one-half teaspoon baking powder, flavor. Bake in round tin, put together with jelly. Frost with one tablespoon of butter, one cup powdered sugar, little milk and flavor—Exchange.

Jellied Meat.
One cup of beef which has been cooked and put through food chopper, half cup bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste, mix well. Stir into this two whole cups of boiling water and add one-half an envelope of gelatin dissolved in it. Pack in a tin and set in a cool place, after which it can be sliced.

How to Cook Beets.
Put a ball as large as will hold as many as you want to cook. Peel them, as that makes them bleed. Cover with cold water, cover up tight, put in hot oven and let bake. This time of the year I put them in early so as to have them done for dinner. They are as more serviceable till done.

TREATMENT OF SWINE MANGE

Cause of Disease is Small Animal Parasite Which Burrows into Outer Layers of the Skin.

(By N. S. MAYO.)
Mange is a disease of swine prevalent in some sections of this country. However, it does not appear to be a common disease in the United States, generally, but judging from the numerous references to swine mange in European countries, it would seem that it is a common disease there.

The cause of swine mange is a very small animal parasite which burrows into the outer layers of the skin. The adult female lays eggs which hatch into young mites, and these go through the various stages of development in the outer layer of the skin of swine.

The symptoms of mange are first seen in scratching pigs. They scratch and dig at their sides and neck with their hind feet, and often rub against posts and other objects. After weaning the pigs do not develop as they should.

The treatment of swine mange consists in the external application of the substances that will kill the parasite without injuring the animal, and the disinfection of the quarters so that the animal will not become infected again. In addition to the medical and sanitary treatment it is also important to give the animals good care and plenty of nourishing food. A thin, unthrifty hog is particularly susceptible to the disease.

There are many substances that will kill the parasites and cure swine mange when properly applied. The best form to apply the remedy is in a solution or emulsion that can be applied to all parts of the pig's body. Ointments applied to visibly affected parts are useful in keeping the disease in check, but the whole surface of the pig's body should be thoroughly treated, in order to complete a cure. This is best done by dipping the pig, or by scrubbing or "hand dressing," where dipping is not practical.

One of the most efficient and economical remedies is the lime and sulphur dip made from the following formula: Fresh lime, eight pounds; flowers of sulphur, 24 pounds; water, 100 gallons.

Weigh the lime and sulphur carefully, slake the lime with sufficient water to form a thick paste. Sift the sulphur and mix well with a hoe. To this mixture in a kettle with 25 or 30 gallons of water and boil for at least one hour—two hours is better. In using this dip for sheep it is allowed to settle and only the clear, orange-colored liquid is used. In dipping swine the whole mass is used. The dip should be warm—100 degrees to 110 degrees F.

After dipping or treating swine, they should be placed in clean, uninfected quarters. The floors, partitions and other parts of the buildings should, after the removal of all litter and dirt, be thoroughly saturated with a dipping solution. This should be applied with a force pump which drives the solution into all cracks.

The pens should also be whitewashed, care being taken to fill all cracks well.

FEEDING OF GROWING PIGS

Animal Should Have All He Can Eat of Bulky Rather Than of the Concentrated Feeds.

Nothing remunerates the farmer more quickly than a pig that makes gains over and above the value of the food consumed each day. The mere feeding of pigs to keep them alive is most wasteful. It should be kept constantly in mind that the feed for a growing pig and one that is being fattened is entirely different.

The growing pig should have practically all that he can eat of bulky food rather than of concentrated food. An alfalfa pasture does this, and is the most economical way of feeding growing pigs. While the pigs are young the alfalfa pasture should be supplemented with skim milk with a little meal added. They will be at this way. Finish the last three or four weeks with some kind of grain.

Make-Up of Thoroughbred.

Many things enter into the make-up of a thoroughbred horse—the feet straight and well set, the legs straight and well set, the body. The head should be well pointed and the expression of the face good. The shoulders, ribs and thighs symmetrical, and the whole animal covered with a good coat of hair.

CAN UNCLE SAM KEEP OUT?

A majority of the newspapers in America seem to take America's maintenance of neutrality as a matter of course. The Philadelphia Public Ledger is an exception to the rule and, as such, as The State Journal sees, more or less danger of provocative "incident" resulting from the presence of large numbers of Americans in European countries. The Public Ledger sees also a menace in the trade difficulties that the war causes.

"We have millions of bushels of grain which Europe needs, but war means a blockade of the ports of the contending nations, and a blockade means that ships carrying contraband of war will be shut out. Grain is of the very essence of contraband for such manufacturing nations as Great Britain, France and Germany. The grain ships must sail under neutral flags, and the grain must be consigned to neutral ports to escape seizure. But even though consigned to neutral points, it will by no means certain that it would be exempt if any of the combatants believed it was intended ultimately for the enemy. A grain ship loaded for Genoa with a cargo that could be shipped thence to Austria and Germany might be regarded as the proper prey of English, French or Russian war ships. The seizure of such a cargo would immediately call for a protest from Washington, and the United States navy to enforce our views regarding the rights of our commerce."

From the God of War may the God of Peace protect us. But it is not well to be too cock sure that because we are upon this side of the Atlantic and the war is now on the other side, there is no possibility that we shall become entangled with one of the contending powers.—Frankfort State Journal.

Crop Report for August.

The crop report as of August 1st is the most discouraging one that has been issued from this department for many seasons. The report issued last month, while dismal in many respects, had a hopeful undertone, as reasonable rains could then have saved the crops more or less. There has not been a general rain in the last month. Insufficient showers have fallen in different localities and conditions have deteriorated in practically every portion of the State. It is now too late for the rains to do early corn any good whatever. The corn that was planted after June 1st would be materially aided by a good rain. Following will come out with anything like a good rain, and the damage has not been so serious to the tobacco crop as to the corn crop. Pasture have dried up and stock water is very scarce in many places. The lack of good drinking water has seemed to injure stock more than the lack of pasture.

Corn has dropped from a condition of 81 to 65. Burley tobacco from 85 to 56. Dark tobacco from 87 to 62. Clover pastures are disappearing, showing a condition of 53. Bluegrass 64 and Alfalfa 65. Cow peas 61 and beans are resisting the drought better than any other crops. Again we would like to call attention to the possibilities of these two legumes, and the farmer who has sowed a few acres of either of these plants in all probability will have hay for the winter, as well as improving the soil. Fruits are dropping off of the trees on account of the drought conditions. The condition of apples is given at 62, pears at 66 and peaches at 75. Live stock conditions are given: Horses 92, cattle 83, hogs 83 and sheep 83. Poultry as a rule is doing well. Garden conditions are given at 51.

While rain would not do the corn crop any good, yet it would be of great help to the man who has sown late maturing forage crops. There has been but little summer plowing done on account of the ground being too much packed to break up in good condition. Farmers are urged to sow rye, barley or wheat as early as possible in order to have winter pastures. Winter or Hairy Vetch is fast becoming an important part of our winter pastures. This is all egotismous plant and can be sown very early. Vetch make hay early in the spring if this mixture is cut before the rye heads.

Great care should be exercised to prevent fires spreading in the fields. The forests are becoming dry enough for fire to spread rapidly if once started. The water supply of several towns has become so low that the health authorities are warning the farmers as well as the city dwellers of the danger of using water from stagnant wells or pools or from low springs. Two dry seasons in succession have rendered conditions very unpromising from an agricultural standpoint in Kentucky, and just at the time when prices are highest for live stock known pastures years. The Kentucky farmer is unable to keep his farm well stocked on account of the drought conditions. However, will it not be repaid who manages to hold on to his breeding stock under these conditions.

Very Truly Yours,
W. H. NEWMAN,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

STOP KILLING VEAL CALVES.

A nation wide campaign of live stock dealers to stop the wholesale slaughter of calves probably will have its active start at the National Livestock Yards, following the receipt by commission men of a copy of resolutions adopted last week by the National Livestock Exchange at St. Paul, Minnesota.

These resolutions were prepared by William A. Moody, of the National Market. It stated that "the present enormous slaughter and consumption of calves as veal is the primary cause of the cattle shortage" and requested consumers, particularly hotel and restaurant keepers to discontinue the use of veal as food.

President E. F. Bisbee, of the National Stock Yards, declared that unless the wanton slaughter of calves is stopped the price of beef soon will be above the reach of the ordinary buyer.

"The drought has caused many cattle raisers to bring their calves to market, because there is no pasture for them," he declared. "That is well enough; the calves must not starve. What is needed for small farmers to get the calves at market and raise them on their farms."

Bisbee suggested to the exchange members that a campaign of education would be better than radical legislation to save the calves.

DETAISELLING CORN.

Detasselling the barren corn stalks in the corn field is a decided success in bringing a large and earlier crop. This task is so quickly done that every farmer should at least do this work in that portion of the field in which the supply of seed will be gathered. Every plant in a field should produce a well developed ear of corn under favorable conditions provided it did not inherit a tendency to produce a barren stalk or a nubbin. This weakness can be entirely bred out of our corn fields in time, by persistent efforts along the line of detasselling.

As the majority of farmers know the tassels of the father and the mother of the embryo kernel of corn. Cover the silk or blossom of an ear of corn with a bag before the pollen or dust from the tassels fall, and no kernels will develop on the cob. The stalks that are earless usually produce larger tassels and contain more of the productive ones, because of the light demand on the strength of the plant, hence the greater necessity of detasselling such tassels before they pollinate others that are productive.

The field where tasselling is to be done should be carefully watched so that the work can be commenced before any pollen is ripe. The tassels are easily pulled with a quick snapping motion of the hand. The tassels can be pulled out of the sheath that encloses it much quicker than it can be cut off and with less injury to the plant. An active mule taking two rows of corn at a time, can detassel from four to eight acres a day, depending upon the condition of the crop.

Moonshine Serum.

There is the strangest possible need that the various States pass regulations putting out of business the crooked and criminal men who are using the troubles of hog breeders to fatten their own bank accounts, says Live Stock World. Shyster serum sharks and vicious virus vendors have caused hundreds of thousands of millions of dollars loss for farmers and breeders by putting out and administering rotten and impotent material. The men who soak up money and sell the juice for serum or inject red ink into herds where there is no disease nor danger may not be doing more harm than the doctor who gives his hygienic advice patient nothing stronger than bred pills, but these rascals do not discriminate. They sell their nostrums and squirt serum into herds that are sick or have been exposed and need protection. This is criminal greed. It results in the loss of life and stock and enriches only the vendors or administrators of rotten remedies.

National laws do not reach cases where these pirates confine their work to their own commonwealth. The remedy is strong national laws and harmonious State enactments. Wisconsin and other States have been successful in their campaigns for help against hog cholera have resulted in making the work of shysters and crooks impossible. In those States the prize juice people and those with vile or virtuous virus or soft soap serum have merely helped a man's hogs to die.

STANDS IN WITH HIS PARTY.

The man who can make a race for a political job that carries with it a much cherished salary, and at the same time, is assured of election with opposition from his own party, and too in a field that fairly swarmed with aspirants is unquestionably possessed of much more than a fair and holds the good wishes of his party. A condition of this nature is very rare. His social life and personality are far beyond the average man. An officer who so faithfully discharges his duty, leaving a record so clean and unblemished, deserves the respect of every citizen. If he has been so consistent with his constituency as not to incur the displeasure of them, and at the same time has exerted his best effort to secure their every wish is almost without a parallel in political history. But after all are found that man in the person of Arthur B. Rouse. He is today making the race with practically no opposition from any party, and the indication is that he will be elected by the largest majority of any man that ever ran for the office in this Sixth Congressional District—Pendleton.

Take Care Of The Birds.

It would pay a few farmers to scatter a few trees through and around their fields. It will encourage insect-eating birds. If the trees are rightly selected they will pay their way in fruits or nuts. Vineyards in many parts of the old world command prices which seem fantastically high, even to a western fruit grower. But the land never has a more valuable asset than a little of it cannot be spared to the birds. The great Shoshone Johnnauburg estate cultivates birds almost as carefully as it does vines, and estimates its feathered tenants more valuable than sprays in fighting insect pests. Surely the same policy is worthy of study by the American farmer, whose land is comparatively cheap, and whose chief crops are of such a character that they must be saved by birds or not at all.

A Great Opportunity.

Why is it that the farmers in North Kentucky, in close touch with Covington, Newport and Cincinnati, do not get in for poultry raising and the egg business? It is often complained that much of the land in Northern Ky., is comparatively barren, and compared with farm land in other parts of the State, but surely there are hundreds and hundreds of acres that could be easily adapted to the poultry business.

The farmer who goes at the thing scientifically and who invests a little capital and a good deal of his care in the business is sure to make a go of it. Nowhere else in the State could he find as many and as large a market at his own doors, as it were. In the three big cities there are over a half million people, a number large enough to take practically all the eggs and chickens that can be raised in Northern Kentucky and Southern Ohio for years to come, and then some—Covington Post.

Mares for Producing Mules.

Every one agrees that the small mare is unfit for mule rearing. There are many good bodied, light bodied, trail and unsound mares which are not deemed of sufficient merit to breed to stallions and so they are used to produce mules. A first class jack will begot only second class mules from such inferior dams. There is little demand for inferior mule colts while there is an unlimited market for those of size and quality. The best mules are produced by mares possessing sufficient draft blood to give them weight and sufficient fine horse blood to give them finish. The colts from pure bred draft mares are apt to be coarse and sluggish.

The mules from pure bred mares of the light horse type sometimes lack scale. The Kentucky fair is beginning to use 1,200 to 1,400 pound mares in its farm work. He finds that these mares more than pay for their keeping. They are able to do and besides they furnish a $100 mule colt.

Our work among the farmers of Kentucky leaves us to make the statement that it costs about $150 to raise a mule to the age of a three-year old. It is poor economy to be stingy with a mule colt in regard to feed. Size is one of the most valuable attributes possessed by this type of work stock, and if they are stunted while young, they will never attain to a useful size.

Bad Water and Typhoid.

Typhoid fever is prevalent in Henderson county 21 cases and 2 deaths having been recorded since June 1. The cases are widely scattered, and the health officials believe they are attributable to the use of Ohio River water. Henderson has no filtering plant. There are a number of deep wells in the city and analysis has shown that the water from the sewage of dozens of infected cities and towns. No city which is dependent on the Ohio River for its water supply should omit the necessary precaution of providing a filtering plant. Where the water is properly filtered the danger is minimized. Typhoid fever is inevitable when the water supply is contaminated. No city can eradicate this disease without providing pure water for its population.

The experience of Henderson shows the danger of delay in making arrangements for a safe water supply. Ohio river towns where the situation is becoming a liability at any time to find themselves face to face with the typhoid problem.—Courier-Journal.

The Farmer's Creed.

It would be no easy matter to amend this "farmer's creed"—which is found in the Breeder's Gazette. We believe that all men should love the soil and understand it. We believe the nobly serves who labor. We believe that good blood will tell. We believe that good seed should go into the enriched soil. We believe that good animals should crop the grass. We believe in the divine right of man to labor. We believe in helping men get full reward for their toil. We believe in better farms, with better roads passing by them. We believe in better rural schools and better teachers in them. We believe that the housewife is the better half, and that to her home should come all manner of comforts.

Walton Dempsey and Roll Dix have resigned their positions at Lakeland Asylum for the insane and will return to Burlington in a few days. Richard Northcutt, of Locust Grove neighborhood, will take the place vacated by one of them.

AN ATTACK ON ILLITERACY.

In an effort to banish illiteracy from their borders a number of counties in Kentucky have decided to institute a moonlight school campaign.

The movement is being encouraged by the Kentucky illiteracy commission and the counties which have manifested their intention of taking part are Montgomery, Lincoln, Hardin, Clay, McGraw, Mercer, Grayson, Clinton, Pike, Leslie, Kenton and Campbell. Some of these are rural counties while others contain cities and towns of considerable size. September 7th is the date that has been selected for a concerted attack on illiteracy and by that time, it is to be hoped, other counties will be ready to take part.

Rowan, a mountain county, is the home of the moonlight school. An unusual method of operation which can bring about the practical banishment of illiteracy from a mountain county can be prosecuted successfully in other counties. A thousand moonlight schools in Kentucky under the direction of competent and conscientious teachers would make a lasting impression on the State's illiteracy record and would raise Kentucky several points in the educational scale.

There are comparatively few persons who are illiterate as a matter of choice. Most of the illiterates would welcome an opportunity to learn how to read and write. This was demonstrated in Rowan county when men and women of advanced age, some of them in the octogenarian class, gladly became pupils in the moonlight schools and diligently labored to throw off the burden of illiteracy. The people of Rowan differ in no wise from the people who inhabit other counties in the State and what has been done there can be done elsewhere. The moonlight school movement is not impractical. On the contrary, it is probably the most practical way of eliminating illiteracy that has been devised. It can be made a success in any county where teachers and school officials will devote the necessary energy to it.—C.J.

Congressmen Are Grifters.

(Courier-Journal)

The House in yielding to the Senate in the matter of the 20-cent mileage grab, goes upon record as being willing to accept graft after having unctuously declared against it.

The public, which has every right to be as cynical about the actions of Congress which affect the pocketbooks of Congressmen as it is when there is legislation adverse to the interests of the masses, will hardly credit the House with strenuous probity. The cost of travel per mile has decreased as the country has grown in wealth and population. One of the prime necessities of modern times is transportation. Its reasonableness in cost is a matter of the greatest public importance. Congress has shown itself awake to this fact and has forwarded the popular movement to bring down the cost of both freight and passenger service.

It costs no more to haul a Congressman than it does to haul a man in private life who has his action in life who has his mileage grab is, therefore, nothing more or less than petty graft upon the part of every member of Congress. In an aggregate of amounts to a good deal, but its acceptance is more lamentable because of its viciousness in principle than its use of the effect upon the treasury.

Ship subsidy, a high protective tariff, free tolls for American ships passing through the Panama Canal are all examples of special privilege against which this Congress has eternally set its face. No honest defense of the mileage grab can be made by the most needy member of Congress. The most adroit member cannot make a plausible defense of it. Congress has simply declined to quit grafting. This is all there is to it. Honor to those whose names are recorded as having voted against the greedy majority.

It is frequently remarked that as soon as a man gets an automobile, he gets the swell head. That is, the owner no longer recognizes his friends and he passes on to a new life. "Hello, Tom Dick, or John," as the case may be, but his eyes are set on objects directly ahead and he not infrequently passes his own children and even his wife without noticing them.

People who make the accusations are all wrong in their inferences. He has not the swell head or he is biggoted; he is fact feels smaller than he ever did in his life. He is humbled and feels less important than he ever did. He feels anywhere from $500 to $1500 poorer and he is a better man for it. Instead of having the swell head he is expecting every minute to have a bust head. The fact that he has nobody is due to the fact that he has all on his mind, when running his machine, that he cares to entertain. If he turns his eyes to see some friend or neighbor, he passes or he passes his grip to give some passing friend the high ball, the next moment may find him turned turtle, or going out with a broken neck.

No, my friends, he is too busily engaged to notice people. He has too much at stake to neglect his business. He has a swell head but is just down-right busily engaged.

By no means are the night-riders in this county immune from indictment. The fact that one grand jury has passed without returning indictments against them is no indication that the next grand jury will not take up the matter and give it a thorough investigation.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Buyers to Share in Profits
Lower Prices for Ford Cars

Effective from August 1, 1914 to Aug. 1, 1915
guaranteed against any reduction during that time:

Touring Car - - - $490
Runabout - - - $440
Town Car - - - $690

(F. O. B. Detroit, all cars fully equipped.
In the United States of America only.)

Further, we will be able to obtain the maximum efficiency in our factory production, and the minimum cost in our purchasing and sales departments if we can reach an output of 300,000 cars between the above dates.

And should we reach this production, we agree to pay as the buyer's share from $40 to $60 per car (on or about August 1, 1915) to every retail buyer who purchases a new Ford car between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915.

Local Happenings.

All roads lead to Erlanger fair this week.

The sand bar at Rising Sun is very much in evidence.

A good rain is needed again in this part of the country.

Garden products are more plentiful since the recent rains.

After all there will be a pretty fair crop of corn in this county.

Wanted—Stock to pasture. Apply to William Gaines, Burlington, Ky.

The condition of T. G. Willis has improved very little the past week.

The recent rains put the land in fine condition to be broken for wheat.

Edgar Cropper has a sale of personal property advertised in this issue.

Hubert Conner, secretary of the fair at Florence, is ready for the bell to tap.

The county road from Burlington to Waterloo was never in better condition.

Not as many are attending the Stevens trial as were in attendance last April.

Elder Curry will preach at Mt. Pleasant Sunday morning, August 23, at the usual hour.

Elbert Clore captured a dozen premiums on his string of horses at Lawrenceburg fair.

R. B. Huey, of Commissary, will increase the capacity of his silo by digging under it a basement ten feet deep.

James W. Ryle, of Waterloo neighborhood, left at this office Monday a sample of his very fine crop of peaches.

For Sale—Good 11-year old general purpose mare, not afraid of autos. Apply to A. W. Gaines, Burlington.

Rev. Carter, who has been in California several years will come to Burlington and assist with the Boone county High School.

The telephone has saved Sheriff Cropper and his deputy Albert Conner, many miles riding the past week summoning jurors.

A large crowd attended the sale of T. E. Randall last Saturday, and things brought fair prices.

B. Johnson, of Walton, was the auctioneer.

By means of automobiles many of the Grant county people have been enabled to attend court this week, coming and going the same day.

Wesley Underhill is on the road all the time now with his mason wagon, and a large trade to supply two or three times a week.

Some think Boone county has to pay all the expenses of the Stevens trial, which is not the case. The State pays the expense of felony cases.

A steel ceiling is being put on all of the rooms in the school building. The patent plaster was put on at first did not hold as it should have done.

Chas. Stevens' patent farm gate was on exhibition in Rising Sun, last Saturday and attracted much attention and was the subject of many favorable comments.

As usual special train service on the Q. & C. Railway has been arranged for the Florence fair, and reduced rates have been granted to all stations from Georgetown to Erlanger.

Joseph Clegg, of Beaver, received a cablegram a few days ago from his daughter, Miss Anna, who has been touring Europe. She said she was in London and having a good time and would be at home on schedule time. The cablegram was a great relief to Mr. Clegg.

On an inside page will be found the advertisement of the Fairmouth fair, September 12 to 19 inclusive. It is one of the best county fairs in Kentucky and draws on several counties for its large attendance every year. If you attend you will have the time of your life.

Otto Crider, who has a position in the veterinary department of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, came home last week to spend a vacation of several days, but on Thursday he was summoned by wire to report at the station at Lexington, to be sent to a neighborhood out in the State where his leg had appeared among the cattle, and be repacked his grip and left for Lexington.

As Mrs. George Kreylich and daughter, Miss Mattie, and two of Rev. Edgar Jones' children were going to Bullittsburg church last Tuesday, the harness on the horse attached to the buggy broke as they were going down the steep but short hill between the church and R. C. Gaines, and the horse ran, throwing the occupants out and demolishing the vehicle. For several hours it was thought that Mrs. Kreylich and one of the Jones children were dangerously injured, but it is now believed that their injuries will prove only slight. Miss Mattie Kreylich and one of the Jones children were not hurt.

Will Contest Next Monday.

The contest over the last will and testament of the late James Lee Huey will be heard at a special term of the Boone county court next Monday. The contest is based on a charge of undue influence over the testator by his brother T. A. Huey and family, to whom he devised all his property, probably forty thousand dollars.

Horse Drowned.

Harry Bachelor drove a blind horse to the landing at McMillen, one day last week, to get a load of goods for G. S. Walrath. In some way the horse fell into the river which is very deep at that landing, and could not be gotten out before it was drowned. The horse was a good one and belonged to the boy's father. Money was made up to assist Mr. Bachelor to buy another horse.

Flying Machine at Erlanger.

Lieut. Roy Francis, the famous army aviator, will arrive in Erlanger last Monday with his aeroplane and will give flights daily during the fair this week. This will be something entirely new to the people of this part of the world and will, doubtless, prove a drawing card for the fair, the managers of which are doing all within their power to give their patrons full value and then some for their money.

Mrs. Fannie Randall.

Mrs. Fannie Randall, widow of Erastus Randall and a daughter of the late Jas. A. Bess, died at the home of her brother and sister in Plattsburg neighborhood, Monday night, after suffering many years from cancer on her face. She is survived by one child, Miss Martha Randall, two sisters, Mrs. Clyde Berkshire and Miss Pearl Hicks, and one brother, Edward Bots. Funeral yesterday at 11 a. m. at Bullittsburg Baptist church.

Represented Boone County.

W. W. Grimsley, of Hamilton, and Chas. Helm, of Bullittsville, represented the Boone county Confederate soldiers at the Federal soldiers reunion in Rising Sun, last Thursday. All the old Confederates in this county, and there are many of them, had invitations to take part in the event, but from some cause only the two named above responded. The office is correct. Messrs. Grimsley and Helm had the time of their lives it is said.

Lively Shooting Scrape.

A very lively shooting scrape was indulged in by whites and blacks on the street in Erlanger last Sunday night. Several shots were exchanged but no one was hurt. It is said the negroes brought on the trouble by insolent conduct towards some of the whites, and made the colored offenders basted out of town. Erlanger has been annoyed a great deal this year by a lot of negroes who work on the railroad and are in the habit of following each pay day with a big drunk.

The European War.

The unsettled condition that has been brot about by the European conflict has begun to adjust itself and indications from every hand point to a boom for all sorts of small produce. Many farmers throughout the country have been afraid that the present war will work a hardship on them but quite the contrary will be true. The demand for all food stuffs will be increased and the United States will be called upon in no small measure to supply this demand. Not only does the European war call farmers from their fields for service in the army, but there will be a greater demand for food to feed the armies.

The Boone County Fair.

The Boone county fair will be held next week commencing on Thursday. It is an old time county fair and has people assembled annually to renew acquaintance and discuss their experiences and compare notes for the year past. It is one of the best of livestock but few county fairs in the State are its equal, while the agricultural exhibits and the fine dairy and art needle work, etc., cannot be surpassed. No three days in the year are worth more to Boone county than the three days given over to their fair, and there is no indication that this year's fair will fall short of any of the past.

Extended a Hearty Welcome.

Prof. and Mrs. Kaywood were met by Mr. and Mrs. V. O. Keys last Saturday night by a large number of the citizens of Burlington, each one of whom took some useful article with which they presented the Professor and his wife, and all together it was a most hearty welcome given. The donations were wholly unexpected by the recipients, who had become citizens of the town only a few days and had not yet made a very happy little talk expressing his and his wife's appreciation of the very cordial reception they had received in Burlington. A few hours were spent in a most pleasant manner after which the donors dispersed for their homes, wishing Prof. and Mrs. Kaywood a pleasant and prosperous sojourn in their midst.

The sudden jump of the price of sugar last week was not enjoyed by housekeepers, and the decline in the price of livestock was a rebuff to the rural community.

Making a Fine Record.

Under the head of citizens who have contributed much to the up-building of the State, the Louisville Evening Post says of Dr. F. L. Peddicord:

"Dr. F. L. Peddicord, the newly appointed Superintendent of Lake Land Asylum, is creating a most favorable impression by his ability in the conduct of the office."

"Dr. Peddicord is a son of the soil and a native of old Bracken county. He was graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Louisville in 1906 and though a young man has demonstrated his eminent fitness for the calling in his ability to pursue. He began his professional work in Boone county where he established a fine practice, and was universally esteemed for his ability and fine personal character. Later he became first assistant at Lakeland, having been appointed December, 1912, and in the time he displayed such marked ability for the work that he was selected Superintendent this year and has been making a fine record ever since."

"The office is one which requires medical knowledge, observation, tact, patience and no little business ability, all of which Dr. Peddicord possesses in a marked degree. He aims to bring this one of the largest and most important State institutions to a high degree of excellence, and to assure the afflicted wards of the State all the care, kindness and attention that can be given them. He is giving his personal attention to every detail of the work of the big institution, he overlooks the duties of each employee, and the routine business of the establishment and is always at his post attentive to duty."

"Officials like this are the pride of a State, and to those who have relatives and friends under his care, it is a comfort to know that so gifted and so humane a Superintendent is now at the head of the Asylum."

Ferris-Drackott Marriage.

At the Walnut Hills Christian church on Wednesday at high noon there was a very pretty wedding when Miss Ruth Ferris, married Mr. Philip Drackott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Drackott. It was a white and wedding and pretty arranged. The bride was led by little Virginia Fant, niece of the bride, who was a dainty and wearing a becoming hat of roses. The bride came in on the arm of her father. She wore a dainty wedding gown of white crepe de chine and a white hat, and carried a shower of white roses. Mr. Harry Drackott, best man, and a group of girl friends of the bride ushered. They included Miss Clara Walton, Miss Helen Brown, Mrs. Catherine Brown and Mrs. Oscar Stroebel. The Rev. R. E. Elmore, pastor of the church, returned from his vacation in Virginia to officiate. After the honeymoon trip, on which they left at once, Mr. Drackott and his bride will live in Cleveland, Ky.

The parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Ferris, are well known and favorably known in this county, they having lived near Petersburg for many years.

Chas. Helm, one of Boone's old Confederate soldiers, passed thru Burlington last Friday morning enroute home from Rising Sun, where he spent the day before as a guest of the old Federal soldiers, who had a whole there with the cordial manner in which he was received and looked after by the old soldiers for whom he was gunning several years.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Dear RECORDER:-

I have experienced the thrilling sensation of planting my feet on alien soil but as it was just a continuation of the native no difference in the sandy soil told us we were in the troubled land of Mexico.

I doubt if any of the Boone county speed kings would attempt a run to Lexington and back in a day; difference in the thoroughfares would be a consideration. Turnpikes will have to give place to Boulevards.

Sunday July 19, I was one of six packed in a Buick that started at one a. m. for San Diego, a distance of 137 miles. Between here and Santa Ana the road winds thru a maze of English walnut groves. One little town Tuson the oldest in this county, we could hardly find so buried is it by the heavy foliage of the walnut trees.

We did not get to see all the country, being at night, we knew we were traveling between rows of giant eucalyptus trees part of the time.

An oil well on the ridge back of Whittier was on fire and lighted up the north like a great light house the flames making weird flashes in the sky.

About daylight we reached Mission Valley where ruins of the old Catholic Missions could be seen some near the road, others away on knolls their crosses standing out prominently. All of these are nearly demolished, often only columns to mark where they stood. They are low, spreading houses, made of mud called a do be.

At one place a cross, probably twenty feet high, stood all alone on a small hill, no doubt, marking the grave of some priest.

We passed through San Juan Capistrano, where is located the San Juan (San Juan) Mission, the oldest and most noted in the valley. These old towns seem asleep, no business, no stir save when an auto whirled through.

One town was especially of interest to us. Ramona as it would be to any one who had read and loved the book by that name. The old adobe home of Ramona went the length of one block, the narrow veranda extending full length.

We didn't have time to stop but could see the Indian rugs and straw mats thru the doors. The town is almost a ruin itself, so filled with the mission decay.

We passed the old cemetery where Ramona is buried, first grave yard I've seen in California. We saw a cactus nut p.in that must have been more than 60 feet high. It had been braced by wires in different directions.

We passed through probably the largest ranch owned by one man, the O'Neil Ranch, named for the owner. We drove thru its nine miles of length and it contains a hundred thousand acres.

We had been inland thus far but we came out of Mission Valley in view of the ocean. At first just glimpses of blue flashed thru the trees, then we came in full sight, finally coasting around and down the cliffs and running several miles along the beach counting up now and then into little towns, or rather a few houses clustered around an immense hotel on the edge of the bluff overlooking the ocean.

When we came to the famous Torrey Pines, a steep bluff rising before us we stopped to catch our breath and eat. We would have to leave the smooth moon stone beach and go up the bluff then down to the other side. There we got a splendid view of the San Diego Harbor one of the best fortified on the Pacific coast. The Loma Jutta so far on one side with two light houses the old one and the new and modern one. The Harbor is protected by disappearing guns and Fort Rosecrans.

Words can not describe the view from that high vantage but we hurried on still having miles to cover.

No tourist can pronounce the Spanish names. We came to La Jolla which is La Jolla. It affords great amusement to the residents when an easterner comes to San Diego and says he is going to La Jolla.

San Diego is a dry town. Long Beach has a population of 85,000 and some very nice buildings. The parks are especially pretty. Mission Park on the edge of a steep bluff overlooking Mission Valley is a wilderness of flowers, tastefully planted. Has all kinds of birds and rookery deer.

In this park is the original Ostrich farm of U. S. They had some splendid big birds and many young ones.

We stood on one hill top and looked just across on another at the handsome Exposition Building in process of building for the World's Fair next year. We could not take them in closely as our time was so limited. They are preparing extensively for the Fair. San Diego is so hilly and these hills are being terraced and and parked. Zoo Gardens cover quite an area with some fine animals.

After the hurried survey of San Diego, about 2 p. m. we started for old Mexico which is seventy miles from there. It was a queer sensation to feel that we were leaving our U. S. behind us.

We went through the little old town of Littlelanders more Mexican than American, and above it overlooking the line was the colony of tents. Uncle Sam's troops guarding our Freedom. Behind us lay the hills of our free land, then the valley and on the other side the hills of equal size that shut out the dark and war ridden Mexico.

We took a picture of the most southern school house in the U. S. almost on the Mexican line. We had to pass the Custom House and the soldiers guarding the entrance, the good old flag waving over it. We salute it, it is the symbol for the liberty and enlightment it stands for. Then we passed the monument marking the line, and instead of the heavy black line, portrayed on the geography maps as boundary, which I believe I half expected to find, only an ordinary wire fence separated the two nations.

As soon as we had pulled thru the sand in the dry river bed, we faced the Mexican Customs House and the greasy old Mexican lifted the cushion to see that nothing was smuggled. Through courtesy we saluted the red, white and green flag waving over their Customs House.

Of all the desolate places bearing the name of town, this Mexican village of Ti Jiana, pronounced Tia Wana, must be the worst. No vegetation, no business but saloons and probably some real estate men, for out West real estate business flourishes every place.

The people must live by selling curios to visiting tourists, for the main street had numerous sheds stores of Indian and Mexican rugs, baskets, pottery and all kinds of handwork.

We were not more than a hundred yards from an arena where the famous Spanish Bull Fights are held, and at the time we were there a chicken fight was going on. I didn't know one could be so near our border and was so disappointed when I found it out after we had left, for even if it was Sunday and such an unlawful sport, I couldn't have missed a chicken fight in a real Spanish arena.

It was night when we got back to San Diego and prepared for our homeward run, 151 miles from interesting old Ti Jiana and Mexico we were loath to leave.

There had been too much to see in the short time, but it was all intensely interesting to me. I hope the RECORDER has not grown tired of such a lengthy letter.

ADVANCES NOT JUSTIFIED.

Many of the advances recently recorded as being made in the United States in agricultural products and provisions generally are not justified by existing conditions, and should be regarded as purely speculative, possibly organized extortion by wholesalers or retailers, or both.

The hoisting up of fish prices along the Atlantic Coast is an evidence of such organization, for reports from the catches show them to be even larger than usual for the spring and summer seasons, and there can be no exportation of such food at this time.

So with meats of all kinds, so with grain. Europe is, no doubt placing large orders for meats and grain, but there is no scarcity as yet in our own country. Of these articles, nor is Europe paying such prices as are being marked up for our own people.

It is well recognized that prices may be—probably will be—higher for foodstuffs by reason of the greater demand upon our supplies of these and other articles of Europe, but it seems to us that our people should not as yet be compelled to pay the speculative prices of the future.

The cutting off from Great Britain and France, Holland, Spain Italy and Belgium of the beet sugar business of Russia and Germany undoubtedly brings to sudden and profitable activities the depressed sugar industry in the United States and enables the producers and dealers to obtain not only higher prices abroad, but also at home.

The production of raw sugar in the United States is sufficient for the nation's use. We are largely dependent upon foreign sources for the raw material, but not so in our grain supplies, not so in many other agricultural products and in view of these facts, and also in view of the congestion of freight on our ports, the inability now to ship much abroad, it seems to us to be extremely unwise business tactics to attempt an indiscriminate advance in the prices of provisions in our home markets.

It is not to the interests of general business to justify high prices in one thing, reasonable and right; systematic organization of dealers to withhold supplies in order to force an increase in price, or arbitrary fixing of prices, to be demanded from the people through widespread arrangements, are entirely different and should not be permitted by the Federal or State authorities.

Legitimate demand upon existing supplies, justifying higher prices, is one thing; reasonable and right; systematic organization of dealers to withhold supplies in order to force an increase in price, or arbitrary fixing of prices, to be demanded from the people through widespread arrangements, are entirely different and should not be permitted by the Federal or State authorities.

MOVABLE RACK FOR FEEDING

Built on Runners, It May Be Moved About at Pleasure, Keeping it in Sheltered Spot.

I used 2 by 8s for the runners of this movable rack, 2 by 4s for the rest of the frame, and 1 by 4s for slats. For length and size, the rack may be built to suit the needs of the feeder. The feed boxes in mine are 16 inches wide and 16 inches deep, with a solid bottom to prevent loss of feed, writes Willis Wolff of Meade, Kan., in the Farmers' Mail and Breeder. Hinged lids cover the feed box when not in use. We feed alfalfa in this rack, as we usually do not let stock have all they want we can drop the covers whenever necessary. Do not build the sides of the rack too slanting or you will have to push the feed down. The upper drawing shows the divider inside the rack. This makes a self-feeder of the rack. By having the rack built on runners it may be moved about, so as to keep it in a dry sheltered spot all the time.

PUBLIC ROADS

CLAIMS FOR THE ROAD DRAG

Really Holding Back Construction of Good Roads, as Many Believe No Work is Needed.

In an article on "Split Log Drag and How to Use It to Obtain Best Results," Mr. Howard H. Gross, among other things, says:

"A good road is one that is good and serviceable 365 days in the year, a road whereon one may ride or drive with pleasure or have full load without strain upon the horse, vehicle or harness."

"To do this the road must have a hard, smooth surface and offer the minimum of resistance."

"An earth road may be an excellent one today and tomorrow a very bad one. It may be a delight in June and a fright in March. Such roads have the virtue of a balky horse, they are liable to fall when most wanted."

"The extravagant claims that have been made for the road drag are really holding back the building of good roads. Many have believed that all that was required to have good roads was to go up and down a streak of mud once or twice, say 'presto,' and behold a good highway. This is sheer nonsense. This loud acclaim of a 'River-to-River road,' made good in an hour or so, is a myth. This famous road was greatly improved by the dragging, but it is not a good road, and never will be until it is thoroughly drained, properly graded and has a hard, durable wearing surface placed upon it."

POOR ROADS ARE EXPENSIVE

American Farmer Pays 25 Cents Mile Per Ton for Carrying Farm Products to Market.

There are 2,100,000 miles of public roads in this country. Only 150,000 miles, or 7 per cent, are improved. All the rest can be fairly described as bad roads. The waste of our natural resources, reckless as it is, is nothing compared to the money waste brought about by this condition of our highways.

It costs the French peasant an average of 12 cents a mile per ton to haul his produce to market. It costs the American farmer an average of 26 cents a mile per ton, or 100 per cent. more than the Frenchman. During the year 1905-1906 hauling of farm produce to shipping points amounted to between forty and forty-five million tons weight. The average haul was 9.4 miles. If the farmers could have done their hauling over French roads, instead of their own inferior ones they would have netted $58,900,000 more on their crops.

But all the hauling to shipping points is not done by farmers by any means. The interstate commerce commission tells us that in all some thing like 250,000,000 tons are hauled for shipment every year. The willingness to move this immense volume of freight over poor roads as against good roads such as France enjoys, costs the country a cool unnecessary $305,000,000 a year.

These figures and facts come from the office of Logan Walter Page, the United States director of public works.

BONDS IN NEW YORK STATE

Second Issue of $50,000,000 Was Greatest Thing in Good Road History of Last Year.

The greatest thing in good roads history in 1912 was the action of New York in voting a second state bond issue of $50,000,000. There was some opposition to the proposition, but it went through with a good majority. New York has led all other states in road improvement. Under the act of 1906 it issued $50,000,000 worth of road bonds. This it spent at the rate of about $5,000,000 a year. With what has been spent and with contracts made the whole sum has been disposed of, and so the new $50,000,000 comes in to continue the work. These huge sums have enabled New York to more than double her mileage of improved roads and to project large plans for trunk lines. Incidentally, it means an increase in the direct tax of about $2,500,000 yearly.

NEW ENGLAND'S LITTLE PANAMA CANAL

The canal through Cape Cod, which represents an expenditure of $12,000,000, is now ready for business. The canal will shorten the distance and provide a safer route for 25,000 sea craft which yearly travel between Boston, New York and other Atlantic seaports. The canal is eight miles long and its minimum depth is 25 feet. The upper picture shows the Massachusetts bay approach to the canal, and the lower is a view of the canal at Bourne, Mass.

LUKE MCLUKE SAYS

Fashion is queer stuff. - Go up into the attic, girls, and dig out one of the funny looking old basques that your mothers wore back in the early '80s. Put it on and you will be right in style and the other girls will be crazy with envy.

A man has a few grains of sense. But a woman will be fashionable even if the prevailing styles make her look like something the cat brought in.

Every time a woman sees a girl with a natural rosy complexion she goes to a drug store and changes her pink face powder for something a shade redder.

The fellow who is willing to lead in prayer often has to be dragged into kicking in with a dollar for charity.

The reason why women all try to talk at once is because each is afraid that the other will beat her to telling something perfectly awful that she heard about a neighbor.

There may come a time, in this country when the Dry States will send missionaries to enlighten the heathen in the Wet States.

The reason why Eugenes isn't making any headway is because each man believes it would be a fine thing for the other fellow but not for himself.

The poor can get a lot of comfort out of sitting around and chewing tobacco and knocking the rich. But the rich can't find any entertainment in knocking the poor.

One reason why a man won't listen to advice when he is down town is because he gets too much of it when he is at home.

Love is what makes a big husky corned beef look up to an under-sized mutt who looks like a wet cigarette and regard him as her Tower of Strength.

Mother usually has every closet so full of her clothes that Father has to hang his coat in the bathroom. But that doesn't keep mother from jawing father every morning because she hasn't anything to wear.

Any old time I see a man kick a stray dog because it tries to play with his children I always pity that man's children.

And the skinny women - do not need to grin. Many a poor hungry dog wishes he had nerve enough to grab one of the bones he sees climbing on street cars.

UNION.

Several of our citizens attended the Erlanger fair last week. Miss Mary Evelyn Rouse is visiting relatives in Cincinnati. Miss Jessie Cleek is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Cleek, of Erlanger. Miss Eunice Adams visited her grandmother, Mrs. Adams, of Erlanger, last week. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith and son and Rev. and Mrs. Hill spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Gibson. Mr. and Mrs. J. Waite Cross and little Misses Sarah and Lucille Wilson, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson. For Saturday five year old driving horse, will work anywhere, half broken. Apply to L. W. Clarkson, Union, Ky.

CONSTANCE.

Mrs. Karl Zimmer and children attended the Erlanger fair. Mr. Will Zimmer's new house is rapidly approaching completion. Constance expects to be pretty well represented at the Florence fair. Mr. and Mrs. Adrain Wilson are the happy parents of a little son. Mrs. John Craven is the guest of her nephew, Chas. Craven. We are glad to have her in our neighborhood. Constance is certainly on a boom. Mr. Web McGlasson is preparing to build some cottages on his property here. James Popham, in company with Messrs. Edward and Sherman Riggs, visited John Riggs at Rushville, Ind., a week ago and came back enthusiastic about that part of Indiana. There will be another entertainment on Craven's lawn in the near future. We wish to make the money first and then repair the church when we have money enough.

GUNPOWDER.

H. F. Utz was a business caller here last Monday. Kibb Crisler was a business caller at our burg last Monday. J. W. Rouse was sick a few days last week but is able to be out. J. B. Crigler, of Hebron, attended church at Hopeful last Sunday. Mr. H. Rice, of Florence, was looking after his interests here last Monday. Mrs. L. M. Rouse and sons and J. H. Tanner were guests of Mrs. Floyd on Wednesday last week. James Waters is marketing his crop of muskmelons, and is making a trip every night to the city. Miss Lottie Williams, of Cincinnati, is spending her vacation with home folks and is manipulating the business at the store while her parents, J. W. Williams and wife, are making a visit to friends in Paris, Ky.

At the meeting of the Joint Council last Saturday the members were about all present. E. H. Surface was elected delegate to attend the meeting of the Miami Synod, which meets at the first church in Cincinnati October 19th. J. B. Dixon was elected alternate. At the noon hour the meeting adjourned for refreshments which had been very tastefully prepared by the ladies of Ebenezer church, and consisted of everything good to eat and was greatly enjoyed by all present. The dinner was served in the grove.

BEAVER LICK.

J. S. Noell is better. A large crowd attended the basket dinner at Beaver Baptist church, the 14th. A large number of Beaver people and vicinity attended the Erlanger fair the past week. Rev. Fredrick Hughes Chapel preached his last sermon, Sunday night, before going to conference. A protracted meeting closed at Beaver Baptist church recently with two additions—Mrs. Bevie Smith by letter and Mrs. Susie Snow by conversion. Rev. S. G. Jolly, of Lexington, was unable to fill his appointment at Beaver Christian church the third Sunday, but he sent his roommate, Rev. Roche, who preached two excellent sermons. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Ambrose, of Albert, visited with Mrs. Miller, took dinner at Mr. R. E. Moore's, recently.

DEVON.

Mrs. Eugene Wallingford was shopping in the city, Saturday. The rain Friday was gladly welcomed as stock water was very scarce. Russell Miller, of Covington, is the guest of his brother, Charles Miller. Wm. Woodward is hauling some fine peaches to the Cincinnati market. Howard Rivard, of Covington, spent Sunday here the guest of Benjamin Rivard. The Erlanger fair was well attended by the people from here on Friday and Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wallingford entertained some friends from Cincinnati, recently. Miss Mary Carpenter was the guest of her brother, C. D. Carpenter and family, Tuesday. Wm. Cahill, of Indianapolis, Indiana, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. J. C. Conrad, Thursday. Mrs. J. C. Conrad and daughter, were called to Morningview, Saturday, by the death of a relative. Miss Sarah Rector returned Saturday after a pleasant visit to Clarence Rector and family near Burlington. Lab Carpenter, of Portsmouth, Ohio, formerly of this place, was the guest of his uncle and family recently. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Conrad and daughter, of Scott's Postoffice, spent Saturday and Sunday here, guests of friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. James Dobbins passed thru this place Sunday and spent the day with their sister, Mrs. Effie Hogrife. Mrs. J. C. Conrad and daughter, Miss Mary Bernadette, and Miss Virginia Hogrife, of near Independence, were a hopping in the city, Monday. Mrs. Jeff Russell entertained her father, Mr. Taylor and her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Taylor, of Richmond, and attended the Erlanger fair Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Jefferson Clay, of Selma, Ala., arrived here for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Frank West, but was called home by the sudden illness of her husband, who was to have joined her here for several weeks. It is to be hoped that Mr. Clay is improving.

RABBIT HASH.

Miss Harriet VanNess is quite sick. Mr. Bob Conner, of Cincinnati, spent several days at his farm near Waterloo, last week. Miss Ruth McMurray, a pleasant caller here last Sunday. Miss Rachel Ryle, of Kansas City, Mo., who has been visiting her mother here left for home Sunday. Gene Wingate and wife were visiting Albert Sheets and family at Big Bone, Saturday and Sunday. Mrs. Bertha Long and children, of Addyston, Ohio, are visiting their father, Peter Hager, in East Bend. Mrs. Ed Martin, of Pomona, Indiana, and Mrs. Dan Walton, of Rising Sun, are visiting relatives in East Bend. A base ball nine from this place played the Big Bone club on the latter's ground, Sunday, and was defeated 5 to 2. Alfred Wade and family and Miss Josie Love, of Rising Sun, were guests of Mrs. J. C. Williams, last Wednesday night. Mr. Tom Hobbs and wife, of Mayville, Mo., and Mrs. O. J. Harris and son, of near Harrisburg, Pa., spent Friday at E. R. Scott's. Miss Frances Ryle, of Cal., who was visiting her aunt, Mrs. J. H. Walton, for several weeks, left Saturday for her aunt's, Mrs. John Palmer at Norwood, Ohio. The Phythian Society will give an ice cream supper for the benefit of their lodge next Saturday night in the K. of P. Hall. Everybody is invited. The supper will begin about five o'clock. Peter Hager, of East Bend, is the possessor of probably the smallest living calf. It is five weeks old and does not weigh over 25 pounds. It is quite a curiosity and excites the interest of everyone who sees it. The friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wilson gathered at their home last Wednesday night to give a surprise party to their son, James, it being the eighth anniversary of his birth. There were about seventy present. The Clure Brothers, Hubert and Blute, were present and furnished the music and the young folks danced until a late hour when all departed wishing James many happy returns of the day.

The first of the series of games for the championship of Kenton county was played at Erlanger and ended twelve innings and was won 5 to 4 by Elmore, Rogers, who was in the box for Erlanger, won his game twice only. It lost on plays that should have been easy. The next game will be for blood. The Sheriff Cropper and his deputy L. A. Conner, who were very busy men last week and the week before, are taking a deserved rest, but will find time in which to write your receipt if you desire to pay your taxes.

"THE RISING SUN"

An Interesting Sketch of The Early Settlers of That City.

Earl S. Brown in the first copy of the Daily Recorder published in Rising Sun during the recent Home Coming and Centennial, gives this interesting account of the arrival of the first settlers. "A flatboat drifted slowly with the current down the placid waters of the Ohio. On the rear of the boat sat a small, one room cabin with a roof extending out over the side under which stood a horse. On the deck of the boat stood an immigrant with a quantity of household furniture covered over with boughs of trees to keep off the dew and fog. Inside the cabin a woman prepared the evening's meal for her husband and son, and they ate the boat, guided by the unseen hand of the Supreme Being, drifted closer to shore, bumped and then grounded. John Brown and his son Samuel made the craft fast to the trees on the bank, and there in 1788, within a few yards of where the Rising Sun hotel now stands, they passed the night the first white persons to visit the site of our city. "Lab Carpenter, after their night's rest, a vivid glow showed above the Kentucky hills. The three, struck by the second beauty of the scene, stood in awe while the sun in all his gorgeous glory peeped at them thru the trees. His scientific rays came glittering over the smooth surface of the water, causing a warmth in body and soul. "Look," cried Fulton, "The Rising Sun!" "Fulton forced his way through the dense underbrush which lined the bank. With an axe he hewed a path until he had reached the summit of the hill. The spot was an ideal one, and after a brief conference, the family decided to settle there. In seeking a home, was at an end. The two men began felling trees to make a cabin. At night fires were built and along the path were kept off wolves, bears, panthers and other wild beasts which they found abundant in the forest. "A small cabin of logs, of hard labor, the first cabin in this section was erected. The cabin was constructed of round logs with notched ends and the space between the logs had been filled in with sticks and daubed with clay. The roof was made of clapboards hewed from logs. The boards were held in place by long poles running across the cabin and fastened to the ends of each end. Planks, split from the logs formed the floor. The only door hung on wooden hinges and fastened with a wooden latch. A chimney built of logs and lined with clay ran up one side of the house, and a hole in the roof was used to carry off a piece of paper soaked in lard, formed the only window. "By the time the cabin was ready for occupancy, the winter was approaching. Their store of provisions became scanty, and their chief sustenance came from wild beasts caught at the edge of the little clearing. "Fulton and his son began clearing a small piece of ground for cultivation purposes. All thru the long winter they worked. "At night they sat in the cabin and planned their future by the glow from the fireplace. When spring arrived a small plot of ground they had made ready, was planted in corn, and so the first crop was raised. "Fulton and his son used a shovel and shovel, was used to cultivate the crop."

ALL ROADS

Lead to the Florence Fair Which Opens Its Gates To-Day, Thursday.

The fair at Florence will open its gates to the public today, Thursday. Its exhibition will be along the lines of those of former years, and there is no question but the attendance will be as good as usual. All are interested in making their county institution a success. No place is like the county fair for a people of the various neighborhoods together, thereby creating a better feeling on the part of each neighborhood towards the others. People who live to themselves become selfish and flannish and there is nothing as well calculated to overcome a feeling of this direction as the county fair. Attend the fair at Florence two or three days and mingle with the citizens of your county and you will feel better because of having done so.

WORK IS PROGRESSING

On New Turnpikes in Different Sections of The County.

Work is in progress on the following roads: county, Petersburg and Bellevue; Hebron and North Bend and Walton and Beaver. If each of these roads had completed entirely, the improvement of the roads in Boone county will have been made, and the county would be a better place. It is that direction, and by the close of 1915 many miles of new roads should be on Boone's map.

WHITE BURLEY TOBACCO

Experts Predict a Light Yield—Reduction of Fifteen Per Cent.

Lexington, Ky.—That the crop of white burley tobacco will fall considerably short of last year's crop is the consensus of the reports received from practically all the counties of the Burley belt by the Burley Tobacco Co. at its headquarters in this city. The reports which cover conditions up to the last few days, indicate that, even with favorable weather conditions, the crop of this year will not be more than 85 per cent of that of last season, and, as last year's crop was also a very short one, it is estimated that the production this year will be decidedly the smallest for a number of seasons. Therefore the prices are expected to be high, and it is prophesied by tobacco men here that the market will open in November with prices on a scale decidedly above those of preceding years.

AUGUST

The Month to Cut All Noxious Weeds Along the Public Roads and Other Places.

County Road Engineer Goodridge, has received the following from the State Commissioner of roads:

I wish to call your attention especially to Section 48, Chapter 50 of the Acts of 1914, which reads in part as follows: "The County Road Engineer shall cause noxious weeds growing by the bounds of the public roads to be cut away in the month of August." "As this is the seeding time for weeds and the time of year when, if cut and burned, will in measure tend to kill out the growth of such weeds and prevent their spreading to the farm lands along the right of way, it is highly important that this portion of the law should be carried into effect. I trust that you will see to it that every farmer living along the right of way of the roads running thru your county to assist in putting the portion of the section into effect. Ask the editor of your county paper to mention this portion of the law and urge the citizens to assist you in performing this duty. You will find the editors of the papers ready to assist you in any and all ways. In disposing of these weeds and bushes along the right of way would tend to permit better drainage and allow the roads to dry out faster during the winter months. I cannot urge too strongly the importance of giving your attention to this matter. I wish to extend to you full and unlimited use of the Department of Public Roads in securing better roads and bridges for your county. Yours truly, ROBT. C. TERRELL, Commissioner of Public Roads.

WAR TAX PLANS

Tobacco, Liquors and Proprietary Medicines Almost Sure to be Assessed.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Congressional leaders today planned quick action to increase the internal revenue by $100,000,000 to offset curtailment of customs revenue expected during the European war. Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Representative Underwood, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, began a conference with Secretary McAdoo which will continue tomorrow. Later the situation will be laid before President Wilson. It was definitely agreed to consider the increase in the internal revenue taxes, instead of attempt to change in any way the customs duties. An extra tax on liquors possibly including doubling the $1 a barrel now assessed upon beer, is the first plan to be discussed. There was talk today not only of increased tax on liquors, but on tobacco, proprietary medicines and other articles. Both Senator Simmons and Representative Underwood expressed gratification over the present sound condition of the Treasury. "There is no Treasury deficit," said Underwood. "We do not want to wait until there is a deficit before acting. It is necessary that the confidence of the people in the financial soundness of the Government shall be maintained at a time like this."

Mr. Underwood said that while the Treasury surplus might be sufficient to cover the falling off in customs, it would take Europe a long time to recover normal business relations. The Emerson Floating Theatre "Golden Rod" will play a return engagement at the city, Friday on Wednesday night Aug. 26. Mr. Emerson needs no introduction as he is too well known as a promoter of good people in this time he has outdone any of his previous efforts and is presenting the well known play of "Circus" which is a comedy. The "CIRCUS" or "POLLY" as it is known by her friends. The story is told in true to every day life and is a comedy. The play is guaranteed to be far bigger and better than "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

THE ERLANGER FAIR

A Big Success In Every Particular—Large Crowds and Fine Exhibition.

The Erlanger fair last week appeared to be a money maker from every stand point. The crowds were there every day and the privileges, each of which doubtless was taxed liberally for its presence, occupied all the available space. The failure of the aeroplane to make a flight was a considerable disappointment to very large number of people, but the management of the fair did all that it could to have that feature of the program carried out, and when it was ascertained that the machine engaged to make the flights was disabled another was secured as soon as possible, but it too was unable to make good. This was an unfortunate occurrence but could not be avoided.

In the motor-cyclist race Friday afternoon one of the drivers lost control of his machine which dashed into the fence, injuring the driver badly and damaging the motorcycle considerably.

Friday morning, while the track was being worked lightning struck and killed a horse attached to the drag while the driver and the driver were only slightly shocked.

There was a good show in the ring, but a floral hall never contained so fine an exhibit of art needlework.

The races on Friday and Saturday afternoon each had a good number of starters and the finishes were exciting, which made them highly enjoyable to the crowd.

The rains that fell on Thursday and Friday did not interfere with the attendance to any appreciable extent but on the other hand put the fair grounds in a condition that was very pleasing to the large crowds in attendance.

FAILED TO AGREE

After a Hard Fought Legal Battle the Jury in the Stevens Trial Could Not Agree.

The jury in the prosecution of the Commonwealth against Gus Stevens, charged with the murder of John Williams down on the night of October 23, 1913, which was on trial in the Boone circuit court last week, failed to agree and was discharged about two o'clock last Saturday afternoon having had the case from about 5 p. m. Friday. The jury could not agree on a verdict for conviction from the first ballot. The long arguments were made by O'Hara for the defense and by Stevens for the prosecution. O'Neil for the defense and Howe for the prosecution each speaking a little over an hour. When the jury was discharged the court fixed the defendant's bond at $5,000 and the case was remanded to fall session until the bond is secured. The former bond was $7,000, which was not given. The trial of Mrs. Grace Kells, who is indicted jointly with Stevens, was continued to the two trials of the case have created considerable feeling in Williams town, while opinion in Burlington was divided as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, and there are statements being made as to what some of the attorneys for the prosecution said in regard to the case which are calculated to have considerable weight when the case is tried again. The case is being argued on the parts of attorneys for the prosecution will permeate every neighborhood in the county in a very short time. It is very probable that when the case is tried again the jury will have to come from a county other than Boone.

While the trials have been a source of considerable revenue to some of the citizens of Burlington, the town as a whole will be glad when it is off of the courts docket.

HUEY WILL CONTEST

Hearing of Testimony Completed and Argument of Attorneys Will Be Heard Next Monday.

The hearing of the contest of James L. Huey's will was begun in the county court last Monday morning, Judge P. C. O'Neil presiding. The proponents are represented by Attorneys Rogers and Williams and the contestants, by Attorneys John O'Neil, all of them of Covington. The will was written by Mr. Rogers on Friday and the testator died on the Monday following. The devisees under the will are Thomas A. Huey, brother of the deceased, and his two sons, Thomas and James, who are in school. The contestants are Mrs. Napoleon Bristow and Mrs. Alonzo Litz, nieces, and Geo. Stevenson and Thomas and John Stevenson, nephews, all of them. A long array of witnesses was called in the hearing, neighbors and kindreds of the deceased. The hearing of testimony was completed about 2:30 p. m. Tuesday, when court adjourned until Monday, when the case will be argued by the attorneys after which the Judge will render his decision.

HORSES PIGS and CATTLE

METHODS OF MARKING SHEEP

Identification Brands Now in Use Unsatisfactory Account of Injury Done to Wool.

The means prevailing at the present time for the marking of sheep for the purpose of identification is unsatisfactory for the reason that the coal tar or pitch solution which is made use of has a serious effect on the wool not only where the mark has been made on the hair, but all that which is being put through the cleansing process at that time. Such wool brings a decreased price. The National Society of Agriculture of France has been investigating the matter and the report of those appointed to do the work contains the following: It has been proposed to use aniline colors, but this is even worse, since the colors do not merely soil the fleece, but actually dye it. Other means are not lacking, notably that of tattooing the ear of the sheep. Also, a small metal plate can be fastened in the ear, as is done with African sheep to prove that they have been "clavized," i. e., inoculated with the special serum which combats their dangerous and contagious eruptive malady, rot or scab. The Syndicat Chamber of Commerce and Industry advises the employment of a color composed of linseed oil, essence of turpentine and Prussian blue or similar color. It recommends marking on nose, forehead or nape of neck.

TO ARRANGE A CATTLE POKE

Obstacle in Throat of Animal May Be Forced Into Stomach by Use of Rubber Hose.

When cattle or horses choke take a three-quarter-inch rubber hose about five feet long, and with this you can force the obstacle down in the stomach without hurting the beast.

I give a cut of a stanchion poke to put on unruly cattle, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. Similar in style to the stable stanchion. Take a 10-inch piece of three-quarter scantling; bore two holes six inches apart and one in front to put a pin one foot long. The upright standards are 3/4 inch long, size about 1 1/2 x 1 1/2 inch, or round poles to extend above upper crosspiece about a foot. The standards are driven in the block below, the upper piece is bolted on and spread according to thickness of neck.

Making Hog Charcoal.

One of the cheapest and best relishes for hogs of all ages and sizes is hog and bone charcoal. Some dry day rake together all the coals, no matter how dirty. Dig a shallow pit, start a fire with some shavings, and gradually bury it with coals without smothering it. Put in the old bones that have been lying around.

Let the pile smolder until all the coals are charred through, but above all things don't let the coals burn so as to crumble. Throw on a bushel of oats the last thing, and when charred pour on water. Salt down and scatter to cool. This is a relish that will make a little pig hit daddy.

Exercise the Brood Mare.

Moderate exercise is essential to the brood mare while carrying her foal. Work which is free from special risk of accident is quite compatible with the well-doing of the mare and fetus. Though some mares work up to within a few hours of foaling and do well, it is advisable that work should be gentle and be continued beyond the tenth month. On removal of the brood mare from work it is highly important that she should have the opportunity of exercise up to the time of her foaling.

Generous Feed for Sow.

The incessant and continuous drain on a brood sow, when suckling a large litter of pigs, is such a drain on her system that it creates an appetite that will require generous feeding for the good of the sow, pigs and the man that contemplates getting quick returns from them.

Sheep Industry.

Census reports show that there have been no material changes in the sheep industry in the last 10 years. Worthless dogs are largely responsible for the slow growth of the sheep industry.

GOOD VEGETABLE SEED

Major Portion of American-Grown Comes From California.

Seedsmen and Professional Growers Are Learning That Wisdom and Care in Breeding and Growing Are of Much Importance.

It is practically impossible to give an accurate statement of the area in the United States which is annually devoted to raising garden seeds, or even to make a reliable estimate of the total acreage. Even on farms where the chief money crop is garden seed, only a portion (often but a small portion) of the whole farm is in a seed crop any single year, the remainder being occupied with ordinary farm crops in order to maintain a profitable crop rotation. The major portion of American-grown small seeds, like those of onion and lettuce, is the product of large farms located in California, though many thousands of pounds of such seeds are grown in the eastern states. One who is very familiar with seed growing on the Pacific coast estimates that the total acreage of vegetable seed annually planted in California is not far from 10,000 acres.

Vine crops, such as cucumbers, melons, and squashes, are grown for the seed crop in all parts of the United States, some of which are grown in the northern states and others in Florida, with still others in California; but the great bulk of the supply of vine seeds comes from Michigan and the central western states. Probably a total of 60,000 to 80,000 acres of vine crops is annually planted with the expectation that more or less of the crop will be marketed as seed.

Fifty years ago there was little general appreciation, even among experienced gardeners, of the importance of the quality of the seed used (provided it would only grow) as a factor in determining the real profit in growing a crop.

It is evident that the present practice of growing and handling seeds is by no means ideal or such as to give the greatest possible uniformity of variety character. In the case of a majority of the vegetable crops in America, if all of even 90 per cent of the plants were as nearly alike in variety type as the 20 per cent, which were the most alike, the profit from these cultures would be greatly increased; often actually doubled. On the other hand, the growing of vegetable seed under present conditions is not particularly profitable or satisfactory to the farmer. Is there any possibility of betterment? We think so. Seed planters are coming to realize more fully the importance of the use of better seed and the folly of being so largely influenced by low prices and a persuasive salesmanship in buying, while seedsmen and professional growers are learning that wisdom and care in the breeding and growing of the seeds they offer is quite as important as shrewdness in buying and skillful handling and selling, and that seeds of the best quality cannot be secured without the active, intelligent cooperation of the producing farmer.

STEM RUSTS OF PINE TREES

Unusually Fungus Growth Found on Many Trees in Northeastern Section—No Great Damage Done.

An unsightly fungus growth which ruins the appearance of the tree, has been found on many of the pine trees in the northeastern section of the country within the past year or so. So far this fungus has not done any great amount of damage, but every precaution should be taken to prevent its spread. All infected pines should be destroyed or the infected branches cut off. Most of the pines having this fungus on their main trunk are of little value. When the infection takes place in the seedlings it is much more injurious than when the older trees become infected.

Value of Education.

The question is often asked, "Of how much value is school training to farmers from a business standpoint?" A recent agricultural survey of several townships of Tompkins county, New York, made by the college of agriculture of Cornell university has revealed many interesting and suggestive facts bearing upon rural sociology. To quote from the summary:

"The survey shows that a high school education is worth as much to a farmer as $4,000 worth of five per cent bonds. A college education is worth nearly twice as much."

Pea Hay for Roughage.

At the South Dakota experiment station pea hay was found to be a good roughage with grain for fattening lambs. As a lot the lambs fed pea hay made a uniform gain, ranking next to those that received sweet clover hay for roughage.

THREE WAYS FOR USING RYE

Makes Valuable Fertilizer on Any Kind of Land, But More Especially on Stiff, Clay Soils.

(By E. J. MILLER.)

Rye which is sown in the fall for green feed during cold weather may be economically used in at least three ways the next spring and the early summer. One of these ways is to use it for pasture. Another way is to use it for a summer soiling crop for milk cows.

At one or two on rich land will produce a large amount of early green feed, and the crop can be used for nearly three months.

To use rye as a soiling crop, keep the stock off it in the spring; and when it is tall enough to cut, take the mower to the patch and cut enough for two days' feeding. Rake this and store in the barn and feed out. Then mow enough more for another two days' feeding and continue the same method until the patch is all mown.

By this time the rye of the first mowing will have grown up enough for a second cutting, and in succession it may be cut several times during the early spring and summer. In this way a great number of cows may be kept on a limited area of pasture.

And a third and excellent way to use rye the following spring, after sowing is to allow it to grow up almost to maturity and plow the entire crop under as green manure. For this purpose allow it to head out and seed come into the milk stage.

It is a valuable fertilizer on any kind of land, and especially valuable on stiff, clay soil, and making the soil friable and easy to work.

The mature rye plant decomposes quickly when plowed under, and gives no ill effects from souring.

The humus content of the soil is appreciably increased, and the general good effect on the soil can be noticed on succeeding crops for two or three years.

KEEP THE DAIRY COW CLEAN

Problem of Sanitary Milk Supply Is to Exclude All Bacteria Possible—Some Precautions.

Milk from healthy cows is practically free from bacteria when secreted. The problem of a sanitary milk supply, therefore, is to keep out all bacteria as far as possible. Bacteria are introduced into milk mainly by small particles of dirt which either drop into the milk from the cow or are carried in the air.

Clean Milk Cannot Be Produced From Cows Kept in Muddy or Filthy Yards.

Repeated tests have shown that even when a cow is cleaned as thoroughly as is possible under stable conditions, particles of dust will be thrown off from her body during milking time, and these get into the milk and contaminate it. Cows should be kept away from sources of contamination, such as sink holes in which stagnant water accumulates, for such holes breed enormous numbers of putrefactive bacteria which are especially dangerous to infants, causing digestive troubles. There should be no places in the barn yard for water to stagnate. The manure should be kept gathered up, and every other effort made to keep the cow free from contamination. The cow should be thoroughly cleaned, preferably immediately before milking. It is also well to clip the hair short around the flanks and udder, and always advisable to moisten the flanks just before milking. All of these precautions tend to lessen the amount of dust or loose hair which will be given off from the cow.

FENCES SAVE MUCH PASTURE

In Many Cases Fencing of Field Will Pay for Woven Wire Used—Good Aid to Prosperity.

(By E. J. MILLER.)

Fencing and moving of fences should be done early, so that all of the spare fields can be grazed over to make use of the grasses and other herbage that have grown up in them after the early fall rains.

Much feed can be saved in this way, the stock will do better and it will give the permanent pastures time to green up before the cold weather. New and clean pastures mean healthy animals, and the utilizing of all the fence rows means turning waste products into dollars.

In many cases the fencing of a field this fall for new pastures will entirely pay for the woven-wire fencing used. Buy and use good fencing for all the field. Good fencing is an aid to prosperity.

Inviting Inducements.

To the man with a clear-out viewpoint of just what he wants and who has the necessary ability and courage, to stay with it until it is accomplished, the field of breeding dairy cattle offers inviting inducements.

Wise Economy.

It is wise economy to plant windbreaks of evergreens, arbor vitae, Norway spruce and balsam fir, a portion of each with a sprinkling of other varieties to make a pleasing contrast.

TEETH SHOULD BE EXAMINED

Veterinarians Should Be Consulted
Where Owner Is Not Competent—Feed Must Be Chewed.

A great many of the troubles of the horse come when the owner thinks he is treating him the best in winter when there is little work and the horse is "fed out" to pasture or to a stallion track. There are a number of points to keep in mind when disposing of the horse for the winter, says a Colorado bulletin.

First of these is the condition of his teeth. Remember, if he has been living largely on chop feed, or other grain that requires little mastication, that his teeth may not be in condition to handle the roughage of the pasture or the poor quality of hay which is usually fed to horses that are not working. He may be parrot-mouthed and not able to bite off the grass.

College of Agriculture of University of Wisconsin Has Herd to Secure Serum From.

"Over there are several pigs that have been vaccinated. You can't give them hogs cholera," said Dr. Beach of the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. "If anyone has cholera among his pigs and wants a demonstration of the value of vaccination, I'll send him one of those pigs or the state will for the lambs to immunize a couple of susceptible pigs to put among the sick ones to demonstrate the value of the serum as a preventive."

The college maintains a herd far out on the field beyond the barns, where pigs are given cholera in order to get their diseased blood for use with the anti-serum in vaccination.

Gestation Period of Ewes.

The gestation period of the ewe, or the time she carries her lambs, is between 145 and 155 days on the average. Ewes bred in the middle of October are due to lamb in the middle of March—a good time for lambs to come if good shelter is available. If shelter is poor, however, it is better for the lambs to come the last of March. A trial of great value in figuring the time for the lambs to arrive. It is a great disappointment to have lambs coming for a period of six weeks.

Conservative Hog Raising.

The farmer who has a nice bunch of hogs is on the right in automobiles and has a city bank account. When the price of hog flesh soars farmers over the country begin to breed their hogs, but by the time they have any pigs to place on the market there is a slump due to the increased supply. Keep a few hogs all the time, and do not become discouraged.

Notice the Beds on "Thornhill" Wagons

The beds of "Thornhill" wagons are designed and finished with excessive care. The sides are made of first class poplar, because it holds paint better and gives better service. The bottom of the beds are of Southern pine tongue and grooved and reinforced over front and rear bolsters. A system of construction is employed that prevents the reinforcing from ever falling out and insures longer wear. Throughout the "Thornhill" Wagon, you will find the features that have proved themselves worthy. The long sleeve malleable skin (non-breakable) prevents the axle from breaking at the skin. The strength of the bolsters is multiplied by the construction employed. The front front plate is so made that the gears can never get out of line. You will find in this wagon six big points of superiority that no other wagon possesses. Come in and let us show you the "Thornhill" wagon sold on a guarantee. Do it today.

HIGHWAY MOVEMENT

ROAD BUILDING

MAKE BETTER PUBLIC ROADS

Experience Has Taught That Much Work Can Be Done During the Winter and Early Spring.

At this time of year much interest is aroused concerning road improvement. As has been found out by experience, much work can be done to earth roads early in the season, in fact, during the winter and spring when they soften, if they are systematically dragged there is no equal amount of work that can be done with as good effect at any other time of the year.

The law permits the highway commissioners to make contracts with persons living alongside a road to do the dragging. To facilitate this work, the state highway commission has just issued blank contract forms which may be used by commissioners in making their contract with the Farm Home. These blank forms are bound with stubs attached like an ordinary check Representatives of Both Town and Country Vote in Favor of Tax to Create a State Fund.

There never has been in the past so much discontent over the discomfort of traveling over mud roads as there is at the present time. While it is well known that the making of hard roads in communities where there is no hard material must involve an enormous expense, yet more and more taxpayers are expressing a willingness to be taxed for permanent roads. This was plainly indicated at a road conference held in Des Moines, Ia., where 200 delegates composed of typical representatives of both town and country voted unanimously in favor of a one-mill tax to create a state aid fund, says the Iowa Homestead. In the past the tax levied has been able to do along this line has been to support a non-aligned highway commission with but little power and with practically no money to work with.

This same conference endorsed almost unanimously the establishment of a permanent highway commission with ample power. In addition a recommendation was made to the legislature to submit the question of bonding the state for good roads purposes to the people at the next general election.

We appreciate the fact that this program is not endorsed by all the people and it is just possible that at the present time it may not meet with the endorsement of even a majority, but the rapidly changing feeling indicates that the time will soon come when the state of the corn belt will undertake the construction of permanent roads. This being the case the question of administration in the important one to decide. In this matter there are established precedents which may be safely followed and these precedents in every case lead in a greater or less degree to centralization. In other words, wherever good roads have been economically built in this country they have been built under the general supervision of the state under a plan of co-ordination where the county with the town and ship. No plan will every work out practically in the corn belt that does not in a large way leave with the locality the authority to say when they are willing to bear the expense of good roads. When it is decided to incur the expense of building permanent roads the state, county and town will as units stand themselves compelled through the operation of a sound business principle to adopt plans and specifications prepared by the best available talent, whether this be furnished by the nation or by the state.

The most urgent need at the present time in all states of the corn belt is the classification of highways in order that the question for all time may be settled as to what constitutes main roads and which are the secondary highways. This recommendation was made to the legislature at the Iowa road conference referred to. When this plan is once carried out we will then know definitely the order in which our roads should be permanently improved. It is a well-known fact that 90 per cent. of the road traffic is on the 10 per cent. of the highways and certainly the first move should be to improve this ten per cent. In the meantime we are strongly in favor of keeping the secondary roads in the best possible condition by the construction of suitable culverts wherever they are needed and by the sensible and compulsory use of the drag. There will always be large and important township and county duties so that no man need have fear that the adoption of permanent road administration will in any way interfere with the principle of local government.

book and are very convenient. They will be furnished free of charge to any highway commissioner who will apply for them to the state highway commissioner, Springfield, Ill.

The commission has also just issued a pamphlet on the procedure that should be taken when a vote on hard roads is proposed. Much time and expense will be saved if all who are interested in having petitions circulated and votes taken will be sure that all steps have been taken in accordance with the law. Instances are constantly arising where through a misstep at some point or other the whole proceeding is made invalid, causing delay and expense. Any one wishing information concerning the township hard road law of the state of Illinois can get the pamphlet here mentioned free of charge on application to the Illinois highway commission, Springfield, Ill.

GOOD ROADS IN CALIFORNIA

Pacific Coast State Ranks Next to New York in Making Appropriations for Improvement.

Next to New York, California is doing the big thing in road building. It has 3,300 miles of main routes and 400 miles of laterals, and it is spending its lump appropriation of $18,000,000, of which it is said, "Approximately 70 per cent. of the burden will fall upon the incorporated cities." California communities have the spirit of the times. For instance, Los Angeles county alone spent $3,500,000 on oil macadam highways.

In Alabama a system of trunk roads from north to south and from east to west has been laid out. Louisiana has spent almost $10,000,000 in four years. Mississippi counties have declared bond issues of $600,000, and the state will spend millions in the next three years. Utah spent $2,000,000 the past two years. Minnesota is preparing to build 2,700 miles of road next year. Maryland has got its road building under a rigorous system. Its newest program calls for about $5,000,000 in two years in the 23 counties. This is the latest expert knowledge.

FILLING ROADS AND STREETS

Modern Transportation Demands Best of Throughfares—Aim Should Be to Even Filling.

When graveling streets, if the outside are filled first and the stones raked toward the center and covered, it will leave the surface in nice condition. When the center is filled first it is impossible to cover the outside with the thin covering at the outside of the fill. I noticed a village street that was being raked ten inches with coarse gravel. The center was filled first and the coarse stones raked to the outside. It required twice the time to do the grading as if the outside had been filled first and the coarse stones raked toward the deep part of the fill in the center, writes an expert in the Farm and Home. Moreover, the street is sprinkled with stones that could not be covered, which will make extra expense to haul away, and it will be a rough road for years to come.

BIG DISAPPOINTMENT IN OHIO

Buckeye State Failed to Pass Appropriation of $50,000,000 to Improve Its Roads.

The greatest disappointment of last year was the vote of Ohio on the constitutional amendment to authorize the general assembly to issue bonds of the state in an amount not to exceed $50,000,000 for the purpose of constructing and maintaining an inter-county system of wagon roads. This vote was: for, 372,537; against, 274,613; majority against, 2,091. This close vote was all the more unfortunate, because the issue was not decided on its merits. Forty-two amendments were voted on, and in the end to defeat some of them, thousands of voters slaughtered it. So, under the circumstances, it was probably surprising that the vote in favor was as large as it was. But it is a shock to find that such a state of Ohio out of 1,250,000 qualified voters less than 600,000 took the trouble to go to the polls to vote on constitutional amendments, and not all of these paid any attention to good roads.

If the next grand jury that is organized in the Boone circuit court is not unkind of its duty it will find that the recent trial of Gus Stevens has provided material for an investigation. Some of the most serious and ugly charges were made in open court against both witnesses and attorneys during the arguments by counsel preceding the submission of the case to the jury. The same charges were made at the first trial and were reiterated last week, and if they can be sustained the parties against whom they are made should suffer the severe penalty provided for such offenses. The subornation of testimony and false swearing are two offenses which are allowed to pass unnoticed, sap justice and imperial life. The legal profession is honorable so long as its members are honorable, and when one of them is branded either directly or by innuendo of subornation of testimony, he should be called upon to clear himself of the grave charge. The trial of Gus Stevens is the first in the history of the Boone circuit court in which an attorney or attorneys have been held up to the public as being so dishonorable in the practice of their profession as to be guilty of a felony in an effort to gain their point. It would seem that justice demands that the charges herein referred to be thoroughly investigated.

Take Europe as a whole it was never in a condition that anything like resembles the terrific struggle in progress there. The war surpasses the world's record along that line, and no one knows how many other nations will be engaged in the conflict before it closes. The men who are fighting the battles and bearing the burden of the war are not those who are responsible for it nor will they profit by the victories they may gain. The profits and glory will go to those who avoid the trenches and wear medals and apparel trimmed with gold tinsel.

For some time past the Recorder has been publishing at intervals articles on farming prepared at the experiment station at Lexington. To obtain these articles costs a nice little sum during the year, but if they are appreciated by the readers of the Recorder in this county it does not mind the expense, but so far there has not been the slightest indication of appreciation, and the discontinuance of their publication is seriously contemplated as other good matter can be obtained at a less cost.

Dr. S. F. Musselman, State Veterinarian, in a communication addressed to the County Judges of this state, has called their attention to the live stock sanitary law, which provides for the appointment of a County Live Stock Inspector in each county in the State. There are 110 counties which have failed to appoint County Live Stock Inspectors under the law as amended by the last Legislature.

The correctness of President Wilson's Mexican policy must be acknowledged by those who were its strongest opponents, any of whom know that had the United States interceded in Mexico that this country would have been compelled to expend millions of dollars, while the sacrifice of lives would have been terrible, and Mexico's condition would be immensely worse than it is today.

The German legions have proved too much for the allied powers, and have them on the retreat according to the news from across the water. Every man in Germany is a trained soldier and is ready for service immediately upon call, and when it comes to bravery none excel the German soldier.

Kentucky is engaged in a vigorous campaign against illiteracy, and considerable progress has been made in many localities. The person who is living in Kentucky twenty years hence will enjoy and appreciate the advance the State has made along many lines over present conditions along these same lines.

Manifestly the business men of the country have not entirely recovered from the excitement following the declaration of war, and the press is burdened with various hysterical suggestions as measures of relief that ordinarily no one would consider.

The lack of a merchant marine at this time is apparent distressing, but don't imagine that it is ships that are wanted; transportation is wanted; facilities that will carry the wheat from congested markets of the East to the barren markets of Europe.

An armistice was declared in legal hostilities in Burlington, last Tuesday afternoon, after a campaign of fourteen days, twelve of which were under the command of the circuit judge.

The Germans are proving themselves pretty handy with guns.

May Get Help—Conference to Be Held in Washington.

Washington, Aug. 12.—To relieve the dark tobacco growers of Kentucky, who are in a desperate fix because the European war has completely cut off their market, a conference will be held at the Treasury Department Monday, when the bankers and tobacco producers and dealers of Kentucky will be represented and the situation will be gone over with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

A specific plan of relief was proposed today and while Secretary McAdoo did not place his official sanction on the plan, he was confident that he will come to the rescue of the Kentucky dark tobacco growers by permitting the issuance of Federal reserve notes based on tobacco warehouse receipts as security.

Secretary McAdoo in a conference today with Senator James of Kentucky pointed out that the language of the banking act is not so broad as to require currency to be issued on tobacco warehouse receipts. That law provides that Federal reserve notes are to be issued on the basis of the estimated value of the securities, and the remaining 70 per cent on bonds and other securities. Tobacco warehouse receipts would not come within the 30 per cent, but Secretary McAdoo has no doubt whatever that they could be accepted as security for circulation under the 70 per cent clause.

Farm Facts.

Those who till the soil are the chosen people of God, and farming is as old as the human race and is yet in its infancy. Success is bound to come to the farmer who plans while he plows.

No civilization has ever advanced beyond its agricultural development.

No farmer is successful who thinks more of his barn than he does of his home. The development of the farmer himself must precede the full development of the ground he tills. The most beautiful fact in the farmer's work is that everything he plants is a lesson in faith.

The best farmer does not bother about getting ahead of himself.

We must give to the people who live on the farm the same educational advantages for their children as those of the cities enjoy.

The country clergy is an agency of much potentiality because the rural life movement is religious as well as industrial and social.

There should be a social and an industrial survey of every community. The pastor, the teacher and the school, the church officials are they who should make such a survey.

In a recent survey of a community in New England, the average annual income of 151 farmers who have a common school education was $229, while the average annual income of 122 farmers of the same locality with a high school education was $182 annually. This was worth to each farmer who possessed it $253 each year.

Dog Catching in Lexington.

In the days when Breathitt county was peculiarly lawless and attracting wide attention the position of Town Marshal remained vacant for some time because it was popularly regarded as undesirable. The probability of a violent death, administered from the rear or occurring in a pistol-to-pistol encounter, was disproportionate to the honor and emoluments attaching to the job. The Lexington dog catcher, Mr. Mulligan, and his assistant, Mr. Jones, have resigned because, as Mr. Mulligan expresses it, the European war is nothing to the continuous hostilities between dog owners and dog catchers in Lexington's alleys. The situation is one which should be regarded by the decent citizens of the Bluegrass Capital as intolerable, and, therefore, mutable.

The proposal to introduce a dog muzzling ordinance under which the dog owner would be liable for any dog found at large unmuzzled is sensible and promises results. The Lexingtonians who are willing to defend their rights to their faucet right to spread hydrophobia are not a majority, of course. They are not even as numerous as the dog catchers and can be disciplined easily by the matter of shooting the unmuzzled dogs is turned over to the police, that system is less desirable than dog catching, which gives the owner an opportunity to redeem and protect his pet, but where conditions render it necessary it works admirably.—C.J.

There has been war in Europe for four weeks. Movements of the armies and navies have been shrouded in mystery. Conflicting reports have come from the highest official authorities.

A stalk of tobacco about six feet long after being topped was brought to town by J. Morrison last Monday as a sample of his two-acre crop. He has some mighty good tobacco.—Greensburg Record.

If Warren county only had good roads she would be right in front. Statistics show that she is one of the best producing counties in the State. She has no speciality produce, but she has apples, peaches and the finest stock in the world.—Glasgow Gazette.

The county of Powell may be poor in resources, generally speaking, but the class of her watermelons is simply A1. The largest and best of the delicious fruit that comes to this market is grown near Clay City, and there is no other place in this country that can beat it.—Winchester Democrat.

Mr. W. W. White, the well-known apple salesman, gave a boy residing in Scotch Ford, Scotland, an apple. The child's mother inquired of her son to know what he was going to say to the man, when he quickly responded, "please give me another apple."—Danville Messenger.

Five people have been shot to death in Williamsburg during the past ten months. All but one of them were victims of the pistol-toting habit. Start at the throat of the evil by suppressing the pistol-toters and you will go a long way towards stopping the frequent murders not only in this county but all over the State.—Grant County News.

Every farmer who has fields of hill land—plowed that are likely to wash should sow crimson clover or rye to hold the land. Either of these crops will do the work and also furnish fine winter and spring grazing. The man who sows rye or wheat and hogs down the crop, turning the stubble and sowing cowpeas need not sow grass seed.—Quantum Democrat.

Undoubtedly Garrard county's banner peach crop is being harvested this year, both in point of quality and quantity. Many wagonloads of the luscious fruit are to be seen on our streets every day, both home grown and brought in from the adjoining counties, and they may be had at prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 per bushel.—Lancaster Record.

"They looked so good I just couldn't keep from takin' 'em," was the defense made by "Mexican" Charley Lewis, charged with poisoning a sack of fresh green roasting ears from Ed. Collier's cornfield the other day. Charley was given $25 and costs for his defense, and the appetite for corn and was sent to jail by Judge Fulton.—Flemingsburg Gazette.

A Davies county farmer last fall sowed five cents worth of winter turnip seed. In the spring five families cut greens off of it. When it ripened the seed was cut and yielded 100 pounds and sold for $10 wholesale. The product of the seed would sow 200 acres and the original plot from scattered seed has a better stand than at first. Moral: Don't sow your entire farm in turnip seed.—Owensboro Messenger.

Sheriff Clark Harberson has received the following anxious inquiry: "Tax Collector, Danville, Ky.—Dear Sir: I want to know if you know of any middle-aged lady, about 40 years of age, or some personal property, that would like to get married. I am a bachelor and would like to find a lady of that kind. I am a man of good character. Respectfully, H. W. Flowers." Now, ladies, here is not only a chance to get a husband, but also to have Flowers at the wedding.—Danville Advocate.

Falmouth, Williamstown and Brooksville are the only three towns left in the State that are bothered to any great extent with horse swarms on county days. Last court day it resembled the Russian cavalry mobilizing on the public highway across the river. Sheriff Summa scattered the mob twice, but the next time he expects to use some stronger ammunition. Every jockey who has a plugger two is now hustling to get the other fellow to winter it and a man could take a pocketful of barlow knives just now and get enough plugs to mount a regiment of soldiers.—Falmouth Outlook.

Why Not Tax Ky. Bachelors?

A great many State Legislatures have given consideration to bills taxing bachelors and many convincing arguments have been presented why men escape matrimony should pay penalty, but why not tax them as a more painful and effective method of extermination? If the bachelors were taxed the widows could easily find them and cupid would do the rest. The bachelor is naturally timid but under the encouragement of a lady of merry widow he can easily be led to the altar, for there is no more helpless craft without than a love-sick man who has passed the age of discretion, and the little imp that plays ping-pong with human hearts has no more capable ally than a voracious lover at second sight, for experience makes cupid subtle and bold.

The women has tag days to promote matrimony by public entertainment, and why not a tag day for bachelors? We have in Kentucky approximately 75 thousand bachelors and an equal number of widows. Why not get them together and solve two vexatious problems with out marriage license.—Pendleton Reformer.

Mrs. Joshua Rice Dead.

Lurinda A. V. Ryle Rice was born February 28th, 1849 and passed away August 18th, 1914, being 65 years, six months and 10 days old at the time of her death.

She was married to Joshua Rice February 12, 1868. To this union were born eight children, Bertha, Eleanor, Joseph W. Wesley, V. Correll, Lillian, Blanche and Cloe, the latter passed away at the age of two years.

She joined the Baptist church at Middle creek, at the age of 36 years and always remained true to her profession.

She had been a great sufferer for five years, always bearing the intense pain with a Christian fortitude and patience saying, "Christ will never send any suffering to me, he will not give me the strength to bear." In the home she was a loving faithful wife and mother, in the community she was a true neighbor, beloved by all she came in contact with, because of her sweet disposition and kindly sympathy.

All that loving hands could do to relieve her suffering was done by the husband and children who were with her to the last with the exception of the one daughter, Blanche Myers, of Canada.

In talking with her family she said, "Death has no terrors for me," and realized it would be harder for those that are left behind. The husband and wife have walked hand in hand, sharing the joys and sorrows of life together, smoothing the pathway for each other with the love that had grown deeper as the years rolled by. While the years will be lonely to the husband, he will find the consolation that to the last she said, "Pa you have always been so precious and dear to me."

Mrs. Rice was a sister of G. A. Ryle and Mrs. W. S. White, of Hathaway, and W. T. Ryle, of Commissary.

CLOUD-BURST

In Union Neighborhood Damaging Crops and Roads Considerably.

A hail storm visited Big Bone church neighborhood last Monday but did not last long enough to do very much damage, but the water the tobacco growers a big scare.

Union neighborhood was visited by a cloud-burst Monday night that did considerable damage to crops and the county roads, washing the latter badly and tearing out several bridges. Union and vicinity had been complaining because of the want of rain most of the summer, but now the effects of an excess are visible.

The road along the river above Rabbit Hash was practically demolished by the hard rain last Monday it being almost impossible to go over it. In the Locust Grove neighborhood where the roads had been but recently put in first-class condition they are torn all to pieces. Do less in many other places in the county from which no reports can be received the roads are as bad as damaged.

Gunpowder, Middle creek and Lick creek were on the rampage Monday night.

O. H. Adams, who has lived on Riddell's Run many years, says he never saw that stream higher than it was last Monday night. The water was up to his residence, the public road along the stream was destroyed, the water ran into some mail boxes and filled them with mud while others were carried away, a field of corn belonging to Cleveland Baker and a crop of tobacco belonging to J. H. Cunningham were ruined. Bert Smith, the rural mail carrier was detained Tuesday by the bad condition of the road, having to wade out with his horse and cart. It was late in the afternoon when he arrived at the postoffice in Burlington.

POULTRY

ROUP IN THE CHICKEN FLOCK

Disease is Prevalent Where Fowls Are Kept in Filthy, Damp and Poorly Ventilated Quarters.

(By F. W. KAZMEIER.)
Roup is prevalent in flocks kept in filthy, damp, poorly ventilated quarters. Vigorous stock in good surroundings proves quite resistant to the disease.

Common colds do not develop into roup if the specific germ is not present. The common belief is that roup is developed from a neglected cold. This is not the case, although it supplies the conditions so that the roup germs can easily get a foothold.

For the benefit of those who have been unlucky enough to get this terrible disease introduced into their flock I give the following successful way of combating roup: First, remove all conditions which tend to foster it, next, remove all affected birds as soon as discovered—Place them in a clean, dry room, of even temperature, that is free from draughts of air. If you desire to doctor them, treat as soon as the earliest symptoms are detected. Disinfect the poultry house and run with a five per cent. solution of carbolic acid and repeat this disinfection at least once a week. Feed a well balanced ration containing some meat scraps. Burn all dead birds. A far developed roup chicken is worth more dead than alive. One good remedy is to put a few drops of kerosene oil on the affected fowl's head. This is also excellent for common colds.

Peroxide of hydrogen and water half and half, or creolin or carbolic acid in two per cent. solution may be used in the same manner. One of the remedies, that as a rule gives the best results, is a solution of two ounces of permanganate of potash in six pints of water. Submerge the fowl's head in it just long enough to prevent it from suffocating. Any of these liquids will help clear the nasal and throat passages and destroy disease germs.

A good preventive is to dissolve two ounces of permanganate of potash in twelve parts of water and give to all the birds to drink at least three times a week and on such days give no other water to drink.

Remember, the very best preventive is an abundance of fresh air without draughts, plenty of sunshine and sanitary surroundings, and guard against introducing the germ.

COCHIN IS FAVORITE BREED

Four Varieties, Each Having Single Comb and Differing Only in Point of Plumage Color.

The question is frequently asked, what is the best breed of chickens? The answer depends entirely upon what purpose you wish to use for, and can be answered best by yourself. The larger birds are intended as a combination fowl, i. e., to produce both eggs and meat in desirable quantities, while the smaller and more active breeds are considered the egg machines, and many breeders of them claim excellent table qualities for them, which no doubt they possess, the only objection being their small size.

The Cochin is an old and popular breed and has four varieties, each having single comb, and differing only in point of plumage color, which is: Buff, partridge, black and white, the buff being the preference. Their weights are: Cocks, 11 pounds; cockerels, 9; hens, 8 1/2; pullets, 7.

The other varieties in this class are: The Langshans, black and white.

First Prize Black Cochin.

Single combs. The blacks are a very fine all-purpose fowl, and by far the most popular of the two. The weight of the cock is 10 pounds; cockerel, 8; hen, 7; pullet, 6.

The Cochins have single combs and the Brahmas pea combs. The eggs laid by the varieties of the two classes mentioned above are all brown in the color of shell.

Keep Male Birds Away.
The poultryman who will keep his male birds away from the hens during the summer and fall months will reap the benefit of his foresight in the extra strong fertility of his eggs during the coming hatch season. The male bird that spends the summer and winter months in celibacy is in a much better condition to impregnate the eggs than one who has run with the hens the year round and is sexually exhausted or partially so.

SPRAYING FOR SOUND FRUIT

Experiments in Missouri Show That Practically All Unsprayed Fruit Is Ruined by Disease.

The man who still clings to the idea that spraying does not aid in the production of fruit should be convinced by the report of W. L. Howard of the Department of Horticulture of the University of Missouri. By taking orchards here and there over the state of Missouri, Prof. Howard has just finished a series of experiments that show that practically all unsprayed fruit is ruined by diseases or insects.

In one orchard where a part was sprayed and a part was left unsprayed, only 13 per cent. of the Arkansas black apples could be classed as clean fruit after the trees had been left unsprayed. In the same orchard, where the same brand of apples had been sprayed, the crop of clean fruit was 78.7 per cent. Another orchard of Missouri pippin apples experimented with the same way resulted in 2.1 clean fruit for the unsprayed part and 88.5 for that part which was sprayed.

LESSONS FROM THE DROUTH

Stronger Emphasis Than Usual Is Laid on Importance of Preparation of Good Seed Beds.

A member of the crop production of the University of Illinois reports that the results as seen in crops this year seem to emphasize stronger than usual the importance of good tillage. They have shown also how important it is in a year like the present to prepare the good seed beds for the grain; that the seed beds should be well packed, and soil on top looses, and a mulch on the very surface, in order that moisture be conserved.

There were two crops in Illinois that seem to have stood the drouth especially well. These were alfalfa and sorghum. The average yield was only a few bushels lower than last year, perhaps one-fifth, while the decrease in the yield of oats was about one-half less than the yield of last year. Corn, of course, is not yet harvested, but the prospects are that the yield will be from one-third to one-half less. These facts seem to be important ones for farmers to consider. It would seem advisable that every farmer of the state should have a good field of alfalfa and a field of sorghum to meet just such an emergency as the one of this year.

Raising Calves.

The way we do is to feed milk until the calf is three or four weeks old, then give porridge made of oil meal, and wheat shorts; commence with about one spoonful of oil meal and a handful of shorts, increase the quantity as the calf gets used to it, and in addition, we feed whole oats and wheat bran dry, says Hoard's Dairyman. We send our milk to the cheese factory, so have to feed something besides milk.

We raised one calf in this way that gave us, when a cow, 5,180 pounds milk in 106 days, and made 4 pounds 12 ounces butter in two days; and we have one this year 5 years old, that gave 67 pounds 13 ounces milk in one day, and others doing nearly as well.

Better Winter Feed Needed.

If farmers would give as much attention to improving their winter treatment of cattle as they have to improving the quality a correspondingly large increase in profits would be realized, says a writer in an exchange. Good breeding demands good feeding. Much of the feed is allowed to become over-ripe before it is cut. The meadows being mown so long without plowing the hay consists of wild grasses and weeds. On account of the deficiency of both lime and phosphorus the hay has but little clover in it, and it is impossible to maintain flesh with such feed. I was told that the average gain is about 300 pounds per head.

Mint Growing in the West.

If a farmer has good land suitable for peppermint he will probably, with reduced forces, continue the cultivation. On the other hand those who rent land and give a share of the crop for rent and those who are engaged in other matters such as capitalists in town hiring all the work done, will drop out of the crop for the present.

Most Profitable Feed.

With hogs especially the feeding that produces steady, speedy growth, is the most profitable. A pig that is started in the early days of its life should never have a place in the breeding herd.

PLANNING FOR EGG SUPPLY IN WINTER

A Good Type of Colony Coop.

When fall is here, and the price of eggs begins to climb upward, with the sure prospect of good prices all winter, then those who have given but little attention to the poultry during the rest of the year will begin to ask "How shall I make my hens lay through the winter?"

It is uphill work to take a flock of hens that have been poorly cared for and are altogether unprepared, and by caring for them after cold weather is already here, get them to laying before spring.

The time to begin preparations for the winter harvest is in the spring, and the start must be made by choosing for the parents of your laying stock only those fowls that are strong and healthy and good laying stock.

By this care in selecting the eggs from which to hatch your next winter's layers you give them hereditary tendencies to be good layers and good, strong constitutions to help them develop quickly and enable them to stand the strain of early and heavy laying.

If this has all been done, and the little chicks hatched, then winter eggs or no winter eggs depend entirely on your care for and feeding of these chicks to prepare them for their winter's work.

They must be fed well and a variety of food, so that the whole body will develop properly.

Bone and muscle must keep ahead of the fat, but if only fattening food is given then they cannot grow bone and muscle; so feed them bran and cut oats or oatmeal and cut bone, as well as coarsely ground corn. They must also have food in some form. Good, sweet feed scraps are all right for this, or skim milk will take the place of meat.

Although they should be fed as much as possible to hurry their growth, they must not be fed enough to cause indigestion. They must be given the habit of eating a great deal of food, but must also be given a good digestion with which to handle it. The ability to assimilate large quantities of food is absolutely necessary for a heavy layer.

As an aid in helping them to digest their food and in growing-muscle exercise is very important. If they are running on range with their mothers they will get exercise enough in keeping up with her, but if they are confined in houses or yards then let them scratch for the most of their food in some light, clean litter or some loose earth.

Keep them supplied with fresh drinking water and chick size grit. Many chicks die or have their digestion ruined because they are not supplied with grit and water.

They must also be kept free from lice. No chicks will soon be ready to eat or sell, and the pullets relieved of their company will also grow faster.

As soon as young roosters show red in their combs, separate them from the pullets. Allowing them to run with the pullets will retard the growth of both. If kept by themselves, the young roosters will soon be ready to eat or sell, and the pullets relieved of their company will also grow faster. This is what is needed to make winter layers, a quick growth and an even all around development, so that they will begin laying before the cold weather. If they begin at this time they will lay all winter, if they are put into a comfortable house before they become chilled in the fall and are given the right kind of care afterward.

I have never failed to raise a flock of good winter layers when I have cared for my pullets in this way.

FUNCTIONS OF FERTILIZERS

Commercial or Artificial Fertilizer Is Used to Increase Fertility Above Natural Capacity.

(By C. W. COLVER, Assistant Chemist, Idaho Experiment Station.)
Fertilizers are applied to the soil for two general purposes—to maintain and to increase fertility.

Chief among those fertilizers that are used for maintaining the fertility of the land is barnyard manure. Fertilizers are applied to the soil as long as the principal components of the manure are all derived from the soil it cannot increase its fertility—at best, it can only maintain its fertility.

If, however, the barnyard manure is obtained wholly or in part from external sources it may increase fertility. Two such cases are plainly evident. For example, when the barnyard manure is purchased from town stables, as it is often done for truck gardening near cities, or when it is derived from fertilizing ingredients contained in oil cake or other concentrated feeding stuffs consumed by stock.

The commercial or artificial fertilizers, which have been employed for a good many years, are used chiefly for increasing the fertility of the soil. In other words, increasing the productivity of the soil above its natural capacity. Although this is their leading function, they act as restorative agents whenever they are applied when barnyard manure is withheld.

In general, the restoration of the fertility of the land is accomplished chiefly by the barnyard manure that is returned to the soil during a given crop rotation, and the increase in crops is produced by commercial or artificial fertilizers.

Feeding Corn to Pigs.

The feeding of corn alone to pigs, as is practiced on many farms in this country, has done more than any one thing to reduce the vitality of these animals. Corn alone is not a balanced ration for the hog any more than for any other animal, and it cannot be fed corn alone and be as strong and prolific as though it had had a changed and mixed diet. If it were possible for every breeder of swine to follow these principles, there would be a short time, be no need of a serum for quelling the ravages of hog cholera.

Test With Pigs.

In a feeding test with eighty pigs, last 160 days, on a ration of corn chop, buttermilk and barley, and sorghum forage, conducted at the Oklahoma station, the average daily gain was .61 pound as compared with a gain of 1.23 pounds on corn chop and buttermilk.

A lot of hogs turned into a field of corn yielding at a rate of only 17 bushels per acre made a gain of 1.2 pounds per head. Estimating the value of the grain at seven cents per pound, the hogs returned a value of 63.15 cents per bushel.

Mixing Feeds.

A few years ago some one asked for an easy way to mix feed in water for hogs. Here is a good way: Set a barrel over the end of a V-shaped hog trough, the barrel is as near to water supply as possible, and bore an auger hole in the bottom of barrel to lead into the trough. A stick as long as the barrel and pointed at lower end is used to plug the auger hole. To let the slop run out just pull the stick out. Put in first the amount of water, then mill feed on top and it will be ready by the next feed.

Manure and Moisture.

Manure from the barn lot adds humus to the soil, and humus acts like a sponge, retaining the moisture and making the soil more capable of absorbing more rainfall by holding it longer. Moral: Save and carefully spread all barnyard manure over the fields. Manure properly utilized puts dollars in the farmers' pockets.

+ Nashville Ind. She was married
+ to Grover C. David April 12, 1913.
+ To them one child was born but
+ did not survive since which she
+ had been an invalid fighting
+ against disease and death. She be-
+ came a member of the Baptist + church at Franklin Tennessee, in
+ 1907 and lived and died a consis-
+ tent christian. She was a gentle
+ soul devoted to her loved ones
+ and especially to her husband. She
+ was a home lover and made
+ friends wherever she went. Dur-
+ ing the weeks of illness her faith
+ in Christ and her confidence in the
+ wisdom and goodness of God
+ grew daily. Her death was a
+ triumph of calm confidence in
+ God. She met death without
+ fear bidding each of the family
+ an affectionate farewell asking
+ them to meet her in the glory
+ land. She said "the Savior
+ calling me" and with a sweet
+ smile of trustful love she fell
+ asleep. Our last good-bye bless
+ God it has been said forever.
+ Now for courage and the faith
+ to wait. Oh blessed gift of + death when morning comes I
+ shall be comforted.

+ THE RULES OF WARFARE
+ Conditions That the Belligerent Ar+ mies Must Observe.
+ At The Hague convention of
+ 1899 certain rules were promul-
+ gated restraining the atrocities of
+ warfare. To these rules the civil-
+ ized nations of the world sub-
+ scribed and the United States and
+ Mexico are among the signers.
+ At the foundation of all these
+ rules lies the general declaration
+ that "the right of belligerents to
+ adopt means of injuring the en+ emy is not unlimited."
+ In the general interests of hu+ manity these are the principal
+ things which are forbidden:
+ To employ poison or poisoned
+ arms.
+ To kill or wound treacherously

The ice cream supper given by the Pythian sisters last Saturday night was a success and netted a neat sum for their treasury.

Mrs. G. E. Murray and three young daughters and Mrs. Will Meadams of Rising Sun, attended the Pythian sisters' supper Saturday night.

The Pythian Sisters desire to thank all who in spite of bad roads and unfavorable weather came to their supper last Saturday night and by their assistance and encouragement made it a success. They especially thank the K. of P. Lodge for the use of its hall. Mrs. Katie Riggs and her son Albert for hauling their supplies; Mrs. Laura Wilson for the beautiful flowers furnished; and C. G. Riddell for his many kindnesses to the ladies and young people.

Hubert Conner, of Hebron, passed through Burlington last Sunday driving several very handsome Holstein cattle, which he was taking home to pasture.

BOONE COUNTY SCHOOLS.

Education is the civilization. Schools are the instruments through which we receive education. Therefore schools may be said to be the mile posts along the road to perfect civilization.

Tell me what a man eats and I'll tell you what he is, said one of the wise ones. Well, would say, "Tell me what a man reads and I'll tell you what he eats." I fear father didn't read a great deal. They were busy doing what we now have machinery to do. But now since we are all business people we find time to read. The farmer is a business man, so he takes a farm paper of some sort, and reads it, too in order to learn how to destroy the many plant diseases which his father did not have to contend with. The teacher must have a magazine to help him do most efficient work. The bar owner, the store-keeper, and every person in every industry must seek "first aid."

Everybody seems to be helping Boone County Schools and Boone Schools are helping everybody.

Let us establish a school worthy of their love and patronage, and they did so. They built a well lighted, well ventilated and beautiful edifice containing four rooms in the basement, four rooms in the first floor, two recitation rooms, a chapel and an office in the second floor. They employed first-class teachers who could teach the twelve years of Grammar and High School grades with certainty and helpfulness. They made a number one class. A high school which is accredited in practically every college and university in the state. But after doing all this the Walton people are not satisfied. They want more. They are shown by the fact that this year the Board of Education has placed a full year's work in the Commercial Branch in the curriculum. Now Walton school has two regular courses of study. The Academic or the regular four year course in the high school branches and the business which constitutes three years of High School business and one year of Commercial branches. By special arrangement the principal any pupil can take the Business Course without taking all the High School work. However, Walton is still looking for greater things. She wants her boys and girls to see the beautiful in work, to be moderate in everything.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL.

The Boone County High School is established in Burlington. The building is beautiful, having one usable room in the basement, several class rooms in the first floor, two in the second floor, and a sort of gymnasium in the garret. It was in this very building that Everett L. Dix did more to put this county on the educational map than any other one teacher. Mr. Dix initiated a County Experiment Station, he taught Agriculture as it should be taught, and more, he gave the rural teachers a course in Agriculture by correspondence. Burlington school gives two courses of study. A Scientific and a Classical, both regular Academic courses. Burlington has a first class high school, James Caywood is the new principal. His friends think he is O. K.

OTHER SCHOOLS.

Other county high schools have been established at Dresden, Florence, Petersburg, Landing, Bellevue and Union. All are working in unison, taking the pupils into charge immediately after he finishes the grades.

FREE TUITION.

In all the county high schools pupils who have diplomas will receive FREE tuition. Walton strictly speaking is not a county high school, because it is maintained by the citizens of Walton and not by the county as a whole; but arrangements have been made between the city school board and the county school board so that any county student who has a county diploma will receive FREE tuition provided Walton is the logical school for him to attend. Any one desiring to attend one of these schools should drop a card or letter to the respective principal for full information.

ADVICE.

As a usual thing FREE advice is worth just what it costs. This advice to pupils and parents is free, but I think it is an exception to the rule. The use of the mind is the most important work of schools, but there are those who seem to have gotten a different train of thought in these days. Too many people think more about dressing their bodies than they do of dressing their minds. Especially with the young men and women. Too many boys and girls think they haven't good enough clothes to wear to school. Let me teach them that pupils have too GOOD a wardrobe for school purposes. Let it show how things get mixed. I think a clean gingham dress for a girl for warm weather wear and some sort of inexpensive serge or woolen dress with several inexpensive shirts—suits for winter wear, is sufficient clothes for a school girl. An ordinary serge suit should be sufficient for boys. I think a neat gingham dress is one of the most becoming kind of clothes a girl can wear. Have seen girls wear real expensive gowns to school, whose parents were not financially able to afford such. It is not only wasteful but wears fine clothes in the school room, but it is considered BAD TASTE. TASTE IS NOT A MATTER OF PRICE. IT IS A MATTER OF SUITABILITY. A person with little with which to buy clothes may show the best of taste in the selection to suit the occasion.

CHALK DUST ruins fine clothes as surely as MUD soils white shoes.

A LAST WORD.

Boone County is traveling toward the rising sun. This year will be the best she has ever experienced. We are trying to use our talents which have been already given us, and to increase them in number.

AUTOS COLLIDE

Fortunately All The Occupants Escape Serious Injury—One Machine Badly Demolished.

As Garnett Tolin was coming out of the fair ground gate last Thursday afternoon in his machine, in which were his sister, Miss Shirley, Walton Dempsey and Misses Laura Frances Riddell and Kathryn Brown, a large six cylinder touring car struck the rear of his Ford, demolishing a fender and one of the rear wheels. Mr. Tolin and his sister and Miss Riddell were hurt, the first two slightly, while the latter was badly bruised, but fortunately no bones were broken. Walton Dempsey and Miss Brown were not hurt. Mrs. John M. Lassing and sons, of Newport, were at the fair and brought the injured parties home in their machine. The drivers of the cars that collided did not discover each other until it was too late to avoid the collision.

The touring car which contained four persons was from Ohio and going south on the Covington Lexington pike, and was not sighted by Mr. Tolin until he passed out of the south gate at the fair grounds, at which time the driver of the touring car was being made to check it. Mr. Tolin gave his machine all the power he could in an attempt to cross the road and avoid the collision in which he would have succeeded in a second's more time as is evident from the fact that his car was not damaged. However, Miss Laura Frances Riddell was thrown out on to the front fender on the touring car. Mr. Tolin and his sister and Miss Riddell were hurt, the former's left knee and the latter's left shoulder being hurt considerably. It was evident by a close call.

Horace Hewitt Dead.

Horace Hewitt died at his home in Aurora Wednesday afternoon at 5:25. He had been a sufferer for some time with acute stomach trouble and paralysis, but, at the time of his death, was supposed to be getting better. His sister, Mrs. C. W. Fox, of Telf, Cal., who had been called home some time ago by his illness, was preparing to return home when indications for the worst came. Mr. Hewitt had for years been engaged as agent for the Singer Sewing Machine for Dearborn, Ohio and Boone counties, and was looking after farm and other interests in his death the community has lost a good citizen. Funeral Saturday at 2 p. m. from the house. Burial River View Cemetery—Blaug Sun Recorder.

Will Probated.

The arguments in the contest of the last will and testament of the late James L. Huey, was heard in the county court, last Monday. Judge F. E. Cason presiding. The argument for the contestant was made by Attorney John O'Neal and for the propounders by Judge Williams, both of Covington. The contestant's case was made up of the arguments that the will was admitted to probate. An appeal will be taken to the circuit court.

T. A. Huey, Sr. and T. A. Huey, Jr., qualified as executors of the will.

As a general thing so much fruit ripens in a locality at the same time that there is no sale for it at any price, and shipment of perishable fruits to the city markets are not always satisfactory. The economical housewife should make preparations to take care of the fruit that ripens on the place, by canning and preserving for market purposes. Canned goods are always salable at a price that will not only sell the fruit at a good profit, but will pay a handsome premium for the labor and return an excellent profit besides.

There are a few Harvest Home premiums at this office for distribution.

Personal Mention.

Truck growers and farmers about New York City for a radius of fifty miles were notified last week that four municipal markets would be opened in the city, and that they were invited to come and sell their produce direct to the consumer. This scheme is the first direct effort by New York to solve the problem of the rise in the prices of foodstuffs which has occurred since the outbreak of the European war. It is hoped that these markets will be made permanent institutions and that they will successfully solve the problem of allowing the producer of crops to dispose of them at their full value.

Beaver Lick.

A protracted meeting is in progress at South Fork Christian church.

Lee Conley and daughter are visiting Mrs. John Conley of this place.

J. W. Cleek is expecting his daughter, Mattie Anna, home from Europe this week.

Will Wilson carried out two first premiums on a suckling colt at the Florence fair Saturday.

The excessive rainfall last week kept many from the Florence fair, who otherwise would have attended.

The Strength of "Thornhill" Skeins and Axles Explained

Note at the bottom of this advertisement, the difference between the types of skeins. One, the old way, gives a natural breaking point, where iron stops and wood begins. The other, the "Thornhill" way, shows the long sleeve malleable skein non-breakable. The long sleeve of malleable iron extends underneath the axle strengthening it and distributing the strain. There is no weak part. This banishes, forever, the old time weakness of wagons.

This long sleeve malleable skein runs as lightly as a cast skein, is as strong as a steel skein and will outlast either.

A Defiance machine, infallibly accurate, fits each skein to its axle insuring the right pitch and tuck.

A "Thornhill" equipped with these skeins has no equal anywhere at any price.

Learn the great improvements in wagon construction by coming in, and seeing the construction used on this wagon.

Let The Boys Help.

Why is that boys are allowed to set in the house doing nothing while their over-worked mother is struggling against nature and fate to do about half the work waiting for her hands? Only the other day we saw three large able-bodied boys, lounging about the house, not knowing what to do with themselves, while mother, alone, tired and pale was trying to do the work for a large family and company. Not a boy to help about the house? Why not? Is there anything about washing dishes that will injure him? Or about making the beds or sweeping or setting the table or washing or ironing, or cooking a plain meal or vitals? On the contrary, their is too much to benefit him in such work, the most important of which is to gain the idea that it is not manly to let the weaker "vases" carry all the burdens, when it is possible for strong hands to work. Most boys would gladly help the house if they were asked to do so, and are taught how to do the work properly. Many a mother, who has been a help to her mother, but he doesn't know how beyond bringing in wood and water. This done she tells him to go and play while she plods wearily on. Not a boy's work? For shame! It is positive harm to his moral character to allow him to do it. Let him be a man, while his mother is struggling under her burdens. Let the boys help, and those who can't get help for love or money will see their troubles disappear.—Ex.

ELECTRIC CLIPPER

ELECTRIC CLIPPER IS HANDY

As Jaws Work Automatically User Merely Guides Implement—Handle Has Firm Grip.

One of the latest of electrical appliances is the electric horse clipper patented by an Illinois man. The clipper has a long cord which is reinforced by a heavy string coil to keep it from twisting or breaking and no special wiring is necessary to use it. Just plug into a socket that has 110 volts and there you are. A thick handle affords a firm, comfortable grip and as the jaws work automatically all the user need do is guide the implement.

Electric Clipper.

The carbon brushes are accessible and easily replaced, adjusted or cleaned. "No housing, dirt and dust proof," which prolongs the life of the motor contained within. Incidentally this housing is of aluminum, which is strong enough for such a purpose, yet light enough to make easy handling. Furthermore, the motor is short and handy to clip the horse's feet.

PURE-BRED BULL CHEAPEST

Ruling Prices Have Been Low for Number of Years in Comparison With Market Value.

Some farmers stick to the practice of keeping a grade or scrub bull in spite of the fact that they really lose money by so doing. The ruling prices for pure-bred sires have really been low for a number of years, in comparison even with the market prices for such stock. When a pure-bred bull can be secured at from $100 to $200 for the ordinary useful sorts, there is no great excuse of complaining about prices. And remember, in computing the value of a bull, his merit or lack of merit, as the case may be, will be shared by the offspring from every cow in the herd. Proving the expense of a bull over the whole crop of calves, the extra individual expense is slight; certainly not as much as you would pay if you were purchasing calves and deciding the relative merits of those sired by pure-bred sires and those sired by scrubs.

TO DESTROY LICE ON HOGS

All Loose, Dry Straw Should Be Burned and Pens Thoroughly Disinfected With Formalin.

(By E. T. BAKER, Veterinarian, Idaho Experiment Station.)

A pig weighing 150 pounds will have approximately twelve plints of blood, each pint containing 7,650 drops, or a little over 92,000 drops of blood. If a louse abstracts a drop a day and the pig is hoarding several thousand lice, it is easy to see where the profit goes when "hog lice" are present.

It is worse than useless to "dope" the pig with "lice killer" without disinfecting pens, bedding and in the spring the wallow.

First burn all the loose, dry straw, clean out manure, spray the pen floors, walls, beams, troughs and every crevice with a 10 per cent solution of formalin or a half gallon of formalin to five gallons of water. Creolina may be added to wallow in warm weather, say, half a pint to a large wallow.

The dust on each pig powdered with straphalin. This will keep the average louse to homestead elsewhere.

Cooked Potatoes for Hogs.

Potatoes can be fed to hogs with good results, but they should be cooked first. In experiments it has been found that four pounds of cooked potatoes are equal to 1 pound of grain in feed. The potatoes should be fed with grain, as alone they form an unbalanced ration. The grain fed should not be cooked as the raw grain is more digestible.

Shade In Pastures.

We once heard a long-winded discussion among a lot of "scientific farmers" at a convention, as to whether the pasture without shade was better than one with it. Now a writer in an exchange. The scientists left the question unsettled, but did you ever see a pasture with shade trees in it where the cattle did not make use of them?

I LOVE STOCK

BROOD SOW SHOULD BE KEPT

Prolific Animal, Proven to Be Good Suckler and Careful Mother, Should Be Retained.

It is strange that a farmer will keep the good brood mare from year to year and at the same time get his good brood sow into the fattening pen and send her off to market as soon as she is fat enough to go. Thus the good brood sow into the fattening pen while the gilt, untired as a brood sow, takes her place. This is a mistake.

When a sow proves to be a good suckler and careful mother she should be retained, especially if she is prolific, says the Iowa Homestead. With such a sow the farmer is reasonably assured of a strong, healthy litter of pigs that will grow into profitable hogs. A gilt may prove a good suckler, overlay her brood, while four or five is often the number of her brood. So with the young gilt for brood sow the pig proposition on the farm is a very uncertain one.

If a sow proves to be a good breeder from the start she should be retained, for it is reasonable to expect that she will get better each year. And it is a fact that older sows bring earlier, stronger pigs and a greater number of them, with less danger of trouble of any kind at farrowing time.

BANDAGE ON A HORSE'S LEG

Object Should Be to Get Equal Pressure at All Points—Replace at Least Once Daily.

In bandaging the legs, endeavor to get an equal pressure at all points. A long roll is, therefore, best, and several layers should be wrapped around the member. It is a good plan to remove the bandage, replacing with another at least once a day, and two a day are better. When a bandage is removed, the skin should be washed and rubbed with the hand and fingers, and the covering replaced as promptly as possible.

Bandage for Leg.

other at least once a day, and two a day are better. When a bandage is removed, the skin should be washed and rubbed with the hand and fingers, and the covering replaced as promptly as possible.

Suggestion on Stock Feeding.

No farmer who has to pump water for half a dozen head of stock can afford to be without a wind pump. A water heater will cost much less than the loss of flesh occasioned by cattle drinking ice water.

At the present high prices of feed it takes a good feeder to get ahead of the game, even with hogs and cattle selling high.

It seems a pity to feed high-priced corn to scrub hogs these days, when a prime full-bred animal will take on one-fourth more flesh at the same cost.

An Economical Beef Ration.

The results of three Nebraska experiments indicate that when corn is from 35 to 50 cents per bushel and alfalfa not to exceed 75 per ton, considerably less than a full feed of corn, probably 14 to 18 pounds per day for a two-year-old steer, is more profitable than a full feed. If corn is worth 60 to 65 cents per bushel, something approaching a half feed of this grain, 10 to 12 pounds per day, would seem more profitable if a few more weeks may be taken for the finishing process.

Sheep on Rough Lands.

Some rough $15 to $20 land in the eastern states is being stocked with western sheep. The cost produces but a small share of its meat, and prospects are good for auction prices that will give to the grower a fair profit. If dogs do not become troublesome these lands should show good returns to investors who understand the business.

Breeding Sheep.

In breeding sheep, first and foremost of all is the blood, then next in conformation. Combine these with skill and the world will bow at your shrine.

THE FLORENCE FAIR

Unfavorable Weather Cuts the Attendance to The Smallest in Its History.

Owing to the rain on Friday and the unfavorable morning Saturday, the attendance each of those days was small, and as a result the fair had the smallest attendance in its history, this being the first year that weather conditions were so very unfavorable. The exhibit of stock fell short of that of any year in the past.

The Japanese found the defense at Kiau Chau most formidable, and they will not capture the place so easily as they anticipated.

The war in Mexico has dropped out of sight entirely. In fact that country appears to be pacified, as a new revolution has not been hatched for many weeks.

Chairman Henry, of the House Rules Committee, said that he would oppose any proposition looking to national prohibition or to woman suffrage and that no prohibition amendment could be drawn that he would support.

War has played havoc with the Indianapolis horse market. The result of the prize boost which has followed the war has been that there was no auction last week, and will be only a small one this week. A prolonged war might raise values, dealers say, but at present there is nothing to induce them to pay the highest prices asked by farmers and breeders.

It appears that one of the attorneys for the prosecution in the Gus Stevens case took exceptions to an article that appeared in the column. It was not the intention nor the desire of the Recorder to impute by that article to him or any of his associates in the case any improper conduct in the preparation or presentation of the evidence for the prosecution. The vigorous efforts of Commonwealth's Atty. Hove relating the charges of improper conduct on the part of attorney for the prosecution inspired the article which was along the lines of his speech.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Buyers to Share in Profits
Lower Prices for Ford Cars

Effective from August 1, 1914 to Aug. 1, 1915
guaranteed against any reduction during that time:

Touring Car	$490
Runabout	$440
Town Car	$690

F. O. B. Detroit, all cars fully equipped.

(In the United States of America only.)

Further, we will be able to obtain the maximum efficiency in our factory production, and the minimum cost in our purchasing and sales departments if we can reach an output of 300,000 cars between the above dates.

And should we reach this production, we agree to pay as the buyer's share from $40 to $60 per car (on or about August 1, 1915) to every retail buyer who purchases a new Ford car between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915.

For further particulars regarding these low prices and profit-sharing plan, see the nearest Ford Branch or Dealer.

ROY UTLEY, one of the few progressive fruit growers of Hopkins county, living out a few miles west of Madisonville, has been bringing to Earlston, during the past week, some of the most beautiful and perfect peaches that could be grown anywhere, and they are as good as they look.

Authorities on the question say that Hopkins county's soil and topography are naturally adapted to successful fruit growing.

Mr. Utley has proved the correctness of this position. He uses the modern and approved methods of pruning, spraying and cultivation.

Does not gather his fruit until it is ripe and delivers it to the buyer in perfect condition and ready for the table.—Earlston Bee.

HOW THE CONCRETE SILO IS MADE EXPERIMENT STATION AIDING WORK

There Are About One Hundred Concrete Silos in Kentucky—Their Use More Satisfactory and Economical To The Farmer

The Kentucky Experiment Station is in the midst of a vigorous silo campaign and will furnish during the coming months free supervision of the building of all kinds of silos. A number of experts under the general direction of the writer are employed to supervise the construction of these silos. In most cases concrete structures are being erected, although supervision of wooden silos will be furnished when requested.

There are at present about one hundred concrete silos in Kentucky and these are giving excellent satisfaction. Seventy-five new silos will be erected in one county alone and there are a number of other counties where the number will mount up into the scores.

Advantages of the Concrete Silo. They may be constructed by the farmer with his regular help, using stone and gravel obtainable on his own farm.

The concrete silo is the strongest and most durable, and is not subject to rotting.

Concrete silos do not blow down. They do not need painting or repairs.

They are fire-proof, rust-proof, and vermin-proof.

They are not unduly expensive. The average cost of the concrete silo is no greater than the manufactured wooden silo set up.

Stones for silo making should be hauled and broken at odd times when other farm work is not pressing. On many Kentucky farms they may be picked up off of the surface of the ground. Stone, sand, cement, reinforcing material, forms, scaffolding material and all other things needed in construction, should be on hand and in readiness before the actual work of building the silo is begun.

An average of a large number of silos constructed in Kentucky shows that the cost ranges in the neighborhood of $2.75 per ton capacity. Some have even built at a much smaller cost.

Cost of Concrete Silos: The following is an itemized statement of the cost incurred by Mr. T. D. Urmoston, Cynthiana, Ky., in building a concrete silo 12 by 30 feet.

25 barrels Portland cement and the necessary sand and screenings	$ 77.75
Woven wire fence for reinforcement	17.00
Rent on form furnished by Kentucky Experiment Station	10.00
Labor	19.00

Making a total of $123.75. The yellow pine stave silo of the manufactured type of the same size is quoted at $180.00 for material, this figure not including cost of erection, foundation or roof. The low cost in the above instance is due to the fact that Mr. Urmoston secured the stone from his own farm, using his own labor and superintending and doing a large part of the work himself.

This silo is giving perfect satisfaction. A concrete silo 12 by 22 feet was erected under the supervision of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station on the farm of Mr. B. S. O'Daniel, Lebanon, Ky., at a total cost of $150.00. Another silo 14 by 38 cost $250.00. One 16 by 30 cost $300.00 including foundation, roof and all materials and labor.

Most of the concrete silos erected in this state have cost little more than the manufactured stave silo, and many have been built for considerably less.

How the Concrete Silo is Made: The silo consists of a circular wall 6 inches thick, this being reinforced or strengthened by placing in it during the process of construction, good strong woven wire fencing material. In making the wall two circular forms are used, an inner and an outer form, each consisting of 20 to 24 gauge sheet steel made in circular shape and strengthened and held in shape by a wooden frame work. Each form is made in four sections. In the 6-inch space which is left between the two forms the reinforcing and concrete are placed, the concrete mixture consisting of crushed stone, sand and cement.

The forms are about three feet high. During the process of construction one fill is made each day. The following day the forms are raised and again filled and this is continued until the desired height is reached.

How Forms May Be Obtained: A number of commercial concerns have begun the construction of forms for sale. The following prices were charged by one firm during the year 1913 and include the forms complete ready for use in building silos:

A set of forms for a 12 ft. silo	$47.25
A set of forms for a 14 ft. silo	54.25
A set of forms for a 16 ft. silo	59.25
A set of forms for a 18 ft. silo	62.25

The Department of Dairying of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has had constructed a number of forms for the purpose of renting for a nominal sum ($10.00 plus the transportation) and these may be secured by a prospective silo builder, if application is made some time in advance.

For those who do not wish to rent in this way, the department will furnish free of cost drawings and detailed descriptions for building forms. Any good carpenter with the aid of a blacksmith, may, by following the directions and drawings, construct these forms. By using the drawings and descriptions furnished by the Experiment Station, forms may be built in many instances for considerably less than the prices quoted above.

One set of silo forms can easily be used for the construction of six or eight silos. Several farmers may club together and buy a set of forms, thus reducing the cost to each. When this cannot be done one farmer may buy a set of forms and after using them rent them to his neighbors so that he may get back the entire amount of money expended for them. This can nearly always be done for the reason that when one concrete silo is built in a community other farmers seeing the advantages of it will be sure to want to build. W. D. Nichols, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

FAULTY METHOD OF PACKING EGGS

Kentucky's loss alone amounts to $4,325,000 eggs, according to preliminary report of study of shipments. Nearly seven per cent. of all eggs packed in crates and shipped arrive in bad order, according to figures just obtained by the Food Research Laboratory of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This means that nearly 30 eggs out of every 30 dozen packed and shipped arrive at the market either as cracks, dents, leakers or mashers. These figures were obtained as a result of the individual examination of 6,000 dozen eggs before and after shipment, and a further general study of the condition of 71 carloads, or over 500,000 dozen eggs shipped from 36 packing houses in the corn-belt to 10 different markets on the eastern coast. The results of this study have been formulated in a preliminary report which is submitted to the joint committee representing the egg shippers, the railroads and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Carless Packing Percentage For Over 5-13 Per Cent of Breakage.

To determine whether the egg breakage was due principally to the jarring of the eggs received in railroad cars, or to carelessness on the part of the packers, the Department's investigators personally unpacked at the packing house over 200 cases of eggs, containing 6,000 dozen. Every egg was examined and the location in the cardboard partitions of each broken egg on each layer of eggs was charted to determine whether breakage was unusually heavy in any particular point of the box. It was found, however, that the breakage in the packing houses was distributed throughout the case.

As a result of this examination of packed cases egg by egg, it was found that 19.22 eggs per case on an average, or 5.94 per cent, had cracked shells before they were put on the railroad cars. These eggs were then repacked and shipped to distant points, and again examined egg by egg on their arrival. It was found that during the transfer to the car, stowing, hauling, railroad trip and unloading, there was an additional breakage of 5.76 eggs per case on an average, which made a total of 24.96 eggs in bad order out of every thirty dozen that arrived. In other words 6.94 per cent of all eggs shipped in car lots are received with damaged shells.

These figures, however, do not at all represent the actual total damage from breakage. Practically every leaker and every mashed egg in a case lowers the value of several eggs around or below it, because each leaking egg leaks a number of other eggs and reduces their market value. Further, it does not include any deterioration or spoilage of whole eggs on account of heat or faulty refrigeration.

How to Reduce the Losses.

The following preliminary suggestions for the consideration of the egg shipping industry is offered:

(1) The Package. Use only sound, new cases and new lids. Never re-use fillers and flats. These are the cardboard partitions in the cases. It has been found that the have once been used are very apt to have the "ears" as the little projections that keep the eggs from the sides of the case are called, bent or weakened so that the egg may hit the box when the box is jarred or moved.

(2) Packing the Eggs. Use more care in handling eggs to prevent cracked shells; do not permit eggs already cracked to enter the case, an inspection system is necessary in your handling. In the final analysis it is the farmer who is most commonly inefficient—not the labor.

(3) Stowing. Handle the cases more carefully. Make a tight load. An egg that has once gotten wet will spoil very rapidly, because water will wash off the substance that tends to prevent bacteria or air entering the egg.

Better results are secured from soaking grain than soaked meat.

HOW TO BUILD A SILO

Care Should Be Exercised That Diameter Is Correct.

Advice Given by Experts of Department of Agriculture—Truck Silos of Atlantic Coast Region—Potato Culture Requirements.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In determining the size of a silo, the first thing to be considered is the diameter, and this depends upon the number of cattle to be fed. When the diameter of a silo is too great the silage is not fed off rapidly enough to prevent some of it from spoiling. This is particularly true when silage is fed in summer. Care should therefore be taken that the diameter of the silo is not too great for the number of cows to be fed from it.

The foregoing advice is given by experts of the United States department of agriculture, on how to build a silo. From 30 to 40 pounds of silage per cow per day should be provided for average dairy cows during the time when no other green feed is available. After the silage in the silo has been determined the next consideration is the number of tons of silage that will be needed, and this depends on the length of the silage feeding season. The silo should be located if possible so as to open into the feed room.

To lay out the foundation for the silo, drive a stake in the ground in the center of the proposed silo. Saw off this stake at the height desired for the foundation wall, which should be at least one foot above the ground on the high side if the ground is sloping. One end of a straight 2x4 scantling, a little longer than is necessary to reach from the center of the silo to the outside of the foundation wall should be nailed on top of the stake with a 40-penny spike. The thickness of the wall should vary from 10 to 18 inches, depending upon the size of the silo, the material of the foundation, and the ground on which it is located. The inside of the foundation should be at least two inches nearer to the center of the silo than the inside of the staves. The material of the foundation should be of stone, brick or concrete.

If the earth in the bottom of the silo is firm and comparatively dry, no provision need be made for drainage, and a concrete floor is unnecessary. Still, such a floor may be put around the silo to clean and make it impossible for rats to burrow underneath the foundation wall and gain access to the silage.

The hoops should be made of three-fourths, five-eighths and one-half inch rods, in sections from 10 to 14 feet in length. The ends of these rods should be threaded for six inches so that they may be joined together by means of lugs. Two hoops should be placed below the first door, two between doors all the way up, and two above the top door. If the space is more than two feet; if less than two feet, one will be sufficient. Three or four hoops should at first be put on at the bottom and tightened up. Planks can then be thrown across the top of the silo to serve as a scaffold, so that the top hoop may be put around the silo loosely, within reach of the ground, after which they are pushed up to the proper position with slats, and made fast by stapling them to the silo from a ladder.

It is sometimes very difficult to get lugs for the hoops. In such cases four by six inch timbers may be put in instead of ordinary staves at the three or four points where the hoops will join. These timbers should be placed with the four-inch face flush with the staves on the inside and they will extend four inches beyond the wall on the outside. Through the outside projections holes should be bored to receive the hoops and the ends may be fastened with nuts. Large iron washers should be used under the nuts.

Truck Silos of Atlantic Coast Region.

The great winter garden which supplies the cities of the northeastern states with the fresh vegetables demanded for consumption during the latter months of winter and those of early spring stretches in a narrow belt along the Atlantic coast from the vicinity of Savannah, Ga., to the southern portion of New Jersey, according to the department of agriculture.

This particular belt of territory, favorably situated with respect to intensive vegetable production, is the result of the concurrent existence of a number of favoring factors. In the first place, the climatic conditions within this belt render its successive portions from south to north earlier in the date of maturity for the different crops than any other regions in the eastern states which are located in the same latitudes. This arises from the fact that the Atlantic coast region lies at low altitudes. From Savannah, Ga., to Camden, N. J., along the Atlantic coast, there are no high lands. The coastal land areas rise from sea level with gentle slopes, and the vast coastal plain presents a level, nearly level, and unobstructed surface throughout what is known as the "woods" section.

The streams of the region are chiefly of narrow, tortuous form, embayments, in whose channels the tide rises to points removed 40 to 75 miles from the actual coast. These lower lands contain no high mountains along one or both banks of the stream.

While it is impossible to give an accurate statement of the acreage suitable for the production of winter and spring vegetables in the Atlantic coast region, it may be stated that the areas now utilized for such purposes constitute only a fraction of one per cent. of the total land areas which may ultimately be made available.

The first requirement for the development of these lands will be a market demand which shall justify the increased production, through paying a price for the production commensurate with the expenditures and risks undertaken by the producer. This may be attained through the natural increase in the consuming population and, to a more marked degree, through the extension of the markets to hundreds of thousands of city dwellers who never taste the fresh vegetable products at the period of the year when these crops are placed upon the market. Extensive community and private drainage works must be undertaken before some of the best soils for trucking are rendered available in the coastal regions.

Relative Importance of the Potato in German and American Agriculture.

Potatoes in Germany take a more important place than they do in this country. Though the country is much smaller than the United States, the area planted is 3,165,000 acres, as compared with 8,568,000 acres in here. The average total yield is 1,653,403,000 bushels, or 20.5 bushels per acre, as compared with an average annual American yield of 343,887,000 bushels. If the states of Maine, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota alone were to plant 12.5 per cent. of their arable land in potatoes, as Germany does, and secure an equivalent yield, the produce would amount to 1,553,944,000 bushels, four and one-half times our present production from the entire country.

At the present rate of consumption of potatoes in the United States, which is considerably less than three bushels per capita, the needs of the entire country could be supplied from any one of the states of New York, Michigan, Wisconsin or Minnesota and leave a surplus unused, whereas all the states combined have several times failed to produce enough potatoes to supply the domestic consumption, and in such years large quantities of the staple have been imported from foreign countries.

Such an immense production of potatoes as is found in Germany is manifestly not required to feed the people. To a matter of fact, only 28 per cent. of the crop is used for human consumption, while 40 per cent. is fed direct to farm animals and 12 per cent. is set aside for seed purposes. The Germans plant over twice as many seed potatoes per acre as is the custom here, or more than 24 bushels. An additional portion of the crop is in the form of numbers, 100,000,000 bushels, a little less than six per cent. of the total crop, is made into alcohol and used for industrial purposes, and to replace petroleum products. Over 50,000,000 bushels, or about four per cent. of the crop, is made into starch, and related products. This accounts for about all except ten per cent. of the German crop, which it is estimated is lost through decay.

WINTERING THE LIVE STOCK

Cattle Owners Have Faith That Prices Are to Rule High for Some Time—Numbers Decreasing.

One of our neighbors put up a silo this fall and filled it with what the dry weather left of his corn. He has bargained to feed a bunch of 100 head of cattle for six months, says a writer in the Farmers' Mail and Breeder. For this he receives $1,500, $2.50 a head a month. This seems a good price compared with what we used to get in former years. We wintered cattle, years ago, for $5 a head for the winter, regardless of whether it was a long or short winter. We have heard of other cattle being taken at $2.35 a head a month for the winter and as high as $2.75 being paid for some.

Time will tell whether cattle will pay out when wintered at such prices. It will mean the cattle will have to sell for $15 more a head next spring if they are to cover the cost of wintering alone. In addition there is the danger of loss and the interest on the value of the cattle which will be no small amount. But cattle owners have faith that prices are to rule very high for some time to come and probably they are right. Cattle are decreasing in number every year. Missouri alone has a deficit 1,000,000 head less than 20 years ago and in that time its population has increased 700,000.

CORN FODDER IS VALUABLE

Greater Feeding Value Is Obtained Where Fed Early Than When Allowed to Stand in Shock.

(By E. J. MILLER.) This is the best time to use corn fodder is to cut and feed it as it ripens, saving the hay and other feeds in storage for later use. Corn fodder fed early has greater feeding value than that which is allowed to stand in the shock for several weeks or months, and more of it will be eaten by the animals. When you go to the field for a load of corn fodder, haul out a load of green corn and scatter it on the ground when you get home. It is economy of time and money to do this. You are not only saving the corn, but you are also saving the hay. Late out fodder is always best.

FRESH VEGETABLES ALL THE YEAR ROUND

The season makes no difference, nowadays, in our big cities, where the markets offer all the fresh, green vegetables of midsummer all the year round.

The entire cost of a substantial hotbed need not be over $12 to $15, writes C. E. Durst of the Illinois university, and the materials can be used year after year. By its use cabbages, tomatoes, lettuce, cauliflower and other vegetables are secured from two weeks to a month earlier than waiting for the sun to sprout garden seed. Select a site on the side of a hill, with a southern exposure, where good drainage can be secured. If a hillside is not available, build the hotbed in the shelter of a board fence to protect it from north and west winds. Dig a pit 6x15 feet and two feet deep, and fit over it a frame made of boards, using two-inch stuff for the longer sides. Make one side of the frame six inches higher than the other and slant it toward the south. Fill the pit with well-tramped stable manure, which heats very rapidly.

After the violent action has subsided, cover the manure with six inches of rich garden soil, which should be well raked before seeds are planted. Bank manure around the frame, which can be covered by five 3x6-foot glass sashes. Cover the hotbed with boards or blankets on cold nights. Give the plants plenty of fresh air on warm days by lifting the sashes. Sprinkle the bed in the morning when it needs watering.

STORAGE OF SWEET POTATOES

Uncertainty of Being Able to Keep Tubers Through Winter Reduces Area Devoted to Crop.

If sweet potatoes are kept until February and March they will bring a much better price than in November or December. The uncertainty of being able to keep the sweet potatoes during the winter reduces the area planted. But sweet potatoes can be preserved quite satisfactorily if close attention is given to the subject. Those who are provided with suitable quarters for storage purposes and give attention to the details of digging and drying the tubers are well paid for their extra work.

The sweet potato has a thin skin which is easily bruised. Bruised potatoes are very susceptible to decay. When the potatoes cannot be subjected to artificial heat to dry they should be thoroughly dried in the sun. The temperature at which they seem to keep best is between 50 and 65 degrees F.

In some methods of storage is to place the sweet potatoes in a cone-shaped pile containing from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds. The pile is then covered with a layer of dry, fine hay or straw, followed by a layer of corn stalks, and on top of all this two or three inches of sand or dirt is placed. Other make piles like an oblong pyramid three feet high and four by ten feet at the base. This is covered over by a frame properly built for the purpose, two or three inches of earth being placed over the frame. Stairing the sweet potatoes in sand has also given satisfactory results.

GOOD SEED INCREASES YIELD

Safe and Sensible Way Is to Clean Seed Thoroughly by Running Through Fanning Mill.

(By E. J. MILLER.) Many farmers still believe that wheat, under certain conditions, will turn to chaff. Be on the safe and sensible side, and clean your wheat seed well by running it through a good fanning mill or other seed-cleaning machine. If you clean all of the chaff and other weed seed out of it, and there is no chaff in your fields, take my word for it, your next year's wheat crop will be clean wheat.

If your own wheat seed is poor, by all means purchase good seed, not only for a good crop next year, but for the seed and the crops for the following years. One of the best investments that any farmer can make is in good seeds of all kinds. There is no mistake about this.

Ventilate Cold Frames. If the weather continues warm the cold frames and pits filled with celery will need thorough ventilation. The crop should be disposed of as rapidly as possible, especially if the variety is Golden-Self-blanching.

Birds Eat Worms. One interesting bird like the chickadee has been known to eat 5,000 canker worms in a single day. These are the birds to make welcome to the orchard.

IT PAYS TO KEEP ACCOUNTS

Many Farmers Lose Money Because of Neglect to Make Record of Money Spent During the Year.

Ask the average farmer what paid him best last year. Was it corn, oats, hay, hogs, horses, or cattle? The chances are 100 to 1 he cannot tell you exactly. Did he make money last year, or did he lose money?

Most men hate to keep farm accounts. They will not take two or three minutes every day to write down in a book as to how time and money have been spent on the farm.

City business men hire bookkeepers to keep accounts. They do this because they want to know at least once every year as to whether or not they are getting ahead or falling behind. They want to know what parts of the business are making money for them, and what parts are losing money.

Thousands of farmers keep no accounts, and yet get along very well. Some of them have such good brains that they can keep things fairly straight in their heads. But all of these lose money once in a while that could have been saved if they had only kept accounts.

GOOD TEAMS ARE ESSENTIAL

Without Efficient Animals It Is Difficult to Prepare Land Well and Cultivate It Thoroughly.

Good teams are essential in good farming. Without efficient animals it is difficult to prepare the land well and cultivate it economically. Light teams and not enough animals to draw efficient implements have caused much poverty among the farmers, and this condition should be changed.

One of the cheapest ways of providing cheap teams is to keep two or three good mares and raise colts—horses and mules—to supply the farm with suitable teams. With a few acres of pasture and plenty of feed it should not cost much to raise two or three colts every year. The mares will almost pay for their own feed, and that of the colts with their work. Brood mares, when properly handled, lose little work on account of the colts. Care must be taken, however, not to let the mares get too warm or require them to draw too heavy loads; they should not exert themselves too severely or become too excited when late in the period of gestation. The colts will thrive with little feed, but they should have the right kind, with shelter in severe weather, and shade in hot weather.

Quality of Milk. The quality of milk—that is, the amount of milk and fat that it contains—is controlled more by the constitutional characteristics of the cow than by the feed.

Separate the Fowls. Be sure to keep the turkeys, ducks, geese and chickens in separate inclosures. The turkeys are continually fighting the chickens and often kill them.

The Worlds Slaughterhouse.

Several of the foreign nations have developed into slaughterhouses and we believe that a few years war will have lessened their greed caused the citizens of the nations now at war to become more civilized.

The present conflicts abroad prove that the people of the nations engaged have not reached a high type of civilization. The questions can all be settled by leaving the points in question to outside nations. As it is the greatest war in the history of nations is now in progress, the effect of this war will be felt for an hundred years by all nations and the scars will never heal. Millions of homes will be ruined and the inhabitants killed and scattered and the country left a trodden blood stained waste.

After all when the white flag shall have been run up and the triumph of peace sounded, the armies disbanded will march back to rebuild a country that will require years of unremitting toil and billions of gold. So much for a country that will turn their country in a slaughter house--Ex.

Fighting Cabbage Worms.

White butterflies will soon be laying eggs on cabbages. A few days later the little green worms will appear, and soon the leaves will be dotted with holes and disfigured with the worm droppings. The only way to prevent the trouble is to poison the worms.

A good spray mixture is made by dissolving one-half pound of laundry soap and a pound of arsenate of lead in 20 gallons of water. Put this on so that the leaves are completely covered. A mouthful of arsenate of lead will kill any cabbage worm that ever lived. The soap is added to the mixture so that it will spread over the leaves more evenly. Colman's Rural World.

GOOD ROADS

COUNTRY SCHOOL IS FACTOR

Good Roads Mean Higher Moral and Educational Standard—Should Be Regarded as Investment.

(By HOWARD H. GROSS.)
There is another factor that has an important bearing upon the highways, and that is the country school. Good roads mean better schools and a higher moral and educational standard; they bring the best instead of the worst out of people. Bad roads make one feel as though he did not care how he dressed or how he appeared. Wherever good roads are built the people begin to buy paint; the house and the barns are treated; the picket fence displaces the tumble-down one in front; rose bushes are planted and the lawn has attention; all these things come along again. Hence good road building should not be regarded as an expense but as an investment. They will pay a larger and surer return than money invested in almost any other direction. A high authority has said that with good roads the farmer can take advantage of the market; with bad roads the market nearly always takes advantage of the farmer. How many times the situation arises when prices are good and the farmer would like to get his corn or oats off or his hogs that the roads are nearly impassable? If he attempts to reach market he does so seriously handicapped. There is little doubt that with good roads and watching the market, the farmer can get a better price for what he has to sell.

Here is a significant fact that we should not forget: That no state or community ever began the building of good roads—we mean roads good 365 days in the year—and had the experience of using and paying for them, that they did not keep on building more and more good roads every year. The writer is not a prophet, but he makes this prediction: That before the gray hairs appear on the temples of the children who open their eyes first to the light of 1912, we will have a network of good roads that shall practically cover the whole country from Plymouth Rock to Puget sound, and along with that we will have a scientific agriculture that will double the farmer's profit, by showing how to produce his grain at practically one-half the present cost, and that this country will be the happiest, most progressive and enlightened of all the world.

RESULTS WILL BE INDIRECT

Missouri Roads Received but Temporary Improvements—Romans Built Slowly and Laboriously.

The chief results of the holiday of roadmaking recently promoted by the governor of Missouri are likely to be indirect. After having toiled and sweated in the sun those who took part will doubtless have a stronger interest in supporting good roads legislation, whether or not they are as keen to take part in the actual labor another year. But, while the Missouri roads may have received large temporary repairs and improvements, such a holiday, no matter how many participate in it, can hardly accomplish much in the way of permanent road making, says the Springfield Republican. And it is permanent road making of which the country stands in need. Without deprecating the Missouri performance it may be recalled that the Romans, the greatest road makers the world has known, did not do their work in spasmodic festivals; the roads that they built to last for centuries were built slowly and laboriously.

FEDERAL MONEY FOR ROADS

Appropriation of $500,000, to Be Divided Among Thirty-Eight States Is Small Beginning.

The information conveyed through the American's Washington reports concerning the appropriation of $10,000 to this state from the federal appropriation of $500,000 to assist in building post roads in the various states is important when the full significance is considered. The appropriation of $500,000, to be divided among forty-eight states, is a very small beginning in the way of building government post roads, but it is a beginning, says the Baltimore American. It is of great significance that the government has made a start in the direction of federal aid in road building. The $10,000 apportioned to Maryland goes to pay for one-third the cost of a short section of road in Montgomery county.

Maintaining Good Roads.

The making of good roads is one of the most important duties of the American people and the prompt repair and constant maintenance is essential. There is probably no subject in which the progressive farmer is more deeply interested than that of having roads connecting him with his markets over which he may be able to haul the greater portion of his goods. Like all other good things, roads are too expensive to build and of too much value to be neglected.

Reduce Living Cost.
Good roads help to reduce the cost of living.

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

PLANNING FOR BETTER ROADS

Method of Construction Must Be Put in Operation Which Will Produce More Durable Highways.

"Waterbound macadam roads, which for practically a century have been adequate for the traffic, have now, under the new conditions, become obsolete, and their further construction means a serious waste of public funds," is the opinion of former President Lewis R. Spence of the American Automobile association. "Macadam may answer for side roads and cross roads where there is little travel to wear the surface into dust, and few fast moving vehicles to throw the dust into the air to be blown away. But for main roads, anywhere and everywhere, a method of construction must be put in operation which will produce durable roads. "Wherever it can be used concrete makes a most excellent road, or a road base for some other kind of surface. The state of California has adopted concrete construction for practically its entire system of state highways, after a most thorough investigation. Wayne county, Michigan, has been building concrete roads for the past five years, and they have given most excellent satisfaction. "Before the Wayne county authorities had learned by experience how to build concrete roads with expansion joints to prevent the concrete from cracking in cold weather and buckling in the hot sun, several miles of roads were built which broke into frequent cracks. To repair these cracked sections of road they poured hot bituminous material into the cracks and covered them with sand. This has brought the level of the concrete, and the whole forms a most delightfully smooth road to travel over, and one which looks as if it would stand for a generation, at least.

"In some sections of the country the concrete is being used as a base, and two or three inches of broken stone mixed with bituminous materials, put on for a surface. If properly built this kind of road should be very durable, and should justify the additional expense. The concrete will furnish the strength required to hold up the loads which are constantly growing heavier, while the bituminous material will prevent the creation of dust, making the road pleasant to travel over.

"The only proper way to figure on the cost of a road is to consider both the original cost and the expense of maintenance for a period of ten or fifteen years. Under present conditions of travel a macadam road would have to be resurfaced every two or three years, and would be in bad condition two-thirds of the time. The aggregate cost would be far greater than that of a concrete road with a bituminous surface and the road would present a good road all the time."

Good Road Crown Maintained by Dragging in Alexandria County, Virginia.

The aggregate cost would be far greater than that of a concrete road with a bituminous surface and the road would present a good road all the time."

A Difference in Roads.

Two farmers living in separate counties, but at an equal distance from the cotton market, learned by telephone that cotton had advanced in price $1 per bale. The farmer living on a bad road, according to Arkansas Homestead, responded by hauling one bale of cotton, which was all he could get over the unimproved road, while the other farmer was able to haul four bales, owing to the favorable conditions. The rise in price gained a profit of $4 to one man and $1 to his neighbor.

Auto Owners Contribute.

The automobile owners of Massachusetts have contributed some $200,000 for the betterment of the highways of the state; the state treasury will contribute $700,000 more and the local appropriations for the same purpose will bring the total up to $2,500,000.

Increase Values.

Farm productions are increased in value by getting them where needed at the proper time. Good roads increase values.

Southern States Affame.

The southern states are aflame with better roads enthusiasm.

Bad Roads Expensive.
Bad roads are always the most expensive kind.

FARM POULTRY

STAPLE FOOD FOR POULTRY

Grain Will Be Used as Long as Fowls Are Kept on Farms—Hens Must Have Certain Varieties.

Grain is the staple food for poultry, will be used for that purpose as long as fowls are kept on farms; but hens cannot give good results on grain alone. It is beneficial to them, and will be at all times relished, but the demands of the hen are such as to call for a variety. In the shells of eggs, as well as their composition, are several forms of mineral matter and nitrogen, which can only be partially obtained from grain.

Even though grains carry in composition for a long time, hens will begin to refuse it, as they may be over-supplied from other sources. For this reason they will accept a change of food which is of itself evidence that the best results for his hens can only be obtained from a variety of food. Corn and wheat may be used as food with advantage, but must be given as a portion of the ration only, and not made exclusive articles of diet.

In grain the principle articles or elements required to keep a hen in good laying condition are found, and it is for this reason that your hens may continue to lay for some time if only given grain, provided they find the other elements necessary while running around the farm. But the trouble with this manner of feeding is that it is too uncertain.

You are taking the chance of the hen finding the other elements required. No hen has ever laid an egg unless she has taken into her system elements from the vegetable, animal and mineral kingdoms. Grain can represent the vegetable kingdom, bugs or insects, the animal, and grit or oyster shell, the mineral. It is absolutely necessary that every hen partake of these elements before she can produce a single egg.

HOPPER FOR LITTLE CHICKS

Device Illustrated May Be Enlarged and Used for Older Stock—Construction Is Simple.

The hopper illustrated below will hold one bushel of feed, and is intended for growing chicks, though by enlarging the size it may be used for older stock.

Dry Mash Hopper.

er stock. It is well, however, to keep the dimensions of the feed opening the same, this opening being specially designed to prevent waste. The ends are made of one-half inch material, and the rest of the hopper of half-inch stuff. Any lumber that is at hand may be used, and the construction is so simple that anyone able to use a hammer and saw can knock one together in a very short time.

FATTEN CHICKENS FOR TABLE

Fowls Should Be Placed in Portable Pen Without Crowding—Feed Sparingly for Three Days.

Prepare a portable pen by nailing strips of lumber together to form a frame, and then tacking on piece horizontally, so as to make an enclosure, leaving sufficient opening to give light and ventilation. The pen, writes a Virginia man in the Epitome, should be floored, and sufficient outlet left for the dropping of droppings. A roof should be made, and without leaks. The whole should be made large enough for simple accommodations, depending upon the number of birds to be kept in. Only fowls that are peaceable should be kept together. Do not overfeed at first, after two or three days give all that they will eat up clean, and be sure to give water after they have finished eating. Give buttermilk occasionally, as most fowls like it. Sprinkle sand, gravel or charcoal in the pen occasionally. In from one to two weeks fowls should be in good condition for eating. If there is nothing wrong with them.

What Is Commerce.

Men rarely stop to analyze commerce, or to realize the motives which keep this vast machinery of modern life in reasonably efficient order. They fail to realize the commerce rises above all disaster, checks all destruction, and goes on its own appointed way, regardless of war, pestilence and famine.

Commerce is an exchange of the products produced by one man or one organization of men, for the products of other men, in other fields, under other suns. This exchange must be "mutually profitable," a strange conception to those who look upon commerce, and who frequently so practice it—as "predatory warfare."

Men are not forever content to produce wheat, if for their surplus wheat they may not get in exchange food and clothing in quantities sufficient to compensate them for their labor as farmers. When the exchange value of a bushel of wheat is less than the cost in labor, in self-denial and in interest of producing that bushel of wheat, that economy which will form of production will be abandoned. Statesmen and economists seem to be haunted by the idea that the control of this commerce, determine into which channel it shall flow, protect one branch against the other, and arrange everything "nicely" for the benefit of others who have little to do with it.

They can arrange nothing. They can destroy and create. All of their devices enhance the cost of the exchange, increase transportation charges, multiply exactions and interrupt credit. Commerce should be unfettered; unfettered. It should be allowed free course, that it may run and redeem the life of the world.

It is not necessary to forbid "unfair competition." In commerce unfair competition is but a temporary difficulty, misleading those whom competition would destroy.

Manifestly it is not necessary to prohibit "cut-throat competition." Competition in commerce is an exchange of produce. If one man engages in it and cuts the throat of another, he is disposing of his own goods below their value, he is out of the game. He has nothing to sell; that is nothing but a difficulty, so that chapter is closed.

The people of America, have, in 1914, produced great crops. The people of Europe want this wheat and corn and cotton, but temporarily the lines of communication are cut, traffic is suspended, and the world is in a turmoil.

The world of commerce should be patient. The great forces underlying this agent of civilization will rectify difficulties, repair the broken lines of communication, inflict proper penalties upon all offenders and resume its beneficial labors if it last alone.

Fall Plowing.

Fall plowing is being advocated more generally now than ever before and too many people have the erroneous impression that it is good on all kinds of soils and for any kind of land. But this is not so, for usually the soil is so hard that it is not only difficult to plow, but it is a good accomplishment by it.

Hillides where the soil is light and inclined to wash should never be plowed in the fall, as such lands are subject to washing during the winter rains and thaws. This not only results in the erosion of the surface soil and the loss of plant foods in this manner, but also in the loss due to leaching. Sandy soils are especially subject to losses from this source and for this reason such soils should not be fall plowed or if the ground is broken it should be protected from losses by a cover crop of some sort.

Fall plowing has just the opposite effect upon sandy soils that it has upon clay and loam soils. Instead of lightening the soil in this instance fall plowing leaves it exposed so that it is much heavier and in a poorer physical condition than if left unplowed.

On almost any land fall plowing is beneficial in that it aerates the soil to a certain extent and also aids in the destruction of many of our common insect-pests which winter in the ground, such as worms, white grubs, wire worms, and many other species winter in this manner and these may be largely eradicated by early fall plowing. Grass lands are especially benefited in this respect and where corn is to follow grass it is nearly always advisable to plow early in the fall to eradicate these pests.

Late fall plowing is recommended for the removal of some of the other common and equally destructive insects Grasshoppers the garden web worm, the wheat midge, and army worms all winter underground and a late plowing will at least go a long way toward destroying them. The Hessian fly may also be destroyed in much the same manner only a trap crop is necessary to catch him. By planting a small patch of wheat little earlier than the regular crop is put in the fly is induced to lay its eggs in this early planted plot. This is then plowed under and a great portion of the insects thus destroyed.

Even though this be true, however, that fall plowing does so much in eradicating insects there is danger on sandy lands and on hillides that the damage done to the soil may be much greater than the good accomplished. For this reason it is well to discourage fall plowing in localities where the soil or the land is of such a nature that the cover crop should be planted to conserve plant foods and the land then plowed as early in the spring as is feasible. —Peapack County is Indiana Farmer.

The Strength of "Thornhill" Skeins and Axles Explained

Note at the bottom of this advertisement, the difference between the types of skeins. One, the old way, gives a natural breaking point, where iron stops and wood begins. The other, the "Thornhill" way, shows the long sleeve malleable skin non-breakable. The long sleeve of malleable iron extends underneath the axle strengthening it and distributing the strain. There is no weak part. This banishes, forever, the old time weakness of wagons.

FROM KITCHENS OF GERMANY

Idea Here That May Be Something New to the Housewives of America.

Sagawane—Scald one cup milk, put into mixing bowl with one-eighth pound or four-ounce cup of butter, one-half cup sugar. Stir until sugar is dissolved. When milk has cooled add one large egg (beaten). Now sift two and one-half level cups of flour, one teaspoon of salt three times, dis-solve one-half yeast cake in one ta-blespoon of cold water; add yeast to mixture, then gradually mix in sifted flour and stir well. Put into a warm place to raise over night, well cov-ered. Beat down the first thing in the morning, let raise, beat down again, then put in baking pan, let raise again. Bake with indicator 350 degrees. This is a fine foundation for any raised cake. You can make ap-ple cake, raisin cake, cinnamon cake, doughnuts (by adding a little more flour).

Streusel Cake.—Put mixture in shal-low pan, just spread it on bottom of pan same as you would apple cake and always butter the top of cake just before you put in oven. Whatever you put on top of cake put it on just before putting in oven.

Streusel mixture for putting on top of cake:

This should be made after you put the cake in the oven for the last raising, and when made put it in a cool place until ready to use.

Streusel Mixture.—One-eighth of a pound of granulated sugar, one-eighth of a pound of flour, one-eighth of a pound of butter, one teaspoon cin-namon, one cup of almonds cut up small. Stir sugar, flour and cinnamon together; add butter cut into dry in-gredients with a knife so it will be crumbly, then add nuts. Mix up well. (The butter should be left in the kitchen so it is not hard when ready to use.) When the cake is well risen spread thickly on cake and bake at once. This is very fine if made right. Please try this and let me know what you think of it. Measure with meas-uring cup and spoons. I am very ex-act in measuring. You can make jelly doughnuts by cutting two forms as thin as cookies, wetting the edge of one, putting a little jelly in center and putting the other on top, pressing edges down firmly.

The Cakekeeper

To test a cake to see if it is thor-oughly baked, use a skewer.

French chalk will clean a slightly soiled white chip hat.

A teaspoonful of extract will flavor a quart of any mixture.

Potatoes should boil slowly to pre-vent the skins from curling off.

To kill burdock, cut off close to the ground. And pour a little gasoline on the roots.

If shoe polish has become dry from standing too long, moisten it with a little turpentine.

Blotting paper saturated with tur-pentine may be placed in drawers to keep away moths.

Allow two teaspoonfuls of baking powder to each cup of flour when no eggs are used.

A table of weights and measures, typewritten and framed under glass, should hang in every kitchen.

Allow from four to six eggs to each quart of milk in making custard to be turned from the mold.

Lillian's Kidney Stew.

Carefully wash the kidneys and boil until tender, set aside to cool. When quite cool cut in tiny squares, remov-ing all fat; place in stew pan with one tablespoon butter, a little salt, dash of pepper and large cup of milk. Sim-mer gently for half an hour, then thicken with a spoonful of flour wet with a little cold milk. Serve on a platter with small squares of dry toast.

Stuffed Spanish Onions.

Peel the onions and scoop out cen-ters. Parboil five minutes and drain. Make a stuffing of the chopped onion taken from the centers, bread crumbs, salt and pepper and butter. Fill the onions, heating full and spit the tops with buttered crumbs. Cover and cook in a pan containing a little water, brown slightly before taking from the oven.

Baked Squash.

I always have baked squash and this is the way I do it. Just cut, or chop rather, squash in halves and put in oven. Do not peel it. When soft take a spoon and scoop the inside out, which you will find is very easy, then add piece of butter, pepper and salt, and you have it ready for table at short notice.—Boston Globe.

Lima Bean Salad.

Drain the juice from a can of lima beans, pour a cup of boiling water over them and drain again. Chill, dress with French dressing, place on tender leaves of lettuce and sprinkle lightly with grated horseradish.

Baked Apples.

Select apples of uniform size, wash, core, arrange in baking dish and fill the cavities with sugar, butter and spices, or with plain sugar, as pre-ferred. Bake and serve with whipped cream.

STRAINING-OF LIME-SULPHUR

Comparatively New Spray Material is Used Primarily for Control of the Brown Rot.

(By M. W. RICHARDS.)

Self-boiled lime-sulphur is a com-paratively new spray material as made at the present time and is used primarily for the control of the brown rot on the stone fruits. Its preparation is simple and should not be confused with that of boiled lime-sulphur. Self-boiled lime-sulphur is a simply mechanical mixture of free lime and sulphur, while boiled lime-sulphur is a mixture of complex and lime. Self-boiled lime-sulphur is made by slaking eight pounds of good, high-grade stone lime in a tub or box. Just as the lime starts to slake eight pounds of high-grade flowers of sul-phur are sifted in. The slaking lime causes the lime and sulphur to mix thoroughly. After the lime has slaked for ten to fifteen minutes, cold water should be added so as to stop the slaking. If this is not done, the lime may develop enough heat to cause the lime and sulphur to go into chemical combination which results in the formation of soluble sulphides that are highly injurious to peach leaves. The mixture of lime and sul-phur is now diluted to 50 gallons and strained into the spray barrel. Great care should be taken to throw through all of the sulphur, as this is the material which exerts the fungicidal property. In making self-boiled lime-sulphur for orchard use, it is ad-visable to work with large quantities of lime and sulphur such as 32 pounds of lime, 32 pounds of sulphur and 200 gallons of water. The heat developed from this large quantity of lime will better mix the lime and sulphur. This large mass of material will have to be thoroughly stirred, however, as the

A new type of strainer for lime-sulphur or other materials. The liquid moves upward toward the screen and out through the spigot. The coarse sediments collect in the bottom and any solution retained in it may be washed out and secured by means of the water required for the next boil-ing.

Lime will have a tendency to cake on the bottom of the tub.

Formula—Eight pounds sulphur, 8 pounds lime (unslaked stone lime). Do not use hydrated lime or that which is air slaked, 50 gallons wa-ter.

Geneva Formula—Eighty pounds high grade flowers of sulphur, 40 pounds stone lime (high calcium lime should be used; magnesium lime is unsuitable), fifty gallons of water.

HERBS NEEDED IN A GARDEN

Among Best for Use Are Mint, Sage, Lavender, Summer Savory, Thyme, Anise and Coriander.

(By LEROY CADY.)

No garden is complete without some of the herbs. Among the best for use are mint, sage, lavender, summer sa-vory, thyme, anise, coriander, dill and winter savory. Directions for sowing these are given as a rule, on the pack-age in which the seed comes. The seed may be sown in boxes or flats early in spring; and, as soon as the plants are large enough they may be transplanted to a permanent place in the garden. One-year-old plants of most of these herbs can be purchased from the nursery, which will save some time.

Long Life of Rhubarb Bed.

Rhubarb is the first vegetable we have from the ground in spring. It has a host of friends who fully ap-preciate its merits, while those who have land and do not grow it are losing one of nature's choicest and healthiest vegetables. It is the easiest plant to grow of all the perennials. A bed once established will last 15 years. A half dozen plants will supply a large family during the season, which with crimson winter rhubarb, is 52 weeks each year.

Sweet Corn and Drought.

No Vegetable withstands severe drought and heat so well as sweet corn. It succeeds well in either hills or drills; probably in the latter plan it does not blow over so much during wet and wintry weather. The soil should be very rich for the best results.

Lime and Fertilizer.

Vegetables of a leafy nature, such as cabbage, lettuce and spinach, are greatly benefited by the application of lime. In order to grow green crops of lettuce and spinach it is nec-essary to fertilize liberally.

Patience With the Runt.

A little patience may bring the runt out all right, but if you see it is hope-less, kill it at once, for few runs are ever worth anything even though they may grow large and strong, unless it be for meat.

Solving the Labor Problem.

Cheap pasture lands, good fences and a flock of sheep will solve the labor problem in a way that makes the dairy farmer stare and the profits are not very much less.

FARM STOCK

FEED FOR THE YOUNG LAMBS

Wheatbran is Excellent to Begin With, Says Flockmaster—Give Exer-cise and Pasture.

A good flockmaster holds that for young lambs wheatbran is most excel-lent to begin with, and after they be-come stronger the bran should be mixed with corn meal in equal quan-tities. He says that oat meal, or oats when they can eat it, should be added to balance the ration for cats is nearly a balanced food itself. After grow-ing a little they will shell their own corn, if given to them on the cob. The lambs that are to be raised on the farm should not be forced so fast. They need plenty of food, but the grain ration should be small and no corn should be used. They should be given plenty of exercise and an abundance of good pasture if possible. Corn tends to fatten and will pro-duce certain breeders of short sea-son. Wheatbran and oats are prob-ably the two safest materials of food that can be used. When the grass be-comes stronger and good in the spring, grain feeding is not needed for those lambs that are to remain on the farm, and only the corn will remain as the dry feed ration for the market lambs. The grass is better than any other nitrogenous food.

BUILDING A GOOD BEEF HERD

Mate Pure-Bred Sires With Common Cows if Better Are Not Avail-able—Save Calves.

(By J. L. TORNEY, Wisconsin Agricul-tural College.)

To build up a herd of good beef cattle secure pure-bred sires of type and breed desired. Mate these with common cows, if better cows of pure breeding are not available. Save the female calves which most closely con-form to the desired beef type. Con-tinue to mate these with good, pure-bred bulls and save the best female offspring as before. Although total purity of blood will never be obtained, in case only common or grade cows were available for foundation stock, the desired type can be obtained and a world of good along the line of im-provement can be accomplished.

In selecting bulls for breeding choose from the so-called beef breeds, viz: Shorthorn, Hereford, Atber-deen, Angus and Galloway. The West Highland breed is also classed with beef cattle. The Poled Durham may be classed with the Shorthorns, and the Poled Herefords with the Here-fords.

Hog on Alfalfa.

A Kansas farmer, who raises be-tween 500 and 600 hogs every year, says that his hogs have turned into pork by running on alfalfa pasture with an average of about one ear of corn per day until the last six weeks, when they are given all the corn they will eat. In addition to alfalfa, this farmer, who seems to know his busi-ness, says he does not pasture so closely, but that he is able to get two and sometimes three cuttings per an-num from them and these will average from three-quarters to a little over a pin per cutting. Some brains in this plan.

The Growing Stock.

Do not neglect the ration of the growing stock. Some people of the old-fashioned school never give it a thought. It may be well to note that their nature corresponds with their old-fashioned methods. The kind of ration to feed the growing stock is one composed of as many different kinds of grains as it is possible to get. Where the fowls are housed up, some kind of animal food must be had, either in the form of alfalfa scraps or milk. Perhaps milk is the best. Green food must also be supplied. Keep them growing at all costs.

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

SILOS SOLVES THE PROBLEM

Stock Feeders Can Depend on Silage to Carry Them Over Drouth.

The question of forage and pastures must be given more consideration in the future than there is at present. How and what to provide for feed during the few months in which the drouth prevails is the question. Last year the cattle were rushed to market, followed by hogs and sheep. Many of the farmers sold their live stock except a work team and a milk cow. What was the cause? Years ago we raised crops until our soils lost in fertility. Then we began raising live stock and slowly built up our soil but when a drouth came there was not sufficient feed and many of us were compelled to sell. There were no silos packed with forage with which to feed the stock and carry them over until fall pasture or put the stock in better condition for market which would have made a considerable difference in price.

Of course it is useless to talk silage when it was only knee high but drouths seldom appear two or three years in succession. Suppose one would have prepared in the fall of 1912 when there was plenty of corn to fill an extra sixty or eighty ton silo on most farms. This would have meant dollars to the farmer who was without extra feed or a bank account in 1913 when the drouth appeared. It would have saved that farmer's bank account who had to begin buying feed the early part of the summer. It would have saved many a farm from mortgage that had not been mortgaged for years.

With proper arrangement of silage and pastures we would be able to withstand drouths. We have had these dry years before; it appears that we are to have them as well. As the fruitful ones, therefore, we must prepare for them and prevent the losses. The scarcity of feed is nothing new, as the farmer must generally aim to keep enough feed to winter his stock and then turn them out on pasture. In most cases there is not enough pasture for the stock when the dry weather appears the pasture is short and soon burns out, leaving the farmer nothing to fall back upon. This is what makes the forage problem a large one. We must figure out some plan of meeting it. We might try to improve the condition of the pastures. This is another problem that we must look after, as most of the pastures are not what they ought to be.

For carrying a lot of hungry cattle over, or for putting them in better condition for market, in a year, of drouth the silo is the most dependable. Twice as many cattle can be cared for, when the corn is put in a silo, as when it is fed by old feeding methods. It does not take long to fill a silo. A few months old, many farmers prefer it from six months to a year old. With the aid of the right kind of pasture it will lessen the losses of an otherwise disastrous dry year.—C. B. in Indiana Farmer.

Let the Children Write.

Perhaps many a poor penman would have written a more creditable hand if in childhood he had had a desk of his own, in a suitable place, provided with materials for writing at such times as he chose. It would have seemed an art more worth cultivating under such conditions than when he had to write on his knees or on a littered table.

Every child's room should have a private desk or table where he may write. Here he should have a stock of pens, penholders, pencils, pads and writing paper, and he should be trained to use these materials frequently, says the Mother's Magazine.

Such a bit of property helps him to cultivate neatness and order. If he evidences slovenliness at first, the mother should urge him to orderliness and inspect his desk until he has attained neatness.

It should be impressed upon him that this is part of his training, that as a man he will always need to keep his papers in place and in order, and that if he is to be in the employ of others, it will be to his advantage to have formed good habits in such matters.

The child will take pride in possession of his own desk and pens, and this will lead him to the cultivation of the use of pen and ink.

In the rear of the poultry house of Thos. Heinrich & Son on South Queen street, this city, is an old abandoned well which is the home of a three and one-half pound round white sucker. The property was originally owned by old "Aunt" Mandy Bell, and 22 years ago "Aunt" Mandy caught a minnow out of Hinkston Creek and dropped it in the well "just to see how long it would live." The minnow grew and grew and apparently thrived in its lonely prison until it became as large as its ancestor. When Mr. Heinrich bought the property "Aunt" Mandy gave a turkey to allow the fish to remain in the well, and to this day, although twenty-two years have passed, it is still there. The fish has been out of the well on two occasions while his home was being cleaned.—Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat.

AUTO VEHICLES IN WARFARE.

While the value of the aeroplane and the Zeppelin in warfare are as yet undetermined, or, possibly, it would more correctly describe their status to say not fully demonstrated, to be as great as claimed for them, yet the motor car and motor-equipped guns have proved of far greater service in the existing war than was ever dreamed of by their advocates.

The revolutions in Mexico brought them into notice through their use in conveying commanding officers with great rapidity from point to point of their lines of operation, and Huertismo several occasions moved scouting parties and raiding parties in small forces to attacks at distances from the main armies, but no such general use of them was made as has been noticeable in the movements of the German and French armies in the Belgian campaign.

Thousands of automobiles belonging to private owners were seized in Belgium, France and Germany upon the breaking out of hostilities, and, according to the meager news given out by the allied censors, the automobiles, armored and unarmored, of the Germans have been on every road in Belgium immediately upon the heels of the scouting Uhlans, ready with machine guns and filled with infantry to aid and support the cavalry in raids and attacks.

One report of a correspondent that has filtered through the censorship states that fully 1,000 automobiles armed with machine guns entered Belgium with the German army, and it is quite evident from the speed with which the German forces spread over Belgium after the battles at Tirdemont, Diest and Haalen, occupying Brabant, Hainault, forty-eight hours later that it was the automobiles reported everywhere with their forces which enabled them to move so quickly over such an extensive territory.

Not only have these armored automobiles with their machine guns, rendered great service, but the automobiles each containing ten or twelve infantrymen were able to place these supports in goodly numbers with the cavalry and the light batteries of machine guns, making their occupation of positions more certain and permanent.

Again, automobiles, following these up, came loaded with ammunition and food and medical supplies, and, upon the fine roads of Belgium, these are said to have proved of the greatest utility to the armies. It is evident that the auto vehicle has made a successful entry into a new field and one that will call forth the inventive and constructive genius of motor car designers from any line yet developed.

The commandeered cars of July and August will be now succeeded by specially designed cars adapted to the various uses of armed forces in warfare.

It is said that already orders from abroad for several hundred armored automobiles have been placed with auto manufacturers in Philadelphia, and, if the war lasts so long as Earl Kitchener's shops may secure much larger orders from the belligerent nations.

Our own army should place large orders for especially designed vehicles at once.

There remains now not the slightest doubt as to the auto vehicle's utility in campaigns of war.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

TRACHOMA PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, Trachoma, a highly contagious and infectious chronic eye disease, long a pestilence in the older counties and usually spread by means of wash-basins, towels, pencils and other things in common by children and families, and which, without prompt recognition and persistent treatment, results in serious and permanent impairment of vision or blindness in a large majority of cases, is officially reported by experts of the U. S. Public Health Service as wide spread in the counties of Clay, Breathitt, Jackson, Lee, Leslie, Owsley, Perry and adjacent sections, with many cases in Jefferson and Clark counties and more of less spread into almost every other county in Kentucky, presenting to officials and people problems of health, economic and humanitarian, and demanding prompt and concerted action, especially by school authorities and others having the care of children with whom the ravages of the disease seem most disastrous.

Now, therefore, be it known, that the State Board of Health of Kentucky in the exercise of authority vested in it by law, hereby prohibits and punishes any person suspected to be afflicted with trachoma, commonly known as "red sore eyes" to attend any school public or private in Commonwealth as teacher or pupil, and requests and instructs all physicians, teachers, school trustees, county and city boards of health and other officials and good citizens to assist and cooperate in preventing the further spread of this disease, and otherwise likely to entail misery to individuals and a burden upon taxpayers almost beyond calculation in the light of experience with it in other and older countries. It further instructs county and city boards of health, in cooperation with their respective county and fiscal courts to inaugurate and execute and to require the heads of families and other persons to execute such sanitary regulations as such board may consider expedient to prevent the spread of trachoma, which is hereby declared to be an epidemic and contagious disease and to this end they are requested to bring all persons infected with trachoma under prompt and

The value of spraying fruit trees was never better demonstrated than it was by the yield of J. W. Harris and son, Earl, of the Hinkinsville road, got this year from peach trees in their orchard. J. W. Harris brought a basket of them to the Growers' Association room that were among the finest specimens that have been shown by anyone here or foreign grower in Paducah, this season. The variety is the St. Louis World's Fair, and the average weight of the peaches is between ten and eleven ounces. One was over 3 inches in diameter, and weighed in excess of 12 ounces. The color of the fruit was a deep red. The trees were planted just 7 years ago. Four years ago, says Mr. Harris, they were dwarfed and scrubby, and were expected to live. They were pruned down considerably, when growth set in. Two years ago they were sprayed and the result was like magic.—Paducah Sun.

APPARATUS FOR TESTING AMOUNT OF BUTTER FAT IN MILK AND CREAM

Perfected At Wisconsin Experimental Station Years Ago —Can Retain High-Producing Cows of Herd With Improvement To Herd Yield

This test, which was perfected by Dr. S. M. Babcock, of the Wisconsin Experiment Station about 25 years ago, is used to determine the amount of butterfat in milk and cream. Its use in connection with a milk scales furnishes the farmer a quick and simple means of finding out exactly how much butter each cow in his herd is giving. Knowing this, he can then retain the high-producing cows in the herd and use their offspring to secure still further improvement in the herd yield.

A complete testing outfit costs from $5 to $20, depending upon the capacity. Complete directions are sent with each outfit, and by following these, any farmer can easily make a quick and accurate test.

The apparatus used consists of (1) a whirling machine or centrifuge; (2) graduated test bottles; (3) a glass measuring pipette holding 17.6 cubic centimeters; (4) a 17.6 c. glass acid measure; (5) a bottle of ordinary commercial sulphuric acid.

How To Make The Test

(1) Thoroughly mix the milk by pouring or stirring and take out a small amount—a few spoonfuls will be sufficient.

(2) Suck milk up into glass measuring pipette until it comes above the 17.6 c. mark. Suddenly close the upper end of the pipette with the finger. This will hold the milk in the pipette. By slightly releasing the pressure of the finger allow the milk to drop out of the lower end until it comes exactly to the mark on the pipette, when it is stopped by pressing down firmly with the finger. Carefully transfer milk from pipette to test bottle, holding the bottle in a slightly slanting position. Be careful not to lose a particle of milk in making the transfer. Milk adhering to the inside of the pipette is blown into the test bottle as thoroughly as possible.

(3) Measure out acid into acid measure, which is marked to indicate proper quantity. Pour acid into test bottle with milk. Thoroughly mix acid and milk by shaking gently with a circular motion. If more than one sample is to be tested prepare in like manner.

(4) Place test bottles containing mixture of milk and acid in whirling machine, making certain that the machine is balanced. Turn the machine for five minutes at the speed indicated upon the crank. Stop the machine and add hot water (which should be perfectly clean and nearly at the boiling point) until mixture reaches base of test bottle neck. Whirl again for two minutes. Stop machine and add hot water pipette to the 8 per cent mark on neck of bottle. Whirl again one minute.

This completes the test and the but-terfat is shown as a clear or light straw-colored liquid in the upper part of the bottle neck. The sulphuric acid has acted on the constituents of the milk, setting free the butterfat. The hot water added brings the liquid mixture up into the neck of the bottle and the whirling causes the bottles to fly out into a horizontal position. The acid mixture being heavier toward the outside, the butterfat, being lighter, is forced toward the center and into the neck of the bottle. This is divided into 10 equal spaces, each representing 1 per cent. Between each of these 10 spaces are 5 equal spaces, each representing $\frac{1}{10}$ of 1 per cent.

The Test Is Then "Read."

Suppose the upper end of the fat column extends to the 8.2 mark and the lower end of the column to 3.6. Subtract 3.6 from 8.2. This gives 4.6 per cent, which is the percentage of butterfat in the sample. This means that in 100 pounds of the milk there are 4.6 pounds of butterfat.

Precautions To Be Observed.

(1) Test bottles must be thoroughly clean and the inside free from grease; (2) whirling machine must be kept well oiled; (3) acid bottle must be kept tightly stoppered else the acid will lose its strength; (4) sample must be thoroughly mixed; (5) the fat column must be measured at once before the fat hardens. Following the last whirling it is best to set bottles in a pail in which is placed enough hot water (140 degrees Fah.) to come nearly to the top of the neck of bottles. (6) Bottles must be accurate and usually will be if purchased from reliable dealers. If the farmer doubts their accuracy they may be mailed to the State Experiment Station to be tested, free of charge. (7) Never buy a 6 or 10-bottle whirling machine, as these sizes are very difficult to balance properly; 4, 8, 12, 24-bottle sizes are very satisfactory machines.

It is well to order a few extra test bottles to replace bottles broken in use, and an extra pipette. Cream is tested by the use of a special cream bottle. A special pipette (18 c. c.) is needed. For very accurate work in cream testing a small set of gram balance is required.—W. D. Nicholls.

SANITATION A MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR

There can be little question that the widespread infection of hog cholera and other animal diseases is due to lack of attention to strict sanitary measures. In other words, stock owners are contented with protecting their swine against hog cholera by having the serum injected, and their young cattle protected against black leg by using black leg vaccine, whenever the case may be. This is an excellent policy and the only thing for them to do, but too frequently sanitary precautions are not observed by properly burying or burning the carcasses of animals that have succumbed to these maladies, and practically no effort is made to rid the premises of infection, by cleaning and disinfecting the barns, yards, and—etc., subsequent to outbreaks of contagious animal diseases.

Often the carcasses of animals that have died of infectious diseases are hauled to some sequestered spot on the farm where buzzards and other carrion feeders scatter the infection in their flight from farm to farm. Or, perchance, the germ-seeding carcasses are dumped into a running stream on the back premises of the farm and allowed to decompose, which is unsanitary and nauseating to neighbors, to say the least. The germs from these carcasses are carried down stream, infecting herds many miles distant. It is not presumed that such means of scattering infectious diseases among animals are intentional, but it frequently happens in just this way. The results obtained from the use of sera and vaccines are partially to blame for this condition. Instead of an infected farm being cleaned up, stock owners are depending too much on immunizing healthy animals and neglecting disinfection and the application of strict sanitary measures which would ultimately, if employed, effectively wipe out infectious and contagious diseases among live stock. These facts have been suggested after visiting farms whereon contagious and infectious diseases of animals were found. There are sanitary rules and regulations covering cases of this nature, and such legislation is not usually promulgated to fill space, but to protect and foster the best interests of live stock owners of Kentucky.—Robert Graham, D. V. M., Kentucky Experiment Station.

DISEASE ATTACKING GRAPES

Frequent Complaint Is Reaching the Agricultural Station.

Frequent complaint is reaching the Station regarding a disease that is attacking the grapes. Upon investigation this trouble is usually found to be due to a parasitic fungus known as Black Rot.

This is by no means a new trouble, as it is very general in all of the sections where the grape is grown. Black rot first shows itself upon the berries and leaves. Usually the berries are most seriously affected and it manifests itself upon the latter by a sunken, clear-cut, brown spots. These spots gradually enlarge until all of the berries on the stem are affected. It is a noticeable fact that the diseased berries do not shed but continue to cling to the vine long after the grape season is past. It is needless to say, that this serves as a means whereby the disease is carried over from one season to another.

Fortunately for the persons interested in grape culture this trouble can be easily kept in control. Where only a few vines are grown the practice of burning the berries in order to destroy the fungus may be used. The berries should be covered early in the season after the blooming season is over. The ordinary paper sacks do very well. The principal point to keep in mind is pin the top of the bag securely so that it will exclude the entrance of the spores. It is also a very good plan to clean the vineyard of any old litter such as leaves and pruned canes as soon as convenient.

Spraying with Bordeaux mixture is perhaps one of the most reliable means of control. Where the trouble is known to exist, the vines should be thoroughly sprayed in the spring just as the buds are swelling. This application should be repeated several times during the summer. The number of applications will depend somewhat on the nature of the season. If the season happens to be dry, a fewer number of applications will be needed than if the season is warm and moist.

Bordeaux mixture for this purpose may be prepared as follows: Dissolve four pounds of copper sulfate (blue stone) and four pounds of stone lime separately in twenty-five gallons of water. Then pour the two together into a fifty gallon barrel and stir thoroughly. The best way to dissolve the copper sulfate is to suspend it in a cloth bag in water over night. Care should be taken not to let it come in contact with the bottom of the barrel. Pumps should be brass lined where Bordeaux is to be used.

RAISING GUINEA PIGS

Serve as Pets and for Many Scientific Purposes.

Little Animals Are in Much Demand for Experimental Use in Preparation and Standardizing Serums and Antitoxins.

(By D. E. LANTZ.)

Guinea pigs, or cavies, are raised chiefly for two purposes—as pets or fancy stock and for scientific uses. For centuries the guinea pig was regarded merely as a pet and bred for show and fancy alone. Being a placid animal, it was considerably changed during this period, and several strains and modifications of the original were developed. Thus, besides the smooth-haired forms, we have the Peruvian, which is a very long-haired type, and the Abyssinian, a type with rather long hair standing out in curls.

ous rosettes all over the body. The long-haired cavies are not recommended for ordinary pets, as their coats need much care. The smooth-haired require less attention and make equally attractive pets. They have the advantages of being easily kept and of never biting when handled. However, it is not advisable to subject pet animals of any sort to much handling or fondling. Even dogs and cats are always the worse for such treatment, and pet rabbits or guinea pigs soon show the results of much handling in their roughened coats and lack of sprightliness. Long-haired guinea pigs, especially if intended for show, require some handling, since the hair has to be brushed frequently. This is best done while the animal rests on a high shelf where it need not be held during the brushing.

Guinea pigs are in much demand for experimental use in the preparation, testing, and standardizing of serums and antitoxins. They are well adapted for this purpose, being small and easily handled. Their use in medical research is steadily increasing, and some of the large institutions, unable to secure a steady supply of reliable stock for their own purposes, have set up breeding establishments of their own.

Sometimes guinea pigs found in bird stores are unfit for laboratory experiments. They have been previously used for serum- or antitoxin tests or may be the offspring of animals that have survived such tests. Unless the dealer knows the source from which the animals came and can guarantee that they have never been used for experiments, he can rarely sell them to institutions. Any breeder undertaking to supply animals to laboratories must give absolute assurance as to their suitability for experiments. If he can do this and furnish the animals as needed, he should be able to command good prices for them and to establish a permanent and lucrative business.

The chief enemy of the guinea pig is the common rat. Preventive measures should be taken for the extermination of rats; after they have thoroughly established themselves about the premises it is no easy task. In the neighborhood that is rat-infested, buildings intended for housing guinea pigs should be made absolutely rat-proof.

The rearing of guinea pigs requires no extraordinary knowledge and no great outlay of capital. Little space is needed to accommodate the animals, which are hardy and easily managed. They make interesting pets and are useful food animals. The constantly increasing demand for them in scientific investigations and medical research insure a ready market for reasonable numbers at prices that should be remunerative to the producer.

males, which are hardy and easily managed. They make interesting pets and are useful food animals. The constantly increasing demand for them in scientific investigations and medical research insure a ready market for reasonable numbers at prices that should be remunerative to the producer.

Moles and Growing Seeds.

The food most liked by the ground mole is the sprouts of peas and corn. A way to protect these growing seeds is to dip them in kerosene just before planting. The mole will not touch the kerosene seed and the seeds are not injured in the least.—Popular Mechanic.

Science.

After all, science in farming, just as in everything else, means reaching more than knowing things. Without the knowledge there can be no science.

Business Caution Needed.

The farm with its stock, machinery and crops represents a large investment, and the man who succeeds must act with the greatest business caution.

MANY WAYS OF SOWING OATS

Question Arises as to Advisability of Making Any Preparation of the Soil.

Oats has been such an uncertain crop in many of the western states, often the best crop being from a field that was sown broadcast and scratched in any old way, that a question has been raised among farmers as to the advisability of making any preparation of the soil other than getting the seed scattered and enough soil worked up to cover them.

In some sections this lack of the proper preparation is the rule rather than the exception. A great many sow the seed among corn stalks and discs or cover with the cultivator, harrowing afterward.

If some cases this plan has produced good crops, but from my observation and experience the best crops of oats are grown on land that has been well broken either in the fall or the early spring and the oats drilled in at the rate of two bushels to the acre.

When seed are put in in this way there is no trusting to a rain to finish covering them and they will begin to germinate at once. The seed are all put in the ground to the same depth, resulting in an even stand.

When the seed are sown on top and cultivated or discd in some will be covered deep and in some cases shallow or not at all. The birds will get some of them or in a few weeks of dry weather they will not sprout at once.

If a hard rain comes while covering and before the harrow has been run over the ground it can never be smoothed so that a binder can be run over it with comfort to the driver.

GIANT THUYA GAINING FAVOR

Found Easier to Grow and Transplant Than Any Other Conifer—Likes Any Soil.

(By W. R. GILBERT.)

The Giant Thuya is rapidly making its way in the good opinions of those interested in conifers. It is found easier to raise and easier to transplant than any other conifer. It will grow in almost any soil, even in damp, cold bottom and on poor dry oolite, and seems equally indifferent to wind, top and spring frosts. There is no reason why this tree should not be raised in surplus at the price of one, unless it is the absence of a particular demand for it can be got to proper size for planting in two or three years. The tree seeds itself handsily soil.

A visit to England a few years ago saw a plantation of Thuya and Thuya planted in poor clay over chalk, and the Thuya had completely outstripped the larch. Another instance, in a twenty-four-year-old plantation of Thuya, Douglas fir and larch, on fairly good soil the Thuya had grown two feet per annum, and pretty well held its own with the Douglas, though on a steep hill about 500 feet in altitude it was being superseded. Here then is a rival to the Douglas in rapid growth, and the lumber is acclaimed as superior to that of the best larch, and preferable to larch for planing and fencing, so, apparently decided on rivaling the Douglas in quality. Purchasing the adaptability of the tree to soil and its power of resisting cold and storms are greater than those of the Douglas.

For a Succession.

Do not forget and plant the whole garden when you start. Just a small amount of each vegetable, and repeat the planting from three to six weeks later. Also remember that you should sow seeds to plant the vegetables in a permanent place from where they were sown last year.

Beans sown on one side of the garden last year, plant them on the opposite side or near the middle this year. Rotation is just as necessary in the garden for the best results to be obtained as in the regular field.

Climbing American Beauty.

The climbing American Beauty has been produced by a method of cross fertilization which has retained the charming qualities of the American Beauty rose and yet, by way of contrast, it is hardy and will stand heat drought almost as well as any rose.

Nourishment for Sow.

To grow with a litter of pigs tugging at her needs the most nourishing feed not necessarily grain, but a good rich slop of shorts or middlings.

Hour for Milking.

Cows should be milked as much as possible in the morning and evening at the same hour.

INSIST ON PURE SEED

Farmer May Determine Whether Grain Contains Impurities.

Great Care Should Be Exercised to Prevent Introduction of Noxious Weeds Upon Land Difficult of Eradication.

(By O. L. TILLMAN.)

By studying carefully the characteristics—size, shape and color—of grain and weed seeds, the farmer will be enabled to determine whether or not his grain contains impurities. Great care should be taken to prevent the introduction of noxious weeds upon land, as they are difficult to eradicate.

For Egg Production.

The secret of egg production consists of a good supply of grit, good health, plenty of exercise, pure food, green food, fresh water, cut clover hay and green cut bone, freedom from parasites, regularity in feeding, cool houses in summer and warm ones in winter, and breeding only from the best laying stock.

Care With Turkeys.

Always be sure that every part of any incubator where the turkey hen and poults are kept is well drained, sometimes the hen will sit down at night in a low place, and a heavy rain will fill the depression with water and chill or drown the chicks.

Kale in the Garden.

Do not forget in planning your garden to provide for a patch of kale. There are different varieties, each of which is good.

POULTRY FACTS

FEED-HOPPER FOR CHICKENS

Receptacles Keep Food Clean and Yet Readily Accessible to the Fowls at All Times.

(By W. R. CONOVER, New Jersey.) To keep the food clean and yet have it readily accessible to the fowls without constantly taxing oneself to maintain these conditions is often difficult.

The receptacles themselves must be kept clean. Yields used for feeding wet washes should be of metal or porcelain, so that a frequent scalding may render them sanitary. Even the wooden troughs for dry feeding should have an occasional scalding and sundrying.

Herewith are given some ideas for hoppers which are adaptable for small or large flocks as dry feed receptacles or for wet feed if the trough part is of metal. Any handy man can make them of wood. If of metal, the help of a tinmith may be needed.

Hopper No. 1 is a useful style in a poultry house having an alley-way with a partition between it and the poultry compartments. It is arranged so that the feeding trough for the fowls is replenished from the chute-like trough opening into it from the alley-side of the partition. The feeding portion is six inches wide and three inches deep, with a cover that may be raised by means of cord running through the partition. The chute is nine inches high and six inches wide at the top, with a hinged cover. The space through which the feed passes from the chute to the trough is three inches high.

When the feed is poured into the chute it fills the trough gradually, but without enough pressure to overflow it. As the birds eat the feed in the chute gradually settles into the trough. The bottom of the trough is two inches above the floor. The trough portion rests upon cleats and is removable.

Hopper No. 2 is convenient for the small henhouse. It is a simple box with slanting strips four inches apart fastened to a frame which rests over it. It is supported on brackets. It is 2 1/2 inches high and 12 inches in width.

Hopper No. 3 has a cover which lifts and may be hooked back during feeding time. The trough is 24 inches long, 3 inches high and 8 inches wide—five inches of this width being exposed by the lifted cover. This hopper may be made of galvanized metal and used for feeding wet mash.

Poultry Notes.

The biggest hen is not the business hen.

Charring corn is one way of providing charcoal for fowls.

Don't expect to win every prize that you compete for this fall.

Some breeds are easier plucked than others. This makes a difference.

The hen needs a balanced ration, the same as the cow or the man.

Broken charcoal is a fine conditioner for birds of all ages at all times of year.

It is the abuse and not the use of corn that condemns it as a poultry food.

It is very poor economy to breed to save the expense of buying new roosters.

Air slaked lime sprinkled on the floor and on the dropping boards will help to keep the place healthy and the air pure.

WALTON.
Vernon Noel and Orville Noel, of Owen county, were here Friday on business.

Howard Stephens, the popular cashier of the Deposit Bank at Independence, was here Saturday on business.

Fred Adam of Chester, W. Virginia, is enjoying a very pleasant visit here to his relatives S. L. Edwards and family.

Robert M. Clements, of near Napoleon, one of the best farmers in Gallatin county, spent part of last week here on business.

Judge and Mrs. J. G. Tomlin were the twins spent Sunday with Mrs. Tomlin's mother, Mrs. Belle Dickey of the Richwood neighborhood.

Mr. B. F. Metcalfe and two children B. F. Jr., and Mabel, who have been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ransler, returned to their home at Greenville, Ohio, last Saturday.

Chas. L. Griffith returned home last Friday from a very pleasant visit to Illinois and Wisconsin, being the guest of his daughter Nannie Peterson at Zion, Ill., a part of the time.

Boris Zadah Rouse left Saturday for Bellevue, where she will be in charge of a part of the school, beginning Monday. She is a very bright young lady, and will no doubt give satisfaction.

Clarence R. Jones, of Madisonville, Ohio, is enjoying a pleasant visit to old friends in this quarter, his former home, and is incidentally selling some nursery stock for the Farmers Nursery of Troy, Ohio.

J. B. O'Neal of Dry Ridge, spent part of the past week here closing up his purchase of the twenty-three acre tract of land from E. M. Johnson situated near Walton, and will arrange to move here shortly.

Mrs. Chas. H. Young, of Polson, Grant county, was a visitor to friends here a part of last week. She has about recovered from the surgical operation performed in Cincinnati, and her health has been fully restored.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Beavly have purchased a fine Eversole piano from W. G. Readnor, the piano being a present from them to their daughter, Miss Virginia.

They also bought a nice bicycle for their son Philip and Raymond, and the children are having the time of their lives.

H. A. Faber, of Cincinnati, spent Friday here with friends and on business. He is at the head of a concern that manufactures a substitute for mica in the insulation of electrical machinery, and has just returned from Chicago where he expected to place a contract for the entire output of his factory in which several citizens of Walton are interested.

Marion Stephenson gave H. C. Diers a peach grown on his farm near town that measured twelve inches in circumference and weighed one pound. It was from a tree that Mr. Diers sold Mr. Stephenson three years ago and is of the "Miss Hardwood" variety.

John C. Miller who has been suffering from sciatica and taking treatment from Dr. J. G. Slater at Ludlow, returned home Saturday much improved. Dr. C. C. Metcalfe has been filling his position at the Equitable Bank and Trust Company part of the time in a very satisfactory manner. It will be some time before Mr. Miller will be able to return to his duties.

W. L. H. Baker, of Fort Thomas, was a visitor here part of last week, spending a couple of weeks vacation at his farm near Big Bone Springs. He is assistant post master at Ft. Thomas, and has a vacation of two weeks every year. In coming out in his auto he had the misfortune to break an axle in his machine in coming down one of Boone county's bad dirt roads.

Edgar F. Kipp, of Cincinnati, spent part of last week closing up his business as the administrator of the estate of his father, Jacob Kipp, deceased, and turned over the property to E. M. Johnson, the deed having been executed by the heirs. The property consisted of the two story frame house on Main street where Mr. Kipp resided and conducted a shoe shop for many years.

At the sale of bank stock to settle the estate of the late Mrs. Mary Poor, last Saturday, one share of the bank of Independence sold at $110, one share of the Walton Bank and Trust Co. at $150, and one share of the First National at Covington at $150. J. J. Hudson bought the Independence bank stock, the First National and the Walton bank stock.

This Car Awakes New Zest

The oldest motorists will feel a new interest when he looks at this HUDSON Six-40—the model for 1915.

Here is a new-day car, so advanced and so different that a hundred features will seem unique to you.

Its history is this: Four years ago Howard E. Coffin started to design an ideal Six. A Six without excess in size or weight or power. A Six to end all over-tax in price, upkeep and operative cost.

Since then, all the 48 HUDSON engineers have devoted their time to this car.

Last year's model proved the great-est of HUDSON success. It over-sold the output by 3,000 cars, and not a single fault developed.

In the 13 months since, this engineering corps has added 31 refinements. The output has been tumbled. And the price of the car, because of this output, has been reduced $200.

How It Differs

Old-time cars, compared with this, look crude and inartistic.

Former cars were heavy. Cars of this capacity, built in old ways weighed on the average 1,000 pounds more.

A new-type motor in this car has reduced operative cost about 30 per cent.

And here is the new idea of size. The wheel base is 123 inches. Yet there are seats for seven and ample room for gear. The car is impressive and distinguished without excessive size.

No other car on the market to day is so fine an example of the new-type car. Every detail will delight you. Come see what a car, under HUDSON methods, can be built for $1,550.

There should be nothing in a boy's bedroom that is easily soiled or wrinkled. Never buy a bed for a boy. Get, instead, one of those iron caskets with good springs, over which you can drape a piece of burlap or denim can be thrown, or, better still, if you have one, a Bagdad curtain. Have a few soft cushions on the corners and some solid covers that harmonize and your boy has a real divan on which his friends can sleep.

There should also be a table in a boy's room—just as large as the room can stand. The table cover should be made of the same stuff as the sofa cushions and should be tied on under the legs with tapes. On this table there should be a simple lamp, a standard of lamp, that throws a strong steady light. A boy will study better when he does not have a struggle with poor light.

The chairs matter very little. A boy can make himself comfortable even on a stool. Plain kitchen chairs will do and they can be made into a very comfortable like pillow cases made to fit over the backs and the seats covered with a square piece of the same stuff as the sofa cushions and legs and tied underneath with tapes.

Plain tan tinted walls, or tan paper with a small figure is good for a boy's room. It is well to let him choose the color himself and then you can make the rest of the room in keeping.

White or net curtains in a boy's room are a mistake. It is well to put at the windows, side hangings of denim or burlap. These are durable and attractive and give the room the appearance of a man's study.

The best rugs for boys' rooms are those woven of the scraps of old carpets. These are durable, very good looking and do not show mud or dirt of any kind.

This is just the kind of weather the farmers desire.

BEAVER LICK.

School opened at Beaver last Monday. Jas. Pottinger, who has been very ill with typhoid fever, is better.

Mrs. Nicholas Moore and children are visiting relatives in Covington. Mr. Geo. Slayback who has been sick for a week or so, is better.

Several from Beaver attended the North Bond Association at Gunpowder, last week. Nannie Allen, Bertha Brown, Hattie Slayback and Osman Jack attended the theater in Covington, Saturday night.

Miss Nora Ryle has returned away. Mr. J. W. Clegg, having been away while Miss Anna was in Europe. Mrs. Jno. Allen has been in the little granddaddy's room in Covington, who has been very sick of typhoid fever.

Marvin Moore has been a cripple for almost a year, met at home in honor of his ninth birthday. Everyone brought well filled baskets and a delicious repast was served to which every one did ample justice.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Omer Clegg, Jr. and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Burris and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Roter, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Jack and three children; Mrs. James Slayback and three children; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Slayback and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Hattie Slayback and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Jno. English and little daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Aitken; Mr. George Marsh and daughter, Miss Pearl; Mrs. Hattie Griffith and grandson, Wm. Ryle; Mrs. Thos. McIntyre; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Osman; Mr. and Mrs. Will Wilson and William; Mr. and Mrs. E. Moore and daughter, Miss Grace; Mrs. Harry Moore and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Bertha and son Leo; Miss Ruth Clegg and Mr. and Mrs. John Amos.

Many again invited that for various reasons could not be present. Marvin received several presents, and Miss Edna delight, the afternoon all left for their homes wishing Marvin many more happy birthdays.

This is very easily done, and the boy is made supremely happy by having what he calls a den—a place where he can ask other fellows to come and spend rambling, dreary, afternoons, when it is too outside even for football practice.

THE SCHOOLBOOK QUESTION.

Many are the pros and cons upon the subject of our customary periodical change of school text books.

Our first impulse is resentment. We do not stop to consider that the mental individuality of our children requires a change of diet as does the physical.

In introduction of new text books new authors thrust into a school, should infuse new life and vigor. The younger boys and girls learn the stories in the readers from their older brothers and sisters and are not so enthused when it comes their time to do them out to the teacher, as if they were to meet with something entirely new. The novelty will add a charm to their work.

We feel that the patrons of the Verona school deserve special mention for the manner in which they have received and managed this perplexing question.

The school opened Sept. 7th with an enrollment of 92 pupils, about one-fourth have not yet entered. With this number, through an excellent plan, by the advice of the Faculty, a decision was made to exchange no books, but to order the new outfit upon a cash basis.

A pupil should be taught to love and revere his text books, then he will not be willing to part with them in exchange. They will become valuable as reference books. We expect to see Ray's old Practical Arithmetic, upon the library shelves of men in the different walks of life, who are now boys laying them aside in the class room.

Within the first two days of school $103.75 was brought in by the various pupils, each bringing without an exception the amount asked for.

It would require about $130 to fit our school out entire. The new books are being received without delay from different points, and the second week of school will be one that will surely count upon the terms asked for.

As we shall be ordering from time to time for our own use, and as we have such ready access to the publishers, it will give us pleasure to receive orders from such schools near us as may have trouble in procuring.

Fellow Teachers, let us not delay in this matter, but let us make this the happiest, and the best school year that Boone county has ever known.

Personal Mention.

Little Miss Alice Walton has typhoid fever. Master Melvin Gaines, of Idlewild, is attending Woodward High School, Cincinnati.

J. T. Gaines and wife, of Idlewild, were Saturday night and Sunday guests at R. S. Cowen's.

W. A. Gaines has about recovered from what was feared would prove a severe case of illness. Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Brady, of Bellevue neighborhood, were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Emma Brown, Tuesday.

P. G. Cropper, of Louisville, came up last Wednesday to attend his father's sale on Thursday.

Earl Walton and wife, of Petersburg, were Saturday and Sunday guests of her father, G. G. Hughes.

Mester Martin and wife, of Bullittsville, were Sunday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Roberts.

Miss Sallie Rogers was visiting in Indiana and attended a convention of Old-Baptists, several days last week.

John Clure and wife, of Indiana, are here on their annual visit to relatives. Mr. Clure never misses the Harvest Home.

Hon. Charlton B. Thompson, Collector of Internal Revenue, of Covington, was a business visitor to Burlington, Tuesday.

G. J. Allen and wife and P. J. Allen, of Pleasant Hill, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Crisler.

A. B. Renaker and wife, Misses Sheba Roberts and Nellie Martin spent last Sunday in Covington, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Westaby.

Mr. John W. Rouse, of Florence, R. D. was caller at this office Tuesday. He was home from Bel-levue with a load of watermelons. Mr. Rouse will be 80 years of age in a few days, and he does not look a day over 70 years old. He has good health, is hearty and spry, and says he can eat as much watermelon as a yearling horse. Here's hoping he will celebrate his centennial.

Rates of Toll.

By the request of a friend the Recorder publishes the following sections of the law:

Sec. 30 On all turnpikes now owned, or that may hereafter be owned, wholly or in part by individuals or corporations in this State; tolls not exceeding the following rates may be received in every section of five miles which have been completed to wit:

For a single horse, mule or jennet, in addition, one cent; if the same be not hitched to any vehicle, for twenty sheep or hogs, five cents; for twenty cattle, ten cents, and so on in proportion; for a greater or less number; for a riding carriage, whether on wheels or on a wheel, if the road be macadamized or road or brick road, or some other hard surfaced road, 10 cents but if not so surfaced, one cent; for a brick road or other hard surfaced road, five cents; and for a cart or wagon, if the tires of the wheels are less than three inches wide, three cents for each animal drawing it; for automobiles, 15 cents, and for motorcycles, 10 cents; and for motor vehicles, 10 cents.

For a fractional part of a section tolls may be received bearing the same proportion to the tolls for a full section that the said fractional part bears such full section. Provided that when the toll from the fractional part would be less than one cent, no charge may be received one cent. Provided, further, that all coaches, carriages, vehicles and horse-drawn vehicles going to and from divine worship, schools, funerals and grist mills for the purpose of having grinding done, shall be exempted from tolls.

Sec. 31 The said toll may be demanded and collected of every person passing the toll gate, whether he shall have traveled the whole or only a part of the section or fractional part. Provided that the said toll road or turnpike shall be made so as to conform to the following specifications: All roads or turnpikes shall have a smooth roadbed of not less than ten feet in width; the surface shall be of good material well drained and drained. All cross-drains shall be under-drained or riprapped when necessary.

A run-down bridge, carrying a bridge of fifty feet in length or less, and such others as the Fiscal Court of the county may desire, shall have a bridge over the road across the river sufficiently strong and sufficiently wide to insure safe passage to all kinds of vehicles; provided further, that no toll shall be collected unless such toll road or turnpike be constructed in accordance with this section.

SWEET CLOVER OF KENTUCKY

PLANT IS A WONDERFUL SOIL BUILDER—KENTUCKY SOILS SERIOUSLY DEPLETED.

MOST IMPORTANT VARIETIES

White Blossom Clover is the Larger and Hardier. Longer Season For Maturing—Big Variety of Sweet Clover.

There is probably no single farm crop being more talked about at this time in Kentucky than sweet clover. The sweet clover plant is a wonderful soil builder. The soils of Kentucky as a whole are seriously depleted. It is opportune that the merits of sweet clover be fully known and the requirements of the crop be understood.

The two most important varieties of sweet clover are white (Melilotus alba) and yellow (Melilotus officinalis). Both of these varieties are biennials. The plants seed every two years, then die down. The white blossom sweet clover is the larger and harder grower, takes a longer season for maturing, and is probably the better of the two varieties for pasture and for soil building. The yellow blossom sweet clover is less stemmy and is used more as a hay crop than the white. There is a variety of sweet clover (Melilotus indica) which is an annual yellow blossom growing much smaller than the regular biennial sweet clover of this State. It is considered a weed in several of the Western States. Seed from this plant have been thrown upon the market at a cost much lower than the seed from the biennial varieties could be produced, and as a result many farmers have ignorantly purchased this seed and have been subsequently disappointed with their sweet clover. It is a somewhat lamentable fact that some of our so-called reliable seedsmen are knowingly sold the annual sweet clover seed without informing the farmer as to what he was buying. The annual sweet clover seed are much smaller, more round, and with a more husky covering than the biennial sweet clover seed and can be readily detected. The hulled biennial seed has much the appearance of alfalfa seed.

It is a common sight along railways where limestone ballast has been used, on either side of limestone pikes, and in fact on nearly all the main lines in evidence to find sweet clover growing luxuriantly. In many instances there is scarcely any soil in evidence. This condition is an indication of one of the principal requirements of sweet clover, namely, limestone. The writer has seldom seen a good growth of sweet clover where, upon testing with muriatic acid, the soil did not show the presence of calcium carbonate (limestone). Even where the surface soil did not show the presence of carbonate of lime, there was reason for thinking the subsoil contained it. Experimental work on the Station farm at Lexington shows the value of limestone in growing this plant. Quoting from Bulletin No. 178, "On the Station farm attempts to grow it (sweet clover) on normal soil without lime have not been satisfactory, although some growth has been obtained. In the spring of 1912 two plots of sweet clover were sown, one limed and one unlimed. The crop was harvested for hay in 1913, the limed plot yielding 5,300 pounds of field-cured hay per acre and the unlimed plot 2,100 pounds per acre. The limed plot was entirely free from weeds, while the unlimed plot contained a large percentage of weeds."

Limestone and good drainage are two of the principal requirements of sweet clover.

When the lime and drainage requirements for sweet clover have been met it is comparatively easy to grow the crop. The seed is fast to germinate best on hard, compact soil. Late fall sowing, or early spring sowing before heavy corn freezes, are the best times to sow. About 15 pounds of unlimed seed, or 20 pounds of limed seed should be sown to the acre.

Sweet clover, both white blossom and yellow blossom, is extensively grown in the northern counties of Kentucky along the Ohio river. It is there used for pasture, for hay, and for seed. The seed is probably as well known as any seed in the area of production. The seed is probably as well known as any seed in the area of production. The seed is probably as well known as any seed in the area of production.

JUDGING THE VALUE OF EGGS

Color of Shell Should Not Be Taken Into Consideration in Determining Worth of Contents.

It is a curious fallacy that the brown egg is better than the white. The difference in color is merely the indication of the strain of the bird and nothing else, says a leading authority.

It is a fact that, generally speaking, brown eggs are preferred over white ones, and dealers have learned to cater to supply this demand at small cost. If their customers want brown eggs, they supply them as long as they have them in stock, and then color the white ones to fill out.

It is a very easy matter staining a white egg a beautiful delicate brown by dipping it in weak coffee or an aniline dye. Eggs colored in this way sell just as readily and please the customers as well as though they had bought genuine brown eggs.

There is quite a difference, however, in the nutritive value of very light colored yolks and those which have a rich reddish yellow color. The pale yolk indicates poor feeding and bad conditions, but the reddish, yellow yolk indicates that the hens have been fed on the right kind of ration, and are therefore better food.

Iron in the food gives color to the yolk of the egg, and anemic persons whose diet embraces eggs should select those of the rich reddish color, because they contain more iron than the pale ones.

Judging the value of the egg as food, therefore, do not take the color of the shell as an index of its food value, but its contents.

WATER FOR POULTRY HOUSE

Important That Convenient Place Should Be Provided for Chickens to Stand In Best.

(By J. HALPIN.)

A convenient place should be provided in every poultry house for water. It is best to construct a small stand about one foot above the floor and place the water dish on this. The stand can be constructed in the partition so that the hens in two pens can drink from one dish. It is, however, usually better to give each pen a separate drinking dish. The water stand should be placed where it is light, and also where it is convenient to empty the dish and refill it. As a rule the water dish will keep cleaner if near the north side of the building, as the hens scratch the litter toward the north more than toward the south. A hen faces the light usually when digging in the straw for her feed and the result is that the litter works back.

Care should be taken not to use watering devices of any kind which have parts that cannot be readily cleaned. A dirty drinking vessel frequently is a source of disease among the fowls and should never be permitted in any poultry house.

POULTRY NOTES

Parched meal is good for chicks to pick when two or three days old. Chopped-up onion tops make good chick medicine at this time of year. Duck raisers claim that a hawk will never attempt to steal a duckling. Eleven dozen eggs per year is a fair average for hens and pullets kept in large flocks.

Little things in poultry keeping are like pieces of lead; they weigh more than you think they will. Better keep the hens in the house on cold, rainy days, or they will get soaked and take pneumonia. Trap nests and numbered leg bands constitute the only sure means of finding out which hens are doing the work.

Do give the later summer hatched chicks a chance to eat their meals without being run over by the other birds. During breeding season use two cocks, keeping one penned up three days while the other is running with the hens. If you are looking for birds to improve the egg laying qualities of your flock, patronize the breeders that are breeding for eggs.

Turkey eggs may be hatched in the incubator very nicely, but unless you have a number of hens it is hard to get enough fresh eggs to fill a machine.

The vice of feather pulling and egg eating are always more common in overcrowded flocks, than in quarters where there is plenty of space for the fowls to exercise.

TO PASTEURIZE MILK

Most Effectually Done in Bottles in Which Received.

Good Results May Be Secured by Using Ordinary Tin Pail With Plate Inverted to Permit Circulation of Water.

(By J. F. FRANDSEN.)

Milk can be pasteurized most effectively in the bottles in which it is received. To do this a small tin pail with a perforated false bottom can be used. If a special pail is not at hand, the same results can be secured by using an ordinary tin pail with an inverted plate placed in the bottom of the same. This false bottom is placed in the pail so as to permit circulation of water and prevent bumping of the bottles. An accurate thermometer should be placed in the water or in one of the bottles. Set the bottles of milk in the pail and fill with water nearly level with the milk in the bottles. Place the pail with the milk bottles on the stove and heat until the thermometer indicates a temperature of from 150 to 160 degrees F. The pail and bottles should then be removed from the stove and allowed to stand 25 minutes in the hot water. Now remove the cover and place the pail under a cold water faucet, allowing the water to run slowly into the pail. Continue until all the hot water has been replaced with the cold water and the temperature of the milk has been reduced to about that of the water. This is the cheapest and most efficient way of cooling and will also prevent breaking of bottles. The milk can then be conveyed to the refrigerator and placed on ice until required for use.

It is well to remember that pasteurized milk should not be used for the feeding of children after it is 24 hours old.

Cultivating Corn.

The purposes of intercultural tillage are, first, to kill weeds; second, to keep the surface soil receptive to rainfall; third, to prevent the evaporation of soil moisture. Cultivating corn four inches deep, as compared with two inches deep, may reduce the yield ten per cent, owing to pruning the roots. Four or five cultivations are usually sufficient.

More frequent cultivations have not been shown to increase the yield when the soil is not unduly compacted from heavy rainfall, provided it is free from weeds.

Salt for Hard Worker.

Horses at hard work and on full grain feed should have salt often. A good way is to keep a lump of rock salt in the corner of each feed box—they are the best judges of the amount of salt they require, and if they afford a constant supply will not eat too much.

Care for Colt's Feet.

Take half a day to examine and trim up your colt's feet. Many young horses are injured by letting their feet grow wild.

Equal Chance for All.

It is an easy matter to put all the little pigs together to be fed by themselves or to enlarge the troughs so they may all have an equal chance.

The Outlook in Mexico.

Mexico and its affairs have been completely overshadowed for the past month by the events in Europe, which so largely affect the world, but during the past few days the hopes of those few who thought peace would come to Mexico through those our Administration so largely believed to be a supreme authority have been shattered to a great degree.

When Carranza scornfully refused to be a party to the attempt at peace by diplomacy when he refused to guarantee the safety of life, person and property to those in Mexico who had supported Huerta, it was quite plain, that, having had his armies equipped for battle through the raising of the embargo on arms by our Administration, and having been able through that means to defeat the armies opposed to him, he had no further use for the Government which had aided the revolutionists.

Carranza's administration has been inaugurated by the slaughter of 161 policemen in Mexico City, if the latest reports are to be believed. It is said military executions of ex-Federal officers are proceeding with vigor and energy throughout Central and Northern Mexico.

Zapata has not yet been reconciled; the Constitutional troops have not been able to secure all the loot they desire; the foreign situation makes it impossible to load at this time very difficult, and between Huerta paper currency and Carranza paper currency and no coin in circulation, no employment in mines or construction works for the natives, and agriculture almost ruined, Villa under more than suspicion as to his loyalty to Carranza, it would seem that our Premier will shortly be called upon to arrange for another diplomatic fiasco on Mexican affairs.

There will be no permanent peace in Mexico until there is a Government there that will co-operate with that of the United States to produce that peace.

No Government can maintain itself there without the moral and military aid of the United States.

That moral and military aid must prevent the hatching of conspiracies and the use of the administration in power there; it must prevent arms, ammunition and military supplies from being shipped to Mexico in aid of insurrectionists and revolutionists.

This present Administration of Carranza is responsible for Carranza and his outfit. It is responsible for the existence of Zapata, for the advancement of Villa, for with out its aid and assistance, its com fort and support they all would have been as dead as Benton, the Scotchman, or exiles like so many others of their countrymen.

We sincerely hope Mexico will have peace under the men whom our Premier selected as the instruments of the reformation of Mexico, as the only agents to uplift its people, and that thru their administration of affairs there they will bring no reproach upon our Government which allowed them the weapons to obtain power.

Yet we cannot but doubt when we view their record and existing conditions—Enquirer.

The Parent and the School

When you sent your child to school Monday did you give it any advice as to its conduct or as to its attitude toward the teachers who would be charged with its instruction? Did you seek, by simple methods and those most easily understood, to inculcate in the childish mind the fact that the teacher was the head of the school, aside from father and mother, be its best friend? Did you cultivate a feeling of love and obedience rather than of insubordination and perhaps a servile fear? Did you tell the child to obey the teacher and seek to establish the factor in the confidence of the former at the outset?

If you did not do any or all of these things, you have made a mistake, and before the second week of school begins, you should see that this oversight is repaired. The average teacher, we believe, fair minded enough to seek the best methods to correct any inherent weakness discernible in any child, well knowing that the basic work of education must be done right there. They can only do this if they have the unshaking confidence of the child. And this confidence can be fashioned largely in the home, where the childish mind is most easily affected. By influence, either good or bad. The matter of obedience, should, of course, be urged primarily because it is right. And yet that is but the beginning, which lies beyond, and part of it is that obedience develops the fact of discipline, and that discipline is the foundation of all good habits and that the child must alone to comply with set or certain rules, but rather so trains the mind to an undeviating course of work that knowledge is the more easily acquired, that it is better retained. The preceptive and acquisitive faculties are developed by intellectual exercise, and with it the desire for and acquiring of knowledge grow strong. But first the child must know the teacher to be his friend—the friend of his best aspirations—the guardian of his truest interests—the monitor of his expanding thought—the directing influence in the manner of citizenship which will be his in the latter years of his life. The latter years of his life, the friendship of the child for the teacher, and that is where the obligation of parents rests to will largely determine the course of the child thru future years.

A Vision of War.

(Robert G. Ingersoll)

The past rises before me, as it were, like a dream. Again we are in the great struggle for national life. We hear the sounds of preparations—the music of boisterous drums—the silver voices of heroic bugles.

We see thousands of assemblies, and hear the appeals of orators; we see the pale cheeks of women and the flushed faces of men; and in those assemblies we see all the dead whose dust we have covered with flowers. We see right of them no more.

We are with them when they enlist in the great army of freedom. We see them part with those they love. Some are walking for the last time in quiet, woody places with the maidens they adore. We hear the whisperings and the sweet vows of eternal love as they lingeringly part forever. Others are kneeling over cradles, kissing babies that are asleep.

Some are receiving the blessings of old men. Some are parting with mothers who hold them and press them to their hearts again and again, and say nothing. And some are talking with wives and endeavoring with brave words, spoken in the old tones, to drive from their hearts the awful fear. We see them part. We see the wife standing in the doorway with the babe in her arms—standing in the sunlight sobbing—at the turn of the road a hand waves—the answer is a hand high in her loving arms—the child. He is gone, and forever. We see them all as they march proudly away from the waving flags, keeping time to the grand wild music of war—marching down the streets of the great cities—thru the towns and across the prairies—down to the fields of glory, to do and to die for the eternal right.

We go, with them, one and all. We are by their side on all the gory fields—in all the hospitals of pain—on all the weary marches. We stand guard with them in the wild storm and in the quiet stars. We are with them in ravines running with blood—in the furrows of old fields. We are with them when the hand of death, unable to move, wild with thirst, the life ebbing slowly away among the withered leaves. We see them, with their hands and torn with shells, in the trenches, by forts, and in the whirlwind of the charge, where men become iron, with nerves of steel.

We are bound with them in the prisons of hatred and famine; but human speech can never tell what they endured.

We are at home when the news comes that they are dead. We see the maiden in the shadow of her first sorrow. We see the silver head of the old man bowed with the last grief. The past rises before us, and we see four millions of human beings, governed by the lash—we see them bound hand and foot—we hear the strokes of cruel whips—we see the hounds tracking women thru tangled swamps. We see babies sold from the breasts of mothers. Cruelly unspeakable! Outrage infinite!

Four million bodies in chains—four million souls in fetters. All the sacred relations of wife, mother, father and child trampled beneath the brutal feet of might. And all this was done under our beautiful banner of the free.

The past rises before us. We hear the roar and shriek of the bursting shell. The broken fetters fall. These heroes die. We look instead of slaves we see men and women and children. The wand of progress touches the auction block, the slave pen, the whipping post, and we see homes and schools and churches, the books, and where all was want and crime and cruelty and fear we see the faces of the free.

These heroes are dead. They died for liberty—they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free, under the flag they rendered atless, under the solemn pines, the hemlocks, the tamar willows, and the embracing vines.

They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or of storm, rich in the windowless palace of Rest. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace.

In the midst of battle, in the roar of conflict, they found the security of death. I have one sentiment for soldiers living—and dead: Cheers for the living; tears for the dead.

Selecting Seed Corn.

Seed corn should be selected in the fall just as it is coming to maturity. Select well developed ears growing on well developed plants, and of the same color. Do not select large ears grown in hills, for these have been extremely heavy. A way of rich spots in the field is to be avoided in regard to seed corn. Do not select those that are most heavily covered with average ears being equal. Select those that are tall, slender and more. Never select those that are long and thin. Select one of the tip angle of ears that grain

STATE NEWS.

The Anderson News reports a man that has perfected a lawn grass that never grows high enough to need a lawn mower. God bless his invention. If he can discover garden vegetables that require no cultivation, a noiseless fire cracker, a shotless gun and legless mules, we will be able to live until we die a natural death. Send him to Fairmount—Fairmount Penitentiary.

Mr. C. L. Waters, of near Horse Cave, has in his possession a double hen egg. The lobes are now each near the size of an ordinary hen egg, but when laid they were only about the size of a guinea's egg. They are now in weakened alcohol and Mr. Waters says they have increased in size since laid. They are shellless, and inclosed in a skinny substance, and linked together by a small connection.—Hart County News.

Some excitement was caused in the neighborhood when Henry Grubbs, who lives on Mr. Murphy's farm, about six miles from Bloomfield, purchased a horse from a traveler for $35. He turned the horse loose in the back yard and it walked around to the front and came in at the door and laid down on the bed and died. His feet came to the edge of the bed, and its legs were bent at the knees, giving him a very human appearance. The cause of the horse's death is unknown.—Nelson Standard.

A Danville man says he saw chickens catching bugs after midnight under a big red light at Crab Orchard. Possibly Crab Orchard has a scientific who has succeeded in crossing the chicken with the owl or some other bird of nocturnal habits. All the chickens that we ever saw in our youthful days went to bed at dusk and arose promptly at daylight, and we are prone to believe that the Danville man had his wires crossed or that some marvels have been wrought in chicken genetics up at the pleasant little Village of Crab Orchard.—Springfield Sun.

Bath county is now entirely without a newspaper. The Sharpsburg World quit business several months ago when its owner and editor, J. Clyde Nelson, received the appointment as postmaster at that place, and with the death last week of Mr. D. S. Estill, who for thirty years has been connected with the Owingsville Outlook, recently owing to the continued ill health of the Outlook's proprietor, Mr. John W. Honaker, being in complete charge of that organ, the paper has been indefinitely suspended, all efforts to secure a competent successor to Mr. Estill having failed.—Mt. Sterling Gazette.

Already somebody has discovered that rabbits are going to be plentiful this year. We are not disposed to doubt it. There never has been a year in our recollection that rabbits have not been plentiful in Kentucky, despite the fact that the rabbit slaughter every winter is immense. "Mollie Mare" is a prolific animal and has successfully defied all efforts at her extermination. Somebody started a report a few years ago that all the rabbits were dying of diphtheria. It seems to have been a false alarm, but it caused a good many people to lose their relish for rabbit hash.—Marion Post.

Shipping by Parcel Post.

The practicability of shipping perishable produce by parcel post is not open to serious question. For many years the investigators in the Department of Agriculture, concerned in the introduction, breeding, improvement and general study of all kinds of fruits, vegetables and other plants have utilized the mails in the shipping of experimental material. More recent, definite and carefully planned experiments covering eggs, butter, strawberries, cherries, lettuce and assorted vegetables have been undertaken.

Extensive shipments by parcel post have been made for a number of months. No shipments of less than two pounds have been sent because of the relatively high expense incident to the use of a single pound. It is now possible to ship from one to two pounds, and from two to five pounds, and from five to ten pounds, and from ten to twenty pounds, and from twenty to thirty pounds, and from thirty to forty pounds, and from forty to fifty pounds, and from fifty to sixty pounds, and from sixty to seventy pounds, and from seventy to eighty pounds, and from eighty to ninety pounds, and from ninety to one Nervous?

Mrs. Walter Vincent, of Pleasant Hill, N. C., writes: "For three summers, I suffered from nervousness, dreadful pains in my back and sides, and weak sinking spells. Three bottles of Cardui, the woman's tonic, relieved me entirely. I feel like another person, now."

TAKE

The Woman's Tonic

For over 50 years, Cardui has been helping to relieve women's unnecessary pains and building weak women up to health and strength. It will do the same for you, if given a fair trial. So, don't wait, but begin taking Cardui today, for its use cannot harm you, and should surely do you good.

FARM POULTRY

WHY POULTRY IS VALUABLE

Canadian Expert Gives Eight Reasons In Reply to This Pertinent Question—Good Anywhere.

Why is poultry valuable to the farmer is a question asked by hundreds of tillers of the soil who usually keep but a few chickens, and these a mixture of all breeds. Professor Gilbert of Ottawa, Canada, gives the following reasons in answer to this pertinent question:

1. Because he ought, by their means to convert a great deal of the waste of his farm into money in the shape of eggs and chickens for market.
2. Because, with intelligent management they ought to be all-year revenue producers, with the exception of possibly two months during the moulting season.
3. Because the poultry will yield him a quicker return for the capital invested than any of the other departments of agriculture.
4. Because the manure of the poultry house will make a valuable com-

DON'TS FOR THE POULTRYMEN

Idaho Instructor in Poultry Industry Gives Several Excellent Hints for Poultry Success.

(By LILLIAN BLANCHARD, Instructor in Poultry Industry, Pullman, Wash.)

Don't allow vermin among little chicks.
Don't allow chicks to become chilled.
Don't feed unbalanced rations.
Don't overcrowd the chicks.
Don't neglect to feed an abundance of green stuff.
Don't neglect to cul continually.
Don't feed spoiled grain.
Don't hatch chicks late if you expect fall and winter layers.
Don't hatch more chicks than you can care for.
Don't set dirty or old eggs.
Don't allow sitting hens on the layers' nests.
Don't allow the male birds to run with the hens after the hatching season is over.
Don't allow too many females with the male bird during the mating season.
Don't expect results without work.

Moulting is Natural.

The molting of fowls is a natural process and not a disease, and no medical treatment is necessary or desirable. Feed molting fowls just as you would feed them at any other time, only remembering that molting is done during hot weather and less carbonaceous food should be given than when the weather is cool. Oats, wheat, cut clover or alfalfa or any leguminous feeds may be used because the weather is warm that that fowls are molting. Any sort of green food is good; so are beets, turnips, bulbs, or tubers of any sort that they will eat. They should have little corn or other heat-producing food.

Sign of Distress.

When chickens have droopy wings it is a sign that they have vermin and need attention.

Winter Ventilation.

Try a cloth-covered ventilating space in the south side of the house.

MARKETING FOR THE HOME.

In a large number of homes the marketing problem is left to chance, not much thought or planning given to it. Most housewives have a certain amount to spend and often it is either a feast or famine in such an unorganized arrangement.

Experience is indeed a dear teacher, and she is wise who learns early how to use the household money wisely. Haphazard buying is most extravagant and a few lessons in useless buying is usually enough. Marketing is a household science and the buying of meats is one of extreme importance. We are passing the time when it is considered paragon to be called economical and to take pride in being unpractical.

One of the first things for a woman to learn in buying is to regulate her wants to fit her purse. It takes real self denial to deny ones self the attractive delicacies and comfort her to the urgent needs of the family, even shopping and marketing will develop self-control and character.

The woman who pays her bills promptly will get better service every time from her merchant, for if he has to wait indefinitely for bills to be paid he is apt to money interest by adding a cent here or there which in a month or two swells the bills considerably.

The ready money to the merchant means a great deal, for his accounts must be settled promptly if he gets good and prompt returns from the big markets.

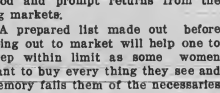

A prepared list made out before going out to market will help one to keep within limit as some women want to buy every thing they see and memory fails them of the necessities if a list is not at hand.

Another way market men even with a slow paying customer is to send second rate articles and charge first prices. So it pays to be prompt with the paying of bills.

When buying meats see that it is of good bright color and well marbled with fat. The weight is a good test for fruits like oranges, lemons and grape fruit. Perishable foods should never be bought in large quantities.

NUTS INSTEAD OF MEAT.

Nuts have such a high place in the food and with many take the place of meats that a few recipes will be suggestive in planning menus.

A handful of nuts added to a cup of chow, cabbage and eggs put through a simple dressing makes a most wholesome salad.

Apples, which may be peeled, cored and stewed until nearly tender without losing their shape may then be decorated with quartered blanched almonds, put in a preserving jar, sprinkle with powdered sugar and bake long enough to brown the almonds and finish the cooking of the apples. A little sirup poured around them while baking will be an addition and may be served with whipped cream around the fruit after it is well chilled.

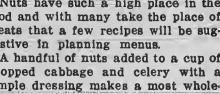

Potato-balls decorated with almonds and brushed with butter, then baked, are another most attractive looking dish.

Nut Fruit Cheese.—Add to a cupful of chopped history nut meats, a cup of dates, a half dozen figs, put through a meat chopper, six bananas, mashed, a cup of blanched and chopped almonds, salt, turn the mixture into a buttered mold, cover with buttered paper and steam for three hours. Turn out and when cold, cover with a meringue, brown and garnish the dish when serving, with stuffed dates.

Nut stuffing for baked onions is delicious. Chop a cup of pecans, mix with a tablespoonful of butter and two of bread crumbs, add salt and stuff large par-boiled onions whose centers have been removed with the nuts, and bake until the onions are perfectly tender, basting with butter and water.

COOL SUMMER DRINKS.

The acids of fruits and the mineral matter as well as food in many of the drinks make them particularly good. Some drinks are of themselves a food.

Reception Coffee.—Make a quart or two of strong coffee, according to the number served. Strain cool and add sugar to taste, serve in tall glasses with a spoonful of ice-cream on top of each. Keep on ice until ready to serve, then the cream is added and served at once.

Chocolate Sirup.—Melt two squares of chocolate with two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, and a cupful of sugar, a speck of salt, and two quarts of boiling water; cook five minutes, strain and bottle. Keep in a cool place until needed.

Orangeade.—To each glass, add the strained juice of one orange, two tablespoonfuls of prepared sirup and three-fourths of a cup of plain or charged water.

Pineapple Drink.—Add a pint of grated pineapple to a pint of prepared sirup and a quart of water. Set on ice for three hours, strain and serve. Prepared sirup is sugar and water thickened together with thick. Lemon juice is sometimes added.

Grape Nectar.—To a pint of juice, add a pint of orange juice, four orange slices, a quart of charged water.

Ginger Lemonade.—A pound of Canton ginger, half cups of water, juice of three lemons, and cool.

A FEW COMPANY DISHES.

Arrange a few white grapes (after carefully making a slit in the side of each and removing the seeds) on a bed of blanched lettuce, put cream cheese through a ricer and sprinkle over them. Serve with French dressing well chilled.

Bake an angel food in a round tin and when cold, carefully cut out the center and fill with vanilla ice cream. Serve with a chocolate sauce.

Cherry Ice cream is both pretty and tastes good. Use a cup of rich cherry juice and a pint of cream, flavor with almond and sweeten, if necessary. Freeze and garnish each sherbet cup of the cream with a spoonful of chopped cherries.

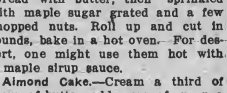

A sweet of which children are very fond is prepared by making an ordinary biscuit dough rolled out and spread with butter, then sprinkled with maple sugar grated and a few chopped nuts. Roll up and cut in rounds, bake in a hot oven. For dessert, one might use them hot with a maple sirup sauce.

Almond Cake.—Cream a third of a cup of butter, add a cup of sugar, a cup of flour, a teaspoon of baking powder, a bit of salt and a fourth of a cup of cream mix the six eggs, well beaten, and the grated rind of one lemon. Put the mixture into a good sized pan and cover the dough with the whites well beaten and mixed with a cup of sugar and a cup of unblanched almonds chopped. Bake in a slow oven.

Nut Loaf.—To a cupful of nut meats, add two cups of bread crumbs, half a cup of hot water, half a cup of melted butter, one egg, well beaten, a teaspoonful of onion juice and a teaspoonful of tomato catsup, one teaspoonful of salt, a few shreds of pepper, more salt may be needed, mix well and put into a buttered mold, and bake for an hour, covering the first half hour. During the cooking, baste with melted butter three times. Turn out on a hot dish, sprinkle with chopped nuts and serve with a brown sauce.

RUBIC ROAD OILING

EXPENSE SHOULD BE

Railroads should share with the cost of building and proper maintenance of Roads.

(BY HOWARD H. GROSS)
In a large measure the building of a road should be a local matter; the roads, no community should have good roads forced upon them, and the building of the roads should not begin until the majority of the people living in a community want to undertake it. Let the voters of the township or the county press the button that puts the chinery in action.

It also would be well to remember that the roads are public property and belong to everyone. The farmer ought not to pay all the taxes for building and maintaining the roads, they are the feeders for the railways. It is all important to the ways that the highways shall be

OIL APPLIED TO DIRT ROADS

Much Used in Illinois as Preventive of Mud as Well as Dust—Several Good Methods.

(BY T. M. CUSHEL)
Many roads in rural fields of Illinois have been treated with oil which is a preventive of mud as well as dust. Roads that were put in shape and the winter travel which is always heavy in the oil fields, and came out in the spring with very little needed repairs.

In applying oil to our common dirt roads several methods are employed. Sometimes where the road is in good shape the oil is sprinkled on without any further preparations. This is sufficient for summer roads and for holding down the dust, but a better method should be employed where good winter roads are expected.

First the road should be well worked with the road machine, then apply the oil with a sprayer, putting on enough to wet down the road. Then worked dirt, then a disk or harrow should be used to mix the oil well with the clay; after sprinkling again, the roller is used to smooth down and pack the roads.

After this the road should be sprinkled once a month in winter to keep it from taking water.

All ruts must be filled with dirt as soon as they commence to form. Also work down this filling with oil.

After two years of this treatment roads become solid and show but little waste from travel and rain. Well oiled roads are dustless.

Sand roads are treated the same way but require more oil to put them in shape. A common water tank with street sprinkling attachment is all that is required for applying it to the roads.

PREVENT STEEP ROAD CUTS

Difficulty Usually Experienced in Mountains or Hilly Country is in Repairing Washouts.

In a mountainous or hilly country where the roads must be built with considerable grade, one difficulty which is usually experienced in their maintenance is in repairing washouts. When a heavy shower falls upon the road and adjoining country, water will find its way to the depressions from by the wheels. It flows down these depressions, gaining volume and velocity as it goes until the road surface is eroded and deep ruts are formed. The road which was good in the beginning is now rough and rutty and unpleasant and even dangerous to travel over.

One of the very best methods for preventing this cutting writes H. B. House of the Colorado Agricultural College is to build across the road at intervals of two or three hundred feet, ditches running entirely across the road. These ditches should be about four feet deep and perhaps three feet wide. They should catch the water as they will discharge the water at some distance from the road and continue on down the hill from the road.

In order that the road may be smooth, plank bridges are placed across these ditches. These are very simple affairs, 4x4 and 2x6 or 2x8 being very well for the flooring. These planks should be placed so that cracks are one-half to two inches wide between these planks. These planks are running across the road so the water comes down the road through them, into the ditch and goes away. In this way the volume of water flowing over the road surface is kept down and cutting prevented.

Investigation shows that at four-fifths of the traffic on the ways passes over about one-fourth of the road mileage; that certain heavy traffic. These are places that need the first attention should be permanently improved and find the same thing in our railways. Take the trunk lines. Here a great city where trains are moving every thirty minutes, and with enormous traffic and wear. The roads must have heavy rails, well fastened and carefully maintained. A pioneer road has a single iron with light rails and ballast—it is

Same Road After Macadamizing only one possible to build for the traffic that will at first come to it, and as the traffic increases so the physical condition of the road is correspondingly improved to meet the requirements.

The highways in the central west not meet the needs of the people, the people do not always realize that we are too apt to get along with what we have, without looking to get something better. One of the surprising things about this whole movement is that one state will have large amount of splendid roads and adjoining state few, if any. India and Illinois are notable instances.

This. Nearly 40 per cent. of the "Hoosier" highways are improved, a most of these are splendid roads, while in Illinois the percentage is seven or eight per cent. Can anyone imagine a reason why the people of Indiana can afford good roads while the neighbors in Illinois cannot? The answer is obvious.

Some Social Conditions. Not only bringing the material you but they improve the condition of your community and the neighbors and

Last week the Recorder contained an item purporting to be an announcement of the marriage of Mr. Henry Afterkirk and Miss Sadie Mollen, which item was not true. It was not sent in by a regular correspondent and the name of the person who furnished it cannot now be recalled. Such items, when false, are very annoying to all parties concerned, and a person who will impose on a paper with such false news is very little to do and deserves severe censure.

UNION.

The Presbytery of Brainer of the United States, met in regular session in the Union Presbyterian church, Union, Ky., September 21 and 22. The meeting had an unusual attendance, there being thirteen ministers and eleven ruling elders present. The opening prayer was preached by the Rev. I. Cochran Hunt, of Covington, upon the invitation of the retiring Moderator, Rev. S. T. Hill, pastor of Union church, and a large and attentive audience was delighted and spiritually uplifted by his message. After the sermon the Presbytery was called to order and Rev. I. C. Hunt was unanimously chosen as Moderator, and he presided throughout the meeting with his characteristic dignity and grace.

The morning of the second day was taken up by the regular routine of business until 10 o'clock, when delegates and people of Union assembled to listen to an address on Foreign Missions by Rev. R. L. Benn, of Mayville.

Presbytery took recess at twelve o'clock and resumed at 2 p. m. and retired to the Odd-Fellows' Hall, where they were served most bountifully to a most delightful dinner, the menu of which would be impossible to print because of its length, by the good ladies of Union. Thanks to everyone of them! Showers of compliments were passed upon them and the opinion expressed in open Presbytery was that it wouldn't be any trouble to get the body to return at any time to be entertained by the charming people of Union.

At 2 p. m. we all listened to an eloquent address by the Rev. Dr. Garfield, recently elected President of Central University, Danville, Kentucky.

The program for the last evening consisted of a conference on Home Missions on the Presbytery. Brief messages were heard from Rev. Messrs. Venable, Kinnaird, Erickson, Hunt, and Cochran, and Mr. R. K. Axson, all of which were interesting and instructive.

At ten o'clock Presbytery adjourned to meet again next April at Sharon, Kentucky.

Below is a list of the delegates:

Ministers—

W. L. Benn, Mayville.

W. O. Cochran, D. D. Augusta.

Alfred Erickson, Phelps.

W. W. Evans, Walton.

S. T. Hill, Richmond.

I. C. Hunt, Covington.

R. L. Kinnaird, Catlettsburg.

P. D. Rhodes, Clintonville.

A. D. Paddock, D. D. Sharon.

A. S. Furr, Louisville.

H. A. Love, Grayson.

D. Thomas, Carlisle.

W. P. Hooper, Washington.

Deacons—

John C. Bedinger, Richmond.

E. S. Lee, Crescent Springs.

J. L. Frazier, Union.

R. S. Furr, Louisville.

J. B. Luck, Catlettsburg.

R. P. Dow, Paris.

Thos. H. Brown, Millersburg.

C. J. Hunter, Lebanon.

W. L. Robb, Mayfield.

T. H. Crutcher, Crittenden.

Walter Brown, Washington.

Corresponding Members—

Rev. J. M. Caldwell, Danville.

Mr. R. K. Axson, Louisville.

Rev. Edgar Hubbard, Crittenden.

Wells-Hayes.

Wishing to keep their wedding a profound secret until the next day Miss Anna Hayes and Mr. E. M. Wells stole a march on Sunday morning, Sept. 27, 1915, and went to the Baptist parsonage where they were united in marriage at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. H. H. Elmore in the presence of the bride's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Cribb. But "the best laid plans" often go awry, and immediately after the ceremony they went to the groom's pretty home on High street and had been there a little while when a number of their friends gathered to give them an old fashioned charivari.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. S. A. Hayes and is a most estimable lady. The groom is one of Brownstown's most prosperous citizens and for number of years has been engaged in the poultry business. Both have a large circle of friends here and elsewhere whom the BAPTIST churchmen extend their hearty congratulations.—Brownstown, (Ind.) Banner.

To the Members of the Baptist Church:

Some of the ladies of the church are trying to make up a box of clothing to send to the new Orphans Home at Glendale, Ky. They are still greatly in debt for the Home, which is a large farm, and the children will be taught to work. There were 35 children in last year's census and you can not send anything unless you have good clothing your children need. Those who haven't wearing apparel can send new goods or money. All will be very acceptable; or any one who would like to send anything it would be thankfully received. Please bring or send the goods Monday, the 4th of Oct. to Mrs. E. E. Brown or Mrs. R. S. Cowan, in Burlington.

BOONE COUNTY BOY

Cleared of Charge of Recklessness by Federal Steamboat Inspectors.

(Courier-Journal.)

James E. Brashear, pilot of the steamer City of Cincinnati, was exonerated yesterday by Federal Steamboat Inspectors J. E. Abraham and Isaac W. Belts of charges of recklessness and inattention to duty in connection with the drowning of Summers Davis, who jumped out of a sailboat opposite the Louisville Boat Club on the afternoon of August 6th, through fear, it is said, of being run down by the approaching steamer. Inspectors Abraham and Belts, according to the finding in the investigation, during which eight witnesses were heard, assert that Pilot Brashear has justified by leaving the men in the sailboat jumped into the river to swim the waves of his boat, and further, that this belief was strengthened by the fact that the steamer was at least 200 feet away from the sailboat. The inspectors informed Mr. Brashear of his exoneration by letter.

"That it was reasonable of you as pilot of the steamer, to presume that it was the intention of the occupants of the sailboat to leave the waves of the steamer with the sailboat, and that when the two gentlemen jumped overboard from the sailboat that it was their intention to swim the waves, as they were dressed in swimming clothes."

"That while there is no doubt that Mr. Davis jumped overboard as it is claimed by his companion, because of his fear that your steamer would run over the sailboat it is a well known fact by persons experienced on the river and, as is shown by the evidence of some of the witnesses, that when a large steamer, such as your steamer, is approaching a small boat, that the cross distance is very deceptive and that it appears to the occupants of the small boat that the large steamer was bearing directly upon the small boat, even though as a matter of fact, the large boat is a safe distance to the side. It is this deception in our opinion, which made it so apparent to the occupants of the sailboat that they were in danger, and that your steamer was running down directly upon them as the preponderance of evidence shows that the sailboat was, as you state, at least 200 feet to 300 feet off opposite the bow of the steamer when Mr. Davis jumped into the river."

"We are, therefore, of the opinion that although the introduction does not sustain the charges preferred against you, and we hereby under authority of Section 4459, revised statutes, dismiss the charges."

Pilot Brashear is a son of Robt. Brashear, of Bellevue neighborhood, this county.

George W. Brown

Answers Summons.

G. W. Brown died at his residence, 1509 Siger street, last Saturday evening. Mr. Brown was born in Boone county, Ky., Feb. 28, 1853. He was first married to Miss Lillie Foster of Ky. To his first wife he had one child, daughter, named Maud, who is now the wife of B. M. Corlett, a resident of this city.

For the sake of his wife's health Mr. Brown moved from Kentucky to Nashville in 1880. But the wife's illness baffled the best medical skill, and she died in 1891. He was married again in 1892 to Miss Carrie M. Blilick. Besides his wife and daughter, who survive him, he has also one brother, T. J. Brown, living in Constance, Ky., one sister, Mrs. T. W. McNeal, living in Ludlow, Ky.

When Mr. Brown first came to Nashville he engaged in real estate business with the firm of Minis & Minis. Later the firm was succeeded by G. W. Brown & Co. Here he remained until his death. Mr. Brown had his office in the Chamber of Commerce building, now the Life & Casualty building for 20 years. He was manager of the building for fourteen years. Five years ago Mr. Brown suffered a stroke of paralysis, but recovering was able to attend to his business up until about six months ago. For quite a while he had been afflicted with Bright's disease. About six months ago his disease became acute and he had been confined to his room almost ever since.

Mr. Brown joined the Masonic lodge 41 years ago and died a consistent Mason. He was of a quiet disposition, never demonstrative, and was a man of a most charitable view of the faults of other men. He was a poor man's friend, helping them when in need and was always ready in meeting their obligations to him. He practiced the Golden Rule—Nashville Banner.

Mr. Brown was well known and liked in this county where he was born and raised.

In another column will be seen an advertisement for the Big Race at Lawrenceburg, Indiana, October 8th and 9th.

Rev. R. H. Carter is now the owner of an automobile, his brother, Mr. Paul, having presented him with the machine.

Kirkland to Furish

Attraction at Erlanger Fair.

The directors of the Erlanger Fair have contracted with the Erlanger Fair Association of Cincinnati, Ohio, to furnish all of the free attractions and shows. The program is one of the most elaborate ever presented at any fair. Every afternoon there will be free acts in the clouds between a flying machine and balloon, a spectacle which alone will warrant a day in Erlanger. There will be free acts of fine attraction never seen, except in the largest circuses, with band concerts, races, aeroplans and balloon ascensions, and free open acts, including Dare Devil Doherty the vaulting cyclist in his Daring Death-Defying Leap thru space over his bike. We expect to entertain our visitors in a manner creditable to Erlanger and worthy of our guests.

"Edna Daws' Musical Review" with fifteen people will be on the grounds as one of the feature attractions of the "Midway" to attract to the fair. This attraction is unique. The beauty of the orient combined with the splendor of the modern are here combined making a presentation more on character than the human mind can conceive.

"Kirklands' Dixieland" with 24 Old Star performers and their own brass band will be on the grounds. The South's foremost colored performers will here be seen at their best. Besides the Dixieland band there will be a variety of other acts. The Blue Eyes Baby Dolls, the Cute Electric-Eyed Teddy Bears, the Navajo Indian Kites, as well as everything else that makes to make a Midway a success.

ERLANGER FAIR BOARD.

TOBACCO NOTES.

The crop is housed in Woodford county.

Practically all of the Jessamine county crop is cut and housed.

The tobacco crop in Simpson county is being cut and housed, and in both quantity and quality it is said to be much better than the 1914 crop.

A heavy frost in Mason and Lewis counties last week did considerable damage to uncultivated tobacco; about half the crop being in the field. Fog prevented damage along the river.

About 75 per cent of the tobacco in Nicholas county has been cut and much of it has been cured. The crop generally is reported in good shape and no injury was sustained from the light frosts.

Tobacco which has been housed in Nicholas county is reported to be curing very fast as a result of the very hot weather, which has prevailed during last week, and as a result growers report that conditions are very much improved. Housing of the crop has been carried on a large scale during the past week as favorable weather prevailed until Saturday of last week, when the first rains of the week came. Tobacco curing indicates that the crop which this year weighs much lighter than last year as there has been a very wet season.

Montgomery county's crop will be an unusually large one. This is shown by the lack of barn room evident everywhere. Many new barns were built, and many old ones enlarged and sheds have been erected and still there is not enough room. The yield is much better than anticipated. Much damage has resulted in crowding and carelessness in housing. Two weeks ago during the rain much tobacco was damp when housed, and this caused house-burn and rot, and many growers have taken out a portion of the crop to allow it to dry out. Much color is shown and the weight promises to be very heavy in all fields, some figuring that the crop will show 2,200 to 2,500 pounds per acre.

Growers report that a large acreage of the tobacco crop has been housed during the past week as a result of the ideal weather that prevailed. The frost for two nights did no damage, but is causing the tobacco to ripen rapidly. It is believed the work of housing will be completed in the next two or three weeks. Some growers report they have finished the week. The tobacco, cut early, is nicely cured, and will be ready for stripping by the last of October. The growers claim much better crop than last year is indicated, there being less bad tobacco but that it will weigh much lighter. No house burning has been reported for about two weeks.

Growing Cotton Again.

Spot cotton in local markets has gone away above 10 cents, and December closed yesterday above 11 cents.

It is nearly as far above 10 cents now as it was above 9 cents a week or ten days ago. And it is strong at that. There is scarcely enough cotton in the world to satisfy the needs, and those countries which must have it are making plans to get their share of it in due time. It is understood that even Germany is active in the American market, and is purchasing and storing cotton against the day when she can make prompt use of it.

Negotiation for the immense Anglo-French loan are undoubtedly proving a leading factor in strengthening the market. American financiers are not going to let that loan or any part of it go elsewhere, and it is noted finally made it means more money at still higher prices.

Everywhere it is recognized that the tendency of the market is upward. It is advancing or strengthening every day, and predictions of cotton at 12½ cents, and even higher, which seemed over-optimistic a month ago, are now within the realm of early probability.

There is no need of further comment upon the meaning of this to the business south. The effect is already felt in business activity. The like of which we have not known since the European war began. It will continue to grow until we have actually arrived at the biggest and best fall and winter season we have ever known.

That is just what we were looking forward to 14 months ago when cotton was selling at 11 cents! And then it slumped half, when all Europe became involved in war.

Now 11-cent cotton is coming again. It is nearly here. It means more profit than an 12 or 13-cent cotton would have meant a year ago. The cotton grower has much cheaper. Economy has told the story, and the money is beginning to come in. We have put the sticks in the fire, and in point of remunerative income it promises to be the biggest yet. —Atlanta Constitution.

To Impose Drastic Tax

To Pay Vast War Cost.

London, Sept. 23.—The greatest war budget in the world's history was introduced in the House of Commons today by Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, another step toward financing the war which now is costing Great Britain twenty-five million dollars daily.

New military requirements and changed methods of warfare have created overnight additional expenditures which had not been reckoned with even in the comparatively recent estimates of Minister of Munitions Lloyd George, necessitating in the budget, the third since the outbreak of hostilities, the most drastic and far-reaching taxes in the country's history, involving even free trade.

General debate on the budget is yet to be held, but it is apparent that McKenna's suggestions were received by a virtually unanimous house. The Chancellor said incidentally he would have occasion to call on the country for another war loan.

McKenna estimated the government's revenue for the current year to be $1,350,000,000. The expenditures will reach $7,750,000,000 and the dead weight of debt at the close of the financial year will be $11,000,000,000.

Mr. McKenna proposed in addition of 40 per cent to the existing income tax, and the taxation of all incomes of $5,500 or more. An all-around increase of 50 per cent in the duty on tea, coffee, chocolate, dried fruits and other articles was suggested and also an increase of 100 per cent on patent medicines.

A heavy tax on the profits of manufacturers of war supplies also was proposed by the Chancellor.

Another source of revenue is to be an increase in postal rates. A tax on all imported motor cars, bicycles, moving picture films, clocks, watches, musical instruments, plate glass and hats also was put forward by the Chancellor.

Alfalfa on the Hill Sides.

W. C. Johnson, of Boone county, has steep hill slopes, some so steep that a mower can not operate. The land is full of timothy, consequently full of lime. After spending a winter in Arizona, where he fed alfalfa hay, he sowed two or one-half acres on his hillside, but, failing to inoculate, he met with little success. He then read F. D. Coburn's alfalfa book and he inspired more than ever to grow this hay; then he used sweet-clover soil for inoculation and made a real start.

This was in June. He now has 2½ acres yielding 10 to 14 tons of alfalfa. During this time he has plowed up some fields, planted soil very much enriched. He feeds the hay to horses, mules, cows, sheep and hogs, and claims it is better than timothy by 200 per cent and 100 per cent better than clover. Mr. Johnson has no need to apply lime to his land and does not use phosphate and claims he gets splendid results. "I do not doubt it," for three or four cuttings of such hay from a permanent meadow on steep hillside is good farming, besides his land is growing richer. Mr. Johnson says there is more land being planted in his neighborhood this year to alfalfa than ever before. They like May and June, because the plants get well established before winter. These Boone county farmers find that alfalfa largely takes the place of corn in the feeding, thereby lessening the acres of this crop cultivated, which is somewhat difficult on very hilly land. —Kentucky Farming.

Parcel Post Exports.

The postoffice department is reported to be working out a plan for the furtherance of our export trade through a radical extension of the foreign parcel post service. The details have not been made public, but it is understood that the plan contemplates taking off the present size and weight restrictions and making a good farming, besides his land is growing richer. Mr. Johnson says there is more land being planted in his neighborhood this year to alfalfa than ever before. They like May and June, because the plants get well established before winter. These Boone county farmers find that alfalfa largely takes the place of corn in the feeding, thereby lessening the acres of this crop cultivated, which is somewhat difficult on very hilly land. —Kentucky Farming.

The purpose is to bring the American manufacturer into direct relations with the foreign merchant or consumer. Hitherto the biggest manufacturers have had an advantage in the export trade because they alone could afford the expense of developing it. The object of the government in this new project is said to be to give everybody an equal chance at the foreign markets, just as at domestic parcel post has already served to open up opportunities in our own markets.

It looks like an admirable move. The federal trade commission has been actively interested in it, along with the general promotion of export trade, also it was supposed to be a part of the tariff revision business. Maybe business doesn't need so much regulating any more as people thought. Anyhow, it is well to have the vigorous administrative department of the government co-operating in a campaign to win all possible legitimate advantages abroad for American business and is fostering business democracy in both our export and domestic commerce. —Ex.

No Evidence of Poison.

Examination of the contents of the stomach and analysis of a portion of the liver and kidneys of Mrs. Polly Davis, of Breathitt county, who has been accused of poisoning, showed no evidence of poison. The Breathitt county court, after examining the evidence, ordered the examination during a hearing for Mrs. Hamilton's release on bail.

Creelius that certificates must be filed in his office before October 4th in order that the names to go on the ballot may be certified to the county clerks.

Mr. R. H. Rogers, of West Danville, brought to the Advocate office this morning a curious tomato. It weighs a pound and a half and was grown on the fair grounds property. The tomato began growing sideways and continued until it formed a small hoop. The vegetable has been the source of considerable observation and comment. —Danville Advocate.

Cotton picking began in Fulton county nearly two weeks ago, and is now under great headway. The cotton this year is somewhat later than last year's crop, but is in fine condition, and every indication at the present time that prices will be reasonably good, and that the farmers will be ahead this year. On account of low prices last year and the financial depression, the acreage this year is not nearly so large as last year's crop, being cut fully two-fifths; many farmers are planting grain in place of cotton.

The past week of hot, dry weather has been a great benefit to corn in Jessamine county, which was being damaged by the excessive moisture. Hemp is out and in the shock. Alfalfa is not cut and shocked, it is hard enough for the silos. The cow peas crop in which farmers now take so much interest is fine this year, and the probability is it will soon be the leading hay crop. The ground is fine for plowing, and the farmers are preparing for sowing wheat. The acreage will far exceed that of last year.

The Clarion received a freak Irish potato from Mr. Dave Hardin, of Patesville, Wednesday. It was raised on his place and is fourteen and one-half inches long and five and one-half inches across and weighs two and one-half lbs. It consists of nine potatoes intergrown, making one large one. Three of the nine would be considered large if by themselves, while the other six are from the size of a guinea egg to a large size hen egg. Many people who have seen it in the window pronounced it one of the largest potatoes ever seen by them. —Hawesville Clarion.

Snakes are reported to be more numerous this year than ever before in Clay county, and large numbers of them have been killed. Saturday a farmer killed a large snake about three miles from here. It was a large one, it was found to contain fifty-one young ones, the number being vouched for by several men who caught them. The snake was of a variety never before seen here, being black, with a button on the tail similar to a rattlesnake, and it was identified by an Indian herb doctor traveling through the county as a "French rattlesnake," said to thrive in the southern states. How the snake arrived in this part of the county is not known.

R. C. Lawson, the veteran house painter of this city, tells a strange story of some chickens which happened while he was moving a big house at Lewisburg, recently for a man named Sage. Mr. Lawson touches the truth of the story. This house was moved a distance of about a mile and it took three weeks for the job. When the house was moved the original site two hens, each with a drove of chickens, were left there. Every night and morning the chickens would come to the house where it was at that time for their feeding. After being fed they would go back to the former site for the rest of the day or to roost at night. This was kept up until the house was moved more than half the distance it was to go. At the end of two weeks Mr. Lawson himself had the chickens caught and penned up in the house and kept them there until the moving was completed, when he turned them loose at the new location and they remained contentedly. —Hopkinsville News Era.

Another Forward Step.

Another forward step has been registered by Kentucky. Thru the efforts of the racing commission a breeding bureau has been established for the purpose of securing a true type of cavalry horse. The ranks of the cavalry horse in Kentucky having been depleted by the rural districts, the purpose of the commission to cross the blood strains of the ordinary mare which is found on the farms of the State with that of the thoroughbred.

A round sum has been subscribed by the three jockey clubs in the State and already Prof. J. J. Hooper, who is the head of the Department of Animal Husbandry of Kentucky State University, has secured two noted stallions for the bureau. It is his plan to take these stallions, and others, too, if they can be purchased, out to the rural districts and to educate the public by means of lectures and pictures in the ways of crossing blood strains in the best manner to procure valuable returns for their expenditures.

The ordinary mares on Kentucky farms usually boast saddle, pacing or trotting blood. Their offsprings are not worthy of the tankard or the track. For this reason these mares are generally crossed with the common stallion and the offspring is no better than either the dam or the sire. By crossing with the thoroughbred those who have fostered the plan believe that the progeny will possess more durability, more strength and more gameness. The cavalry type may be secured by this step and it is planned to charge only a nominal fee for the service of these stallions of the bureau. In fact they will be placed on the same financial scale as the so-called "plug stallion."

For many decades Kentucky has been famous for the horses which have taken the prize in the kings and queens of the show ring and the turf, and now the racing commission plans to procure the real cavalry horse. Their service to this country in promoting preparedness in case of emergencies and to add further fame to the Bluegrass State. —C. J.

The outlook for late Burley in Clark county is promising. Cutting is being pushed rapidly. There was some complaint of the hot sun burning the leaves in the patch. Curing is going on nicely all over the county, with no complaint of house-burn, and a fine color is being obtained.

NOTICE!

BOONE COUNTY COURT.
Regular Term. 2nd day of August, 1915.
Hon. P. E. Cason, County Judge Presiding.

In Re Election on Stock Law
In Order,
Petersburg Voting Precinct.

This day came Ben H. Berkshire and twenty others, residents and legal voters of the Petersburg Voting District in Boone County, Kentucky, and filed their petition asking a submission of the question whether Cattle generally shall be permitted to run at large in said District, and the petitioners having deposited in this Court a sufficient amount to defray the expense of taking the vote on said question, it is therefore ordered by the Court that the Election Officers of the said Petersburg Voting District open a poll at the next regular election to be held on the 2nd day of November, 1915, in said district for the purpose of ascertaining the will of the voters in said district upon the question, whether or not they wish Cattle generally to run at large in said district, and the Clerk of this Court is directed to have printed on the ballots for the said district the question, "Are you in favor of making it unlawful for Cattle generally to run at large on the public highways and uninclosed lands of Petersburg Voting District?"

It is ordered that notice of said election be given twenty days before the day thereof, by publication in the Boone County Recorder for at least four issues a copy of this order which the Clerk of this court is directed to have done. P. E. CASON, Co. Judge.

State of Kentucky, County Boone.

I, W. R. Rogers, Clerk of the County Court for the county aforesaid, do certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the order made at the regular August Term of this court in the matter of Stock Election for Petersburg Voting District, as appears of record in my office. Given under my hand this 4th of August, 1915.

W. R. ROGERS, Clerk Boone County Court.

The corn crop in Clark county is maturing rapidly, and silos are being filled. Little trouble will be experienced in securing plenty of good silage this year. There has been plenty of grass this year for the dairy cows. The early potato crop was about the best ever raised in this county. Apples are of good quality this year.

The yield of corn throughout Powell county will be only fair this year. Late crops of cow peas are coming up well. The Abraham crop is lighter than usual. Garden truck of all kinds, particularly beans and sweet corn have been abundant this year. The apple crop is the most abundant for many years. Pawpaws are plentiful.

FRIEND OR AN ENEMY?

Robin is One of Best Helpers of Farmer and Orchardist.

Damage Done by Little Feathered Songsters, if Any, May Be Reduced to Minimum—Useful in Reducing Insect Life.

(By F. L. BEALL.)

Few native American birds are more universally cherished than are the robins. On esthetic grounds alone they receive free protection, partly from the romance that clusters about them in story and legend and partly because of their graceful shape and movement, bright color and pleasing song, and close association with man and his works.

Investigation discloses that in addition to their pleasing qualities robins perform a very useful function in reducing the hordes of insect life constantly prying upon the crops of the farmer. In this work a large part of their food consists of insects and they feed their young upon them almost exclusively. It is recognized that birds are one of the necessary checks provided by nature upon the increase of the pest number of insects produced each year, that without them there would be a greater destruction of vegetation, and that certain crops of the farmer regularly matured would, if raised at all, be raised only with increased difficulty and added labor.

The robin is found throughout the greater portion of the United States, the range of the species extending into Canada and even Alaska.

While for the most part migratory in the northern half of the country, individuals remain all winter in many localities where shelter and food are assured. In eastern Massachusetts, for example, at some places farther west there are cedar swamps which offer an abundant supply of wild fruit, and robins remain throughout the winter in large numbers. Most of the species, however, spend the winter from latitude 40 degrees northward as soon as snow disappears. They arrive in New England in the latter part of March or early in April, and in the northern states of the Mississippi valley somewhat earlier. It is difficult to say just when fall migration begins, as the first birds to leave are replaced by others from farther north.

Reports of depredations upon fruit by birds come principally from the prairie regions of the West. This is just what might be expected, for but few prairie shrubs produce the wild berries that the birds prefer and for lack of these the birds naturally feed upon the cultivated varieties available. Reports of fruit losses caused by birds in the East are usually from the immediate vicinity of villages and towns where there is no natural fruit bearing shrubbery. From this it follows that an effective remedy for the ravages of birds upon cultivated fruits is to plant the preferred wild varieties. Of the number of plants which bear fruit preferred by the robin, many are ornamental and are easily obtained. The following are a few of the plants the robins are fond of: Blackberries and raspberries, cherries, wild black cherries, blackberries, flowering dogwood, blueberries, persimmons, Mississippi hackberries, western hackberries, mulberries, cat brier, green holly, red cedar, pokeweed, smooth sumac, pepper berries, American holly, woodbine, black gum, and others.

Investigation of the food of 1,238 robins from 42 states, D. C. and three Canadian provinces, showed that 42.40 per cent of their food was animal matter, and 57.60 per cent vegetable. Of the latter more than 50 per cent consisted of fruit, more than four-fifths of which, were wild species.

While the robin today probably is doing much more good than harm, a bird whose diet consists of so large a percentage of fruit, may at any time become a pest where its natural food falls and cultivated varieties are accessible. The birds must have food and it is decidedly preferable to supply the food they desire, and for which they will amply pay, in the destruction of harmful insects, instead of killing the birds.

On Thin Fields.

It sometimes happens that a clover field will run out, so to speak, or get thin, and when such is the case a plan is to sow more clover seed in early spring and cut it in thoroughly with a disk harrow. The thicker the clover grows the better, for this will keep the weeds out and the soil will be rich and mellow.

Saves Colt or Calf.

Turning a strong back furrow before the new fence is made, easily saves a wire, and besides sometimes saves a colt or calf by showing where the fence is.

Concrete Floor Is Best.

What is more expediting than a wet, soft floor in a barn? Concrete will solve the problem.

Running a Newspaper.

Everybody thinks he can run a newspaper better than the beaten souls who have been placed by Providence in that unenviable position. May be it's because the editor's salary is a glaring one—out in the open in black and white—or, possibly, it is just a queer quirk of human nature and the job is so easy anyway. Running the paper is a sort of sideline with lots of people. They offer advice in their spare moments with the same spirit as they play golf or pinch. One would have the editor a militant suffragist, another demands that he rail against woman voting. The prohibitionist can't see how any decent person can be for the regulated saloons and accuse him of selling out to the liquor interests if he takes that side, while the "wet" says he is being intimidated by the churches and ruled by the "dries." If he is opposed to the saloon, the Democratic "take the paper" is "dirty rag." If the editor is republican in his sympathies, and the Republicans stop their subscription if he comes out for a Democratic editor, or if for anything the anti-unionism, and vice versa. If he takes a stand he is trying to dictate to the community. If he doesn't take a stand he is a mollycoddle and a jellyfish. He is a crank, a reformer, a fanatic, a four-flusher, a crook, a disturber of the peace or just a plain idiot, according as he meets with the desires of his subscribers or goes against them. And there you are on any subject, man never thinks of the hours of toil, it takes to get out a paper. He never thinks of the worries, the trials, the tribulations every editor must undergo. Some of them are so unappreciative of his efforts to boost their town and make money for them, that they won't even contribute the price of a subscription. Just remember this. The editor, apart from the perfectly laudable desire to make a decent living for himself and his family, has only the good of the community at heart. If he disagrees with you on any subject, political, moral or educational, you and not he may be wrong.

Peach Crop Immense.

The peach crop of the country will amount this year, it is estimated, to more than 55,000,000 bushels. With the application of more scientific methods the crop has increased greatly in recent years, and the peach grower is now confronted with problems of marketing, rather than of production. We noticed the other day that the market in Chicago was greatly overstocked, and hundreds of crates that had spoiled had to be thrown in the river to rot out of the way. The supply had come from the northern and western states. One grower received a bill from his commission merchant for $500, the amount lost on a carload of the fruit. He wrote to the house that he had no money but had another car of peaches. The house, to keep his peaches, while in Michigan recently we noticed the papers were given much attention to the peach crop, declaring it would be necessary for each family to use 250 peaches to get the crop disposed of. The papers were urging their readers to thus help the peach grower by eating of their fruit. The peach crop in Kentucky, this year, was almost a failure and we have had to depend on the shipments from the South—Blue-Grass Clipper.

"Seed Corn Week."

We have "Arbor Day." Would it not also be well to have "Seed Corn Day?" Every day when everyone should begin the harvesting and storing of his seed for the following spring. We have at our grandfathers' place for planting their potatoes and sowing their grain "in the moon." That is, in certain phases of the moon. The value of this practice lay, not in the fact as supposed by many that the moon exercised any influence on the crop, but in the having of a definite time for the doing of various things on the farm. If the harvesting of seed corn, like the feeding of stock, came every day, a year's seed corn should be put off or neglected altogether, unless there is a definite time and plan for the work.

Campaign Book Issued.

The Democratic campaign book for 1912 is out. The first batch went to those who are in the line of doing or preparing speakers abundant material.

The book contains the record of the Democratic and Republican parties in both the State and the nation and gives first-hand information concerning the state of the mind of the Democrats. No facts are left out which will be valuable to show the contrast between the two parties in the management of the State and the nation. The platform of both, for many years past, are set.

Confederates to Meet Oct. 14.

The annual reunion of Confederate veterans of Kentucky will be held at the Confederate Home, Potosi, Mo., Oct. 14. It will be an all-day affair and it is expected that there will be in attendance between 1,300 1,400 persons, and a large number of women. Luncheon will be served on the grounds, provided the weather will permit, and there will be speaking by State veterans and sympathizers throughout the State will be in attendance.

Papaw Brandy.

A distillery in Southern Indiana proposes to take advantage of a large papaw crop, in the absence of a large apple crop, and make papaw brandy. The enterprise is a promising one. The flavor of the papaw sometimes is compared with that of the Jamaica berry. It really is much more like the mango, a fruit of the tropics which is highly prized by natives of the section where it grows, but rarely seen in the temperate zone. The mango looks somewhat like a papaw upon the outside, and more like a lemon. Both the fruits are kidney shaped, and, when opened, highly perfumed. The rich, reddish gold meat of the two is much alike in texture and flavor. The one seed of the mango resembles in appearance the numerous and smaller seeds of the papaw. It may be of interest to Mr. Brewer, the Indiana fruit distiller, to know that mango wine is made in the tropical Orient and is considered superior. The papaw of this section of the United States is a better fruit than the tropical papaw, for the mango is really a little liked by those who like it, but is caviare to the general. It has always appealed especially to the Chinese. It is considered by many persons a delicacy when transformed into "possum-fat," and which resembles the fruit in that it has a pleasant, limited number of highly enthusiastic epicureans. It seems altogether probable that the papaws of Southern Indiana would make brandy equal to the boasted apricot brandy of California or the plum brandy upon which Hungary prides itself. Everyone who is familiar with the facial expression of a fat "possum" who is discovered under a papaw bush will feel sure that there will be a wide licensed and bootleg sale for liquor which will produce anything approaching the unmatched grin of perfect contentment with which a papaw is regarded. It is possible contingencies, including being packed up for the caudal appendage and carried home by a dark-complexioned person who has a sweet potato patch—Courier-Journal.

The Girl Who Works.

God bless the girl who works! She is not too proud to earn her own living, nor ashamed to be caught at her daily task. She smiles at you from behind the curtain of a dressmaker's case. There is a sweet memory in everything she touches. She is like the brave mountaineer, already far from her home, climbing, struggling, rejoicing. It is an honor to know her and to be worthy of her esteem. Lift your hand to the young man, as she passes by. She's a queen in the realm of womanhood. She's a princess among the toilers. Her hand may be stained by dishwashing, factory grease, or printer's ink; but it is an honest hand. It stays a misfortune from the home; it supports an invalid; it loves one maybe; it is a moving, potent shield that protects many a family from the poorhouse. All honor to the brave toiler! God bless the girl who works!—Nicholas.

Predict a Hard Winter.

Old-time Indians say every sign indicates a very long, cold winter, according to stories coming from the reservations and elsewhere where the Redskins already have begun trapping up with their bows and arrows. It is thicker than ordinary, the summer has been abnormally cool and wet, the migration of birds has been slow. The birds that do not show the signs, which, according to the aborigines, never fail, all go to forecast a severe winter. It is noticeable that the fall-birds are in the Spavinaw country are making unusual preparations for winter. For the first time in years they are storing up a surplus of fuel and food, and they are advising their white brethren to do likewise.

Big Series Tied Up.

The big series between the Burlington and Erlanger and the Petersburg and Lawrenceburg combinations is having a hard time getting a start. Last Saturday week the teams met at Burlington and the game was called on account of rain, and last Saturday they met at Petersburg and played ten innings when the game was called on account of darkness, the score standing 3 to 4. A large crowd witnessed the contest and at times excitement ran high, first one team and then the other having the advantage. Fromholz gave seven and Black six hits. Petersburg had 2 errors and Burlington 4. Base hits by Burlington—Tavlin, Schroder, Bramlage, Conner; by Petersburg—Aylor, Shinkle. Two base hits by Burlington—Schroder, Tolin, Bramlage; by Petersburg—Shelling, Ruch. 2. Berkshire.

Petersburg scored in the second inning and from then until the fifth inning believed the victory was on ice, but in the fifth Burlington tied the score and came back in the next inning with two more runs, the score standing 3 to 1 in favor of Burlington at the close of the sixth and the Burlington fans were jubilant, believing they were out of the woods, but in the seventh inning they were out of the band flew off and Petersburg made three runs. Turned the tide of expectancy, but Burlington dashed the hopes of their opponents by scoring another run in the eighth, putting the teams again on even terms, and thus they stood until the close of the tenth inning when the game was called on account of darkness.

The two teams will meet again next Saturday afternoon for the third time, and if the weather is favorable a very large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

Stockholders of Burley Company Hold Meeting.

The stockholders of the Burley Tobacco Co., will hold a meeting at Lexington on Tuesday, October 15th, for the purpose of the election of officers and other business matters.

At a preliminary meeting of a number of stockholders of the Company at Lexington, Saturday, an effort was made to commit the stockholders present to a recommendation of the books of the company and a reduction in the salaries of President Lebas and the members of the executive committee. However, the move failed to receive sufficient support, and an agreement was reached whereby the officers will be directed to make an annual statement, a copy of which is to be mailed to each of the various stockholders.

Stanley as a Farmer.

The Stanford Interior Journal publishes the following: "Col. William T. Robinson, of Boyle, was at the Buck sale at Moreland and was greatly elated over the nomination of Hon. A. O. Stanley for Governor in the primary. Mr. Robinson said: 'I know Stanley well. I ought to. He worked for me on my farm several summers while attending college at Danville. His father was preaching there, and Stanley was going to school. He'd come out to my place and make one of the best hands I ever saw in the hay field. He could pitch up as much hay on a stack as any of the regular farm hands, and wasn't afraid of any kind of work. I'll bet right now if you put him in a hay field, he'd be as much at home as he will be in the Governor's mansion at Frankfort.'

Inexplicable.

The constant increase of court expenditures is inexplicable to the hounded taxpayer who has not gone to the trouble of seeking a solution based upon investigation. The trouble primarily is traceable to the legislative mill which grinds out an endless quantity of useless and often harmful laws. Such hodge-podge products of the legislative machinery leads directly to increased court business. Another bad practice of legislative bodies is that of paying more attention to party politics and the spoils incident thereto than to the real business that should have consideration. There certainly should be some plan adopted whereby the legislature will tend to making laws and not to seeking spoils.

Turkey Crop Short.

Reports coming in from various sections of Central Ky., which raise a large number of turkeys for the Northern and Eastern markets, are to the effect that the turkey crop will be short this year and the birds are selling at a high price. Reports from the markets indicate that there will not be more than a third of the usual number of turkeys raised in this State this year. The unusually wet weather during the past spring and summer is responsible for the shortage.

In a few days the sheriff will be making his second round collecting taxes.

Hazers in Serious Trouble.

Lexington, Sept. 25.—In a struggle which ensued when Jacob Hollinger, a State University freshman, resisted the efforts of a party of sophomores to cut his hair last night, H. W. Whaley of 1910 Eastern Ave., Covington, Ky., was slightly injured and the clothes of D. C. Carson, of Richmond, Ky., another student, was badly ripped.

Hollinger's home is in Belzer, S. C. Whaley was summoned before President Barker this morning but he would not give out anything of what transpired at the interview.

Caskets Made of Glass.

Made of two pieces which are bound together by heavy metal bands, a glass casket has been invented which will soon be introduced for burial purposes. This serves both as a coffin and as a vault, as it requires no protection against the chemical action of the earth. When closed it is hermetically sealed and is proof against fire and water. Two sections are molded in heavy glass which gives the casket great strength. Its general form is the same, practically, as that of other burial receptacles. The chief point advanced in its favor is its obvious qualities of durability.—From the October Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A Prolific Mother.

About fifteen months ago a Mrs. Drury of Spencer-co., gave birth to five children, three of whom are still living and healthy. Two weeks ago she presented her husband with four more little weewees—making nine children she has had in less than two years. This is a little ahead of anything we have heard of before and proves that while Spencer county may not be as productive agriculturally as some other counties, she certainly can not be headed when it comes to raising children.

Reverse Opinion.

Frankfort, Sept. 24.—The Court of Appeals reversed the Boone Circuit Court, which granted E. L. Grant an injunction to prevent the collection of school taxes in the Bellevue District. Grant alleged that the taxes of the district to include his land was not legal for want of sufficient signers to the petition, but the court held that his evidence was incompetent.

The boot and shoe manufacturers from a parts of the state report the effect, that the volume of immediate business being received by them from shoe merchants in all parts of the country, is much larger than it was had during September of last year and sufficiently large to crowd the present capacity of the factories in the prompt fulfillment of orders received. Short and conservative buying by shoe merchants last spring is now finding expression in a volume of business that practically swamps the factories.

During the recent carnival held on the Forwood lot on Broadway, two snakes disappeared and after searching fruitfully for several days, the company left without the reptiles. It was attended by young people from far and near and a most delightful time. Miss Mabel proving herself a splendid hostess.

While discussing the question of freeing the turnpikes in this county it was decided by those who were present that those who are indignant because the fiscal court is carrying out the will of the people as expressed at the polls, that the vote on freeing the pikes stood 891 in favor of paying the pikes to 654 against the court is only obeying the mandate of the people which is obeying in a most conservative manner, having acquired about 15 miles of pike at a cost of $6,000.

Crittenden, Grant county, will vote today on the question as to whether bonds shall be issued for road improvement. The amount of the bonds is to be $20,000.

The bond issue will necessitate an additional tax of 25 cents on each one hundred dollars' worth of taxable property in the town. Crittenden has no other tax.

Some of the old Covington and Lexington pike, all of which are in very poor condition, are being improved it and put it in the light sort of condition will cost about $2,000.

Green, Miss Elizabeth Short, Everett Portwood, Sam Setters.

The Recorder enters upon its forty-first year with this week's issue, and the above pictures purport to be of the three individuals who are responsible for the weekly (not weekly) appearance of the paper. Reading from right to left they are W. L. Riddell, who has been on the job for forty years; Mr. F. A. Hall, who has been in the harness in the office for more than thirty-five years, and Mr. Howard Kirkpatrick, who has been with the two above named for seventeen years. They constitute a very congenial trio and serve the patrons of the paper to the best of their ability.

These pictures were taken just after a 1900 edition had been printed, prepared and put in the postoffice in two and a half hours, consequently the trio was not feeling as chippy nor looking as pretty as otherwise might have been the case, but there is no question that those who have the pleasure of scrutinizing the pictures will never fail to recognize either or all three of the subjects should they meet on their journey thru this vale of tears.

L. H. Voshell, Jas. A. Huey, J. L. Frazier, Joseph Huey and J. W. Conner, of Union, were in Burlington last Friday afternoon on business pertaining to the estate of A. L. Mallette, deceased, of which Joseph Huey was appointed administrator. It seems that Mr. Mallette had purchased a large block of the Union creamery stock and had made arrangements to purchase the remainder of it, and a multiplicity of transactions along that line had, as a result of Mr. Mallette's death, put the creamery business in condition that makes it necessary to appoint a receiver for the concern.

Sidney Gaines will be appointed receiver and the creamery will continue its business, which will soon be straightened out.

HORSES AND MULES FOR WAR

Many Animals Not Partially Needed on Farms Have Been Purchased by European Nations.

(By E. A. TROWBRIDGE, Perimeter Staff.)
The European nations have purchased many horses and mules, which are needed. Of course, the some good animals, but they have not been of the mules bought. The older mules were the Atlantic better than the younger ones. Some good cavalry mules were obtained.

A few horse dealers have predicted a high market price for the horse. They are of the opinion that the horse now being purchased in this country will be killed, and the need many animals for their farms. I believe the market will be good, but not predict any exceedingly high prices. This country will be able to supply any demands. A dire situation might arise, if the war continues for more than a year.

Between 250,000 and 500,000 horses and mules were contracted for in the country, and the loss of these animals to the United States only means taking away of those produced in January 1, 1914, and January 1, 1915. With a similar increase during the present year, we would be able to supply a considerable number of horses and mules.

SUNLIGHT A GERM DESTROYER

Cheapest Disinfectant at Man's Disposal—Southern Exposure is Desirable in Buildings.

Sunlight is nature's great germ destroyer. It is the cheapest disinfectant at man's disposal and should be taken advantage of at every opportunity.

"In the construction of barns or shelters of any kind for animals," says H. Preston Hoskins of Minnesota College of Agriculture, "in extension bulletin No. 44, 'ample provision should be made for the admission of the maximum amount of sunlight. A southern exposure is desirable; that is, an arrangement by which most of the windows face south.' The warmth thus provided in cold weather is desirable and much of the heat of summer can be avoided by the use of curtains or screens."

"Most disease germs are entirely killed by direct sunlight. This has been repeatedly shown by experiments."

The farmer should bear this in mind in building his barn, stable, hog house, or poultry house.

CHEAP SLING FOR HAYFORK

Advantages of Modern Devices Appreciated by Man Who Has Pitched Hay From Wagon to Mow.

The unloading of hay is now a comparatively easy task, made so by the use of machinery. Any man who has ever pitched hay from a wagon into a high mow will appreciate the advantages of the hayfork and sling. In one form of sling which is pretty generally used throughout the East, the sling is adapted upon the hayrack and the hay loaded on without any particular care as to placing it. When the wagon reaches the barn as many drafts as can be taken off at good forks are elevated, then without removing the fork it is hooked to the sling attachment by the end pulleys, and pulled upon the free end of the rope will haul and bind the balance of the load around the fork. The trip rope is unslung from the fork and attached to the swing.

The use of the sling is the saving of time in shaping the load with a hand fork for the last draft with the horse fork and cleaning up all the hay on the wagon.

These slings cost from $2 to $2.50 each.

Old Country Buildings.
Most farm buildings in the old country are made of stone, cement or brick, with tile roofs. These buildings are not only fire proof, but will last hundreds of years. Compared with these, our best buildings are but make-weights. Constantly rebuilding takes together too much of our money.

Waste of Posts.
Why throw away a well-seasoned, just-dried fence post or stake just because one end has rotted off? Reverse it and the chances are that it will last longer than the first time.

THE FAIRM STROCK

GET RID OF DELICATE HORSE

Farmer Should Dispose of Ailing Animal at Once and Save Much Time, Trouble and Expense.

(By J. M. BELL.)
I know of nothing more troublesome on the farm than the "delicate horse." In the first place the delicate horse is not a veterinarian in any sense; therefore, when he is unfortunate enough to own a horse that is subject to spells of sickness, he really does not know what to do, and if this same horse is an animal whose value ranges anywhere from $50 to $100, the owner is loath to send off for a regular veterinarian and pay him for his visit and prescription, consequently the horse in question is very apt to die. I have had some experience in the past few months with a delicate horse.

Standard Brad at Government Remount Depot.

and this experience may be of value to some reader.

The horse in question was and is a good one in many ways. "City broke" (that is, fearless), when it comes to the many things that are very liable to frighten a horse these days.

Automobiles, steam cars, bicycles and the like do not even interest him. He will meet any of these horse-sensitizing affairs with utmost indifference.

When I first purchased him he was low down in flesh and really looked depressed and sad.

Having had about thirty years' experience in the handling of horses and mules of all sorts, I naturally thought that I could take this specimen to my farm and make something of him.

I bought him over three months ago and have fed him on what is considered by good horsemen to be first-class feed. At the present writing I can only say that my experience and the advice of my neighbors are at fault, for the horse still remains poor and apparently out of condition.

He has had two attacks of sickness in the past month and with no excuse so far as the writer can see. First a bad cold that kept him sick for over two months, then a severe attack of indigestion, which lasted all day and well into the night, and was followed by a severe chill.

I would advise any farmer who is unfortunate enough to own a delicate horse to dispose of him at the earliest opportunity and thus save himself trouble and expense, for the ordinary farmer does not know what to do with an animal that is regularly subject to these spells of sickness, and even if he does know what to do, it does not pay to waste time on such an animal.

MAKING HOG FEEDING EASIER

Trough Secured to Ground by Means of Posts and Fastened to Fence Is Quite Handy.

It isn't any fun to take a bucket of swill or mash out among a dozen or more hungry hogs and pour it out while all are trying to get in the trough at the same place at the same time. A hungry hog has no manners.

Saves Feeder's Trousers.

and usually possesses a dirty nose to wipe on the trousers of the feeder.

The accompanying illustration tells how to feed the hogs without going into the lot or field. The trough is secured to the ground by means of strong stakes and is held at one end against the fence. A spout made of four boards extends from the end of the trough to the outside and is firmly secured to the fence and trough.

The feed is poured through the spout and it gives such force to the flow that the far end of the trough is usually reached before it is stopped by the hogs. A paddle is kept by the fence to force down the solid matter that tends to accumulate in the spout and to empty the water that stands in the trough after a rain.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Look pleasant, even if you do not feel so. Keep your temper; no one else has any use for it—Lewis Jones.

Don't consider yourself the axle of the world; you are only a spoke in the wheel.

A FEW INVITING DISHES.

A dessert which is both attractive and wholesome is the following: Wash and remove the stones from a half pound of dates; cut them in strips and arrange in serving dishes.

When ready to serve sprinkle generously with pecans and heap a spoonful of whipped cream on each. No sugar will be needed as to the dates are sufficiently sweet.

When making rhubarb or any juicy pie, beat an egg and stir into the little flour; add this to the pie and the juice will not boil over and be wasted in the oven.

Ginger Puffs.—Beat to a cream a fourth of a cupful of softened butter, gradually beating half a cupful of sugar, one beaten egg, half a cupful of molasses, and half a cupful of warm water, two cupfuls of sifted flour, teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of ginger and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; lastly a half cupful of raisins chopped. Bake in well-buttered graham pans.

Chop Suey.—Heat a half cupful of butter in a kettle, saute pound chicken; cut into small pieces; remove to a platter and brown a pound of lean pork in the same way. Return the chicken to the kettle; add a cupful of chopped onion; a can of mushrooms, also the liquor, a cupful and a half of water and a cupful of blanched peanuts finely broken or chopped; add salt and pepper to taste and cook for half an hour. Veal may be used in place of the chicken. Rice should be served with the suey.

Tomato and Cucumber Salad.—Cut cucumber in tiny cubes; prepare tomato cups, using the pulp to mix with the cucumber; add half as much finely diced onion as cucumber; mix well, season with salt and paprika and fill the cups. Place a spoonful of mayonnaise on top of each. The vegetable may be dressed with French dressing, first to season, then the boiled dressing or mayonnaise is used as a garnish.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Oh, bless you! Keep a good heart, sir! Never say die! If she don't smile upon you, there's many a will—David Copperfield.

WARM WEATHER DISHES.

As the warm weather approaches the housewife is able to prepare and serve well chilled many dishes which are especially grateful to the appetite. Desserts and salads of many kinds may be prepared before they are needed. There is no desert that is so popular as the frozen one and the countless combinations which are at hand make variety and are easy of accomplishment.

Maple Parfait.—This may be packed and frozen in a mold or stirred, and frozen as an ice cream. The difference in the texture depends upon the method of freezing. Beat two eggs well and add to a cupful of hot maple sirup, cook just long enough to set the egg. Chill and add a pint of rich milk or thin cream and freeze. If to be packed as a parfait, separate the eggs and beat the yolks and do not cook them, but fold into the mixture beaten stiff, just before packing in the mold.

Sunday Night Salad.—Cut cold boiled potatoes in half inch pieces, then cut the slices in cubes; there should be one and a half cupfuls. Add three hard cooked eggs, finely chopped, one-fourth of a finely chopped onion and one canned pimiento, drained and dried on a towel and cut in thin strips. Moisten with salad dressing and serve in nests of crisp lettuce leaves.

Company Dish.—Soak a tablespoonful of gelatin in a fourth of a cupful of boiling water and in one cupful of boiling water; then add a fourth of a cupful of sugar, the same amount of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, and a teaspoonful of salt. Strain and cool and when the mixture begins to thicken add a half cupful of shredded cabbage, the same amount of cooked peas, and cucumber cubes and a few cubes cooked beets. Put into a ring mold and when ready to serve fill the center with a good firm salad dressing and garnish the platter with neat slices of cold roast of lamb and crisp sprigs of water cress, or mint will be appropriate with lamb.

Save good coffee from breakfast, add cream and sugar and chocolate. Serve in tall glasses with a spoonful of vanilla ice cream to each glass.

Music of the Anvil.

In earlier times we depended for our footwear upon the skilled handiwork of the shoemaker. For us was the man of the bench, with his lapstone, sharp knife, awl and hammer. He was the clever producer of our boots and shoes with a way of standing us off indefinitely on our humble requests for prompt delivery. Much more dependable was the master of the smithy in his attention to work, for the horse had to be there for his shoes, and his time was valuable.

While the cobbler of former times, sitting at his bench and hammering away, is no longer a familiar object of village life, and is seldom seen in cities since machinery has taken the place of hand workers, there remains one branch of shoeing almost unchanged in its principal features. The horse and the mule may not be shod by machinery, for as it is likely that so long as these animals continue to contribute to our living or pleasure will the art of the farrier disappear. Here is one branch of skilled labor that must go on in the old way, and with more skill as the hardness of the road increases. These good animals are largely disappearing from the streets of cities, in the proportion of traffic, but in many other scenes they must continue in great numbers. And all of them must be skillfully shod before being subjected to the usage of the streets, or even the country roads of new fashions.

We seldom hear these days the sonorous melody of the "Anvil Chorus," and hardly ever do we see the cobbler quoted in the pages of the "Village Blacksmith," but all the same, the cheerful ring of the anvil may be heard at the village center, at the cross roads and even penetrating the confusion of the many noises of the city.

The telephone directory of a city of less than half a million will show addresses of nearly a hundred horse shoers, all of whom continue their work in the way familiar thru hundreds of years. The glowing force may send out its sparks at the behest of an electric blast, but the bellows of the old style is still there to be worked by hand in the old familiar way in case the electricity gives out. In the bed of glowing coals we see the hot metal ready to be shaped on the horn of the waiting anvil, under the stroke of the hammer, delivered by the powerful muscles of the blacksmith.

There are some new things in shoeing, such as use of leather and rubber pads, and new methods of treating the hoof, but there is no way, except by use of legs and arms, to hold the hoof to the apron between the man's strong knees. There must be properly rasped wall surface and careful use of the drawing knife, that there may be proper preservation of the "bars," with the full frog between them. The fitting of the shoe must be perfect, and there must be skillful driving of the nails, for a horse may be crippled through lack of skill. The shoe must be perfect, and there must be skillful driving of the nails, for a horse may be crippled through lack of skill. The shoe must be perfect, and there must be skillful driving of the nails, for a horse may be crippled through lack of skill.

At the special term of the Martin circuit court, Mrs. Columbia Howard, 32, of Wolfe creek, was given seven years to ten years in the penitentiary for the killing of her husband, Jack Howard, forty-five years old, at their home on May 8th. Mrs. Howard contended that he was killed accidentally; that the gun was in his hands at the time of the tragedy and that he was in the act of shooting her when she threw an iron poker and struck the gun barrel, causing it to be discharged.

BEAVER.

In your article in Beaver news last week regarding the celebration of the 35th anniversary of the marriage of Taylor, Mrs. G. O. Cleek, there were some things left out that I would like you to mention: I am sure they were left out by mistake and I would be glad if you would mention in this week's paper that the event was a surprise gotten up by Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. E. Ryle and Mrs. John English, and with the assistance of the children, Mrs. C. E. Blankenbaker, H. H. Cleek and W. Cleek, man aged to make a perfect success of the surprise, as Mr. and Mrs. Cleek were away from home and part of the guests had arrived when they returned to find refreshments and decorations in readiness for them and the remaining guests. Eighty of the guests were present, as indicated by 43 of the guests and 12 pieces by the three children. Mrs. Frank Cleek's present was a pair of silver shoes; Mr. and Mrs. Sleeth, Humel's lunch basket, and Miss Beattie Day's, a cake basket; Mr. and Mrs. Claud Littleill's, a pickle dish. The Beaver string band furnished most excellent music for the very delightful occasion.

J. J. Cheek's case of blood poison is still causing him a great deal of suffering.
Judge A. A. Roter, after a residence here of about twenty years, will move back to Rising Sun in a few days. Mr. Roter is most excellent gentleman and the citizens of our hamlet hate to see him leave.
John Allen and family, who are now living on Sam Sleeth's farm, near the farm of Key, are occupying the residence of the late Hon. J. A. Gaines. Sorry to lose such good people, but our loss will be the gain of others.
The three young ladies who operated the Consolidated Telephone exchange, here, struck at 3 p. m. last Saturday, since which time Mr. Smith, the lineman, has been in charge of the exchange. The writer is not informed as to the cause of the strike.

County Clerk W. R. Rogers went to his farm near Walton, last week, for a work out, but circumstances arose whereby he could not stay so long. He is now on the farm, and the sweet songs of the whippoorwill and the hoot owl, peeping and corn husking have been heard from the barn, the odors wafted from the barns of curing tobacco are stimulating and insert a spring in his heel.

HEBRON.

Farmers are busy cutting corn.
Mrs. Jas. Riddell has been sick the past week.
Mrs. Hubert Conner is attending her sister, of near Sedamsville.
Jerry Garnett and family entertained quite a number of their relatives, Sunday.
Albert Newmarch is having a new porch built to his residence which will add to the appearance.
Mike Dye and Mrs. Alice Crigler were married Sunday afternoon at Rev. W. F. Wallace's near Florence. Dr. Sayre and wife were the attendants.

Badly Burned by Gasoline.

A very serious and sad accident occurred in Burlington about six o'clock last Saturday evening, when Mrs. Emma Brown, the local postmaster, was badly burned on the neck, and breast. Mrs. Brown, in replenishing the tank on her gasoline stove, spit some of the gasoline on her clothing, and all of a sudden it ignited, match with which to light the stove, when the gasoline on her clothing caught fire. Her screams brought to her rescue, her son, Walter, who was in an adjoining room. He grabbed his mother and threw her on the floor and began to smother out the flames with an apron which he got hold of. Mr. Frank Hall, who had just stepped into the postoffice heard the screams and hastened into the room and he and Walter had smothered the flames just before the arrival of several others who were attracted by the screaming. Dr. Duncan was called and dressed the burns which were on her neck, breast and right arm, but was unable to determine as to the extent of the injury. It is thought she had inhaled the flame as her lips and mouth gave no evidence of being burnt. Mrs. Brown was in a precarious condition all night and all day Sunday. Judge Lansing and his wife, who is a sister of Mrs. Brown, arrived Sunday morning and upon their suggestion the body was taken to the Memorial Hospital in Covington where she is being attended by Dr. J. G. Fumier.
At last accounts Mrs. Brown was doing nicely.

Still Tied Up.

The Petersburg and Lawrenceburg and the Burlington and Erlanger combinations met on the local park at Burlington, last Saturday, for the third time in a series of three games they are trying to pull off but without success so far, the game being called again last Saturday on account of darkness the score being a tie 5 to 5. There was some rotten playing on both sides, but in that particular the clubs were about equally matched. Huey and Slayback and Fromholtz and Zimmer were the batteries. Huey allowed his arm to be struck by a ball and four errors behind him. Fromholtz allowed eight hits, struck out 9 men and had four errors behind him. It was a very exciting contest notwithstanding a damper was thrown over the game in the second inning when Ira Lee Thompson, one of the Petersburg players, was struck on the head by a pitched ball, the blow rendering him unconscious for some time. The score was a tie 5 to 5. Each club had won it won at times. Elbert Clure, who was put in as a pinch hitter at a critical stage of the game delivered an at bat two runs across the plate for the Burlington-Erlanger team. Huey, who had not played ball for six weeks surprised his friends by his masterful pitching. The sluggers looked alike to him. Fromholtz, who opposed him, is a professional and a good pitcher, but the farm boy hit the edge on him last Saturday.

NOTES.

About 250 people witnessed the game.
Pink, of Lawrenceburg and Victor, of Erlanger, called the game in a very satisfactory manner.
The same teams are booked to meet again a week from next Saturday at Petersburg.
Bramlage and Black are two dangerous men with the stick when they have their "batting eyes" with, as proven by the last game with Bromley.
The players on each team indicated a nervousness at the beginning.
These teams have met three times. The first game was stopped by rain at the close of the second inning, the score being a tie 4 to 4. The second game went ten innings at Petersburg and was called on account of darkness, the score being 4 to 4. The third game, last Saturday was called at the close of the eighth inning, the score being 5 to 3. It looks like the hoodoo cannot be broken.
The fans who witnessed the 3rd game between Bromley and Black, Zimmerman and Vance, urged the ball to all parts of the town, making doubles and triples too numerous to record.

Personal Mention

Dr. O. S. Crisler blew in Saturday night and spent Sunday with his father.
County Attorney N. E. Riddell was transacting business in Vevona, last Saturday.
Alonso and J. H. Graves, of Erlanger, were business visitors to Burlington, Tuesday.
Grover Snyder and wife are visiting his brother Cleveland Snyder and his wife in Cincinnati.
W. C. Johnson, of Beaver, was the guest of his son, Samuel and family, last Sunday and Sunday night.
J. M. Thompson, the Petersburg dealer in livestock, was a guest at the Boone House, last Monday night.
Mrs. R. S. Crisler and Mrs. Lavina Kipstick are visiting friends in the neighborhood of Milan, Indiana.
B. H. Stephens and wife, of near Hathaway, spent Monday with their daughter, Mrs. R. H. Stephens, in Burlington.
Miss Fannie Cropper returned to her home in Sayler Park, last Friday, after a visit of several days with relatives in this county.
Miss Nora Mae Ryle, who had been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ryle, in Hebron, Tuesday morning for her home in Chicago.
G. L. Smith and wife, Robert Allen and James W. Aylor, of the Big Bone neighborhood, were in town Monday and took dinner with J. C. White.
Mrs. Jas. A. Riddell, of Hebron, neighborhood, got a fall while out in her yard one day last week, since which she has been considerably indisposed.
M. L. Swetnam, of Covington, attended court in Burlington, last Monday. Mr. Swetnam is a brother of the Florence fair, and has done considerable successful work in its behalf in this city.
Judge R. S. Clark, of Falmouth, Democratic nominee for Judge of the Court of Appeals in this district, was mingling with the crowd in town last Monday. Judge Clark has made a most excellent impression on the people in this county and the Democrats will cast their ballots for him with the greatest of pleasure. Judge Clark's manner stamps him as a man of the people, and one who will always be on the people's side.

Hit by a Pitched Ball.

Ira Lee Thompson, who was hit by a pitched ball in the second inning of last Saturday's game at Burlington, looked for some time to be seriously hurt. Mrs. Daniel and Yelton were soon at his side, and his injury was attended to as well as it was possible. A cot was secured on which the young man was placed and carried to the home of Congressman A. B. Rouse which is close to the ball park. He remained overnight at Mr. Rouse's with his faithful friend Chas. Klopp at his bedside while everything possible to make him comfortable was done by the family. Sunday morning the young man was able to be taken home by Mr. Rouse in his automobile, and at last accounts Mr. Thompson had about recovered from his injury. The lick, fortunately, was on the side of the head at the thickest point of the skull and was not so serious as it might have been had it been received at other points on the head. The accident unnerved Huey, who pitched the ball, and he could not steady himself down again during the game, and was delighted next morning when he learned that Mr. Thompson was able to be taken home, and was feeling much better. At last accounts the young man was feeling very fit and inconvenience from the blow.

Top Layer for Silo.

For the top layer of the silo a good practice is to use heavy green silage, and the straw has been removed. This forms a heavy layer that packs well and at the same time contains a small amount of food material so that the minimum loss is obtained if it spoils. Various methods and materials have been used for covering the top of the silage, but the best practice none have given complete satisfaction, but the one mentioned above has given as good results as any, especially when the top layer was thoroughly wet down and packed firmly by "tramping". The best practice is to commence with a layer of straw, and fill, in which case there will be no loss of silage through decay. Considerable frost Wednesday morning, and its effects are shown on vegetation in some places. Flowers that were not "killed" fared badly.

FOR BETTER ROADS

MILEAGE OF OUR GOOD ROADS

Department of Agriculture Gathering Information to Serve as Basis for Estimating Value.

The United States department of agriculture is now gathering information which, when complete, should not only give the total mileage of public roads in the United States and their cost, but should serve as a basis for estimating the relative value of the different kinds of highways. Some 15,000 sets of inquiry blanks have already been distributed through the state highway commissions, and some of these are now beginning to come back to the department. Each set consists of four cards.

Of these the first asks for information on the mileage of different classes of roads in the county to which it is sent. The mileage does not include, of course, streets in cities and towns. The roads are divided into ten classes as follows: Brick paved, concrete, macadam with the addition of some substance such as asphalt, oil, or tar, plain macadam, gravel, shell, other hard surfaced roads, sand and clay mixture properly graded and drained, ordinary earth roads properly constructed, and, finally, unimproved roads.

The second card asks for information in regard to the tax rate for the roads and the amount of work and money expended on them.

The third blank is concerned with the names of local road officials, and the fourth with facts in regard to the bond issues and the indebtedness of the counties for their road systems.

As there are approximately 3,000 counties in the United States, in many of which the mileage has never even been estimated, it is hardly probable that this preliminary survey will be exact. The department, however, will be able to detect any excessively inaccurate reports for the road mileage per square mile of territory does not vary excessively. Except in desert or undeveloped country less than half a mile of public road to every square mile of territory is rare, while, in the most thickly populated rural sections the maximum is no more than two and one-half or three miles. Thus, in France, there is an average for the entire country of 1.76 to a square mile. In Italy, however, this has fallen to .86, possibly on account of the mountainous character of much of the peninsula and of Sicily and Sardinia.

In America the average is approximately .80 miles, which, in view of the fact that much of the country is sparsely settled seems unduly high. An explanation, however, is to be found in the fact that in many states the law provides that each section line shall be a public road. Thus, for example, there are in the state of Iowa alone more than 104,000 miles of legal highways, manifestly a much larger mileage than is required by traffic.

When the information in regard to the existing roads which the department is now seeking is complete, it is the intention to continue the inquiry year after year in order to ascertain the durability and economy of the various kinds of highways. The data thus collected should be useful to road engineers all over the country, and it is hoped that county agents and others interested in improvement of agriculture will do their best to facilitate the collection of the desired information.

Shortens the Distance.

There is nothing that shortens the distance between the farm and the market as much as good roads. It's the greatest economy the farmers can have.

Wide Tires to Stay.

The wide-tired wagon has come to stay. On our common earth roads and in the field a 50 per cent more load can be pulled on a wide-tired wagon than on one with narrow tires; then, again, the wide tires help in packing the road, while the narrow tires make the rut.

Should Not Grumble.

The dairyman, whose products are particularly perishable, should be the first to grumble about the state of the roads for road improvement.

CLASSIFIED TAXES.

Whenever there is any talk about a lower rate of taxes on intangible personal property a great howl goes up from the owners of tangible property, who affect to believe it a gross injustice. Intangible personal property consists mostly of Stocks, Bonds, Notes, Cash, Accounts, Mortgages, and other evidences of enterprise, all of which are limited by law or custom to a certain percent of earnings. No other kind of property has the limits of its profits fixed by law. A man may lawfully earn all he can in his store, his shop or on his farm. He may charge what he pleases for his professional services, for his manufactured wares, for his cattle, his hogs and his corn, wheat and tobacco, but when he comes to lending money, which the investment in Securities includes, he is strictly limited to a gross income never exceeding six per cent, and is fair to exact half or more of his income for taxes when others get off with perhaps one-tenth of their earnings from other kinds of invested property, farming, professions and business? The argument is all in favor of the money lender, as his capital is essential to all industrial improvement and cheap money greases the wheels of progress and prosperity.

TAX AMENDMENT

TO BE VOTED ON AT THE NOVEMBER ELECTION.

The Tax Amendment to be again voted on at the November Election will, if adopted, authorize the Legislature to enact a new Tax Law that will subject the enormous amount of personal property in the shape of Stocks, Bonds, Notes and accounts now escaping taxation to a fair share of the burden and reduce the taxes on Land and Improvements. Every taxpayer should vote for it as any Law enacted under its provisions must be ratified by the people before it can be enforced and this guarantees a fair Law.

The Amendment.

"The General Assembly shall provide by law an annual tax, which, with other resources, shall be sufficient to defray the estimated expenses of the Commonwealth for each fiscal year. Taxes shall be levied and collected for public purposes and shall be uniform upon all property of the same class subject to taxation within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax; and all taxes shall be levied and collected by general laws. The General Assembly shall have power to divide property into classes and to determine what class or classes of property shall be subject to local taxation. Bonds of the State and of Counties, municipalities, taxing and school districts shall not be subject to taxation."

"Any law passed or enacted by the General Assembly pursuant to the provisions of or under this amendment or amended section of the constitution, classifying property and providing a lower rate of taxation on personal property, tangible or intangible, than that upon real estate, shall be subject to the referendum power of the people."

This amendment was ratified by an enormous majority at the election in 1912, but was pronounced invalid by the Court of Appeals because it had been advertised only sixty, instead of ninety, days as the Constitution provides.

It has been advertised in legal form and in time for this year's election and should receive a larger majority than before, as Tax paying voters have time to study the question and discover the faults in the present Tax Law.

REPORT OF WISCONSIN TAX COMMISSION.

"Justice in taxation can only be attained by strict compliance with the law. This is proven by universal experience. There is no other way. With rare exceptions, when an assessor violates the law and sets up a standard of his own he either inflicts an injury upon some individual taxpayer or else he does injustice to every other taxpayer in the State. As a general rule, every step he takes outside the straight and narrow path provided by law leads to greater and more glaring inequalities, and in many cases degenerates into a mere travesty on justice."

FROM REPORT OF KENTUCKY TAX COMMISSION, 1909.

"There are two reasons why the general property tax has failed in operation. First, because under modern conditions it cannot be enforced effectively. Secondly, because of a more or less conscious recognition of the fact that strict enforcement would result in a still greater injustice than now prevails."

"The attempt to tax all property at a uniform standard of valuation and at the same rate, regardless of its special characteristics, earning power or the benefits derived from the expenditures of government, violates the primary rules of just taxation and offends the natural sense of justice."

THE STATE PRESS.

From all counties reporting it is shown that there is a large increase of pupils attending the schools of the State. A sure way this of lessening the disgraceful by large crop illiterates. However, let the moonlight schools still be encouraged so that adult illiteracy may be blotted out by 1920. That is the official program. Owensboro Messenger.

Some two years ago a man stopped at the hotel on Greenup avenue, then conducted by Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Preston, and took a room. The next morning he left owing the house 25 cents. Saturday morning the man dropped in to Mr. Preston's place of business on Winchester avenue and handed him a quarter in payment for this debt.—Ashland Independent.

It looks now as if the women in at least ten more states are going to get the right to vote, but for heaven's sake let us poor male devils get together and try to hold the best seats at the prize fights and on the race courses just to show them that the indomitable spirit of lofty and unselfish manhood still burns brightly in our frightened and fluttering bosoms.—Lexington Herald.

What a deplorable thing it is that the compulsory law does not include children up to 16 years of age, with few exceptions, instead of up to 14. The State and town offers a high school education to every boy and girl and yet, quite a number of boys and girls are out of school and on the streets with little or no employment. Mr. or Mrs. Parent, what are you thinking about? What will these children be ten and twenty years from now? The leading citizens of the community? Don't you know the next generation will be, and is already in many cases, better educated than the present and if your boy and your girl is to come successfully with his or her fellows a much better education than you have is absolutely necessary? Wake up! Be the boss of your house. Start those children to school and see to it that they stay there, and study some at home as well.—Murray Times.

Defective and Other Defectives

Psycho-logists, doctors, judges and other learned men of distinction have long agitated and cogitated over the perplexing question of "what to do with our defectives."

A defective, according to Webster, is a person who is of vicious or criminal inclination, but without moral responsibility, and this is the class to whom our men and women of brains have been devoting their attention for so many years.

But isn't there another class of defectives—a defective who is morally responsible?

What of the man who beats his wife?

What of the man who cruelly misuses his horse, or the one who in a rage aims a vicious kick at the dog or the cat?

What of the man who makes saluting remarks of respectable women and girls?

What of the man who slanders and lies and secretly undermines your business, and seeks to destroy your reputation among your fellowmen?

What of the man who is surly and quarrelsome, and strikes and shoots without provocation?

What of the man of intellect who steals a million, and of the poor devil who lifts a chicken?

What of the office seeker who buys votes, and of the cuss who sells his franchise?

What of the merchant who cheats and gives short weight, and sells goods that are not as represented?

What of the doctor who "drags" a case that he may extract a larger fee from one in distress?

What of the public official who prostitutes his office to his personal gain?

What of the preacher who is hypocritical with the rich and sanctimonious with the poor?

What of the automobile driver who runs over dogs and chickens, and even children, through recklessness and disregard for the rights of others?

What of the gossip, whose tongue is coated with the poison of lies and leaven of insinuations and tale bearing, and general all round devilishness?

What of the thousand and one others whose intellects are unimpaired, who know of plagues of wrong, who realize the advantages of treading the path of honor—and yet, knowing these, drift into the tide of indifference and eventually float out upon the sea of damnation?

Are they not defective?

Are they any less as much to be dreaded, and should they not be curbed as quickly as the one whose mind is enfeebled and whose acts are but those of a disordered brain?

Are they defective, or what?

Toast to Laughter.

Here's to laughter, the sunshine of the soul, the happiness of the heart, the leaven of youth, the privilege purity, the echo of innocence, the treasure of the humble, the wealth of the poor, the head of the cup of pleasure, the dispels dejection, banishes blues and mangles melancholy; for it is the foe of woe, the destroyer of depression, the enemy of grief; it is what makes kings envy peasants, plutocrats envy the poor, the guilty envy the innocent; it's the silver of smiles, the ripple on the water's delight; the glint of the gold of gladness; without it humor would be dumb and life a dreary monotony; it would shrivel, for it's a glow of clean conscience, the choice of a pure soul, the birth cry of mirth, the swan-song of sadness.

NOTICE!

BOONE COUNTY COURT.

Regular Term, 2nd day of August, 1915.
Hon. P. E. Cason, County Judge Presiding.

In Re Election on Stock Law
In Order,
Petersburg Voting Precinct.

This day came Ben H. Berkshire and twenty others, residents and legal voters of the Petersburg Voting District in Boone County, Kentucky, and filed their petition asking a submission of the question whether Cattle generally shall be permitted to run at large in said District, and the petitioners having deposited in this Court a sufficient amount to defray the expense of taking the vote on said question, it is therefore ordered by the Court that the Election Officers of the said Petersburg Voting District open a poll at the next regular election to be held on the 2nd day of November, 1915, in said district for the purpose of ascertaining the will of the voters in said district upon the question, whether or not they wish Cattle generally to run at large in said district, and the Clerk of this Court is directed to have printed on the ballots for the said district the question, "Are you in favor of making it unlawful for Cattle generally to run at large on the public highways and uninclosed lands of Petersburg Voting District?"

It is ordered that notice of said election be given twenty days before the day thereof, by publication in the Boone County Recorder for at least four issues a copy of this order which the Clerk of this court is directed to have done. P. E. CASON, Co. Judge.

State of Kentucky, County Boone.

I, W. R. Rogers, Clerk of the County Court for the county aforesaid, do certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the order made at the regular August Term of this court in the matter of Stock Election for Petersburg Voting District, as appears of record in my office. Given under my hand this 4th of August, 1915.

W. R. ROGERS, Clerk Boone County Court.

REGARD FOR THE LAW.

Ignorance of the Law is no excuse and disregard of the Law is a crime. When Laws are so obvious as to afford excuses for non-compliance they should be changed, and the people have this right. "If your right hand offend you, cut it off," was no idle injunction, but means the offense should be removed rather than the mutilation of the member.

Our Tax Laws are distasteful and detrimental, but the remedy should be to amend them instead of allowing them to undermine the morals of the people by openly disregarding them.

The successful evasion of one Law may encourage the violation of others and in time breed a contempt for all Laws.

While every citizen owes obedience to the Laws, the Laws should be made fair and equal to every citizen.

The Tax Laws are neither fair nor equal and are productive of deceit and dishonor and if for no other reason than this should be changed.

UNIFORM TAXATION.

Property differs so greatly in character and earning power it has always been impossible to tax the various kinds uniformly. Every attempt to tax movable property the same as immovable property has failed and will always fail. "Two wrongs do not make a right," and when assessors find it impossible to discover the ownership of movable property and under take to square things by lowering the assessment of immovable property, there is no right or justice in it and everybody suffers in mind and matter. The more stringent the Law to uncover movable property the faster it moves and hides, and this fact is so well established the assessors in most counties let movable property go by default. So-called Uniform Taxation is a delusion and a snare. It may suffice to fool the ignorant, but the knowing ones just laugh at it. This is rough on the poor man whose all is in sight and immovable, and is also tough on the rich man who defies the law and hides his wealth from the assessor, for he knows he is doubly guilty in saving himself at the expense of his less fortunate neighbor.

EQUITABLE TAXATION.

The differences in property call for differences in taxation just as one star differs from another and yet all the stars and all the property serve the same purpose. The man who hides his money in securities issued on property already taxed and paying more taxes because of the improvements justified by the man's money is just as useful a citizen as the man who puts his money in lands, houses, but when the first man objects to giving up the greater part of the earnings on his securities, issued on property already taxed, he is looked upon as a tax dodger, and the man with the houses and lands who cannot so readily escape the tax system which seems so unfair. Ask this man to surrender a half to three-fourths of the income from his house and lands and there would be another tale. The revenue of the first man is limited, while that of the other is unlimited, and yet there are people who cannot see the distinction. Equitable taxation is based on the earning power of all property, in just proportion, and if any partiality is shown it should be in favor of the man who makes his money by improving his lands owned by others, which may depreciate, but cannot fly away.

TAX AMENDMENT.

The Tax Amendment was carried by thirty thousand majority two years ago, but because the Secretary of State failed to advertise it ninety instead of sixty days before the election, as the Constitution requires, it must be voted on again at the November Election. The welfare of the State demands the re-adoption of this important measure and every far-sighted citizen should vote for it.

KENTUCKY NEEDS

A good many things to place the State in the rank she deserves in the march of progress, but when all is said and done the greatest need of all is a new Tax System that will attract instead of repel Capital, which guarantees cheap money for the improvement of farms and development of local industries. Although one of the oldest States, centrally located and with marvelous natural advantages, other and less favored States have outstripped us, and as someone has aptly said, "Kentucky is an island of comparative poverty surrounded by a Sea of industrial prosperity."—And why? The answer is because of our repellent Tax System. Equitable taxation means cheap money. Easy money means improvement and development. Industrial enterprise keeps the people at home and increases the population. More people means more consumers of our home products. Close markets means good prices, and all of this has been retarded because some wise acres borrowed a so-called Uniform Tax Law from another State which had been striving to get rid of it for forty years and which shows that an intolerant politician may not always be a tolerable patriot, or Kentucky would not have been throttled in the way she has been.

Citizens of Barbourville will pay a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of any person putting out poison for dogs.—Mountain Advocate.

It is customary for the Sunday schools to hold a rally day about November 1, but the boys seem to think the proper inducements are not offered until Christmas.—Owensboro Inquirer.

The mothers in Turkey are raising little Turks for perhaps uncertain death in the war. The farmers of America are raising big turkeys for certain death on Thanksgiving.—Russellville Times.

A woman was kicked on the chin by a mule, causing her to bite off the end of her tongue, and her husband several times since refused the offer of $1,000 for the mule.—Russellville Democrat.

Mr. John Insko, who raised a crop of tobacco on the farm of Mr. David S. Gay, was exhibiting on the streets Thursday afternoon a stalk of tobacco which has grown to be eight feet tall. The tobacco is known as the stand-up variety. The stalk contained 80 leaves, which was more than half the number contained on the usual stalk and had never been topped.—Winchester Sun.

More than a quarter of a century ago many people said that the timber in Hancock co., was exhausted. But judging from the large amount of fine walnut logs hauled to town recently and sold for an Evansville company, disprove the assertion, and scattered around in spots are many fine trees of both walnut and white oak and some poplar.—Hawesville Free Press.

Bruce Starkey brought in the prize string of fish of the season last Friday evening. It contained eleven large bass that tipped the scales all told, at 21 pounds. They were caught by Mr. Starkey with hook and line on Floyd's Fork, and were the result of only one day of sport. It was the prettiest string of fish we ever saw, and was viewed by all the local fishermen with awe and admiration.—Oldham Era.

Everybody has heard of fisherman's luck, but about the luckiest fisherman that has come to notice is Geo. E. Johnson, of George town. The other day he got his mail and put the letters in his pocket unopened and forgot all about them. Last Thursday he concluded to go fishing, but as the fishy tribe was wary and slow to bite, Mr. Johnson began to wonder if his mail had not been left in the time until the bait could tempt the fish. He reached in his pocket for some tobacco and brought out the forgotten mail. One letter dropped to the bottom of the boat and he picked it up and opened it to find inside a check from Uncle Sam for $37.50. He was astonished that he forgot to notice whether the fish were nibbling or not. About a year ago, he, as administrator, had put in a claim for the government for payment of property belonging to his father which was destroyed during the Civil war. The check was in payment of the amount. There was never a more surprised man than he when he found he had been handling such valuable mail so carelessly, but it is not later and with his fishing fever, for he kept at it all day.—Anderson News.

OUT IN THE STATE.

Immense Corn Crop. Franklin, Sept. 30.—The corn crop which is being cut this week is pronounced the greatest yield the county ever produced.

Large Crop of Apples. Henderson, Sept. 30.—30,000 barrels of apples grown in this county will be placed in cold storage in this city this fall. The yield is greater than ever in the history of the county. A local co-op shop is working night and day to force manufacturing apple barrels. The capacity of two cold storage plants here has been contracted for by growers.

Bond Issue Carried. Lexington, Sept. 30.—The $100,000 bond issue to improve the roads of this county carried at the special election held today with bonds and a vote to spare over the necessary two-thirds majority.

The city gave a large majority in favor of the bonds, but the county outside the city vote did not reach the two-thirds majority.

In the city the vote was 1,732 for and 755 against and in the county 1,410 for and 1,410 against. The vote was very light. County Judge F. A. Bullock had announced that if the vote in favor of the bonds did not reach 4,000 which would be a small majority of all the votes cast at the last election in the city and county, they would not be issued, but he stated tonight that he was satisfied a representative vote had been cast, and he would accordingly recommend to the Fiscal Court that the issue be made.

Publications are a convenient source of information in regard to other agricultural literature. The Division welcomes requests for publications issued by any branch of the Government, by the agricultural colleges, and by the experiment stations. These requests are answered fully, the correspondent being advised as to where and to whom he should apply. A complete subject index, which records even a single mention of a subject in a publication dealing principally with other topics, of the Department is maintained by the division and should be found useful by authors and investigators.

Cattle Raising in the South.

Planters in the South, who only recently have gotten away from the ancient idea that only cotton and cane could be raised in the sandy soil, are now branching out into the cattle raising industry. Planters caring for the herds of the boll weevil and the uncertainty of the cotton market, have started out to secure the type of steer which will be hardy enough to thrive on the herbage of Mississippi and Georgia and at the same time prove marketable in competition with the products of Texas and other cattle raising states.

Many of the planters have tried buying yearlings in Texas and paying high prices for them. With the added cost of freight and food stuffs thru the winter little profit has been left for the experimenters. Those who have gone in for feeding their own cattle in the hope of getting a product which will prove profitable have tried importing their cows and bulls.

One planter in Southern Georgia has secured the solution for the South. He crossed the strains of the Short-horn bull with that of the native cow. The offspring inherited the mother's "rustling" qualities and from the size and slightness. If this plan proves successful thousands of acres of soil which has never been tilled may be utilized for pasture.

The Georgian who secured this cross of Short-horn with the native cow worked along the old plan whereby the hog raisers many years ago crossed the noted Thirl-rind with other strains until the product had nothing left of the Thirl-rind except his habits. Using this example, it may be possible for the planters in the South to produce a steer which will thrive on the native herbage and at the same time be raised more cheaply than in other states.

Since it has been found that good crops of corn can be raised in the sandy soil many silos are being built in Northern Mississippi. With good ensilage and a few acres of corn the "rustler" there are no reasons why the South should not forge toward the front in the cattle-raising industry.—C-J.

Big Beef Slaughtered.

The royal bred English price $1,000 steer which Col. E. H. Taylor, Jr., imported from England for the barbecue which he is to give the Kentucky bankers October 6th, was slaughtered on Wednesday at Herford Farm, on 1,500 pounds to the acre in Woodford county. Experts say that no such an individual beef was ever seen in this section before. On foot he weighed 1,500 pounds and measured 140 pounds dressed, and the "fifth quarter" the hide and tallow—was wonderfully heavy. The beef was slaughtered by Mr. S. Cooper, a Broadway meat merchant, and the great carcass is now in his refrigerator in the cold storage department of the Franklin Ice Company to become thoroughly chilled before being barbecued.—Frankfort Courier.

Reason for Hard Times.

An exchange has been figuring on the hard times has come to the conclusion that they are caused by the fact that most people buy more than they produce. It says: "We let our timber rot and buy fencing; we throw away our ashes and buy soap; we give away our hides and buy rope; we raise dogs and buy hogs; we let our manure go to waste and buy guano; we grow weeds and buy vegetables and brooms; we catch five cent fish with a four dollar rod; we build school houses and send our children off to be educated, and then we send our boys with a $10 gun and a $10 dog to hunt for 10 cent birds."

Sunflower Seed Crop.

Hickman, Sept. 27.—The harvest of the sunflower crop in this vicinity is now well under way and the yield is said to be very fine. From five to twenty wagons and the army of gatherers are in each field, fanning machines at work and the sunflower head is losing its rich seed, which is being marketed from two and one-quarter to four cents per pound, yielding from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds to the acre. The two and one-quarter cent seed was sold last year under contract to be delivered in October. It is said the market price this fall is going to be from five to eight cents per pound.

The raising of sunflower seed this year and there is now a large amount of this crop being raised, the crop being of the most remunerative grown here. The unique features of the crop is that the rows in which it is planted must be run north and south, which makes the gathering easier, the sunflowers following the sun throughout the day and in the morning facing the east and the west in the afternoon.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Warren County Strawberry Growers' Association a large concern was awarded a contract to furnish the local association with 100,000 strawberry boxes. The association will have the honor of Mr. H. B. Graham to various Eastern points for the purpose of extending the market.

Mrs. C. M. Vertrees, of Cecilia, made a long distance shipment of chickens last week which happened cannot be exceeded by any poultry raiser in Kentucky. She shipped a cock and four hens of the Rhode Island White breed to Malvern, Natchez, South Africa.—Elizabethtown Mirror.

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

Missouri has a Sunflower King, and his name is Lee C. Phillips, of New Madrid county. He has 800 acres of sunflowers growing now on his farm in that rich agricultural section. It costs him some thing like $3 an acre to grow sunflowers, and he markets the seed at from three to four cents a pound. The yield per acre, Phillips says, is $15 to $20.

Is Kentucky a Democratic state, or a doubtful state? Is it one of those states which can be always relied upon to cast its vote for Democratic principles of independence and for the interests of the people, or is it, as some of the National Republican leaders like to claim, one of those doubtful states, which may now and then be garnered by the agents of the big interests and swung by them into the money column?

Now is the time for all Kentucky Democrats to settle that question in a manner that will leave no room for doubt. On November 2nd, the voters of Kentucky will choose a governor and a complete set of state officers to guide the destinies of the state for the ensuing four years. Let there be no hair-line decision at the polls. The vote in the Democratic primary showed how many Democrats there are in Kentucky. It showed conclusively that Kentucky is a Democratic state, that it is, in fact, overwhelming Democratic.

It is now the duty of every Democrat in the state to cast his vote for the entire state ticket on November 2nd. Let us take nothing for granted. The eyes of the whole nation are on Kentucky. Three years ago the nation, disgusted at Republican misrule, arose and turned over the stewardship to the Democratic party. Today the Republicans are hoping against hope for a ray of light. They want to shove the thin edge of the wedge in somewhere. Let the Democrats of this state prevent its being slipped between their own ribs.

If there is a small majority for Stanley and the rest of the Democratic ticket in this election, the Republican leaders still claim that the country is entering the Republican fold. They will be buoyed up to redouble their efforts to regain control of the nation in 1916.

At a good old fashioned, smashing Democratic majority in this year's State election will break their hearts. It will have a powerful moral effect on politics from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The Democrats of Kentucky must stand shoulder to shoulder against the common enemy. They should forget the disappointments that came to some of them in the primary. Last year, after Beckham beat him in the primary for the nomination for United States Senator, Stanley got behind Beckham and stumped the State from one end to the other in Beckham's behalf. The men who supported McClesney and McDermott in the primary should follow the example set by Stanley and show that in spite of differences within the party all Kentucky Democrats will stand together when fighting Republicanism.

No Place Like Home.

To my old Kentucky friends, greetings:

Yes, greetings from the "Lone Star State." For seven years I have roamed from your borders. During that time my paths have led through pleasant fields, yet each Kentuckian is a friend and each Kentucky face is a message from home.

Texas is great. Only one place in all the world do I love better—that is my native "Blue Grass."

Since I can not return in person to your firesides, I send this note and other messages by two of my Texas friends—Rev. W. O. Blount and Rev. Byron Smith. They will spend the year in Louisville in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. I, also, send a clipping from the Baptist Advance about Mr. Blount who was written by an old Kentuckian—Dr. A. J. Armstrong. Should you meet them receive them as you would me.

Hoping that you will meet them and show them Kentucky hospitality, I am all I have represented it. I am a Kentuckian from home.

BONA McELROY.

Plow the Garden Now.

Plow the garden and plow it deep, as soon as the vegetables are off. This is the best advice we can give to the owners of gardens where gardens have been beaten continuously by rains during the summer. It is going to take severe froding to put the soil again in good condition after its severe beating, and deep plowing will let the frost penetrate further this winter than any other treatment.

We know of gardens which have been plowed three times this year and in which no seed has been planted because of continuous rains. This is gardening under difficulties but the reward for keeping the ground clean may come next year.—Ex.

Guy Carter chaperoned several young men last night on a hunting expedition, arriving home at 3:30 o'clock this morning. They caught seven possums, one coon and one Tom cat. They had a long chase after the cat. They chased it nearly four hours and "freed" it three times and got lost so often that it delayed them in reaching home until daylight.—Mayfield Messenger.

RABBIT HASH

J. R. Stephens is quite sick. R. M. Wilson drove a lot of cattle to Cincinnati, Thursday. Cecil Williams, a Hathaway blacksmith, was here Friday.

Mrs. Nat Rogers was visiting at Buview a couple of days last week.

Mrs. Weed Williamson, of Kansas, is the guest of her brother, Nat Rogers.

R. B. Huey and wife, of Burlington, were here and at Rising Sun Saturday.

Wallace Stephens and wife, of Lawrenceburg, were here a short time Saturday.

Dr. Hansell, of Rising Sun, is attending Dr. Carlyle's patients during his absence.

J. Colin Kelly and son Orville, spent Saturday and Sunday with Will Bodie in Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Riggs and son, Charlie, of Rising Sun, were guests of Frank Hodges, Sunday.

T. B. Miller, of Gallatin county, was here Saturday afternoon the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Stephens.

Mrs. Elmore Hodges and Mrs. Charity Riggs spent last week at Mrs. Hodges' sister near Deemsville, Pendleton county.

Jas. A. Wilson had one of his hinds badly cutting corn at a corn knife while cutting corn at W. C. Conner's one day last week.

W. B. O'Neal has only taken an acre of land at Big Bone Springs. He has not purchased of M. E. Hance as heretofore announced.

The Ladies' Missionary Union of the North Bend Association will hold an all day meeting at Burlington Baptist church Friday, Oct. 31st. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The work of reconstructing the Burlington and Florence pike is to begin in a few days and it is to be completed by December 20. It is claimed that when the work is done the road will have cost the county less than $2,000 a mile.

For the information of some it is here stated that the concrete crossing from the Boone Co. Deposit Bank to the court house was not paid for by the county, the bank had the work done and paid for it, although it is of nearly as much importance to the county as the pavement in front of the court house.

Make your apple butter.

The price of gasoline has begun to climb.

Considerable rain fell here Monday afternoon.

Several public sales advertised in this issue.

Dirt roads were in bad shape Saturday morning.

Pastures look fine and there is enough grass to last stock until after Christmas.

Everybody is ready for the Erlanger fair which begins tomorrow, Friday.

James A. Huey, of Union, has been appointed receiver for the Union Creamery.

Kirk Tanner has made the RECORDER his annual donation of one, July pawpaw.

The corner stone for half million dollar court house was laid at Cincinnati last Friday.

If you want an Erlanger fair catalogue call at this office and have your wants supplied.

There will be services at Union Baptist church, this (Thursday) night at seven o'clock.

There are numerous new advertisements in this issue that it will be worth while to read.

There are enough apples and hickory nuts in this county to feed the people thru the winter.

Antos blocked the streets in Burlington last Saturday afternoon at the close of the game of ball.

It rained Monday morning, but let it be hoped that on the last two days of the week it will not rain.

The first of October found the foliage of the trees giving very little indication of the approach of fall.

All the roads will lead to the Erlanger fair tomorrow and next day. You will meet everybody you know and then some if you attend.

Assessor Beemon and his deputy, P. F. Rogers, were busy Monday taking schedules of property for taxation.

A very small crowd in town last Monday and not much business was transacted by the county court.

Courtney and Hubert Walton will sell a lot of household furniture at the late residence of their mother in Petersburg at 1 o'clock Saturday the 16th inst.

A colored lodge of Knights of Pythias was instituted in Burlington last Saturday night. Several colored members were present to conduct the ceremonies.

If the weather is good next Friday and Saturday the crowd that will attend the Erlanger fair will be immense. Bad weather only can cause the fair to be a disappointment.

The Boone County High School has the same number of pupils enrolled that it had last year and the teachers are very much pleased with the enthusiasm they are manifesting in regard to their studies.

A heavy wind struck Petersburg last Monday afternoon and blew down quite a number of shade trees, and smashed in windows at some of the residences. For a while the citizens of the town thought they were in a well developed cyclone.

Sam Johnson, who is rebuilding for William Rogers the barn that was destroyed by the storm last July, came up last Saturday, and reported the building nearing completion. Very little of the material used in the former building is fit for use in the new structure.

County Clerk W. R. Rogers was in the city last Saturday spending his wealth. His reports business very dull in his department in the court house, but anticipations are very soon, especially in the marriage license line.

John C. White traded his old Ford to Huey, Hicks & Huey, of Union, last week for a new make of the same make. Mr. White does a considerable passenger traffic between Burlington and the end of the Ft. Mitchell car line, for which he is hands to keep well equipped.

The Grant county loose leaf tobacco warehouses are preparing for a big run of business the coming season. A loose leaf house at Walton ought to handle the tobacco produced by a large territory in Boone and Kenton counties, while Grant and Gallatin counties would contribute considerable.

B. L. Gaines, of Carroll county, attended county court here last Monday. Mr. Gaines is a native of this county, where he is held in the highest esteem as he is in his adopted county. Mr. Gaines' wife is a sister of R. Bradley of Bellevue neighborhood, and he is a brother of Legrand Gaines, of Burlington neighborhood.

The fiscal court is the court in which the taxpayers of the county are really interested, but none of them ever attend its sessions.

Young lady, if you find out that you are handsome, don't permit any of your friends to learn that you have made the discovery.

Nelson Emery, who lives out on Mrs. Eliza Walton's farm has killed 105 squirrels since the first of July, and has not done much hunting either.

Where dirt roads are dragged often they soon get good after a wet spell, therefore none of the roads should fail to be treated with the drag.

The sudden rise in the river has caught considerable corn in the lower bottoms. Frank Hodges, of East Bend, reports the loss of 150 bushels of corn.

Jesse Kirkpatrick, Burlington's contractor and builder, bought a farm at Master Commissioner's sale, last Monday. That procedure calls for a housekeeper.

Miss Jonette Revill got her hands hurt by pepper burst while working that vegetable last Saturday. Dr. Duncan had to treat them before she could get relief.

The first real indication of a fair and races at Erlanger, this week was last Monday, when a man with a racing outfit struck Burlington on the hunt for the Erlanger fair grounds.

G. O. Cleek, of Beaver, is the kind of a patron that makes a country editor feel like life is worth while. He came in Monday and paid for three subscriptions, one for himself and one for each of two sons.

The Kentuckians who attended the Farmers' fair at Aurora, last Saturday, pronounce it a success in every particular, and consider the day well spent. Lawrenceburg will hold a similar fair next Friday and Saturday.

The capital stock for the new company which proposes to continue the fair at Florence has about been subscribed, and there is no doubt but a fair will be held again at Florence next year at the usual time.

The big league base ball season is over and the world's 1-game series will begin in Philadelphia tomorrow, Friday. Fans are divided in opinion as to which team the National Philadelphia or the American Boston Red Sox will win.

Alonso Shearer, secretary of the Erlanger fair, made a tour of this part of the county one day the past week distributing matter advertising the fair. He is an energetic official, and if the fair is a success it will be no fault of his.

L. S. Beemon has a field of clover out on the Florence pike that is a delight to gaze upon. He harvested a good crop of grass off of the field two or three weeks ago, and the clover has since grown until it is about knee high and is as beautiful as you ever beheld.

The World's Work says that it is a matter of record that steamship companies operating between New York and San Francisco via the Panama canal have taken freight from beyond the Mississippi and delivered it at lower rates than the competing transcontinental railroads. An official statement recently before a board of steamship directors showed that a carload of steel plates may be carried westward by water from coast to coast for $100, and the same by rail would cost $320; canned goods, $300 as against $360 by rail; goods to $200 as against one thousand and eighty by rail. Eastward canned salmon, and wine go by the canal at about one-half the rate by rail.

A double header basket ball game was played here last Friday afternoon, the Burlington girls winning from the Union girls by a score of 19 to 12 while the Union boys defeated the Burlington boys 13 to 11. The ground was damp and slick, rendering it impossible for the players to hold their feet, and when the games were concluded the appearance of those who participated indicated that they had taken a mud bath. The Union teams have been well drilled and each put up a strong game, Tanner's pitching at the goal being especially good. Corner, Stephens and Kelly appeared in the strongest members of the Burlington team. On dry ground either team would do better work than that of last Friday.

Kirtley Rice, who has charge of several lots in the cemetery north of town, tells this snake story: One day while cleaning off a lot he came to a disturbance in progress in another part of the cemetery, which being kept up for some time, started him out to investigate. When he discovered a good sized frying chicken which a large snake was trying to swallow. The snake had swallowed one of the chicken's legs and was trying to back into its hole in the ground. The chicken was too large to be drawn into the hole, and the snake would pull the chicken to the hole and then the chicken would pull the snake partly out, their efforts being a success. When the snake disgorged the chicken, it was dead and dropped in the hole while the chicken left the spot at the top of its speed.

Weanling Mules Wanted

H. A. SMITH, of Hanover, Pa., will be at Independence Station, Kenton County, Saturday, October 9th, to buy a car load of weanling mules.

The Farmer and the Town.

The farmer is the backbone of this town—in fact, he is the main stay of the nation. We can not place too much emphasis upon this fact. As the American farmer prospers, so it is with the country in general, and so it will always be. If the farmer has a bad year, then the stores, and the shops, and the business community as a whole suffers. Everybody feels the pinch of a close season. That's one of the reasons why we of the town should work in harmony with the farmer for a better and more prosperous community. As he encourages us with his patronage and his cheerful smile when he comes to us, so should we return courtesy for courtesy by giving him the best that is in us, and by fostering a feeling of brotherly love and comradeship. It will not hurt the farmer, it will do him good, and it will do all of us a world of good.—Bx.

Toasts to 1854.

Here is an interesting clipping from an American publication in 1854. It is entitled "Five Captains." There were five captains chanced to meet—one Russian, one Turk one Frenchman, one American and one Englishman. One proposed a champagne supper, each one to give a toast to his own native country or pay for the wine drunk. The Russian: "Here's to the Stars and Bars of Russia that were never pulled down." The Turk: "Here's to the moons of Turkey, whose corners were never clipped." The Frenchman: "Here's to the cock of France, whose feathers were never picked." The American: "Here's to the Stars and Stripes of America who never failed to defeat." The Englishman: "Here's to the rampant, roaring lion of Great Britain, that tore down the Stars and Bars of Russia, clipped the wings of Turkey, picked the feathers of the cock of France and ran like a lion from the Stars and Stripes to the United States of America."

Remember that Hon. A. O. Stanley, Democratic nominee for Governor of Kentucky, will be at the Erlanger fair next Saturday to address the people. Mr. Stanley is one of the best orators in the State and it is worth going miles to hear him. Don't fail to be on hand. He is received with great enthusiasm wherever he appears in Kentucky, and Boone and Kenton counties should make next Saturday's his banner rural reception.

Master Commissioner Maurer made the following sales of land last Monday: To Jas. M. Thompson, two lots and a brick house in Petersburg for $150; to Leslie Aylor, house and lot in Constance for $100; to Samuel Pitts, 4 acres on Gunpowder creek for $1,450; to Jesse Kirkpatrick 62 acres near Richard Underhill's for $500.

Remember that Friday and Saturday of this week will afford the last opportunity this year to attend a fair, and the numerous very excellent attractions at the Erlanger fair those days will be very pleasing to persons who believe in making the most of this life.

At its annual election held at its office in Burlington, last Monday, the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company elected the following directors: J. W. Conner, E. H. Elankbaker, R. C. McGlasson, J. H. Stevens, J. H. Walton, J. C. Bedinger, John W. Hogan.

Mrs. L. N. Crigler died Monday at her home in Tampa, Fla. Funeral today at Lexington.

Kentucky W. G. T. U. Convention

The thirty-fifth annual convention of the State organization of the Woman's Green Temperance Union was held at Bowling Green Sept. 17-22. With the exception of the election of Mrs. L. D. Eickert as recording secretary, all the old officers were reelected. Mrs. R. E. Ryle and Mrs. R. O. Hughes were in attendance as delegates of the Richmond Union. These ladies reported a most interesting and profitable session. As this is the first convention, so far as we know at which Boone county has been represented, we hope to publish in this column next week the report of these delegates to their local Union.

The following address is reported in the Bowling Green Times-Journal:

The city to-day is astir over the wonderful address of Dr. Carolyn Geisel Monday night at the State Greet M. E. church. Dr. Geisel is a woman of the highest caliber and her wonderful presence. As she waxed larger and larger, until she became an apparent giant in the eyes of her audience. The expression of a well-known lawyer fits the woman well. He said, Geisel in his wife, when they closed, he said: "If I didn't see a woman I certainly heard one." And he both saw and heard a woman in the woman-little in stature but great in mind. Space forbids the entire speech, but extracts follow:

"It is a woman's business to raise men. The saloon industry with her business. Has the Government the right to license the manufacture and sale of a poison that ruins this business?"

"America doesn't need more lands, more mines, more minerals or more money—she needs more men. The American mother is protected by the American Government."

"We can no longer raise sound men in wet territory where you can raise sound swine in an unsanitary pig sty."

"Awake, ye careless women! The punch bowl and the alcoholic medicine bottle are feeders for the saloon; the devil's kindling wood."

"At least fifty per cent. of all forms of race degeneracy in America will be wiped out by nationwide prohibition."

"Sixty years since America began her partnership with alcohol and in that half century insanity, imbecility, crime and poverty have increased by 500 per cent. 62 out of every 100 persons in the penitentiaries of the United States are there on account of alcohol."

"A child is product both of its inheritance and its environment. Blood counts for nothing."

"You think a man pays for his glass of beer when he passes his nickel over the bar. He does not. He pays. The law of inheritance is inescapable. He is what the father was. If a man destroys his brain by alcohol, if his body wastes and degenerates through drink, his children will have dwarfed minds and degenerate bodies. Kill the saloon and save the baby."

"Drink makes the lowest element of society, but it does not always begin there. It begins appealingly, frequently with the highest."

"We have reached the third stage of race degeneration. Out of every two persons born into the world one dies before reaching maturity. Remove the cause and save the nation."

"Seventy-two out of every hundred babies born in Munich, the greatest beer-drinking city in the world, are unsound. America has far too many cities that are close to Munich in the beer drinking habit. Prohibition is Maine 71% per cent. of the babies born are sound. Environment is DESTINY!"

"Twenty per cent. of arteriosclerosis is produced by alcohol and is not curable. 62 per cent. of Bright's disease is produced by alcohol and is not curable. 92 per cent. of the stomach is produced by alcohol. Cancer of the stomach is not curable. Destroy the saloon and save the man."

"The saloon is defeating woman's business by cursing the unborn. The saloon is destroying the American home by defiling the American man. The American voter is called to stand up for the American home. Only called that often. When he votes to license the saloon he is the destroyer of the home."

"The American home is threatened with destruction because the American is destroying himself. Alcohol is not a food; it is a drug. It destroys the blood. It retards the digestion. It is the worst enemy of the brain worker. It hardens the liver. It destroys the kidneys. It furnishes no support to the body. It is a body pressor. It is a most destructive agent of health. It deadens the body and the senses. It affects the mind and moral side of the nature. Alcohol now shows death rate 20 per cent. greater than non-users."

Dr. Geisel will again speak to-night and in order to accommodate the crowd that will hear her a change in the place of meeting has been made from the First Baptist church to the First Baptist church.

The State Convention of the W. G. T. U. in session in this city, this morning voted to send a delegation to the Bowling Green Business University. Short addresses were made by Mrs. Norah B. Taylor, Treasurer of the State organization, and Mrs. Frances Buchanan, President of the State W. G. T. U. Each made a forcible, fluent and powerful address, which was heartily enjoyed by the students. The school long years ago committed itself, soul and body, to the cause of temperance, individually and collectively, and as the years come and go, it becomes stronger in its conviction, and not only its teachers, but its students, also are personally and individually strong advocates of the White Ribbon Cause. They, therefore, were greatly gratified and benefited this morning by the addresses and felt highly complimented by the visit of the convention to the school.

Notes on Seed Corn Selection.

No regrets follow selecting seed corn in the field except those for having practiced barn selection in previous years.

The man who once properly selects his seed corn in the field from high yielding stalks will never again resort to barn selection.

One hour spent in the field this fall in selecting seed corn will be worth more than days employed in the barn selecting next spring.

Give your corn a chance to show what it can and will do if seed from it is selected properly in the field for next year's planting.

You will not reap the full fruits of your labors by depending upon barn selection of seed corn. Select your seed in the field this fall.

As there are in the fields stalks bearing more than twice as much grain as the average stalks, seed corn should be selected from these.

The person who selects his seed corn in the field properly lays the foundation for increased yields in subsequent years.—North Carolina Experiment Station.

Stay home one Saturday afternoon this fall and select your seed corn from the field. It will pay you far better than participating in the whitening contest on goods boxed at the store.

Select your seed corn in the field bearing most shelled corn and note the superior yields produced from such seed over corn grown from barn selected seed.

As you would not ordinarily select breeding stock from sows giving birth to litters of three or four pigs, so do not delay selecting the seed corn until spring. The chances are many that you will secure seed borne by small yielding stalks.

Time to Put Hogs on Slop.

This is the month hog pastures fail. It is time to put the hogs on a slop ration of shorts, oilmeal or tankage in order to keep them in good growing condition. They have been let to the healthy condition by their diet on pasture and should be kept in that condition by protein foods like shorts and tankage. A mixture of shorts with oilmeal or with tankage is relished by hogs.

In feeding tankage it is well to scatter it along the troughs and then pour shorts slop on it. In this way each hog will be likely to get his share. From six to eight pounds of tankage to the 100 pounds of corn is enough to supply the protein ration to the average bunch of hogs. In addition to this they relish some shorts and just as much as you relish your cup of hot coffee in the morning.

Probably it will pay every farmer who is going to feed hogs this winter to make a cement feeding floor. We say probably, for there is a chance that the winter will be dry and the chance is only one in five. In these days of high priced corn it will not take long to save the price of such a floor, and building one is not expensive. Cement now is the cheapest building material we have and the floor can be laid by anyone who can mix cement.

Bury the Hessian Fly.

We feed 50,000,000 bushels of good wheat to the hessian fly every year, to say nothing of what it costs us to feed our chinch bugs and other pests, and have only ourselves to blame. Get together. Every neighborhood should have a farmers' club and appoint a hessian fly committee.

Cut the wheat high above the second joint. Remove the grain from the field and stack it where else. The fly is now in the resting stage, and the safest way and only sure plan is for every farmer to plow and harrow deeply and thoroughly within two weeks after harvest, turning under the stubble completely.

Teach your children to look for the fly and report it at every stage. Appoint a captain in every school of the neighborhood, the best wheat grower in the neighborhood.

This early complete plowing will not only bury the fly, but will give a great benefit to next year's crop. It does not let the field dry out after harvest and gets it ready to hold all of the moisture which so badly needed in most sections. It is stated that other things being equal, three acres plowed in July are worth five acres plowed in September.

There's a suspicion that certain jingoes are overanxious to stand behind the president when trouble is blowing. They get glory from being bold and then sneak away when bullets begin to fly.

Some Snake.

A snake story which seems incredible, but which he says is vouched for by reliable persons, was told us on Wednesday morning by E. L. Bingham. As the story goes, the farmers in the Cubbage neighborhood have for some time been raising young pigs and lambs, and their disappearance has been credited to a big rattlesnake, which had his home on the Brush mountain. Last week a little boy of a Mr. Wilder, accompanied by his dog, went out on the mountain. The dog which was some distance ahead of the boy, was heard to give a yelp, and a few moments later came running back to his young master, dropping dead at his feet. The boy went on to see if he could discover the cause of his dog's death and found a huge snake. He went back to the house and told his father of his discovery. Mr. Wilder shouldered his gun and soon found his snake, which he thought to death. The snake, which was a rattler, measured 12 feet in length, weighed over 100 pounds and had forty-five rattles and a button.—Pineville Sun.

GARDEN

By SARAH FURNHAM.

"Aunt Editha is not at home," said Teddy Lane, as he raced across the lawn to meet Jim Bartlett. "The dressmaker telephoned her to come down there, and she said to tell you to wait for her."

Jim smiled. "I'd be certain not to go until I had seen her."

Teddy was silent for a long while; his brown eyes were fixed meditatively on a dandelion in the grass. Life, as his gaze he said, conclusively, "But you're not a marrying man, are you, Mr. Jim?"

Jim blushed hotly. "Eh? What in thunder do you mean?" he frowned. "Who said that about me?"

"Oh! Mrs. Joremlah Wells told grandmother so. She said you were shilly-shally bachelor, and—"

"Hush all that, Teddy," interrupted the young man. "Let's stop gossiping and talk about something else. The garden looks beautiful, doesn't it?"

"Sure!" Teddy's tone grew pert. "It ought to with Mr. Smith sprinkling it while Aunt Editha pulls up the weeds."

Jim picked up his ears. "Smith, eh? Well, he's not here now. You and I will go and investigate Aunt Editha's garden. She promised me some roses tonight."

"She gave some to Mr. Smith, too," he choked, with a desire to ask questions about his rival. He hastily changed the subject by asking Teddy the names of many of the flowers.

"All those beautiful smelly ones are roses—pink, white and yellow," said the little boy. "This gray-green stuff is a low-down-miser and this crawling plant is creeping Charlie. That's a funny name; it's Mr. Smith's name—Charlie Smith."

"It seems to me that you have Mr. Smith on your brain," snapped Jim irritably.

Oh, Mr. Jim, you're picking Aunt Editha's flowers, and it isn't allowed unless she says you may."

"I'll take a scolding afterward," said Jim grimly. "I want some of the droopy stuff—bleeding heart, you call it? And love-in-a-mist? and say, Ted, which are the bride roses?"

"But Teddy planted himself in front of the house, white roses and refused to budge an inch."

"They are not for you, Mr. Jim," he said stoutly.

"How do you know?"

"I heard what Aunt Editha said to Mr. Smith. She said: 'I'm sorry I can't give you bride roses—no, you might not understand. I don't know what she meant, but I do know what she said!'"

Jim stared helplessly. "You're a regular phonograph, Ted," he said at last. "Seem to spend most of your time recording conversations not meant for your youthful ears."

"I hear 'em just the same," shrieked Ted.

Jim turned at the sound of a light step.

Editha was coming down the path, a thing beautiful to see on this summer afternoon.

"Good afternoon," she greeted him. "Why, you have been picking flowers! What an odd bouquet!"

Jim looked down at the flowers, he had clumsily arranged.

Bleeding heart, love-in-a-mist and bachelor button. The bride roses he wanted were just beyond his reach, for Teddy still intervened.

"My bouquet is not complete," he said significantly.

He took his head.

"Aunt Editha," Ted interrupted, "you've got a plant in your garden named after Mr. Smith—I mean the creeping Charlie. You ought to name something for Mr. Jim. He's my best friend!"

"Thanks, old top," laughed Jim, swinging the boy to his shoulder.

GOT HOLD OF WRONG HOSE

Colored Man Intended to Make Paste, But Instead He Landed in the Police Court.

Covered with white from head to foot, the prisoner looked like a snow man.

"With what is this man charged?" asked the court.

"I saw a white cloud," replied Officer 666, "and I thought he was trying to blow up a building."

"What have you to say for yourself?"

For answer the prisoner puffed out a little white cloud and coughed up enough flour to make a batch of biscuits.

"Can't you speak?"

A negative shake of the man's head sent flour into the atmosphere like half from a woolly dog.

"Are you a baker?"

This time the man managed to mumble a half-smothered "No."

"Then what on earth are you?"

After several false starts the prisoner finally blurted:

"Bill poster."

"Did you fall into a flour bin?"

Rubbing his face until a dusky skin began to show through the white coating, the prisoner explained:

"No, sah. When I run out ob paste dis mawnin', I filled a bucket with flour an' went across de street, where I saw a big hose by de side ob a building. I put de nozzle ob de hose into de bucket, but at first de handle wouldn't turn. I gave one big twist, an'—an' den it happened!"

"What happened?"

"Dat hose wasn't foah fillin' palls at all; it was foah fillin' automobile tials!"—Judge.

HAD CONFIDENCE IN PEOPLE

California Newboy Lost Nothing by Trusting to the Honesty of His Customers.

Most people are honest; so, at least, reasons a newboy in a California town, and he has clear justification for his confidence. The reporter of the following incident was in a downtown drug store when a stranger came in with a copy of a newspaper, and asked change for a dime. He said that he wanted to pay for his newspaper.

Someone remarked that for his part he let the newboys find their own change.

"This newboy cannot do it," said the man with the newspaper. "Come out here and look at him." Two or three bystanders stepped to the door, expecting to see a crippled boy with a pile of newspapers to sell. Instead they saw a tin can with a hole in the top large enough to admit a nickel; and a pile of newspapers lying upon the walk, and a card fastened to the can, reading:

"Come to Sunday school for one hour. If you want a paper, take one, and put your nickel in the can."

The can and pile of newspapers stood unprotected on the walk for more than an hour, while their little owner was at Sunday school. Men who passed by and were attracted by the rather odd little news stand would stop, read the sign, pick up a paper and put a nickel—and sometimes a dime—into the little tin can. When the boy returned from Sunday school he found all his newspapers gone, and more nickels in the tin than there were papers when he left—Youth's Companion.

CHILD'S ALLOWANCE

Should boys and girls have their own allowance, in proportion to the means of the parents, as soon as they are old enough to know the value of money? This is what many a parent has said in substance:

"Certainly. An allowance is the best safeguard against the habit of extravagance. If the child is taught to spend the money judiciously and to keep a strict account of all expenditures. It is absurd to think that a boy is not capable of buying his own necessities or a girl her handkerchiefs. What if they do make mistakes? They can be taught to profit by them and they must learn to rely upon themselves sooner or later. Children like to be trusted and will seldom betray confidence."

Women Can Keep Secret

Can a woman keep a secret? A bishop says she can't. And he ought to know. But he doesn't, say the women.

"Don't tell church secrets to your wife," the bishop advised a bunch of laymen, "because they will be no longer secrets." And the women come right back just like this: "The worst gossips and betrayers of confidence are of masculine gender. How do most women who spread secrets obtain possession of them in the first place? From their husbands, of course. Doesn't the fact that a woman usually conceals any truth damaging to herself prove that she can keep a secret?" So there.

Unhandy Coins

Among the strangest coins in the world are those used in certain out-of-the-way towns and villages in southwest Algeria, on the west coast of Africa, and called the "manillas."

In shape they resemble a horse shoe with the two extremities flattened out like a camel's foot. Being made of solid copper, three-eighths of an inch thick, they weigh over eight ounces each. In "face value" seven of these queer coins are equivalent to one quarter, so that a dollar's worth would be an uncomfortably heavy load!

The DAIRY

BULL MAKES DANGEROUS PET

Should Never Be Trusted So Far as to Get Advantage of Attendant—Exercise Is Essential.

The practice of permitting a bull to run with the dairy cows cannot possibly be commended, especially in this time during the breeding season; and with the dairyman who is milking a large number of cows and has a constant demand for milk, this means practically the entire time. A bull kept in a small paddock where he gets plenty of exercise, pure water and food rich in bone and muscle-forming material such as alfalfa, oats and wheat bran, will be more vigorous and give better service than a bull permitted to run with the cows. It is very essential that the bull should have plenty of exercise, which he cannot get if confined to a stall. Where it is impossible for the owner to fence securely about one acre for the bull, he can very easily provide the necessary exercise by stretching a strong wire between two substantial posts and fastening the bull by chain from the ring in his nose to a ring which slips loosely over the wire. This makes a secure fastening and one which experience has proved practicable.

When kept in this way the bull is also more easily managed. A dairy bull makes a dangerous pet, and should never be so far trusted as to be in a position where he can get the advantage of his attendant. Those unfortunate accidents which have sometimes occurred have usually been due to overconfidence on the part of the attendant.

The bull should always be handled kindly and firmly, and should understand that his attendant is his master. It is always advisable to train the bull calf to lead, and a ring should be placed in his nose at an early date.

TEST OUT PROFITABLE COWS

Important That Farmer Should Know Quantity and Quality He Is Receiving From Animals.

(By W. A. MCKERROW, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Feed is going to be higher than usual this season unless all signs fail. It is, therefore, doubly important that the farmer keeping dairy cows should be sure that his cows are giving him more than value received for what they eat. The way to be sure of this is to have scales and a Babcock tester. This is only one of the reasons why farmers should test their cows for quantity and quality of product.

Other reasons for cow-testing are: It enables the farmer to eliminate cows that do not pay for their board. It saves many a good cow from the shambles.

It is an encourager of good feeding and good care.

It gives the farmer an opportunity to build up a good producing herd.

It increases one's interest in dairying as a business rather than as a means of labor merely.

In short, it is plain common sense.

BEWARE OF THE QUIET BULL

Easy to Spoil Disposition of Animal by Allowing Children to Tease Him—Make Him Obey.

Never permit the bull to have his own way about anything where you may deal with him, and insist upon prompt obedience.

It is very easy to spoil the disposition of a bull by permitting children, old as well as young, to play with him or tease him. The man who is always prepared for trouble never has any.

It is the quiet bull that has never been anything that usually does the damage, suddenly developing a vicious spirit and attacking his unsuspecting attendants.

Dehorn Now.

If you have any dehorning to do remember to do it as early as possible, while the days are cool and the flies scarce. Prevention is the most humane and effective method, which can be accomplished by the use of caustic potash on the horns of calves no more than a month old.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

A great man or woman is he or she who works cheerfully and merrily, puts cheerfulness and merrily and does not slumber in the tents of "the good old times."

SANDWICHES AND SALADS FOR EVENING PARTIES.

A most attractive cabbage salad is made as follows: Mix together finely shredded cabbage and green peppers and olives. Chop the olives and remove the seeds and tough white portion from the peppers. Molt-

With a rich mayonnaise dressing and fill lemon cups with the mixture. Place each on a small plate, covered with a dolly.

A most delicious salad and one easy to prepare is crisp fresh lettuce dressed with a French dressing to which has been added a teaspoonful of tomato catsup, a tablespoonful of chopped green pepper, a teaspoonful of minced parsley and a tablespoonful of chopped onion. Shake or beat well with a Dover eggbeater, and serve very cold. The dressing is best passed as the oil and vinegar wills the lettuce very soon.

Mock Crab Sandwiches.—Take a quarter of a cupful of grated cheese, a pinch of mustard and pepper, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of anchovy paste, a tablespoonful of chopped olives, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of creamed butter. Spread on buttered bread after blending well.

Fig Paste for Sandwiches.—Cut three-quarters of a pound of figs into small pieces, add the same amount of brown sugar, a quarter of a pound of seeded raisins, a cupful of water and the juice of half a lemon. Stew on the back of the stove until very soft, remove and add a tablespoonful of vanilla. Put all through the meat grinder and to clean the grinder finish with three or four crackers which may be added to the paste. This will keep if packed in jars indefinitely and is delicious as a sandwich filling for any kind of bread or crackers. Used with two kinds of bread the slices pressed together and then cut like cake makes a most attractive sandwich.

Cocoanut Sandwiches.—Take a cupful of freshly grated cocoanut, a half cupful of chopped almonds, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar and three tablespoonfuls of thick cream. Spread this on wafers or buttered bread.

FRUITS FOR CHILDREN'S PARTIES

An fruit is one of the safe things to give children in right quantities and good condition.

They lend themselves to many delightful variations. If one wishes to serve a jelly for a child's party it may be molded in an orange cup or a pretty red apple, the cover kept on so that the contents will be a surprise. Children from four to forty, and even older, enjoy an element of mystery about things and a surprise is a most delightful way of entertaining little people. A tiny doll dressed in fluffy robes may be hidden in a rosy apple as a favor or as a gift.

A banana with a half dozen little "nigger" dolls or chocolate babies embedded in the banana and the skin put back is another delight that the children will rejoice over. Cut a slice of the banana to make the surface level and give the dolls room to lie in a nice row in their dainty bed.

A stick of good candy wrapped in oiled paper or fringed paper candy stick may be slipped into an empty banana skin.

A pretty ball may be concealed in an orange that has been carefully hollowed out and the quarters or halves put back closely.

An orange may hold almost anything from choice candy with candy hearts and mottoes to a cozy nest for another tiny doll.

A jack-in-the-box is great fun to make using fruit to hold the jack. For boys, whistles and marbles, tops and different toys can be used.

There is no need that the fruit itself be wasted. For it can be used in making frozen dishes, drinks or salads which the children will enjoy eating.

Penny toys with a bit of something to eat for little people think of a party as only begun when the food is served) may be easily furnished by any mother at small expense.

Attracted by Radium.

Colonel F. M. Buffum, Missouri state highway commissioner, has sent out a letter complaining of the practice of farmers of "cultivating" mudholes for the profit there is in pulling motorcars out of the mire. Colonel Buffum says he has received several complaints against farmers who purposely keep deep mudholes in their vicinity that they may charge the motorists a fancy price pulling them out. He mentions the case of Mrs. James A. Houchins of Jefferson City, who was forced to pay a farmer $25 for pulling her car out of a hole in the road.

Message No. 1

To the Business Men of Burlington

A young doctor, making a start in a small town, decided that to be prosperous he must look prosperous. He bought a new buggy and two good horses. Although he had only a few patients he always kept on the jump, attending to his patients' smallest needs. People began to notice this young doctor driving about town and they called him because he looked busy and prosperous. He got his start—a start that led to a comfortable practice.

Our town, like this doctor, must look prosperous to be prosperous. Clean streets, attractive store windows, well-painted buildings and dwellings give the prosperous air. Well-painted buildings are greatest of these.

THE QUARRY

By ELLIS COATES.

Jack Follinbee laughed contemptuously. "A woman who pursues a man could never really attract me," he announced. "Man should be the pursuer—woman the elusive quarry."

Two bachelors looked pityingly at Jack and the three married men chuckled wisely.

"Shall we join the ladies?" asked the host suddenly.

They filed into the broad veranda overlooking the Sound. There was a glimmer of white gowns and soft feminine laughter. A Japanese servant was serving coffee.

Jack sank into a chair beside Mrs. Linscott. He had met her only two hours ago, but he was strangely attracted by her pretty fragility—her shimmering air of dependence upon the other sex. He was quite bored by the strong, independent type of girl.

He thought it delightfully odd that she had never tasted coffee. They talked about it, and he asked her if she knew Bob Linscott. Bob proved to be her dead husband's brother; he had been Jack's chum at college. They grew more friendly and told amusing stories of school days. She said her name was Lenora, but they had always called her Leo. And Jack considered that the crowning touch to her many charms.

"The widow sure has Jack on the run," slantly remarked Finley Moore. Jack overheard the observation and flushed hotly.

Jack spent another evening in the society of Leo Linscott, and by that time he was seriously in love, and desperately jealous, as well. For Mrs. Linscott was impatient with her smiles, and Jack found her always just slipping out of his reach.

At the end of a month, he proposed to her. Before she could reply, the telephone bell rang and she was spirited away to minister at the sick bed of a cousin who had inconveniently met with a motor accident.

So Jack's hopes, like Mohammed's coffin, were suspended between heaven and earth, and he did not see her again for weeks. The cousin died and left a fortune to Mrs. Linscott, and the lovely widow appeared more fascinating than ever in trailing black garments.

Jack proposed again, and Leo refused him gently, oh, so sorrowfully, with real tears in her melting brown eyes.

Jack finally followed a much-talked-about plan and went up to the White mountains for a month. He was accompanied to find Leo Linscott dining on the broad veranda of the hotel when he reached his destination.

The next morning she had gone for an early walk along a mountain trail. Jack followed her, and found her looking dreamily off over the billowing clouds below.

"Leo," he said softly, coming up behind her.

A rich color flamed her cheek and her eyes shone, while her voice was not entirely in her control.

"Jack!" she faltered.

"Have I waited long enough?"

"Too long," she confessed in his arms. "I have been yours since the first moment I set eyes on you."

It was during their honeymoon, passed in a southern resort, that Jack once more heard the whisper of spiteful gossip. His hammock was swung under some palms near the beach and Leo was sitting on the sand near by picking up shells.

Two women in a wheeled chair stopped just out of sight of Jack's hammock, but their voices carried clearly.

"Did you see Mr. Follinbee's linen frock?" asked one.

"Yes; sweet, wasn't it?"

"They say she has heaps of money in her own right, and now she has caught Jack Follinbee. He is rich, too."

"Greedy thing!" laughed the other. "I've heard that he was a confirmed bachelor, but she laid her plans well. The chair moved on, and Jack, in a white rage, lay staring at his wife's back.

Leo must have heard too. He slipped from the hammock and approached her. He glimpsed her cheek; it was scarlet. Even her little ears were red with embarrassment.

He dropped down on the sand beside her and took her cold hands in his. Her face was a study in emotions; tears and laughter were struggling for supremacy.

"Jack," she said, her burning cheek close to his, "they were right!"

"Right?" he gasped.

"I did plan to marry you at first—and afterward I grew to care so much—I was frightened because I cared too much—and so I ran away—saw while only leading you on. You will despise me, I know!" She hid her face in her hands.

Jack frowned at the sea. Presently his frown vanished and amused crinkles came around his dark eyes.

"Darling," he said tenderly, "I'm thinking it would have complicated matters if I hadn't wanted to be caught!"

"Oh, you see, dear," she said, drying her tears, "I couldn't have wanted you at all if you hadn't loved me."

"I see!" he said, but there slightly bewildered look in his eyes.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Shall we dignify farm housekeeping by good equipment and scientific management and create in young women a zest for the work that calls them?

"We know very much sooner when it comes to the kitchen and to the work that is so necessary to the household."

SWEET CORN DISHES.

The dish which is said to have originated with the Indians and is called "squaw dish" is good enough for any table. Put sweet, fat salt pork in a frying pan or butter is better, and turn in a half dozen ears of tender sweet corn cut from the cob. Cook and stir until well incorporated with the butter, then cover and steam until thoroughly cooked. Salt well and serve piping hot. There will never be enough.

Corn Chowder.—Cut three slices of fat salt pork into cubes and fry them out in a saucpan. In this fat fry some sliced onions, and when ready add a few potatoes sliced and sufficient corn to serve the family. Cook in boiling water to cover, season well and add a pint or more of scalded milk and a few milk crackers, soaked in boiling water and drained. Serve hot with a cracker on top of each soup plate or bowl.

Corn Fritters.—Remove the corn from the cob, beat an egg and add the corn and its juice, beating all the time. When well blended stir in a quarter of a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter and flour to make a drop batter. Season with salt and pepper and fry by spoonfuls in hot fat. Serve hot from the pan.

Corn Soup.—Remove the corn from the cob and put the cobs into a gallon of boiling water and let them cook until the water is reduced to three quarts. Then remove them and put in the corn. Cook until soft enough to be pressed through a sieve and season liberally with salt and pepper. Cook together three tablespoons each of flour and butter, and stir into it gradually a pint of rich milk. Remove from the heat and add two well-beaten eggs and a half cupful of whipped cream.

A little corn cut from the cob left from dinner added to a few cold potatoes, a bit of onion and a slice or two of chopped mushrooms, makes a delicious appetizing salad with French dressing. The ways with corn are too many to give in one chapter.

A silent look of affection and regard when other eyes are turned coldly away, the consciousness we possess the sympathy and affection of one being when all others have deserted us, is a hold a star, a comfort in the deepest affliction, which no wealth could purchase or power bestow.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT.

Squeeze out and strain the juice of six good oranges. Add one cupful of sugar and cook slowly for half an hour, skimming often. Take from the fire and turn into a bowl. When lukewarm pour gradually, beating all the time, upon a warm custard made of the yolks of five eggs and two cupfuls of milk and a quarter of a cupful of sugar. Beat steadily five minutes, turn into a glass bowl and cover with the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff and mixed with five tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Chill before serving.

Kettles.—Take three-fourths of a cupful of popped corn, a tablespoonful of soft butter, the white of one egg, and a third of a cupful of sugar, a dash of salt and a half teaspoonful of vanilla, blanched and chopped almonds and candied cherries. Add the butter to the corn, beat the egg and add salt and vanilla. Drop on well-buttered sheet and shape in a flat cake, using a knife dipped in cold water to spread; sprinkle with almonds and cherries and bake in a slow oven until brown.

Egg Biscuits.—Sift together one quart of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Rub into this two teacupfuls of butter. Add two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Mix together with a cupful of milk, roll out into biscuits and bake in a quick oven 20 minutes.

Graham Hean Bread.—Dissolve a yeast cake in half a cupful of water with one teaspoonful of sugar. Add four cupfuls of graham and two of white flour, a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, one-half cupful of New Orleans molasses, one-half cupful of figs, cut thin and floured, and one cupful of lukewarm water. Mix and beat hard with a spoon for three minutes, then keep in a warm place overnight. Grease three bread tins and fill with the sponge, again put to rise in a warm place and when risen bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven.

Carranza Is Elated.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, October 10.—Gen. Carranza received with great pleasure the news that the Pan-American conference at Washington had decided to recommend recognition of the party led by him as the de facto government in Mexico, although he pointed out that he had received no official notification to this effect. Telegrams from Carranza agents at Washington brought the news and the first chief received the congratulations of his associates at Constitutional headquarters. The Washington telegrams were read in the theaters and received with great enthusiasm.

Gen. Carranza will not alter his plans for a trip through the Northern States, for which he is to depart tomorrow.

In response to questions, Gen. Carranza said: "This news puts an end to all efforts of our enemies to bring about foreign intervention. They continue their intrigues and their attacks in the newspapers, but recognition of the Constitutionalist Government naturally will rob them of the fruit of their efforts."

"When peace is absolutely restored and tranquility really established thruout the republic, amnesty will be granted to all these persons, but not now. To permit them to return at this time would be to endure their machinations within the republic."

"The immediate effect of this news will be a great moral strengthening of the cause of constitutionalism, and a corresponding disheartening of opposing factions. There will be no more formal battles. Fighting of that sort already has ended, but naturally the struggle to drive down mine-outbreaks and lawlessness must be continued for a greater or less time in a country such as this, where there are extensive open areas."

"Already these bands are disintegrating rapidly and their chiefs are surrendering. This development will bring the surrender of the leaders of the opposition, since the news of recognition will force them to further hope for success. This applies not only to those who are actually fighting in the field, but to those enemies of the cause who are intriguing both with the country and abroad."

"News of coming recognition is pleasing, since it will renew and strengthen our relations between Mexico and other nations."

Orphan asylums report that there is far greater demand for girls than boys in this country. It's another proof of our peaceful proclivities. Warlike nations always prefer boys. It is safe to say that in the European war zone today one boy is rated as worth about three girls. Only in America is the female sex rated at its real value—or as some cynics assert—more than its value.

The Apostle of Peace.

William J. Bryan's lecture at the auditorium last night did not show him as a peace-at-any-price man. It did show him as a man who is thoroughly convinced that the President is the high priest who is not willing to buy war at what it costs unless it becomes absolutely necessary to have it. It did not show him as the idealist who believes that war at this time, can be entirely eliminated from the world. It did show him the practical man who would use care and diligence to avoid war. Above all things, it did not show him as a man who is laboring in opposition to the President in the matter of averting war or sustaining war if it becomes inevitable. It did show him as a man who has labored and is still laboring with the President in the interest of peace.

Just as Mr. Bryan says, when the time arrives that a friend of the United States is the quarrel of the belligerent in Europe, the United States will be the friend whom that duty will fall upon us to assist. Mr. Bryan undertakes the performance of that service, a service alike to both sides, no citizen of the United States will have contributed more than Mr. Bryan to America's contribution of friendship to the world.—Nashville Tennessean.

W. G. T. U. NEWS.

(Furnished by Mrs. Belle Dickey.)

The 35th annual Kentucky State Convention of the W. G. T. U. met in Bowling Green, September 17-19 in Bowling Green, September 17-19. For the first time Boone county sent delegates to a State convention. Mrs. R. E. Ryle and Mrs. R. O. Hughes from Richmond Union. There were one hundred and thirty-three delegates and many visitors.

Col. Geo. W. Bain and Doctor Geisel were the two distinguished guests, and each one gave two admirable addresses.

Bowling Green was hospitality itself, and in nearly every store window we saw "Welcome W. G. T. U."

Four magnificent churches—Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Christian—which would do credit to any big city, held the large congregations on different occasions.

There were 21 of the 28 District Presidents present, who gave interesting reports on their work. It would be impossible to tell of all the good things that were uttered by the guests, the President, the officers and delegates, but a few nuggets of the gold will give some indication of the spirit that pervaded the convention. In which the earnest, consecrated women of this State are striving to bring about State and National Constitutional prohibition.

Miss McDaniel, of Hopkinsville, said, "We can't do anything in this work without consecration." She read Romans XII.

Mrs. Grubbs, Winchester, "Progress on your knees. Read the Word; pray."

Mrs. J. M. Lexington, "The manufacture of liquor in Kentucky has decreased 61 per cent."

Dr. Blackburn, speaking a welcome from the Medical profession, Ninety per cent. of the doctors of Bowling Green are temperance men.

Dr. Binkley, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, "My mother belonged to the W. G. T. U."

Rev. Mr. Boving, pastor of First Methodist church, "My father's house was the home of temperance speakers, and once when they were away from home, we children took a speaker home and entertained him."

Dr. Joseph Young, pastor of M. E. church South, "In Lexington, as a boy, I belonged to the Good Templars."

Mrs. Beuchamp, "Administration is nine tenths of the law. We get prohibition laws passed, then resist in our victory and let the liquor men put in wet officers, who will not carry out the laws."

Mrs. Beuchamp speaking on woman's suffrage, said, Seventy-five per cent. of Lexington property belongs to widows and orphans.

Mrs. Pearson, Wilmore, "The work that will bring State and national prohibition is work with young people. Don't say you haven't time. You have time to clothe your children."

Mrs. Day, Dawson Springs, said they have a speaker in each county in her district to visit each school and talk total abstinence."

Mrs. Wheeler, "Distribute anti-cigarette literature at all the schools."

Mrs. Geiger, Louisville, "Let the Board of Education put up in the schools a law on cigarettes."

President Dickey, of the Business University at Bowling Green, said that he receives requests for young men for office work. Among the list of questions asked are these:

What associates did he keep? Did you ever hear he ever used intoxicating liquors?

In the discussion does Prohibition raise taxes? Delegate after delegate rose and told the situation in his own district. Mrs. Pritchett, of Madisonville, (dry) said that they have new water works and side walks and no more taxes in spite of the general business depression over the country.

Mrs. Woods, Stanford, (dry) they have side walks and electric lights.

Mrs. Stone, of Paducah, (dry), side walks fine school building.

Mrs. Smith, Newcastle, (dry), graded school, lights.

Mrs. Shaw, Newport, (wet) said, "Every body has a saloon that wants one, taxes raised."

Mrs. Wright, Louisville, (wet), 800 saloons in the city.

Castlesburg, (wet), 28 saloons and from 30 to 60 in jail.

Peach, (wet), 72 saloons, three distilleries, two breweries, seventy-five blind tigers.

Miss Pearson, Wilmore, (dry), they have nothing but county taxes.

Mrs. Beuchamp said, "The distiller gets from 500 to 800 per cent. profit on the money investment. Compensate the distiller for his property and designate the burglar for his tools?"

DO YOU KNOW THESE FACTS?

The Liquor Traffic and the Farmer.

If all the distilleries and breweries were nationalized, the market for corn would not be affected. The liquor traffic uses less than two and one-half per cent of the land.

For every bushel of grain used by the breweries and distilleries more than 44 and three fifths bush

ROAD BUILDING

GREAT BENEFIT TO FARMERS

Three-Hour Trip to Town Cut Down to Thirty Minutes by Advent of Gasoline Motor Car.

(By L. J. OLLIER)

The prosperity of a state depends largely upon good roads. They mean cheaper transportation, better living conditions, and happier homes. Quick communication ranks as the great factor in the universal dissemination of knowledge. Where good roads abound sectionalism cannot exist.

The desire for good roads leading to a city that those with automobiles could have a greater pleasurable touring radius first brought the matter prominently to the fore as a good roads movement with automobile backing.

Gradually the farmer, antagonistic at first, began to take an interest. With good roads and an automobile he could cut down the three hour trip to town to perhaps thirty minutes.

Good roads brought the doctor quickly—at a time when minutes were precious. Good roads and an automobile took the family to town in the evening, something unheard of before, or to visit a friend or relative in a distant part of the county. When farmers learned that other farmers were doing these things, that good roads and automobiles made them possible, then they, too, desired good roads for their own country.

By means of the telephone and quick motor truck delivery the farmer is now able to top the market. He can rush his produce to market at the right moment to command the best price. But he could not do it were his roads not well built and in good repair. Consequently the farmer is now most active in the agitation for good roads and jealous of any legislative power delegated to irresponsible authorities.

While in time every road should be a good road, yet all the work cannot be done at once. Therefore the authorities who are building roads should see that each one is linked together to make continuous highways. The advantage of this lies in the fact that the main arteries of travel will then first receive the attention of the good roads builders. It will also facilitate touring, in itself a valuable asset for any community.

It is interesting to note that in 1913 Ohio had the largest mileage of improved roads of any state in the Union with 28,312 miles. Indiana was second and New York third. Illinois was seventh with 9,000 miles. While New York can claim the greatest progress in road building from 1908 to 1913, having built nearly 10,000 miles in that time, I feel that the work California is now doing probably puts that state in the lead. I have just returned from California and am amazed at the

Three years ago California appropriated $18,000,000 for good roads. The various counties each appropriated in addition from $250,000 to $3,500,000 for the improvement of county roads which are feeders to the main highways. Los Angeles county has over 400 miles of improved roads. By September one will be able to drive from Los Angeles to San Francisco by the coast route and return by the valley route over continuous good roads—a boulevard 1,000 miles in length.

The same agitation that brought California its appropriation for good roads is now being waged elsewhere throughout the West. In some places actual work is in progress. The state of Utah has passed favorably upon an improved road that eventually will be part of one all the way from the Yellowstone National park to the Grand canyon of the Colorado river in Arizona.

In the East New York is working out its good roads plan and I am interested in the efforts Illinois is making to improve its roads.

Work for Convicts

If set to work on our public highways, the convicts in our prisons would put out into the world after their sentences are fulfilled better qualified to take their places as self-respecting men and stronger mentally, morally and physically. This aspect of the good roads subject is receiving constantly increasing attention.

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

MANY STATES USE CONVICTS

Different Systems of Employing Prison Labor on Public Highway Improvement Is Described.

Thirty states at the beginning of the present year had on their statute books laws providing for the employment of state prisoners in road building. Arizona, Arkansas, Idaho, Louisiana, Maryland, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Oregon, Virginia and Washington follow practically the same system, providing that the control of this work shall be vested in the state highway commission. The highway commission or state engineer makes requisition for such number of prisoners as he can use effectively, and the prison authorities turn over to him such prisoners as are suitable for the road work.

The prison commission or board of control of state institutions is held responsible for the development of the convict road work in some nine states—Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, North Dakota, Oklahoma and Wisconsin. State prisoners are turned over to the county authorities to be worked on the county roads in Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina. This system is not approved by the national committee on prisons and prison labor, which holds that the state under no circumstances is justified in delegating the responsibility for its convict wards to county authorities.

The system in New York state divides the responsibility for the construction work and maintenance of the camps between the state highway department and the commissioners of the counties in which the roads are to be built, with the state superintendent of prisons in final authority. In Utah, West Virginia and Wyoming the highway department and the prison department co-operate in the control of this work. The prison department is fully responsible for the care and discipline of the prisoners, while the road department is called upon to do the work which it is equipped to do, the building of roads.

The committee has found this latter system essential to the successful development of convict road work. The prison department is in a position to care for the prisoners and to handle such matters as food, clothing, housing, medical attention, the affording of educational facilities and recreation.

GOOD ROADS ARE INCREASING

United States Leads France in Miles of Improved Highways—State Aid Now in Effect.

According to the Good Roads Year Book of the American Highway association, recently issued, America now has 6,000 miles more of good roads than France, the total for this country now amounting to 31,000 miles. Of this 6,000 miles were built in 1912 and about 6,000 in 1914, making a total of over one-third of the entire mileage of the good roads of the country.

New Jersey was the pioneer state to provide state aid for public highways, in 1891, and Massachusetts and Connecticut soon followed, but it only during the last ten years that the state aid policy has been in effect to any considerable extent.

Los Angeles to Improve.

Seven million dollars will be expended on the roads of Los Angeles in 1915. Three hundred and twenty-four miles of concrete boulevard and 160 miles of decomposed granite highway will be constructed.

Farmer Realizes Value.

No other citizen realizes the value of good roads as does the farmer.

SPELLING IS HARD TO LEARN

Tests in Public Schools Show Surprising Results, Says Federal Bureau of Education.

Washington.—Seven out of every 100 third grade public school children cannot spell 'has,' said a statement issued by the United States bureau of education. "This and other curious evidences of the special problems inherent in the teaching of spelling are brought out by Dr. Leonard P. Ayres of the Russell Sage foundation in a study just published." Doctor Ayres has had made a test from 1,000 words that constitute 50 per cent of the English language ordinarily used. He has found that "spelling ability" is easily and scientifically determined. For example, nine words of most frequent use, "the," "in," "so," "no," "now," "man," "ten," "bed" and "top," revealed that second grade pupils, on an average, spelled correctly 94 per cent of these words. At the other extreme of the scale the words "judgment," "recommend" and "allege" were found to be spelled correctly by just 50 per cent of eighth grade pupils.

NOISY BOATS ANNOY PASTOR

Prays That It May Rain Every Sunday During the Remainder of Summer.

Pittsburgh.—If rain should fall every Sunday throughout the rest of the boating season it probably will not grieve Rev. J. S. Averman, pastor of the Tarentum Evangelical Lutheran church. The church stands close to the Allegheny river. Not infrequently the chug chug of pleasure craft seriously disturbs worship.

In the midst of a morning service, while Rev. Mr. Averman was approaching an eloquent period of his sermon, a noisy motor began to cough and bark. The minister stopped and remained silent until the noise from the river had died down.

Then he astonished the congregation by offering a fervent prayer that it might rain every Sunday during the summer. Then he resumed his sermon.

CHILD ATTACKED BY ROOSTER

Cuts Her Face and Spurs Her, But Is Beaten Off by Neighbors of the Family.

New York.—Mildred, two years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Loughlin of Patchogue, L. I., was set on the last of September, when she was attacked by a big stray rooster, who wanted to take the baby had in her chubby list.

The child tried to beat the big bird off and alarmed the neighborhood with her screams. The rooster pecked at her face, coming dangerously close to her eyes, and then catching her hair in his beak he spurred her face, drawing blood. The rooster was killed by a neighbor who was passing at the time.

DINNER DISHES FOR COMPANY.

Cut a well cleaned chicken into pieces at the joints, cover with hot veal broth and let cook until tender. Cook a half cupful of rice, two dozen potato balls and a dozen small onions separately until nearly done, drain and add the chicken with a can of small string beans, rinsed in boiling water. Let simmer about ten minutes when all should be done. Prepare about a dozen and a half small baking powder biscuits. Turn the chicken on a large platter and surround with the hot biscuits.

Martini Potatoes.—Scoop out the inside of four hot, baked potatoes and force through a potato ricer. Add one and a half teaspoonfuls of butter, the yolk of an egg, three tablespoonfuls of cream, a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and nutmeg. Keep hot and beat three minutes, then add a well beaten white of egg. Shape between two tablespoonfuls and place on a buttered sheet to brown delicately.

French Lemon Jelly.—Rub the peel of three lemons upon half a pound of loaf sugar and dissolve the sugar in two cupfuls of water. Boil until reduced, add the strained juice of the lemons, two cupfuls of water and the juice of an orange. Pour it upon two well beaten eggs and whip well. Then add two teaspoonfuls of gelatin, dissolved in a little boiling water to soften. Pour into a wet mold after being well blended and serve with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with lemon and orange.

Fish Savory.—Cut two small onions in slices and fry lightly in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Add a half pound of cold, cooked fish, cut in small pieces, sprinkle with a tablespoonful of flour and fry a light brown. Dredge with one teaspoonful of curry powder. Fry a little longer and add another tablespoonful of flour. Moisten with four tablespoonfuls of cream and half a cupful of stock, season with salt, mixed spices and cook for half an hour, then add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice.

Dish up and garnish with parsley and toast points.

SUMMER DISHES.

There is no dessert more popular than the frozen one, in fact almost any combination is welcome after it has been through the freezer.

Orange Sherbet.—Beat one egg lightly, add it to a quart of milk, and a pint of cream. Dissolve two and a half cupfuls of sugar in the juice of three oranges and one lemon. Add the grated rind of three oranges and one lemon, mix and freeze.

Lemon Dimples.—Chop the rind of one lemon fine, add to the juice of two cupfuls of bread crumbs with a cupful of suet, add one egg and enough milk to make a paste, sweeten to taste, divide into five portions and place in separate cloths. Boil three quarters of an hour and serve with butter and honey.

Stuffed Mutton.—Take a four pound breast of mutton and put to cook with one turnip, a carrot and two onions. Grate half of each vegetable into the stew and slice the rest. Cover with water and simmer one hour. Prepare a stuffing of bread, chopped onion, suet, sage, salt and pepper, bind with milk. Take out the mutton, carefully remove the bones and place the stuffing in a baking dish with some halved potatoes and bake for half an hour.

Individual Cream Chicken.—Take a tablespoonful of minced chicken, season with a pinch of minced parsley and a squeeze of lemon. Season with salt and pepper and moisten with a spoonful of cream. Put into a ramekin, cover and steam in hot water. Serve on a hot plate with crisp buttered toast and small parts of sweet butter rolled in parsley.

Gooseberry Dessert.—Cook slowly a quart of gooseberries with a cupful of brown sugar in a stone dish in the oven. Arrange slices of sponge cake in a dish, pour over the cooked berries a custard made of a cupful of milk, an egg, a pinch of salt and a tablespoonful of sugar. When cold cover with sweetened whipped cream, sprinkle with chopped pistachio nuts and serve well chilled.

CROP REPORT.

The weather during the month of Sept. was favorable for maturing corn and housing the tobacco crop. At the same time very good progress was made in the seeding of wheat, rye and barley. Many farmers delayed their fall seeding in an effort to avoid the ravages of the Hessian fly. They feared that early sown wheat would become infested with this fly, and this is responsible for a great deal of wheat not being sown until after the first of October. The preliminary estimate of wheat sown this year is 80 per cent. This does not indicate an unusually large wheat crop for next year, but the same for rye is 82 per cent, barley, 83 per cent. The prices secured for wheat this year have been disappointing, although the farmers have obtained for several years. The war prices of $1.65 per bushel last fall at wheat seeding time caused a large acreage to be sown. The price declined to below $1.00 per bushel by harvest time. Even at $1.00 per bushel the wheat crop has not been a profitable one in Kentucky for several years. The preliminary yield of corn is 31 bushels per acre. This is the largest yield per acre that Kentucky has had for many years. At 50 cents a bushel corn is proving a more profitable crop than wheat at $1.00 per bushel. Naturally, therefore, the corn acreage is increasing while the wheat acreage is decreasing. The report shows that about 10 per cent of both Burley and Dark Tobacco was not housed from one cause or another. The preliminary estimate of the yield of Burley tobacco is 811 pounds per acre, that of Dark tobacco 771. As reported by this department, the average price for 1915-16 Burley tobacco is $1.25 per one hundred pounds, for Dark tobacco $3.70. With the 1915 prices for corn and tobacco maintained, the income of the farmer of Kentucky should be above the average.

Pastures of all kinds have been good; alfalfa, bluegrass, clover and orchard grass all being reported as in a condition about ninety per cent.

Complaints of cholera among hogs, catarrhal fever among cattle and glanders among horses have come to the Department from different localities. The number of cattle in the state to go on feed during the winter is probably larger than ever before in the past few years. The number of breeding ewes has probably decreased on account of the difficulty of re-stocking from outside sources where the flocks were dispersed on account of the high prices prevailing in the summer. There has not been a case of foot and mouth disease in Kentucky since March 1913, but the disease has broken out again in Illinois. The state of Kentucky, along with several other states, has an adequate quarantine against all cloven hoofed animals from any part of the state of Illinois. The state is endeavoring to cope with the situation there and have destroyed 250 hogs in the last few weeks. This last outbreak is due to a single infected hog, cholera, scum, and the Kentucky farmer is warned against buying scum manufactured in states where the disease still exists.

The reports show that the farmers have used vast quantities of ground limestone this year. It has been sown alfalfa and crimson clover more than ever before. It is not too late to sow rye and barley for the next year's crop. The farmers of Kentucky are realizing more than ever before that the hard winter rains are almost as hard on unprotected land as the season's crops. It is cheaper to use fertility than to buy it. Very Truly Yours,
J. W. NEWMAN,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

Pumpkin and sweet potato pies are now on the bill of fare.

Two Kentuckians Killed.

Another crime has been marked up against the night marauders of Western Kentucky, who style themselves "Regulars." A home was dynamited early today, and as a result two men are dead and another injured. The scene was the dwelling of a family named Sathron, near Nortonville. Will Cathron, a Nortonville killer, and Will Purdue so badly injured that he died later. Jas. Williams was injured slightly. About three weeks ago a stick dynamite and some matches were left at the door of Charlie Day, who was warned to leave. Day left Sunday, and the Cathrons moved into the house. The father of Will and children were in adjoining room when the explosion took place. The house is on a highway between Morton's Gap and Nortonville.

Sheriff Tom Logan and Deputy Paul Lucy were notified. With bloodhounds they went immediately to the scene. The dogs at once picked up a trail at the rear of the house and trailed the assassins to where a buggy had been stationed. Cathron was a peaceable man and was an employee of the coal company at Nortonville. It is thought that a mistake was made and that the dynamite did not know Day had left the county. When Judge Fleming Gordon, of the Hopkins Circuit Court received word of the deed he called the grand jury before him, giving special instructions regarding the investigation and ordering that all other work be laid aside. Judge Gordon stated there are only three ways to stop these degradations in Hopkins county: first, by the courts; second, the militia; and then, if these are not effective, it is necessary to lead any righteous mob to stop such deeds. Hopkins county has offered a reward of $200 for the apprehension of the assassins, and will ask the state to add the same amount.

Salary Reduced to $6,000.
The stockholders of the Burley Tobacco Company held an all day meeting at Lexington on Tuesday and elected officers for the following year. President Clarence Lebus and the executive committee and directors as had served in the past, were practically all re-elected. The meeting a fight was made on the re-election of the old officers, but the fight was a losing one from the outset, the faction which desired a change was badly outvoted. The majority faction of the company then reduced the salary of the president from $9,000 to $6,000 per year. The members of the executive committee from $1,800 each to $1,000 each per year.

Fred J. Ghent, one of the most prominent tobacco men in Kentucky, was re-elected as a member of the executive committee while Benj. Miller of Germantown was named as member of the Board of Directors, succeeding V. T. Craig, who has been serving as a director from this county. The report submitted by the committee at this meeting shows that the company is wholly solvent and that the different branches of the industry are now on a paying basis.—Warsaw Independent.

Decision is Reached.
Washington, Oct. 4.—Super-battle cruisers, bigger, faster and more heavily armed than any war craft now afloat, will be built, it was decided today. A decision on this step was reached at a conference of President Wilson, Secretary Daniels and Representative Patrick, chairman of the house naval affairs committee. Plans for such a type of vessel are already prepared, and are ready and considered by the secretary and members of the general board.

Just how many of the new type ships will be ordered was not determined. The estimate was in the hands of the secretary of the treasury by Oct. 15th. It is contemplated the cruisers' speed will be thirty-five knots, faster than any but the swiftest destroyers. The armament was not decided on. Some of the officers believed that they should have twelve 14-inch rifles, or they may mount six or eight newly developed 16-inch guns. All items forthcoming in navy circles are considered at today's conference.

Big Contract Refused.
The Kentucky Walon company, of Louisville, has refused contracts for $26,000,000 worth of military rifles, supposed to be wanted by the government. R. V. Board, president, has returned from New York where he is said to have met representatives of the government to place the order. Lack of equipment and the pressure of other demands on the plant of the local concern is said to be responsible for the refusal of the contract. It was proposed to allow two years' time for making the rifles.

The burning of the falling leaves has begun, and will continue at intervals for several weeks.

Kirb Tanner reports that he dug 71 potatoes from one hill, small but many in a hill.

Albert Clove captured twelve premiums on his colts at the Erlanger fair last week.

The condition of W. S. White, of Hatchingwood neighborhood, does not improve much.

The "Stitch" in Time.

So long as good weather continues in the fall most farmers are busy with threshing, corn and potato harvest, fall seedling, haying, etc., that less important work is usually postponed until winter. However, the exercise of a little thought and the expenditure of a very few minutes at this season will often save not only hours but days later on when the weather and roads get bad and outdoor work is impossible.

Then the odd jobs of overhauling the farm equipment, repairing painting and the work which have been put off until a slack season, will require attention; but all too often the necessary maintenance is delayed until it is possible to make a trip to town, and not infrequently it remains undone until the busy season of the following year, when necessity demands it.

A list should be made of the things that will be wanted for this work. It will only take a few minutes to jot them down as they are brought to mind, and then on the next trip to town they may be bought and set aside so they will be ready when wanted. The condition of the different machines which will, or should, be overhauled should be noted, and the parts which will need to be replaced purchased. Then there are the odd jobs of repairing buildings, fences, gates, etc., which will require lumber and nails. There is no need to make an extra trip for them when wanted; they may be brought home the next time a load is taken to town. Likewise the lumber and hardware for the small jobs of the new season should be bought before spring, also the paint, putty, and brushes which will be required in painting the various farm wagons, implements, inside woodwork, furniture, etc., and, above all, the necessary materials for the improvements planned for the house should be obtained, so that they can be completed this winter and not have to wait another year.

Everyone knows how much more "stitching" it should have than necessary equipment ready to perform a piece of work when an opportunity presents than to start on it when the time comes. That it will have to be postponed until a trip can be made to town, which, even if the roads are good, still means a loss of time and added expense.

It is astonishing how much can be accomplished on rainy days or during slack times. The tools and materials are at hand, and there should be no difficulty in overhauling practically every implement of the farm during the winter season and have them ready for next season's work. The value of these "stitches in time" is strongly advocated by the small amount of time they require. Aside from the satisfaction of having each implement in first-class shape when it is needed, there is the actual saving accomplished by avoiding having horses and hired help standing idle while repairs are being made, which, in turn, frequently means a loss of part of a crop.

It is business to go into debt concerning the many jobs which can be accomplished with profit during the winter months; there are plenty of them which will occur to the farmer who will spend a few minutes in considering the matter.

Weather Predictions.

(Maysville Independent.)
We predict there will be some days next winter when the snow drifts will be bigger than the coal piles.

There will be some days when an umbrella and rain coat will come in handy, and the children will need to be kept dry.

There will be sunny days when they will cry to go barefooted.

There will be sleety days when the wicked will not only "stand in slippery places," but will fall all over the street.

During the winter ice will be cheap and the poor will get a taste of it.

The demand for "some of the same" will mean something of other than beer.

There will be frozen toes to nurse and snow to shovel off the pavement.

You may confidently look for colder weather in January than this in August, and flies will be out of business.

Coal fires will come in at the front door to torment you as the last ice bills vanish through the back door.

Flinch at a "900" and euchre will take the place of baseball, tennis and croquet, and Sunday school picnics will be out of style.

The excuse for staying away from church will be "too cold" instead of "too hot."

Watch and see.

Kentucky Bankers for Wilson.

Kentucky bankers, in closing session Thursday, adopted resolutions, which were, in part:

"We approve of the wise and manner in which President Wilson has handled the complicated international questions that have arisen and confronted the nation during his administration."

"We congratulate the State of Kentucky upon the successful, able and efficient manner in which Col. T. C. Smith and his associates have conducted and administered the affairs of the State Banking Department."

"We recommend that the wise and long-existing policy of this association in refraining from all political matters be strictly adhered to."

PRESIDENT TO MARRY

Wedding Will Take Place Some Time in December.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States, announced tonight his engagement to Mrs. Norman Galt, of Washington. The date of the wedding has not been fixed, but it probably will take place in December, at the home of the bride-elect.

The brief announcement from the White House made by Secretary Tumulty came as a surprise to official Washington, but to a number of intimate friends it has long been expected. From this circle came tonight the story of a friendship whose culmination was viewed as a happy turn in the troubled and lonely life of the nation's Chief Executive.

Mrs. Galt is the widow of a well known business man of Washington, who died eight years ago, leaving a jewelry business that still bears his name. She has lived in Washington since her marriage in 1896. She is about 38 years old and was Miss Edith Bolling, born in Wytheville, Va., where her girlhood was spent and where her father, William H. Bolling, was a prominent lawyer.

In the circle of people who have known Mrs. Galt for many years she has been regarded as an unusual beauty, gifted with a natural charm. Friends speak of her as being constantly sought out as a delightful companion, remarkable especially on her thoughtfulness and quick capacity for anything she chooses to undertake.

For many weeks Mrs. Galt and her relatives have been frequent dinner guests at the White House, and she has become a familiar figure in the President on motor rides. She is not quite as tall as Mr. Wilson, has dark hair and dark eyes. Her tastes are said to be strikingly similar to those of the President with a deep interest in literature and charity work.

Friends of the President expressed their pleasure over the announcement tonight, not only because of Mr. Wilson's personal happiness, but because they felt this new companionship would give him support and comfort in his home life—a vital need during the hours of strain over the nation's problems.

With the marriage of his two daughters and the death of Mrs. Wilson more than a year ago, the President's life has become one of solitude. His absorption in official labors began to tell on him physically and when a few days ago he began to take a renewed interest in personal affairs his friends and members of the family welcomed the distinct change which brought about in his health and opinion.

The President was in a happy mood tonight. The satisfactory settlement of the Arabic case and the important questions pending, together with the announcement of his engagement, had buoyed his spirits. He will go to Philadelphia Saturday to attend the world's series and it is likely that Mrs. Galt, together with Miss Galt, members of the President's immediate family, will be in the party.

Home and School.

Mr. Teacher are you teaching the child the business end of life? Of course it is necessary to teach thoroughness in lessons of all kinds but is just as essential to teach the child the responsibilities resting upon him now and those to come.

"As is the teacher so is the school" is a true saying and we might add here that the trustee so is the teacher. It is just as true. A real live capable trustee is going to employ a real live teacher if he has to go a considerable distance to get one.

Those who take a college course soon realize the importance of getting the under work well. A weak high school course causes the college students trouble and ruins the life of many who never go any farther than the high school. The foundation should be clean and thorough.

A good College course is as necessary in farming as in any other occupation in life. Life is business from the cradle to the grave and it is a mistake to allow children to form habits of idleness either in school or out.

Imports as well as exports of tobacco and its manufactured products are being more or less affected by the European war, but foreign trading is not nearly so far from home as it might be expected under existing conditions. The Government figures, representing the volume and value of imports for the month of July, show an increase in the quantities of wrapper leaf tobacco, of cigars and cigarettes duty paid.

Let tobacco businessmen compare the corresponding month last year, and imports of cigars and cigarettes were also on an slightly larger scale. For the seven months of the calendar year there has been a considerable curtailment in all branches of the industry, except in the case of the Philippine Islands and of foreign-made cigarettes.

Harvest season is at hand.

Coal bins in town are being filled.

The biggest frost of the season was that of last Sunday morning.

J. Frost was a visitor to these parts several nights during the past week.

The effect of the recent frosts on the tree foliage is beginning to appear.

Last Friday and Saturday closed out the fine season in this part of the country.

Mrs. Emma Brown, who was burnt a week ago last Saturday night is about recovered from her injury.

Several Burlington ladies went to the woods last Monday afternoon to lay in a supply of hickory nuts.

Mr. Snow was a visitor to Burlington last Friday for a short time, but soon disappeared when the sun came out.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gurney, of Erlanger, united with the Erlanger Baptist church at the meeting one night last week.

The meeting at the Sand Run church has been postponed until November 8th, as the recorder is requested to announce.

The first snow of the season fell on the 8th, and according to an old saying we are to have only eight snows this winter.

The weather clerk is evidently against the Erlanger fair, and makes a specialty of bad weather on the dates chosen for it.

It will be about 30 days before the pike between the end of Ft. Mitchell car line and the top of Willow Run hill is thrown open for travel.

Those of this county who attended the meeting of the State Bankers' Association held at Danforth, last week, were delighted with the reception given them.

Mr. Charles P. Reed, prominent in the Southern M. B. church and head of the Layman's Union, died last Thursday night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Burlington, in Erlanger.

Mrs. Cleveland, one of Burlington's old colored citizens, was stricken by paralysis, last Saturday. Owing to his advanced age, 73 years, he is not expected to recover.

John Barnes, who lives out on rural route one, had a crop of his 1915 crop of tobacco stripped two weeks ago, being probably the first grower in the county to begin that work.

Mrs. Jaa. B. Smith took her usual number of premiums on fancy needle work at the fair at Erlanger last Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Smith is an adept in that art and is seldom beaten at the fairs where she exhibits.

Martin Michaels, who resides near Erlanger, had the largest family present at the fair, last Friday, and was awarded the premium in that contest. Mr. and Mrs. Michaels and their children were in line for the count.

A Mr. Miller, from Elizabethtown, Ohio, was in Burlington last Thursday hunting for hogs to buy. He said the trees and fields on this side of the river did not show the effects of frost like it did on the Ohio and Indiana side.

H. Clay White, of St. Louis, Mo., who has been visiting his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. White, in the Hatter's neighborhood for the past week, or so, was the guest of his brother, J. C. White and family, last Thursday.

Practically all of the tobacco in this county has been harvested, the larger part of it under favorable conditions. The larger part of the crop was cut and housed in good time and should have good quality but much of it is curing red.

The town of Crittendon, Grant county, voted on the question of whether the town should issue bonds to the extent of $2,000 for street improvement, last Thursday, and the bond issue carried by a vote of 53 to 1—only 54 votes being cast at the election.

The first snow of the season fell here last Friday about ten o'clock. The flakes were large and melted as soon as they struck the ground. Friday was the 8th day of the month and according to the old saying only eight snows are due to fall here the coming winter.

The fall of the year is usually the best time in which to get the rock from an old field, grub and prepare it for reclaiming, or raising a crop next year. If the field is very broken, get the rock off and plow, and then sow broad cast in sorghum next year and then rye and sweet clover.

In some places the frost got in its work on corn, but the percent of the crop that was bitten is too small to be considered.

Lots of fun in store for base ball fans next Saturday if the weather boss provides weather that is favorable for a game at Petersburg.

It is said that considerable of the material that will be used in the reconstruction of the Burlington and Florence pike will be shipped to Erlanger from where it will be hauled to points along the road.

A couple of the leading local base ball fans are getting rich off of each other betting on the world's series in progress. At the close of the contest Tuesday each had won a very large sum from the other.

Ralph Cason, who resides down on Middle Creek, was a caller at this office last Monday and reported that the mercury was down to thirty at his house Sunday night and that there was a very heavy frost.

Barksdale Hamlett, State Superintendent of Public Instruction and Democratic nominee for Secretary of State, is quoted as having announced his intention of becoming a candidate for Governor four years hence.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Pope's baby took the first premium and second, at the Erlanger fair, Mr. and Mrs. Pope's baby has been shown four times this year and has taken three first premiums.

Dr. Yelton has the premium celery when it comes to length it being at least four and a half feet long. He claims that celery requires no more attention and labor to produce than any other vegetable that grows in the garden.

Anger of Mercer county citizens over the killing of W. Homer DeBaun, a leading citizen of Cornsboro, Saturday, subsided when Sam J. Slime, the alleged slayer, died from a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head after he failed to end his life by hanging.

Morris Rouse, son of Hubert Rouse of Limaburg neighborhood, and Miss Leona Garnett, daughter of Walter Garnett of Hebron, were married last Friday in Lexington. The young couple have the best wishes of a host of friends. It seems that the wedding was somewhat a surprise.

H. W. Smith, of Erlanger, shipped a few days since, a fine setter bitch to a party in Richmond, Virginia, for which he received fifty dollars. He could say several more good hunting dogs if he had them, having a reputation among the professional hunters for handling reliable stock.

In this issue appears the advertisement of James W. Cleek & Son's big sale of registered Duroc hogs, Missouri Cleek handles none but the best hogs, and have taken great care in the building up of their hard which compares favorably with any in the State. With the wheat crop exceeding a billion bushels, the largest ever produced by any nation, and a corn crop which may prove to be the biggest ever grown, the Government's October crop report announced preliminary estimates which indicated record harvests of soft oats, barley, tobacco, rye, rice, sweet potatoes and hay.

Here is a minister who appreciates the editor. At a recent editorial convention he offered the following toast: "To save an editor from starvation, take his paper and pay for it promptly. To save him from bankruptcy, advertise in his paper liberally. To save him from despair, send him every little bit of news of which you can get hold. To save him from profanity write your correspondence plainly and send it in as soon as possible."

Correspondents will confer a great favor by taking particular pains with the spelling and writing of proper names. We are very anxious to get every name absolutely correct, and if the names are written illegibly it is sometimes impossible to decipher them. If possible, always state where a visitor is from, when he came and how long he remained or intends to remain. Remember to mail our communication so that it will reach our office not later than Tuesday noon.

Considering the cold weather last Friday and Saturday, there was a pretty good attendance at the Erlanger fair. Saturday program, except as to the appearance of Hon. A. O. Stanley, was carried out to the letter, the only hitch of the air—the balloon ascension and the perilous performance of dare devil Doughty, being entirely satisfactory to the spectators.

The contestants in the motorcycle races Friday afternoon was badly hurt when his wheel skidded and ran him on one of the curves in the race track, and it is reported that he died in a Covington hospital last Saturday morning. The same afternoon a drunk car driver ran his machine into a sulky, cutting off one of the sulky wheels. Fortunately the horse was not frightened and the driver was not hurt.

The attendance the two days was not half what it would have been had the weather been more favorable.

H. R. CONNER.

When Mrs. Chas. Moore, of Limaburg neighborhood, was getting out of her conveyance at the Erlanger fair last Saturday she sprained one of her ankles. She remained at the fair all day, thinking about considerably, and when she reached home that evening she was suffering considerably and Dr. Yelton was called to attend her injury.

Last Saturday the little son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Utz, who reside in Florence neighborhood, were cutting off the sweet potato vines when in some way the little girl's index finger on her right hand was severed near the first joint while the finger was being mangled considerably. Dr. Yelton was called to dress the wounds, and thinks the mangled finger can be saved.

An auto in which some young men in this neighborhood were riding last Friday night tried to climb a telephone pole on the Florence side between the residences of Glen Kendall and Alfonso Beamon. The attempt was not a success and the machine was badly disabled, but the occupants escaped with a few slight scratches and bruises. So far Burlington autoists have made some remarkable escapes but the time is coming when luck will desert them.

We had the pleasure of attending the State Fair at Louisville recently and also the Trimbale county fair at Bedford Friday last. We saw a fine show where the State had anything on Trimbale except in quantity. Our farm products, corn, tobacco, sheep, hogs and fruits, were just as large and nice as any exhibition at Louisville, while the fancy work, cakes, preserves, butter, etc., prepared by the best cooks of the Trimbale county ladies could not have been excelled.—Milton News.

Mrs. G. S. Walrath died about 3 a. m. last Saturday at her home in Bellevue, after an illness of several months that baffled the best medical skill that could be secured. She thought she was getting better until a very short time before the summons came. She was in her 53rd year and a daughter of the late L. P. Arnold. Her husband was C. W. Saxton, who died many years ago. She is survived by her husband, three brothers, W. D. H. E. and P. A. and four sisters, Mrs. E. Grant, Mrs. O. N. Scott, and Misses Flora and Katie. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at the residence, Rev. Edgar C. Riley officiating, after which the remains, in the presence of a very large crowd of sorrowing relatives and sympathizing friends, were taken to the cemetery at Bellevue.

At a meeting of the Northern Ohio Milk Producers' Association, held in the Odd-Fellows Hall at Cleveland on Sept. 25th, the members of the organization decided to increase the price of milk to 12 cents per gallon. The increase is to take effect on Oct. 1. About one-fourth of the 2,500 dairymen supplying Cleveland with milk are members of the association. Another meeting of the association is to be held on Saturday, October 23, to try to induce more dairymen to join the organization and to demand the same price for their milk.

Ed. Byrd, a camp negro, was shot at Crittendon and seriously wounded by another camp negro Sunday morning about 11:30. The shooting was the result of a crap game. Byrd was shot through the hips and his condition was so bad that he was taken to a Cincinnati hospital Sunday afternoon for treatment. The gun user walked away and no special effort was made to apprehend him. Affairs of this kind have become so numerous about the various camps that little attention is paid to them.—Grant County News.

Sheriff Cropper reports the collection of taxes as slow work this fall.—He is now making his last tour of the county.

Prepare Seed-Bed for Wheat.

The difference between success and failure in a crop of wheat is often determined by the character of the seed-bed. It is not always possible to prepare an ideal seed-bed for wheat because of unfavorable weather conditions. The most fundamental consideration in seed-bed preparation is that of having the soil well settled below and loose at the surface. Early plowing usually makes this possible, since it gives the land time to settle. The extreme rainfall of the last season has made it impossible in many cases to plow land early, consequently where late plowing must be done great care should be taken to work the land down with roller, disc, and drag harrow so that the soil will be well settled beneath. Where it is necessary to plow under a large crop of organic matter even greater attention must be given to this matter. If possible, use a sharp, weighted disc harrow to chop up the organic matter, and mix it with the surface soil before plowing in order to resettle the seed-bed.

Where wheat follows corn the soil is naturally well settled below, and in this case the important matter is to pulverize the surface soil thoroughly, usually with the drag and disc harrow. Where wheat follows cowpeas and soybeans, the land is usually found to be loose, but this season with the abundant rainfall it will be considerably more compact than usual. It is often well to disc such land, then roll just before seeding.

WILL HELP FARMER

Government Plans to Mortgage Forests' Future Income.

Will Ask Congress to Advance Money for Public Works in Order to Stimulate Agricultural Development.

Washington.—The secretary of agriculture plans to anticipate future receipts from the national forests by securing an advance of money from congress for the construction of roads, trails, bridges, and other public works which would stimulate agricultural development and would relieve many struggling communities from their present burdens of taxation, says an article contributed by the chief of the forest service to the department of agriculture year book, just issued. This policy, says the article, would apply exclusively in those counties where there is a considerable area of national forest land so located that the forest resources cannot be marketed, although later they will yield a large revenue. It would fully meet the local difficulties arising from the fact that the national forests are not subject to taxation; would aid in the protection and development of the forest resources, and would remove the one barrier which in a few places prevents farmers from immediately enjoying the benefits of the national forests.

Millions of acres of farm land are today undeveloped because of a lack of good roads. In opening new country road building constitutes a hard problem for the settlers. At first, while the settler is struggling to erect his home and farm buildings and to clear his land, he usually cannot afford to pay high taxes or otherwise contribute toward the expense of road building. The national forests comprise the remotest and least settled regions of the country. In many cases farming in these localities is still pioneering, under as difficult conditions as have ever existed in the United States. One of the principal reasons for the failure to develop the large areas of excellent agricultural land which lie near the forests is the lack of roads.

The government is trying to meet this problem in two ways, first, by public improvements being made on the national forests, and second, by the direct contribution to the communities of a share in the forest receipts. Up to date the forest service has constructed on the forests more than 2,300 miles of roads, 21,000 miles of trails, nearly 600 bridges, and 18,000 miles of telephone lines. Every one of these improvements benefits the settlers and ranchers. In addition, there is appropriated annually for the use of the counties in which the national forests lie 25 per cent of the gross receipts from timber sales and other sources, to be used for road and school purposes. Some of the individual forests are bringing in over $100,000 a year, and the business of the entire national forest system is increasing so that this direct contribution to community upbuilding is rapidly growing. In fact, already a total of nearly $900,000 is obtained from the forests every year for county, road and school purposes.

CELEBRATES 115TH BIRTHDAY

Creek Beaver, Oklahoma Indian, Said to Be Oldest Man in the World, Gives Annual Feast.

Bunch, Okla.—Twenty beaves, 30 hogs and 150 chickens constituted in part the menu served to the guests attending the anniversary celebration of Creek Beaver, just concluded here. The guest of honor this year was Baxter Choat of Bunch, and Black Fox of Webber Falls as usual acted in the capacity of official scribe. Creek Beaver hasn't had 115 birthdays—one a year—by any means, but this year's feast was in commemoration of his birth 115 years ago, for Creek Beaver is the oldest Indian in Oklahoma. They have one up in Minnesota aged 112, but Creek Beaver goes him three years better.

The Creek Beaver picnic has been an annual affair for several years now, and Creek Beaver's guests are specially invited—several hundred annually—and the aged Indian pays the whole bill. His guests stay three days and eat barbecued beef, which Creek Beaver has pounded into hash—twenty whole beaves in one dish of hash—and there is the music of the tom-tom, two steps forward, and then all sink "way back" and eat again.

NEW DISEASE INVADERS U. S.

"Endarteritis Obliterans" Affecting the Feet, Brought to This Country From Russia.

New York.—A new foot disease known as endarteritis obliterans has made its appearance in New York and twenty-eight cases of it are under treatment in the hospital for deformities and joint diseases. The disease, physicians said, is frequently mistaken for rheumatism or gonorrhea. It is believed to have come from Russia, Poland and parts of Austria, virtually the only countries where it has become common.

The disease is characterized by the cutting off of the blood supply by a disease of the veins. Physicians at the hospital are seeking the cause of the disease and are seeking the best means of relief.

MEN TEACHERS WEAR VEILS

Korean Parents Who Sent Their Daughters to School Objected to Male Instructors.

Washington.—Changes in Korean manners and etiquette since the time of Japanese control. Desirous of broadening the minds of the women, a girls' high school was established at Seoul in 1905 when the girls admitted, 14 in number, were almost entirely daughters of noblemen.

The teachers were women at first, but the number of students increased so that the necessity of efficient male instructors was felt and some were appointed. The community in general and the students' parents in particular were enraged, alleging that it was an unpardonable crime for men to enter the gate of a girls' school in broad daylight, even if they were teachers. The school authorities therefore made a concession that the male teachers should veil their faces when they passed the gate of the school. It is an absurd idea, but the students' parents were satisfied with it. Some girls were attended by two or three chaperons or maids even at school.

At first the young girls could distinguish only such primary colors as red and blue, having no eye for delicate secondary colors and tints. But at present they are instructed in all liberal arts and their thoughts and ideas are naturally being broadened. The graduates want to make a new departure in the serious matter of marriage and are being generally allowed by their parents to have a free choice of a match. It is reported that these new women desire to marry physicians or lawyers in preference to young heirs of noblemen.

FASHION'S PASSING SHOW

New York.—Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs has proved that there is something new in the way of charity entertainments, if not in anything else under the sun. She sprung one at Newport the other day that people will be talking about for some little time. It was a fashion show and theatrical entertainment all in one and it had for its setting the lovely French residence house of white marble that Mrs. Oelrichs' summer home. More properly it had the rose gardens, the white esplanades and the background of the sea for its setting, since the entertainment took place out of doors. Twenty-two professional models, twelve dancers, several young women actresses and forty members of the smart set were engaged in the production of the fashion passing show.

The photograph shows Mrs. Howard Cushing as "Joan of Arc."

CANDIDATES GET A SURPRISE

See Meteor as They Are Crossing Swamp and Fear End of World Is Coming.

Hickory, Miss.—A few nights ago, as four gentlemen of this place were coming through Chunky swamp, a meteor threw a flash of light as bright as day into their faces and scared them almost as badly, perhaps, as did the mysterious light which surrounded Paul on the road to Damascus. Two of the men who, by the way, are candidates, were in a very dark and lonely part of the swamp, and thought they were about to be held up by highwaymen when the light flashed all around them.

Then they saw the meteor falling through the trees not more than a hundred feet away, apparently. One of the men said he thought the world was coming to an end, while another said perhaps the Germans had had a draw.

The gentlemen who saw the meteor were M. G. Scarborough, F. G. Semmes, W. M. Everett and N. M. Everett.

The Cranks Find Comfort.

The fresh-air cranks, so called, get a good deal of comfort from the medical profession nowadays. They rejoice in such advice as that of Dr. Woods Hutchinson, who says that artificial systems of ventilation are better than no ventilation, but that no system is so good as opening the windows when the air in the office is stuffy. "Draughts," says Dr. Hutchinson, "are first-rate physical and mental tonic. They will not hurt persons who are well nourished, addicted to moderate exercise and not full of germs as a result of addiction to foul air."

What Dr. Hutchinson says is not new. He would make no such claim for it. It is what doctors have said for years of their patients and the public whenever the occasion presents itself. But the popular fear of draughts, and of low temperature still exists, and the majority still insist upon shutting the windows and baking the life—in a very literal sense—out of the advanced minority to whom winter colds are not contagious if they are allowed to have their own way in the matter of day and night ventilation.

Fresh-air cranks do not lack the indorsement of science for their views. But they do lack, and for a long time will lack, sufficient scientific backing to oblige others to admit that the man who does not want to be overheated in a foul atmosphere has as much right to his opinions, and to his comfort, as the man who fears death from an open ear window or an open office window after September and before the first of December. The physicians, say, lurks in the foul, warm soft, germ atmosphere of the room well guarded from draughts. Life in the well ventilated room—the room with the windows thrown open when the temperature grows too high, or kept partly open when winter colds are down. But the majority will not be convinced.

The tyranny of majorities is illustrated when street railway companies in these latitudes are permitted to make the car windows fast so that they cannot be opened by a man gasping for breath, the matter strengthening the science may have found him about fresh air as a "safety first" measure.—C. J.

Almost the entire rolling stock of the Owingville and Olympia railroad was destroyed today when its engine jumped from a trestle foot trestle. The two passengers escaped serious injury.

NOTICE!

BOONE COUNTY COURT.

Regular Term. 2nd day of August, 1915.

Hon. P. E. Cason, County Judge Presiding.

In Re Election on Stock Law
In Order,
Petersburg Voting Precinct.

This day came Ben H. Berkshire and twenty others, residents and legal voters of the Petersburg Voting District in Boone County, Kentucky, and filed their petition asking a submission of the question whether Cattle generally shall be permitted to run at large in said District, and the petitioners having deposited in this Court a sufficient amount to defray the expense of taking the vote on said question, it is therefore ordered by the Court that the Election Officers of the said Petersburg Voting District open a poll at the next regular election to be held on the 2nd day of November, 1915, in said district for the purpose of ascertaining the will of the voters in said district upon the question, whether or not they wish Cattle generally to run at large in said district, and the Clerk of this Court is directed to have printed on the ballots for the said district the question, "Are you in favor of making it unlawful for Cattle generally to run at large on the public highways and uninclosed lands of Petersburg Voting District?"

It is ordered that notice of said election be given twenty days before the day thereof, by publication in the Boone County Recorder for at least four issues a copy of this order which the Clerk of this court is directed to have done. P. E. CASON, Co. Judge.

State of Kentucky, County Boone.

I, W. R. Rogers, Clerk of the County Court for the county aforesaid, do certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the order made at the regular August Term of this court in the matter of Stock Election for Petersburg Voting District, as appears of record in my office. Given under my hand this 4th of August, 1915.

MOTHER'S CHOICE

By LOUISE ATLEE.

Ralph Fenton, who had a small woolen factory and was twenty-three years of age, was regarded as an unusually promising young man, quite good enough for any girl in Warren county. Why should he be esteemed highly?

In view of all this, Lucy Remington's mother was not at all perturbed when, one evening in early summer, Ralph Fenton brought her daughter home from prayer meeting on his arm. He supplemented this, a day or two later, with a call and was smilingly received. Soon thereafter Grantville folk began to talk in whispers.

A conspiracy also was hatched. Several months earlier, in paying visit to a town a few miles distant, Lucy Remington had met the young man with whom her immediate future was not concerned. He was in every way as desirable as Fenton, whom she was afterward to meet, but when he drove over to Grantville to make a call and meet her mother, his reception by the latter had been polite to the verge of frigidity.

"You don't seem to like John Hudson," ventured the daughter, when the young man had departed.

"Well, I hope we shall see very little of Mr. Hudson."

Fenton made frequent visits to the Remington home and was welcomed cordially both by the widow and her daughter. The latter seemed to find the young man agreeable company, and the mother congratulated herself that her efforts for the family welfare were likely to have a successful outcome. Could she have overheard a conversation which took place one evening as the precious young dissemblers were returning from a local festival she would have been shocked beyond expression at the discovery that her hopes were certain to miscarry.

"Mr. Fenton," laughed the girl, "you certainly are one of the nicest fellows I ever met."

"Thanks, awfully," he returned promptly.

"Also—I am engaged."

"Permit me to congratulate you."

"You see, I want to be frank with you."

"I appreciate it and will reciprocate. I have been engaged to a girl over in Blissfield for the last three months."

"I—I am so glad!"

"And now—how can I help you?" he asked with a chuckle.

"Do you know why mother should be so opposed to Mr. Hudson?"

"People become prejudiced without a good cause. You haven't told me yet how I can help you."

"By—by not dropping me—yet," she stammered. "You see, mother has hopes that—that—"

"I see!" he came to the rescue.

"Yes."

"Well, from all I hear of Hudson, he's a mighty nice fellow, and I'm glad to help him get such a jolly good girl for a wife. My marriage will not take place for three months yet."

"We expect to be married about that time."

In this interesting little matrimonial game there were three against one, but Mrs. Remington was not an easy quitter. When she discovered that Lucy was meeting Hudson at the post office, the library and other places, she made it her strenuous duty to intercept them whenever it was possible. She had frequent crying spells and she went about her work with tears in her eyes. Finally, she woke to a realization that her plan had failed miserably. Although Fenton still maintained friendly relations with them he showed no signs of asking the maternal consent to make Lucy his wife.

It resolved itself into a case of a woman worrying herself ill, yet with nothing tangible to worry about. When old Doctor Peters was called in he felt of her pulse, looked at her tongue and demanded bluntly:

"What the dickens are you worrying about?"

"About—about—Lucy!" she sobbed.

"She's in love with a man I do not approve of. His name is Hudson."

"Young Hudson, over at Tipton?"

"Yes."

"Good for her! What's wrong with him?"

"His eyes are not very wide apart."

"Neither are Elder Spooner's."

"He has high cheek bones."

"So had Abraham Lincoln."

"But—but—"

"Listen, Mrs. Remington," said the doctor soothingly, "I was over at Tipton yesterday, and I saw Mr. Hudson. He is building a fine new house. It has a room for his mother-in-law—the best in the house. She will have a brass bed, a mahogany bureau, a Wilton carpet and a long mirror. She will have a patent rocking chair and—"

"Mother, Mr. Hudson is here!" announced Lucy from the doorway.

"Good!" chuckled the doctor as he made his way out.

A little later the mother wiped away her tears and got up and dressed herself. She felt herself no longer in the valley of the shadow of death. When she appeared in the parlor Mr. Hudson rose up and began:

"Mrs. Remington, I have come over to—"

She encouraged him with a pacific smile and offered him her hand cordially. "I am very glad to see you," she said.

TASTY TIPS.

When there are several bits of good flavored cheese too dry to use as fresh cheese, grate it and add it to boiling hot cream, stirring until it is creamy.

Season with pimentos put through a sieve or paprika and your toast is just what you need.

Spanish Toast.—Cut up two green peppers, a slice of onion, two sprigs of parsley and add a cupful of thick tomato, simmer until smooth and pour on buttered toast.

Cheese Savor.—To one cream cheese add a tablespoonful of butter softened, one teaspoonful of chives, a half teaspoonful of chopped parsley, and a third of a teaspoonful each of Worcestershire and anchovy essence, salt and paprika to taste. Press into a glass and serve with brown crackers.

Potatoes Pilgrim Style.—Slice and boil six potatoes, make a batter of a cupful of milk, one egg beaten and four tablespoonfuls of flour, to this add four onions sliced and fried in butter. Add potatoes, season to taste with salt and pepper, put in a baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs and broil.

Aligousses.—Boil three Spanish peppers and put the pulp through a sieve. Add pepper, butter, salt, tobacco and one cupful of cheese, cut in cubes. Stir as it heats, then add cream until it pours easily. Serve on hot buttered toast or bliscuit.

Rainy Dessert.—Pour lemon jelly over orange, banana, pineapple and grapefruit. When firm serve in sherbet cups with whipped cream. Garnish with a cherry.

Cloye Cake.—Take two cupfuls of brown sugar, a cupful of butter, softened and mixed with the sugar, add one cupful of flour, two eggs, a half of a grain of nutmeg, two teaspoonfuls of cloves, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and a pound of raisins chopped. This cake will keep if well hidden.

FOODS FOR THE BABY.

Orange juice is a most wholesome drink to give even very young babies.

Strain the juice and give a teaspoonful not just after or before the milk feeding.

Small babies need cool water to drink; their milk is a food, not a drink, and a fretful baby is often crying for drink.

Oatmeal Water.—Blend one tablespoonful of oatmeal with a tablespoonful of cold water.

Add a dash of salt and stir into a quart of boiling water. Boil three hours, adding water as it boils away.

Strain through a fine sieve. A baby six months old may be fed oatmeal or barley water.

Barley water may be used in preparing its food if fed from the bottle. Barley water corrects looseness of the bowels and the oatmeal the tendency toward constipation.

Barley Water.—Take two tablespoonfuls of barley, one quart of water, boil continuously for six hours, adding enough water to keep a quart. Strain through a muslin. Soak the barley before putting it to cook.

Oatmeal Gruel.—To three cupfuls of boiling water add a half cupful of oatmeal, and a half teaspoonful of salt. Cook five hours in a double boiler. Dilute with hot milk and strain.

Arrowroot Gruel.—This is a valuable food in diarrhea. Mix two tablespoonfuls of arrowroot, one teaspoonful of sugar, a pinch of salt with two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Add a cupful of boiling water, stirring constantly. Cook for 20 minutes, then add two cupfuls of scalding milk, and bring once more to the boiling point. Strain.

Toast Water.—Take sufficient toast when broken in bits to measure two cupfuls. Add to this one pint of boiling water and let stand an hour.

Strain through a cheese cloth. Serve hot or cold.

Plain Bread Pudding.—Scald a cupful of milk. To a beaten egg, add one tablespoonful of sugar and a pinch of salt. Pour on this the scalding milk. Add one cupful of bread cut in half-inch cubes. Bake in a buttered baking dish in a moderate oven until the custard is set. Serve with cream.

OUT IN THE STATE.

Dr. W. M. Hardin, of this place, has sold his orchard in McLean county to the North Side Produce Company, of Evansville, and began barrelling his apples this week. He has the largest orchard in the section, his crop of apples is estimated at about 2,000 bushels.—Seabee Banner.

The tobacco crop in this county is most all in the house, and the early cutting is curing bright. In quality the crop is better than last year, but it is generally believed it will be light in pounds. The farmers in this section are inclined not to believe the reports that have been sent out indicating a large yield. They believe that it will fall below the average.—Owen County News.

M. C. Bankett, of Maceo, was in Owensboro for a few hours on Tuesday. Mr. Bankett during the past twenty-one years, has established a rather unusual record. He has delivered during that time 1,000 gallons of milk to the Bell Hotel. He has missed only four trips in the 21 years. He has delivered milk thru snow, sleet and rain, and always reached the hotel on time. He is yet a comparatively young man and expects to supply the hotel with milk for at least ten more years.—Owensboro Messenger.

A man and a woman giving their name as Flieller, traveling in a covered wagon and claiming to be from Lebanon, this week exhibiting a four-legged chicken and a two-headed pig. The freaks attracted quite a good deal of attention on the street. They said they had been left destitute in Cincinnati and had adopted this method of acquiring funds to enable them to reach their former home in the South. The freaks had been exhibited at the county fairs along their route.—Lebanon Enterprise.

Never in recent years has there been such an immense yield of apples in Robertson. It is safe to estimate that fully $250,000 worth of this fruit alone will go to waste in the county. The ground was covered several inches deep in apples in some orchards and the trees are still hanging full, every branch being strained to hold its load of the largest and finest of apples. In old fields, where seedling apple trees are numerous, these trees are also loaded with apples of a superior quality. My method of acquiring funds to enable them to reach their former home in the South. The freaks had been exhibited at the county fairs along their route.—Lebanon Enterprise.

The First Baseball Glove.

About 1867-68 a baseball team came to Rockford, Ill., to play our nine. They called themselves the "Unconquered Clippers." They were a kind of a show, with big posters. We made up our minds to give them a drubbing, and at the end of the game the score was Rockford—16, Clippers 0.

There was a little chap playing third base who grabbed everything that came near him and held it, too. I noticed that he wore a kind of glove. When the game was over I went to him and asked what it was that he wore on his hand. He told me that he was a machinist, and had got his hand badly hurt the week before, and he showed me the wound in his palm. He said the boys did not want him to play in the game, but he got a piece of thin sheet steel and made it slightly concave, but so that it did not quite touch the sore place. He then made a short glove to cover all the hand excepting the first joints of the fingers, and doubled the leather in the palm so that he could slip the plate between his fingers.

I asked him if it hurt, and he said it did not, and that he could take a hot one and hold it better with the glove than without it. That is the whole story. I don't think that Spalding ever talked to the little chap with the iron first, as the boys dubbed the 3rd baseman. Everybody in Rockford knew about the mitt, and he may have got the idea from him. Anyway, that was the first glove that any ballplayer ever wore.—From All Out-Doors.

Rev. A. Kirtley Johnson has been engaged in a protracted meeting at Dry Ridge Baptist church the past two weeks, being assisted by Rev. Andrews of Covington. Rev. Johnson preached for Rev. Andrews at the Emanuel Baptist church of Covington, last Sunday.

Dr. C. C. Metcalfe has been quite ill the past several weeks. In climbing in a tree last week, he slipped and fell, and suffered such a severe shock as to produce a home sickness, with chills, lumps, and he has been confined to his bed since, though no serious results are apprehended.

Lee Gaines spent Monday at Williamson attending the county fair day sales. He says there was a large amount of livestock on the market and a big attendance of people. Two car loads of weanling mules were bought by Ohio parties at an average of $30 per head, but a better class of mules sold as high as $75.

S. W. Bevan spent the week at Dawson Springs, Hopkins county, attending the annual session of the Grand Lodge of Odd-Fellows of Kentucky. Emory Wilson of Bracht, filled his place at telegrapher at the L. & N. Railroad station while O. L. reliable John O'Neal looked after the general business of the railroad company.

Eljah Hogan of Napoleon, Galatin county, was a visitor here last week, going to Lexington. Mr. Hogan's father was a Boone county man and represented Galatin county in the State Legislature during the famous contest between Gen. Cervo Gordon Wilson and Gen. Brackenridge for the U. S. Senate when Blackburn was elected the first time.

R. C. Green and D. B. Wallace attended the annual meeting of the Kentucky Bankers' Association at Frankfort, last Wednesday and Thursday, and had a most enjoyable time, as a delightful program was presented which included a reception at the Governor's mansion by Gov. Jas. B. Slay, and a luncheon at the bankers' association.

The Beaver Lick Mercantile Co., through its office and particularly the manager J. M. Jack, desire to express their gratitude and high appreciation of the assistance rendered them in helping to save their store room at the fire at Beaver Lick last week. As it would be impossible to see all and thank them personally the RECORDER is used as a means of conveying their heartfelt thanks for all of the kindness shown.

Chas. Young, of Folsom, was here last Friday, being called by the serious illness of his uncle Daniel Young, who is coming to Walton on a visit to Chas. Judd and family who were from his horse near Burlington by it scaring at an automobile. Mr. Young was picked up unconscious and after being restored so he could travel was at his urgent request brought to Walton, where he finally recovered, though in the beginning he had a number of convulsions and it was doubtful if he would get well.

Elmer B. Stanifer, of Independence, the popular deputy county clerk of Kenton county, was here last Friday advertising the Farmers' Chautauqua to be held at Independence next Monday, Tuesday, Oct. 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, and 31. Some of the best educators in the state are on the program the experiment station being represented by several. Judge H. S. Barker, President of the State University will make an address. Rev. Edgar Riley, County Sup't. of Boone county, is on the program Monday with the subject of Hog raising.

The meeting of the Civic Improvement League last Friday night at this opera house was very poorly attended and was discouraging to the officers who feel that in order to get good out of the organization the people must attend and manifest interest. A general program was mapped out and due announcement will be made of the next meeting with the hope that all who feel interested in the welfare of the town will spare an hour at the meeting for a general discussion of matters of interest to the advancement and progress of Walton.

Arrangements are all being completed for the organization of a Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Co., at Walton, and a meeting has been called for Saturday, October 23d, at the Walton opera house, at 1:30 o'clock. The movement is being backed by some of our best citizens of substantial means and the highest integrity. It will not be a single bit of graft or water in the entire transaction as every dollar will represent the investment without commissions to anybody. It is proposed to organize with a capital stock of $50,000, in shares of $10 each, and the old canning factory situated between the L. & N. Railroad, with switches into the building, is the place selected, as it is an ideal place. With a very competitive freight rate on railroads, leading into all of the great tobacco centers, Walton has superior advantages to establish a loose leaf market already established on a profitable basis. The tobacco territory contiguous to Walton is very good and reaches for a radius of thirty miles. The entire natural conditions are most favorable to the establishment of a loose leaf market here, as that method of marketing the tobacco crop has come to stay, and Walton has every chance to insure the success of such an enterprise. Buyers from all of the big concerns have indicated that they will attend the sales as they say this market would be very convenient to attend and to make shipments therefrom. J. E. Young and J. S. Hill of Carrollton, experienced men in the tobacco market, are reliable in every way. The management of the proposed loose leaf warehouse and their success should inspire confidence in the success of the enterprise. Everybody should take some of the stock as it will mean a great deal for the upbuilding of the general business interests in this place and a market for the tobacco that will give the growers better returns. Be sure and attend the meeting Saturday, October 23d, and one thirty o'clock. Should you not be able to attend and desire to take some stock, write R. C. Green or D. B. Wallace, Walton, Ky., indicating how much stock wanted.

The Royal, the popular moving picture house at Walton, put on "The Million Mystery" Tuesday night, one of the most exciting of photo plays ever presented. The Royal always has a good and reliable program. Roy D. Stamler is worthy of every encouragement.

The Erlanger team will play the Covington Standard at the fair grounds next Sunday. The Standards are the undisputed champions of Northern Ky.—having defeated the Hope White Sox, Wiedemanns and all the other first-class teams. This will be a good one.

The last game of the series between Petersburg and Burlington will be played at Petersburg Saturday afternoon. Boehler, of Detroit, will pitch for Petersburg and Black for Burlington.

For Sale—Toll house on Beaver Lick road will be sold to highest bidder at W. Cleek & Son's sale, Saturday afternoon, October 16th, 1915. B. F. Bedinger, Pres. ident.

There will be an all day meeting of the gunpowder church, Tuesday, Oct. 19th, Dr. J. W. Porter, of Lexington, will be present and deliver two addresses.

Decrease In Acreage Sown to Winter Wheat.

The acreage planted to winter wheat this season will be smaller than last year is generally conceded. How great this decrease will be remains to be seen, but it is feared it will be large unless the work of sowing the new crop is hurried. Estimates of an acreage, 10 to 15 percent below last year's seems to be the most popular. In a report issued last Saturday, Missouri Agricultural officials report only 15 percent of the wheat had been planted, whereas 33 percent was finished at this date last year, and the acreage for the State is expected to be only 77 percent of last year.

Farmers in the winter wheat belt have had much to put up with in the last season. Wet weather threw them back in their harvest work and made it necessary to do this at a time when they should have been making preparation for the new crop. Later it developed good seed was difficult to get, and much of the territory the ground was found to be too wet to permit plowing.

In the spring wheat country the work of threshing wheat also has been delayed by rain, and while the situation here is not as bad as in the winter wheat belt, it nevertheless is causing some apprehension. It is estimated that from 10 to 50 percent of the Northwest wheat has been threshed, according to the local reports. This means that much is still left in a position where it might deteriorate. The demand for cash wheat is sharp, particularly in the Northwest, where mills are assembling liberal stocks in the next few weeks is growing very dim in spite of the fact that considerable Canadian wheat has been brought to this country late.

Predictions of a 3,000,000,000 crop or over are depressing the corn market, this being demonstrated last week when the response to freezing temperature and crop damage news was very disappointing. It is much corn has been injured seems certain, but the trade generally presumes the total yield is big enough to stand some losses and still leave enough corn to go around.

Oats also are under the weight of the bumper crop, with the export demand spasmodic. North-western oats are expected to move more freely in the near future, and the crop in that section was heavy, with quality fine.

Exercise Improves Health.

Jackson—Traveling part of the time on the back of his faithful and favorite mule and part of the time on special trains, A. O. Stanley, Democratic candidate for Governor, filled in most of his campaigning dates at Hazard and at Quick-silver today. The former is a mining town and latter a lumber town, and once Stanley received an enthusiastic reception and the promise of hearty support on election day.

The mule ride was taken from Hazard to Hazard, 20 miles away, over extremely rough country. As a mountain farm after mountain farm was passed their owners and the mule and rider with Stanley and laugh with him about riding a mule. The people of this section cannot understand how any man should worry about taking half a day's ride on a mule, as horses and mules are the principal modes of travel. That Edward E. Morrow, the Republican candidate, should about a mule ride has astounded everybody. Stanley told them all that riding over the mountains was agreeing with him and that he was feeling better than he had felt at any time during the campaign.

TOBACCO NOTES.

The crop of Bourbon county is safely housed.

Prospects are that all of Clark county's crop will be housed by the 10th or 15th of this month. It fell all over the county and much of the crop is in the hands of good color and body.

Tobacco housing is going on rapidly in Montgomery county. Barn room is at a premium and some crops have to be hauled two miles. The yield is much larger than anticipated. Light frosts have fallen, but no damage has been done. Practically all tobacco will be in barns within the next five days. Many growers will be stripping by the 10th of October if the season for the work comes. Much color is shown, and good weight is looked for in all sections of the county.

Growers in Madison county have been very active during the past week in the housing of their tobacco, and have ideal weather practically been ideal. The quality in this county this year will eclipse any past crops in the point of color, so the experts predict. In a very promising outlook for the demand of good prices there. It is stated that a full crop was set out, and the crop is very fine. The loss, which is an indication that the county will produce a full yield.

The Boone County High School football team will play the team at Union Friday, and Friday of next week the Bellerive High School team will play at Burlington.

BLACK LEG.

Has Appeared in This Part of the County.—James Jones, has lost Four of his Cattle.—Dr. Glacken Called.

Black Leg has appeared among the cattle of Jas. Jones, who resides in Locust Grove neighborhood, and four of them, one two year old and the other spring calves, have died on the farm on Gunpowder creek the last week. Three of the animals had died before he called Dr. Glacken, of Richmond, last Saturday, who pronounced the disease Black Leg as soon as he learned how the cattle acted. Mr. Jones raised the animals that have died and does not know how they contracted the disease unless it was brought to his cattle by others in the neighborhood, as several of his neighbors have had cattle die in the last few months, some of them being found dead before it was known they were sick. Dr. Glacken went to the neighborhood last Monday morning prepared to do vaccination for any who desired his services. Black Leg attacks young cattle and is nearly always fatal, consequently cattle owners in the neighborhood should look after their young stock closely, and be on guard of those that die should be burned.

Dr. Glacken vaccinated about forty cattle in the neighborhood last Monday and evening. It will be done to stop the disease. Those who have lost cattle the last few months in the vicinity of Mr. Jones' pasture are Asa Clason, Chas. Clason, Henry Clason and Benj. Kelly, neither of whom suspected the presence of Black Leg, and it is feared that the disease has got hold in a considerable territory in the neighborhood south of Burlington.

Need no Oration in Owen County.

Hon. L. C. Littrell, editor of the Owen County Democrat, and candidate for Senator from the Gallatin, Owen, Boone district, was here Wednesday and yesterday attending the Bankers' convention, and took occasion while in the city to select his seat in the Senate chamber to be occupied this winter. Mr. Littrell is a political proponent of the Democratic cause, and has the confidence of people and carried every county in the district in his race for the nomination for State Senator. In the course of his paper he has this to say in regard to the political situation in his county:

Owen county Democrats are of the type and kind that need not big speeches and long parades to get them to do their duty and vote the straight ticket. They too will remember the four years' administration of Augustus E. Wilson with his soldiers and his ironclad veto. Let the speakers here be Democrats where Democrats are weak-kneed and of but little faith. The Democrats of Owen are of Simon pure stock.—Frankfort Courier.

Employed County Farm Agent.

At the special meeting of the Fiscal Court held Wednesday to discuss the matter of a county agent, the court decided unanimously in favor of the proposition. A number of the foremost farmers of the county who had been benefitted by the work of our agent were present and the judge's office was full. Many other voiced their approval before-hand to the Judge and Magistrates. Some few objections had been made outside the Magistrate's said, but they seemed to come from a few farmers who did not need nor even want to make any more money farming when they were already doing things else. The court appropriated $700 and the Federal government and State will provide a like amount.—Grant Co. News.

Meet After Fifty Years.

Fifty years and better after the war, three members of Rabb's Battery met for the first time at the reunion here last week. Two of them had seen each other during that time but it was the first time that all three had met together. They were Lon Henalee, of Knottstown, Ind., C. L. Johnson, of Kansas City, and Abe Peaslee, of Cochran, Indiana. David had changed them and not one of them would have recognized the other. Mr. Johnson and Mr. Peaslee had seen each other a few years ago. To say that the meeting was a happy one would be putting it mildly.—Rising Sun Recorder.

Sure Sign of a Mild Winter.

Will Brown, of Johnson township, found a sign of a mild winter, last week, when the hives of his bees were all hived. While cutting corn on St. Simons' farm he found a swarm of bees settled on the tassels of a corn stalk. This is said to be a sure falling sign of a warm winter for bees to swarm in September. Mr. Simmons hived the bees and they are all hived for the winter.—Scott County, Indiana Journal.

The Reconstruction Work About Done.

The work of reconstructing two miles of the Lexington pike from the old Dry creek church towards Covington is just about completed.

A Bad Land Product.

A specimen of the tyrannosaurus, 47 feet long and 18½ feet high, exhibited today at the American Museum of Natural History. It was unearthed on Big Dry Creek, in the Montana Bad Land, by Barnum Brown, fossil hunter, who has discovered several specimens of the dinosaur. The tyrannosaurus is a giant reptile, instantly related to lizards, but with hind legs fashioned like those of birds, and its gigantic head, daggerlike teeth and sharp claws show that it was carnivorous. It roamed through the great basins of the West 3,000,000 years ago.

Will Give a Bazaar.

The Ladies of the Petersburg Christian church, will give at the home of Mes. W. E. Ferguson, on Front Street, a Bazaar, consisting of Fancy Work, Western Apparel, and Eatables—Pies, cakes, etc. The ladies of Petersburg and neighboring communities are invited to come off victorious. The bazaar will have a good time socially. Hours 9 a. m., to 5 p. m.

Committee—Mrs. B. H. Berkshire, Mrs. J. W. Early, Mrs. J. B. Berkshire.

Burlington Won Both Games.

The basketball teams of Burlington school visited Union, last Friday, to play the teams of that school return games. A large crowd witnessed the contests in each of which the Burlington team came off victorious. The Burlington girls winning by a score of 15 to 6 and the boys by a score of 10 to 14. Miss Ruth Kellogg, one of the teachers in the local high school chaperoned the Burlington delegation.

No Such Disease as Rheumatism.

It is only a little while ago that doctors were declaring rheumatism to be an infectious disease, and now comes a Johns Hopkins professor with the assertion that rheumatism does not exist. The layman must do a great deal of reading to keep up with the latest pronouncements of medical science regarding any of the ailments that afflict mankind.

Had the Correct Dope.

In the matter of having a world series Burlington has a fan who leads the van, professional dopsters not excepted. Before the series he designated the team that he believed would win. He keeps a close tab on individual players during the season and when it comes to the final series he knows the ability of every player who will take part therein.

Lots of Bass—Uses a Spinner.

There is no question but what the bass is the best of bass in Gunpowder and Woolper creeks, and now is a good time to go after them. David Williamson, who seems to be the best territory, says anyone else uses artificial bait, a spinner, altogether to fish for bass, which makes the sport much more pleasant in cool weather.

Difficult Seeding this Fall.

Seeding in this county has been harder work this fall than usual because of the dryness in the corn fields and the badly tangled condition of the corn, which in many instances had to be put in the shock before the corn could be sown. The acreage of both wheat and rye have been increased of that of last year.

Kelly Captured the Premiums.

C. L. Kelly, of Boone county, took first premium on apples at the Aurora farmers' fair and second premium at the Lawrenceburg farmers' fair. Mr. Kelly, who is a boy in his teens attended school in Lawrenceburg and has a considerable acquaintance in this town.—Lawrenceburg, Indiana Press.

Killed a Large Fox.

Edward Burris, who lives out on the B. E. Aylor farm on Woolper creek, shot a very large fox last Thursday morning. It had been taking a good many of the chickens in the neighborhood and had visited Mr. Burris' flock to secure a fat hen. When Mr. Burris discovered him and shot him.

Fine Weather Brought Them Out.

Many autos passed thru Burlington last Sunday, the weather being so inviting the city people who could not resist the temptation to drive out to view beautiful winter nature does in the month of October.

Telephone Lines Down.

Several of the farmers telephone lines in this county have not been gone over since the hard storm in July, and many long stretches of wires are lying on the ground, making the service very poor.

Delivering Fine Hogs.

W. M. Balsly, of Sand Run, was in Lexington delivering a couple of fine young hogs to William Rogers and Caddie Maurer. He is breeding very fine hogs.

Some Load of Coal.

Ninety-four bushels is the largest load of coal that has been hauled to Burlington this fall, and thus Stan Kirtley, colored, leads the procession.

BROUGHT HOME THE BACON.

The Burlington-Erlanger Combination Had Easy Slodding at Petersburg Last Saturday.

Black Held the Sluggers to Four Hits, and the Final Score was 5 to 2.

Conner, Bramlage and Tavlin Hit Like Fiends.—Many Fans Present.

The Burlington-Erlanger combination brought home the bacon last Saturday, defeating the Petersburg-Lawrenceburg combination 5 to 2 at Petersburg. Both teams played good ball, the features of the game being Black's pitching, Conner's dashing work at third and Tavlin's and Bramlage's heavy hitting. Black held his opponents to four hits and struck out seven men, while From black struck out nine men and allowed 11 hits. Petersburg made two runs in the first inning after which they were perfectly helpless and Black worked easy. Zimmer, who had caught in the home run count in the first inning, was working at short. Saturday's game was the fourth and last effort of the Petersburg team. The first game was started at Burlington and was stopped by rain at the end of the second inning. The second game was begun at Petersburg and went ten innings and was called on account of darkness, the score being 4 to 4. The third game was begun at Burlington and was called at the end of the eighth inning on account of darkness, the score being 3 to 5. The series that was closed last Saturday was the hardest struggle in the history of base ball. The Petersburg team was defeated by a large crowd that was present in the rooting performance. In every body remained in a good humor and the game, as did the others, passed without any scuffling.

The Covington Standard defeated the Erlanger All-Stars at the Erlanger fair grounds, last Sunday afternoon, 2 to 1. A large crowd witnessed the game. The Erlanger team was the champion of Northern Kentucky.

Manifesting a Public Spirit.

The Dry Ridge correspondent of the Grant County News, writes that paper as follows:

"A movement has been started among the farmers living on the roads adjacent to Dry Ridge to haul stone from their farms to the rock crusher and have them crushed (if the county will) and after they are crushed will haul them and spread them on the pikes free of charge. By this means the road will be kept in first class condition with the funds which the county has on hand and gradually all of the roads put in first class condition. The work of the road machinery is having a good effect in this locality. The people are learning the proper methods of road construction, and the people are beginning to see that the old method of road building is not the way. They may have been all right in their day, but now back numbers. The plan which has gained considerable favor, we are informed, has the sanction of the farmers living on the Warsaw pike, and farmers on other pikes are beginning to take an active interest in the matter."

A Strict Quarantine.

All schools and churches in Nicholas county have been closed because of diphtheria. The Board of Health was called to meet in Louisville and to take steps regarding the diphtheria which is prevailing in Henryville, a suburb of Louisville, and several districts in Nicholas county. After a report from various trustees in the county, the Board entered an order closing all schools in Nicholas county, prohibiting all kinds of public gatherings in the county, the churches and Sunday schools not being excepted. Strict orders have been passed, several cases have been reported in Henryville and the town has been quarantined.

Sale of Duroc Hogs.

A very large crowd attended the sale of Duroc hogs held by James W. Cleek & Son near Walton, last Saturday. Forty-nine hogs and two pigs were sold, bringing $1,387. Messrs. Cleek were well pleased with the result of the sale and expect to have annual sales. They are well equipped for breeding and rearing fine hogs, and spare neither money nor labor in the production of Duroc hogs. They have established a reputation as among the best breeders of that stock of hogs in Kentucky. Each person who attended was given a ticket and the coupons of the sale the coupons that were torn from the tickets were put in a box from which a lucky draw was made. Frank Norman held the ticket that corresponded to the coupon and was given a nice, young Duroc gilt.

PATRICK DWYER.

(From Silver Creek Sand.) Patrick Dwyer was born in Ireland, Dec. 18th, 1818. In 1850 his parents came to the U. S., settling in Boone county, Ky., where Mr. Dwyer spent his boyhood days. January 1st, 1880 he was united in marriage to Julia McGinnis and two years later he moved to Nebraska, settling on a farm near Shelby. Years later he moved over near Silver Creek and about twelve years ago he purchased a farm on Poverty Ridge about five miles west of here, where he resided until the time of his death. Three months ago he was called to Kentucky by the serious illness of a sister, and while there was stricken with typhoid fever, which resulted in his death on Thursday, Sept. 30th, after he had been brought back to Nebraska, "Pat" Dwyer, as he was known by all, was a jolly good natured Irishman, who made friends wherever he went and was loved and respected by all who knew him. He was a regular visitor at Sand off and on for the deceased, and he was missed by us as well as by others. Funeral services were held at the Catholic church in Silver Creek, Saturday morning, Oct. 2, and were conducted by Rev. Fr. E. Solowski. The church was crowded by mourning friends and relatives, who desired to pay their last respects to the deceased, and the remains were buried at the Catholic cemetery near Clarks. Besides his wife to mourn were his sons, Dwyer, two sons, Thomas and John, both of whom reside here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Roberts dined with Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Conard, of Dry Ridge, last Sunday, making the trip in his new auto.

Wm. Farrell, who was taken to St. Elizabeth's hospital arrived home a few days ago and is doing fine.

Mrs. J. E. Ransom, who has been confined to her room for the past three months, is now up.

Rev. A. K. Johnson will begin a revival meeting with Brother Brown at Concord church, Oct. 25. L. J. Hunt has been here to attend his store the past week, but is now able to get around.

Ed. Farrell and wife, who have each gone thru a siege of typhoid fever, are convalescent.

R. O. Powers, who underwent a surgical operation for cancer is at home and quite poorly.

Yvonne, who has been laid up with rheumatism the past two weeks, is improving.

C. W. Lewis was robbed of $28 while in the city one day last week.

extravagance in paying $70,000 for the warehouse, we find upon investigation that bids were obtained from capable contractors for the construction of the warehouse, and the Committee let the work upon the best obtainable terms. The records of the Company show that the investment made in the purchase of this property and the construction of the warehouse has proven quite profitable to the Company."

VI.

It is further charged that the Company paid $600,000 for the Strater Bros. factory plant and charged that the fair market value of this property did not exceed $400,000, and that the property had been offered for sale at that price shortly before the Burley Tobacco Company purchased it.

It is also charged that the machinery and equipment were old and antiquated and in bad shape and had little value; that the Company continued to manufacture the old brands of tobacco and secured and put on the market new brands; and that the Company has wastefully and corruptly expended large sums of money in advertising said brands of tobacco.

After investigating this charge we find that the property was bought as reasonably as it could have been, as we have sworn evidence to prove that other parties were willing to pay the same price for it. We find the machinery in good condition and not at all antiquated. In our judgment the officers of the Company acted in good faith in advertising the brands of tobacco, and in no sense was there any evidence of corruption.

VII.

It is further charged that in the management of the Strater Bros. factory the Company has lost $300,000 and that this loss is steadily increasing.

This Committee has spent several days going carefully into every phase of the business of the Strater Bros. factory and informed itself concerning the nature and extent of that business and the condition of the property. We have caused Mr. C. W. Banta, of Louisville, Ky., recognized as one of the ablest and most reliable accountants in this state, to prepare for us a report showing the profit and loss account of the factory ever since its purchase by the Burley Tobacco Company up to October 1, 1915. We file herewith as a part of this report the Statement prepared by Mr. Banta. This Statement shows that the operation of the factory has resulted in a loss to the Company, but this loss has been gradually decreasing until now the operation of the factory is showing an actual profit to the Company. The report of the last three months shows a net profit of $5,344.34.

It is charged at the time the factory was purchased the annual output under the former management was 2,500,000 pounds of tobacco annually; that during the first year the Company operated the factory its output was 2,000,000 pounds; during the second year 1,500,000 pounds. It is further charged that the sum of $75,000 has been recklessly and fraudulently squandered in advertising the brands of tobacco; and that tobacco of the value of $30,000 has been fraudulently given away for the purpose of advertising some of the brands.

It is also charged that the Company is carrying on its books a lot of brands of tobacco and good will as having a value of $200,000; that these brands and good will are imaginary assets and that the book entries are fictitious and fraudulent.

We find the factory's output is about 1,500,000 pounds. We do not find that there was any part of the $75,000 used in advertising fraudulently spent.

We find that $30,000 worth of tobacco was distributed for legitimate advertising purposes, but there is absolutely no truth in the charge that it was fraudulently given away.

We find that the sum of $200,000 was paid for certain brands and good will, and that these are not imaginary assets, and if this factory continues in operation it is our judgment that these brands and good will are proving a profitable investment.

IX.

It is charged that during the year 1912 and the early part of the year 1913, the officers of the Company for the purpose of depicting its assets placed incompetent agents on the Lexington, Louisville and Cincinnati markets and caused them to purchase 400 hogheads of tobacco which the Company could not use and for which it had no use; that in the winter of the years 1912 and 1913, 2,000 hogheads of tobacco were purchased in addition to the above 400, and the Company paid therefor eighteen cents per pound; that 100 hogheads was sufficient for the Company's needs; that the purchase was reckless and fraudulent and done for the purpose of depicting the Company's assets; that the officers of the Company afterwards, during the summer of 1914, sold practically all of this tobacco at a loss of one-third of the original cost, and the amount realized from the sale was used to prefer certain creditors whose the President and members of the Executive Committee desired to favor.

It is also charged that this tobacco was sold to the American Tobacco Company, W. L. Petty Company and R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company for the fraudulent purpose of favoring these corporations, two of which were formerly identified with the Trust.

We have carefully investigated the facts concerning the purchase of this tobacco. The tobacco crop grown during the season of 1912 and sold during the market season of 1912 and 1913 was an unusually fine crop and contained an unusual amount of high-grade tobacco which was especially suited for the use of the Company in manufacturing its brand of City Club. The managers of the Company anticipated a rapidly increasing demand for this brand and believed it was the part of good business to purchase a liberal quantity of the higher grades of tobacco to hold on the market during that season. This tobacco was for the most part purchased late in the season and after March 1, 1913, the buying for the Company being held off until that time. These same grades of tobacco had sold earlier in the season from five to ten cents per pound higher than the Burley Tobacco Company paid for it, and these higher prices were paid by the large manufacturing companies some of which were formerly members of the Tobacco Trust. The purchase of this tobacco was regarded by the officers of your Company as wise, and we find that the tobacco which were purchased were fully worth the prices paid at that time.

While it is impossible to measure in dollars and cents the damage to the Company's business growing out of the receipt of suits filed in Covington in 1912, we think it is undoubtedly true that these suits greatly injured the business of the Company and affected its sale of manufactured brands of tobacco. The output of the factory did not fulfill the expectations of the Company's officers, but this failure was in our opinion due in large part to the dissensions within the Company and the suits above mentioned and also to the depressed commercial condition which has prevailed everywhere in this country for several years. As the Company was carrying a large indebtedness which was owing to various banking institutions, and these institutions were pressing the Company for payment, the Executive Committee was compelled to sell a large portion of this tobacco. The tobacco was sold at the best price obtainable and at its full market value, and any loss which was incurred on this tobacco was due to the fact that the prices of tobacco had considerably dropped since it was purchased. The loss to the Company from this source, including interest on borrowed money and carrying charges, amounted to $37,000.

We do not believe that your officers should be criticized for this loss. It must be remembered that the purchase of this tobacco by the Burley Tobacco Company helped to maintain the better prices of the growers and this tobacco itself was bought directly from the grower, who received the benefit of the purchase.

X.

It is charged that U. G. Saunders, member of the Executive Committee, purchased in 1912, 180,000 pounds of tobacco in his own name and sold the same to the Company at the price of eleven cents per pound by type samples; that when the hogheads of tobacco were opened it was found that it was very inferior to the type samples, much of which was not used in the factory; that the Manager of the factory complained to the President and Executive Committee and requested them to take the matter up with Mr. Saunders and request him to refund the difference between the actual value of the tobacco and the purchase price; it is charged that the President, the Directors and members of the Executive Committee fraudulently refused to do so, and that the Manager of the tobacco factory afterwards induced Saunders to return the sum of $125 per hundred pounds, making a net loss to the Company of $150 on 180,000 pounds of tobacco.

We, the Committee, went to Flemingsburg and investigated this charge thoroughly. We placed all the officers of the warehouse under oath, took their sworn statements, and the affidavits are filed with this answer. We found that it was untrue that the members of the Executive Committee conspired to or fraudulently conspired with this man to accomplish the sale of this tobacco at an excessive price, and that the Executive Committee and officers of the Burley Tobacco Company had nothing whatever to do with the transaction. It developed that this tobacco was sold by Mr. Saunders to Mr. Preston, of the Factory, by sample, and upon complaint being made by Mr. Preston to Mr. Saunders that the tobacco did not come up to sample, that matter was adjusted satisfactorily to Mr. Preston by claim for reclamation, as is customary in such cases, and Mr. Preston so testified under oath. We further found that this tobacco was purchased by Mr. Saunders in 1911 before the opening of the Burley tobacco leaf market at Flemingsburg, and was sold by him privately to Mr. Preston the Superintendent of the factory, in November, 1912. It is our opinion that there was no fraud upon the part of any one in the entire transaction.

XI.

It is also charged that U. G. Saunders purchased on the Flemingsburg market, as agent for the Company, large quantities of tobacco and also purchased large quantities for himself; that this tobacco he purchased for himself he again placed on the market and would then buy it in for the Company at a large increased price, thereby making for himself large profits; that this was a fraud upon the Company and that the fraud was committed with the knowledge of LeBus. It is charged that this will be shown by an examination of the books and records of the Company kept at Lexington and the books kept at the sales warehouse at Flemingsburg.

We had the books of the Company at Flemingsburg and Lexington examined in our presence by an expert accountant, Mr. C. W. Banta, of Louisville, and we took the sworn testimony of all those who might have been connected with the transaction in regard to it, and find that there is no truth in the charge.

XII.

It is charged that LeBus purchased large quantities of tobacco for himself on the Cincinnati market; that after making the purchase he would examine the tobacco and keep for himself the profitable purchase and turn over to the Company the unprofitable purchase, and have the tobacco which had been purchased by him charged to the Company; that this was a fraud on the Company and was known to some of the members of the Board of Directors.

We went to Cincinnati and took Mr. C. W. Banta, an expert accountant, with us, and took the sworn statements of the Manager, Secretary and Floor Boss of the loose-leaf warehouse there, and found that Mr. LeBus did not allow one pound of his tobacco to be sold to the Burley Tobacco Company; that on the contrary Mr. LeBus had given positive and emphatic orders that under no circumstances was any of his tobacco, or tobacco raised by his tenants, to be sold to the factory at Louisville. There is not a scintilla of truth in this charge. The affidavits referred to are filed with this report.

XIII.

It is charged generally that the property of the Company is being rapidly dissipated and that it will soon be lost, and is insufficient to pay the debts of the Company.

In addition to the special report made to us by Mr. Banta, the expert accountant, showing the result of the operation of the Strater Bros. factory, we have also caused to be made a financial report covering the entire business of the company, including the factory plant at Louisville. This statement, which is the result of an expert examination of the books of the Company, shows the Company to be in good, healthy financial condition. We find that the properties of the Company are being carefully preserved, and that, instead of its assets being dissipated or wasted, they are being conservatively managed, and the reports filed herewith show that the Company is now making a profit in all of its departments.

In conclusion, this Committee deplors greatly the existence of any dissension or dissatisfaction among the stockholders. We condemn the institution of the present suit for a dissolution of the Company. The wholesale charges of fraud made in that suit, we find are not borne out by the facts, and they constitute in our judgment a reckless slander upon the officers of this Company. The Burley Tobacco Company can perform a valuable service for the growers of Burley Tobacco in Kentucky and elsewhere if the stockholders and the growers generally will give to it their cordial support and patronize the Company by purchasing its brands of tobacco instead of buying the tobacco manufactured by the companies formerly connected with the Tobacco Trust. We are satisfied that there will be a great future for this Company and within a short time it will be possible to declare a dividend on the stock. The officers of the Company should have the loyal support of every stockholder, and we appeal to the stockholders to do all they can towards discouraging annoying and expensive suits against the Company which have no foundation in fact.

Witness our hands this 5th day of October, 1915.

BE CHUMMY.

Evenings are getting longer and the question of how to make the home attractive for the children during the long winter months again confronts every parent who is not indifferent to the social and moral good of the children. In the summer outdoor life prevails, but in the winter, it is different. Then, especially in the city, outdoor pastimes are confined mainly to the streets and for many reasons the street are not desirable play grounds. Some thing then should be done to make the children contented, to spend the majority of their even ing at home. To achieve that some things have to be considered. If the parents spend most of their nights at club or some other place they will find their children having no love for the home. Not only that, but they will find those same children through their parents' neglect, forming undesirable companionships. The moral is evidently, give the children your society, be chummy with them and brighten their rooms and the home life, and don't forget to let your children bring their friends to the house from time to time for a pleasant evening.—Ex.

Some Big Apple Story.

Livingston county is proud of her apples this season. A reporter for the Constitution was shown some apples Monday that were raised on the James Blue farm near Sturges. Some of the apples measured fifteen inches in circumference and weighed more than two pounds. The apples were so large that the stems were not strong enough to hold them and Mrs. Blue sewed rags around the apples and tied the rag to the limb in order to keep the apples on the tree until they were matured. They are the Wolf variety—Chillicothe, Mo., Constitution.

The cotton farmers of the South a few months ago wanted to borrow a few million dollars to help them out of a tight place, but you remember the sudden and pronounced manner in which they didn't get it. And now here come England and France and their allies wanting to borrow a couple of billions of dollars to run their navy war, and of course they will get it. Which shows that in the eyes of our plutocratic board a foreign soldier is a heap better than an American farmer.

Burley Tobacco Company Makes Financial Statement

Lexington, Ky., October 5, 1915.
To the Stockholders of the Burley Tobacco Company in Annual Meeting Assembled at Lexington, Kentucky, October 5, 1915:

On or about the 4th day of May, 1915, a suit was instituted in the Fayette Circuit Court by J. L. Vallandigham and others against the Burley Tobacco Company. The plaintiffs in this suit have made in their pleadings charges of mismanagement, fraud, corruption and neglect against the officers of this Company, and some of these charges have been made specific.

On August 30, 1915, the Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Company passed the following resolution:

WHEREAS, a suit has been filed in the Fayette Circuit Court by J. L. Vallandigham and others against the Burley Tobacco Company charging fraud and mismanagement against the officers of this Company, and asking the Court to dissolve the Company, and

WHEREAS, it is important to the stockholders that these charges be fully investigated with the strictest impartiality, in order that their truth or falsity may be clearly established, and without the enormous expense incident to court proceedings;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Company that the stockholders be notified that the persons making these charges will be requested to bring them before the annual stockholders' meeting to be held in Lexington, Kentucky, on October 5, 1915, for their consideration and action, and

WHEREAS, many of the stockholders will be unable to attend said annual meeting and it is important that they be represented by a Proxy Committee who have no connection with the management of this Company and who can act independently and without favor to any individual;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that we request E. K. Renaker, of Harrison County, Glave Goddard, of Mercer County, and Chas. L. Land, of Fayette County, to act as a Proxy Committee for those stockholders who can not attend in person, and we urge all such stockholders to send their proxies to said Committee with the assurance of our belief that they can be trusted by the stockholders for a full and thorough and exhaustive investigation of the books and affairs of this Company, in order that the stockholders may know the exact truth concerning these charges, and the condition of their Company; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a full and complete financial report of the Company's business be made at said stockholders' meeting, that every facility be furnished to said Proxy Committee, or any other committee which the stockholders may appoint to make a thorough and exhaustive investigation of the books and affairs of this Company, in order that the stockholders may know the exact truth concerning these charges, and the condition of their Company;

The undersigned, E. K. Renaker, Glave Goddard and Charles L. Land, requested by said resolution to act as a Proxy Committee for stockholders, consented to so act, and caused a letter to be issued from the office of the Company to each of the stockholders apprising them in a general way of the charges made against the officers of their Company, and that an opportunity would be afforded at the annual stockholders' meeting to present these or any other charges.

This Committee, after meeting and considering the situation, decided to make an investigation of the charges made in the above suit prior to the stockholders' meeting and to lay before the stockholders the results of their investigation.

The officials of the Burley Tobacco Company have given this Committee and C. W. Banta, of Louisville, Ky., the expert accountant, employed by them, unrestricted access to all of the books and records of the Company. The Committee had before them a summary of the charges made in the Vallandigham suit, and have undertaken to investigate these charges. The result of their investigation is set out in the following report, the particular charge being first stated and then the findings of the Committee given thereon:

The plaintiffs charge that the Burley Tobacco Company in handling, warehousing and redrying tobacco belonging to the 1909 pool, charged the growers excessive fees and that the profit of $120,000 was by reason of the excessive and unfair charges.

central points far remote in most instances from the homes of the growers. The tobacco was thus shipped in hogheads, the grower was required to pay the freight, drayage, warehouse fees, insurance, inspection and a great many other fees and costs. Upon the organization of this Company it was determined that the growers who pooled with this Company should be charged a less fee for warehousing than they had been charged under the old system, and that this fee when thus collected was to belong to the growers themselves, that is, to their company, and was to be applied in the affairs of their company. All sums thus collected by this company from this source was for the benefit of the growers who were poolers. It was, in effect, as if the money was taken from one pocket and put into the other, because if this sum had not been collected in this way, the expenses of our organization would have had to have been met by direct charges assessed against the selling price of tobacco. It is to be noted that growers who were not poolers with this Company were charged fees in excess of that complained of by Vallandigham and others in this suit, for which they got no return benefit insofar as any repayment to them was concerned. We find that the fees so charged were not excessive, nor were they unfair.

II.

That the Burley Tobacco Company charged the growers $275,000 for insurance, when the tobacco was not in fact insured, and that the amount paid to and received by the Burley Tobacco Company for insurance should have been repaid to the growers.

What has been said in the last paragraph as to warehousing and redrying fees will apply to this item of so-called insurance. As a matter of fact this Company, instead of paying insurance companies to insure the growers' tobacco in pool, themselves issued inconvertible warehouse receipts, by which they guaranteed to redeliver to the pooler or to his assignee the exact quantity and grade of tobacco warehoused, regardless of loss by fire. The Company charged the grower a certain per cent for guaranteeing to the grower the return of his tobacco, which was equivalent to insurance. The Company itself did not insure the tobacco, but took the risk of loss by fire. The net profit of the Company from this source was $260,000. The Company therefore saved to the grower the insurance which formerly had been paid to the insurance companies and most of which was taken out of the State of Kentucky. By this arrangement the money which went out of the state to foreign insurance companies was kept in the state, and, instead of going to insurance companies, went to the Burley Tobacco Company, the stock in which was owned by the growers themselves. The charge made by the Company was entirely legitimate, and the profit was legitimate profit to the Company.

III.

That between the time of the organization of the Company and the election of a Board of Directors in 1912, those in charge of the Company's affairs applied its assets for the personal use and benefit of many of its managers.

After investigating this charge we find nothing to sustain it.

That the Company owns buildings used for storage and drying of tobacco, as follows:

One in Anderson County.
One in Bracken County.
Three in Boone County.
One in Campbell County.
One in Franklin County.
One in Fleming County.
Two in Grant County.
One in Hart County.
Two in Harrison County.
Three in Hardin County.
Three in Henry County.
Two in Larue County.
One in Mercer County.
One in Meade County.
Three in Owen County.
One in Oldham County.
Four in Robertson County.
Two in Scott County.
One in Spencer County.
Three in Trimble County.

IV.

That the Company now owns the following loose leaf warehouses:
Two in Bracken County.
One in Carroll County.
One in Fayette County.
One in Fleming County.
One in Franklin County.
Two in Grant County.
One in Hart County.
One in Harrison County.

One in Hart County.
One in Montgomery County.
One in Owen County.
One in Pendleton County.
One in Shelby County.

It is charged that practically all the warehouses have been vacant and have produced no revenue since 1912; that they could have been operated to produce an income, but the officers of the Company fraudulently managed them so as to produce no income; have neglected them and that they are rapidly depreciating in value.

We find from investigating the records of the Company that in the management of the loose-leaf warehouses the Company has made a profit equal to eleven per cent on the amount invested; that on the management of all its warehouse property, including loose-leaf warehouses, it has made a profit of eight per cent on the amount invested. We find nothing to support the charge that the business or property of the Company has been neglected or improperly handled.

When the Burley Tobacco Company was organized the loose-leaf market business had not been established. It has come into existence since that time. The Burley Tobacco Company in order to accommodate the pooled tobacco of 1909 found it necessary to purchase or erect warehouses at various places in order to furnish convenient delivery points for the growers. Since the development of the loose-leaf market some of these properties are not necessary in carrying on the business of the Company, and we recommend to the stockholders the passage of a resolution recommending to the Board of Directors that they dispose of such properties as the Company now has, at the best obtainable price, which it no longer needs, and if the property can not be sold advantageously, then to remove the improvements to some point where the Company can use them to advantage and sell the real estate.

V.

It is charged that LeBus made a contract to purchase the High Oaks property for $15,000; that he failed to have the title examined before binding the Company to take the property; that after this contract was made, it was discovered that the property was under lease and it was necessary to pay an additional $4,500 to get possession of the property from the tenant; that all this was done fraudulently and corruptly.

It is charged that the Company purchased the Orchard Park property for $20,000, and that no part of this property was necessary for the Company's use and that the officers of the Company have negligently failed to handle the property since its purchase so as to derive any benefit therefrom.

It is further charged that the warehouse built by the Company in Lexington cost $70,000 and the equipment $10,000; that these prices were grossly excessive and constituted a wasteful expenditure of the Company's money.

Concerning the purchase of the High Oaks property, we find upon investigation that this property was bought after full and careful consideration by the Executive Committee. The purchase price agreed upon with the owners of the property was $35,000. The title to the property was examined and by reason of the fact that one of the interests was owned by a minor it was necessary to institute a suit to sell said property, and it was bought under a decree of court. At the time a contract was made with the owners of the property for its purchase the Executive Committee had full knowledge of the fact that the property was then under lease to Dr. George P. Sprague for a period of five years. An additional amount was paid to the tenant to secure a cancellation of his lease.

At the time the negotiations for the purchase of this property were under way it was all important that the Burley Tobacco Company have a suitable site for its proposed warehouse, and as it was then late in the year and much work would have to be done toward the construction of the warehouse, and it was doubtful whether the purchase of the High Oaks property could be consummated, the Executive Committee decided to purchase the Orchard Park property from J. D. Creighton for $20,000. At that time the Executive Committee contemplated the establishment of a factory in Lexington and the Orchard Park property would have been an excellent site for such a factory and for additional warehouses.

We find no fact to sustain the charge that any of the officers of the Company were guilty of negligence or bad judgment in the purchase of these properties. We regard them as wise investments and believe that the property was fully worth the amount paid, and inquiry concerning the present value of these properties convinces us that the Company will not only not lose any money on account of either purchase, but will make a substantial profit by reason of the fact that the value of the real estate in this part of the City of Lexington has greatly increased since the purchase of these properties.

Concerning the charge that the officers of the Company were guilty of

A Voice From the Grave.

(The Fool-Killer)

Several months ago there was a murder in Atlanta, Georgia. A poor little working girl named Mary Phagan was earning a few cents a day by working in a pencil factory. Then one night she was foully murdered, and her body was discovered in the basement of the pencil factory. Mary Phagan was a person of no importance whatever. But Mary Phagan died instantly jumped into fame. Her death has been as widely discussed and as bitterly fought over as if she had been a queen. One man, Leo Frank, has paid the penalty. Being neither judge nor jury in this case, I shall not pretend to say whether he was guilty or not. Most people think he was. But there are some who doubt it. Anyway, he is dead at the hands of a Georgia mob. Maybe the men composing the mob would have given Mary Phagan a crust of bread when she was hungry, but I doubt it. The poor child had to die in order to get the sympathy of the kind-hearted (?) of Georgia.

But out of the grim silence of Mary Phagan's grave comes a voice. Listen! Mary White Ovington as interpreter Mary Phagan speaks:

"You care a lot about me, you men of Georgia, now that I am dead."

"You have spent—thousands of dollars trying to find out who mutilated my body."

"You have filled the columns of your newspapers with the story of my wrong."

"You have broken into prison and murdered a man that I might be avenged."

"But why did you not care for me when I was alive?"

"I was a child, but you shut me out of the daylight."

"You held me within four walls watching a machine—endlessly watching a knife as it cut pieces of wood."

"Noise filled the place—noise, dust, and the smell of oil."

"I wish some of the thousands of dollars that you have spent on the trial might have kept me in school. A real school, like you build for the rich."

"I worked through the hot August days while you were loafing around the drug stores drinking soda-pop and playing bridge."

"You could get more work out of me for less money; and you never paid me enough to buy a penny dress."

"You sometimes spoke harshly to me as I went to and from my work. Yes, you did, and I had to pretend to like it."

"Why did you despise me when I was alive? And why do you love me so now?"

"I needed your love and sympathy while my young and tender hands were fighting the grim battle of life—fighting desperately for a bare existence."

"But now I am dead and gone—beyond the reach of all your gushing sympathy. You waited too long before finding out that I was worthy of your love."

"O men of Georgia! O men of America! You are all guilty of my murder! Your hands are all red with my blood!"

BUTTER MILK'S LINEAGE.

A correspondent of a New York newspaper says that buttermilk has a longer lineage than any other of the current beverages, dating back to the day of Abraham, when his herders discovered that milk carried in skins on the backs of their camels would ferment, and the longer it was churned in the hot sun the greater the effect on him who drank of it. He adds that by mixing wild honey with this ancient buttermilk and repeatedly fermenting the mixture the followers of Abraham produced the first alcoholic drink on record and that it acted more quickly than any of our modern concoctions. This exalting buttermilk to the same authority declares is still produced in some parts of Asia. Now who would have suspected buttermilk of having a history like this?

[Tuesday's Commercial-Tribune.]

While clerks in the People's Savings Bank and Trust Co., in Covington, were busily engaged receiving deposits Monday noon a negro entered the bank and scooped below the top of the counter made his way to the Cashier's desk and grabbed a double handful of single dollar bills and ran from the bank.

The negro's action was so swift that none of the clerks noticed him until their attention was called to his flight by two ladies at a near-by counter. The alarm was given just as the negro passed Leslie Sharp, son of former United States Marshal Steve Sharp who was about to enter the bank.

Mr. Sharp whirled around to pursue the negro when he saw Patrolman John M. Clark coming from the First National Bank just across from the People's bank and pointed out the negro as he ran toward an alley between 4th and 6th streets and Madison and Scott streets. Fred Perry, teller of the People's Bank, was close on to the fleeing of the negro.

The chase led into the alley and from one back yard into another. Patrolman Clark pursued by the $1 bills dropped by the negro in his flight until he found him hiding in an outhouse. He gave him the name to the patrolman of James Wilson of Cincinnati. He had $108.89 of his own money in a wallet.

At police headquarters he told Chief Schuler, who had also been in the chase, that he would "tell the truth" and produced his business card which read: "J. E. Smyly, 272 13th street, proprietor of board and rooms, Detroit, Michigan." He told the Chief the opportunity to secure the money when he entered the bank was so easy that he could not resist the temptation.

In less than an hour the Kenton county grand jury was in session considering his case. They heard the testimony of Fred Perry, Leslie Sharp and Patrolman John M. Clark and one or two others connected with the bank and within a half hour returned an indictment charging Smyly with grand larceny. A few minutes later taken before Circuit Judge Tracy with a number of other prisoners and entered a plea of not guilty. His bond was fixed at $1,000 and he was taken back to jail.

The haste in this case was necessary as the grand jury was about to make its final report before adjourning and the grand jury would not be empaneled until next February.

Patrolman Clark and Chief Schuler went to the route where he was with Chaeser Perry and found several single dollars the thief had dropped while trying to make his escape. The officers turned over to the bank $38 in single bills. The exact amount stolen could not be ascertained until the bank checked up.

Mystery of Electricity.

So thick and fast come the developments of science in these days that men are losing their sense of what is real, says the New York Commercial. The impossible becomes the actual so often that it is unsafe to say that anything can not be done. A few minutes ago the first telephone message was transmitted across the continent. Today we hear that a still greater distance has been covered by the wireless telephone. Forty years ago a current of electricity could not be made to jump more than a few inches through a vacuum. Today there is no known limit to it, or rather to the capacity of new instruments to detect it. Some electrical engineers believe that messages could be sent to the moon and perhaps out into infinite space through the ether just as easily as from San Francisco to Honolulu through the atmosphere. With all this, no man can tell us what electricity is. All we know about it is that when a certain condition is done certain results follow.

Recipe for Hog Cholera and Black Leg.

A gentleman was in Burlington, one day in week, and told the following, which is of considerable interest to farmers: He said he once owned a bunch of nice hogs and the cholera attacked and they were dying fast. He refused to sell them to a buyer, whom he told the hogs made no difference with him, that he could soon cure them. The hogs were sold. The buyer had a pack of thirteen fise, and soon as a hog was discovered to be sick the thirteen fise would be started after it and allowed to pursue it until it fell, and in every instance the hog was cured. The gentleman said the same treatment is a sure cure for Black Leg among cattle. Remember it takes 13 fise to do the work.

Last Monday Gov. McCreary spoke at Nicholasville, and Senator Beckham at Falmouth and H. V. McChesney, at Harrodsburg, in the interest of the Democratic State ticket.

Gov. McCreary insisted that every Democrat in Ky. ought to support the ticket, and work hard for it.

Senator Beckham urged that the voters lay aside their differences at the primary and elect the ticket that was nominated.

McChesney said that so far as this campaign is concerned the liquor question is settled and that now is no time for discussing it. It is said that the result of the primary will give the whole ticket his loyal support.

The local night school began Tuesday night with fair attendance.

JURORS DENOUNCED

By Judge For Failing to Indict Men

Charged With Election Frauds.

Though unprecedented frauds were shown to have been perpetrated in the August primary election in Pike county, the grand jury failed to return any indictments, as four of their number would not concur in the opinion of the others, it is said.

Following the failure of the probes to indict, Judge J. M. Robertson denounced the 4 held responsible for the failure in strong terms. He said that in view of the clearness of the evidence it was the duty of every juror to unite in an honest endeavor to purify the ballot in Pike county and that so long as these outrages were countenanced by so dignified a body as the grand jury, honest elections would forever be an impossibility.

The gross frauds were unearthed in all parts of the county and evidence of many flagrant violations of the law were shown the grand jury it is said. The jurors declined their duty by being unable to fix the guilt for the stuffing of the ballot boxes in the Cornub precinct with newspapers and returning them without any ballots. They added that it was reasonably certain that the ballots had been removed and the newspapers substituted after they had been taken from the voting place.

In the Lower Elkhorn precinct glaring irregularities were shown to have been practiced by the members of the Republican and the Democratic parties and it was evident that the election there was not legal it was pointed out. A majority of the voters declared the report of the jury, merely cast their ballots on the table without awaiting to their inability to vote within the booth. Among those who voted this way were several school teachers. Election officers of both parties agreed to this manner of voting, the report stated.

Whisky was used freely at the primary and one of the election officers was drunk at his post of duty according to the evidence heard by the investigators. Fraudulent names were used in the voting and one of the election officers in his testimony declared that many of the names on the stub of the ballot book were unknown to him.

In this precinct unused ballots were scattered near the voting place and one of the election officers even the voting place merely rode up on his horse and called out the ticket he wished to vote.

Mayor Bell Acquitted.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 14.—Mayor Joseph E. Bell was today acquitted of the charge of conspiracy to commit felonies in connection with the primary and election of 1914.

The jury which returned the verdict was composed of six Republicans, three Democrats, a Socialist, a Progressive and a Prohibitionist. Five of the jurors are farmers, two carpenters, a janitor, a watchmaker and a contractor and two are retired.

Judge W. H. Eichhorn in his instructions stated first that under the law of the State the jury has the sole right to determine what facts have been established and what the law is applicable thereto, and added: "While you have the legal right to disagree with the court as to what the law is, it is your duty to weigh carefully and consider the instructions given you by the court."

While the indictment is against 128 defendants, he said, only one is now on trial and the only question you have to determine is whether the defendant, Bell, is guilty as charged."

Mayor Bell was indicted with Thomas Taggart, Chief of Police, Samuel V. Parrott and 125 others June 22, and on July 3 four more persons were indicted.

All were charged with conspiracy to commit felonies such as are defined in the election laws of the State and the laws against bribery and blackmail.

On arraignment day seven of the indicted men pleaded guilty, and two others made the same plea. The trial began Jas. (Bud) Gibson and Ernest Sonder, the two who changed their pleas, were two of the States main witnesses. Others of those who pleaded guilty also took the stand for the State.

The indictment against Mayor Bell was on forty-eight counts, but five of these were ruled out.

Europe Buying Hogs.

Prediction that Europe would eventually be forced to buy heavily of hog product in the United States makes it a most good. Sales on that account have been on an extensive scale this week. France is buying clear backs and there is a possibility that before November 1st that provision stocks will look far less burden some. With reasonable weather mastic demand has revived. Packers are shipping hogs in large quantities to eastern branch houses and have depleted frozen stocks at Chicago. The south has been buying hogs of rough sides and the prospect looks more luminous than at any time in months past—From last Saturday's Chicago Market Report.

E. P. Morrow, Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky, will speak in Covington next Saturday night.

A large crowd attended the all-day meeting held with (Sun) powder Baptist church Tuesday. A very fine and abundant dinner had been prepared for the occasion and was enjoyed by everyone present.

It is not many days until the people of Kentucky will be called upon again to elect their State officials for another term of four years. Each of the old party's has in the field what it considers the strongest ticket that could be assembled and a hard fight for success at the polls the first Tuesday in next month.

If a full vote is polled there is no question but that the Democratic ticket will win by a handsome majority, a fact that is conceded by the Republicans who are relying on a very large percentage of the Democratic vote.

Edgar Riley's dog came home "all shot up," Sunday morning, evidently having been discovered in somebody's sheep pasture. To put the dog out of its misery a second dose of powder and ball was administered.

It is singular to say, the least, that President Wilson's declaration that he would vote for woman's suffrage came at the same time as the announcement of his engagement to the charming Washington widow.

Deputy County Clerk, Miss Liz-zie Rogers issued a marriage license last Saturday afternoon to Harmon Slayback, 23, son of G. A. Slayback, and Miss Nannie Allen, 21, daughter of John Allen, all of Beaver Lick neighborhood.

Mr. DEMOCRAT, you will not feel like you have done your duty November 2nd, unless you go to the polls and put your cross in the circle beneath the rooster. Every Democrat should have a hand in pulling off a big victory that day.

There seems to be an unusual amount of sickness, especially fever in the county. Malaria has been very prevalent, and there has been quite a number of cases of typhoid fever. Four cases of typhoid have developed in Bedford.—Trimble Democrat.

"The Boone County Fair Company," sounds about like the proper name for the company that will be organized at Florence next Saturday. The name is comprehensive and would appeal to the entire county for support as no other name would.

Quite a number of Burlington young people attended a party last Saturday night given at Geo. E. McGlasson's in Burlington neighborhood. His daughter, Miss Ann, proved herself a most delightful hostess, and all were sorry when home going time arrived.

Card of Thanks—I desire to express my appreciation of their many kindnesses shown me and my wife during her last illness, and for the beautiful floral offerings with which her bier was covered. I also wish to thank Rev. Edgar Riley for his service, and Mr. Steel for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral. G. S. Walrath.

Reposing Sweetly.

When Stant Kirtley, colored, went to feed his horses, early Saturday morning, he found two men covered with horse blankets, lying on the hay and sound asleep. He reported his find to Deputy Sheriff Albert Conner, who went to the barn and threw his light on them, when one of them said, "hello, pard, what time is it?" The officer succeeded in learning from the men that they were on their way from Lexington to Wiseburg, Ind., taking a race horse which they had stabled at the Boone House.

A Busy Afternoon for Bro. Carter. Rev. R. H. Carter solemnized two weddings at his home in Burlington, last Saturday afternoon. The first couple to appear at the hymenal altar was John Lusher and Miss Sarah A. Black, of Erlanger. The bride is a sister of Allen Black, the noted base ball pitcher. The second couple was Orlie Rogers, son of Webster Rogers, of Bellevue neighborhood and Miss Dessie Winkle, daughter of Sol Winkle, of Commissary neighborhood.

Yegmen Rob a Postoffice. Yegmen blew the safe in the postoffice at Corinth, Grant-co., Tuesday night of last week, and secured about $300 worth of stamps and some cash. The safe was completely demolished but the citizens of the town knew nothing of the robbery until the next morning. It is believed to have been the work of professionals.

Intruders Made the Meeting Lively. A swarm of wasps have been contending for possession of the hall in which the local Knights of Pythias and Masons meet. From whence they came is a mystery, and at the last meeting of the Knights two or three of the members were bayoneted by the little warriors, which made the meeting unusually lively.

A Voice From the Grave.

(The Pool-Killer)

Several months ago there was a murder in Atlanta, Georgia. A poor little working girl named Mary Phagan was earning a few cents a day by working in a pencil factory. Then one night she was foully murdered, and her body was discovered in the basement of the pencil factory. Mary Phagan was a person of no importance whatever, but Mary Phagan died instantly jumped into fame. Her death has been as widely discussed and as bitterly fought over as if she had been a queen. One man, Leo Frank, has paid the penalty. Being neither judge nor jury in this case, I shall not pretend to say whether he was guilty or not. Most people think he was. But there are some who doubt it. Anyway, he is dead at the hands of a Georgia mob. Maybe the men composing the mob would have given Mary Phagan a crust of bread when she was hungry, but I doubt it. The poor child had to die in order to get the sympathy of the kind-hearted (?) of Georgia.

But out of the grim alliance of Mary Phagan's grave comes a voice. Listen! With Mary White Ovington as interpreter Mary Phagan speaks:

"You care a lot about me, you men of Georgia, now that I am dead."

"You have spent thousands of dollars trying to find out who mutilated my body."

"You have filled the columns of your newspapers with the story of my wrong."

"You have broken into prison and murdered a man that I might be avenged."

"But why did you not care for me when I was alive?"

"I was a child, but you shut me out of the daylight."

"You held me within four walls watching a machine—endlessly watching a knife as it cut pieces of food."

"Noise filled the place—noise, dust, and the smell of oil."

"I wish some of the thousands of dollars that you have spent on the trial might have kept me in school, like the other children you build for the rich."

"I worked through the hot August days while you were loafing around the drug stores drinking soda-pop and now I find how you could get more work out of me for less money; and you never paid me enough to buy a pretty dress."

"You sometimes spoke coarsely to me as I went to and from my work. Yes, you did, and I had to pretend that I liked it."

"Why did you despise me when I was alive? And why do you love me so now?"

"I needed your love and sympathy while my young and tender hands were fighting the grim battle of life—fighting desperately for a bare existence."

"But now I am dead and gone—beyond the reach of all your gushing sympathy. You waited too long before finding out that I was worthy of your love."

"O men of Georgia! O men of America! You are all guilty of my murder! Your hands are all red with my blood!"

BUTTER MILK'S LINEAGE.

A correspondent of a New York newspaper says that buttermilk has a longer lineage than any other of the current beverages, dating back to the day of Abraham, when his herders discovered that milk carried in skins on the backs of their camels would ferment, and the longer it was churned in the hot sun the greater the effect on him who drank of it. He adds that by mixing wild honey with this ancient buttermilk and repeatedly fermenting the mixture the followers of Abraham produced the first alcoholic drink on record and that it acted more quickly than any of our modern concoctions. This exhilarating buttermilk, the same authority declares, is still produced in some parts of Asia. Now who would have suspected buttermilk of having a history like this?

A NEAR BANK ROBBERY.

[Tuesday's Commercial-Tribune.]

While clerks in the People's Savings Bank and Trust Co., in Covington were busily engaged in receiving deposits Monday noon a negro entered the bank and stooping below the top of the counter made his way to the Cashier's desk and grabbed a double handful of single dollar bills and ran from the bank.

The negro's action was so swift that none of the clerks noticed him until their attention was called to his action by two ladies at a near-by counter. The alarm was given just as the negro passed Leslie Sharp, son of former United States Marshal Steve Sharp who was about to enter the bank.

Mr. Sharp whirled around to pursue the negro when he saw Patrolman John M. Clark coming from the First National Bank, just across from the People's bank and pointed out the negro as he ran toward the intersection of 5th and 6th streets and Madison and Scott streets. Fred Perry, teller of the People's Bank, was close on to the negro as he fled.

The chase led into the alley and from one back yard into another. Patrolman Clark pursuing by the rear of a building, stopped by the negro in his flight until he found him hiding in an outhouse. He gave his name to the patrolman as James Wilson of Cincinnati. He had $108.99 of his own money in a wallet.

At police headquarters he told Chief Schuler, who had also been in the chase, that he would "tell the truth" and produced his business card which read: "J. P. Smyly, 272 15th street, proprietor of hotel and rooming house, Michigan." He told the Chief the opportunity to secure the money when he entered the bank in such a hurry that he could not resist the temptation.

In less than an hour the Kenton county grand jury was in session considering his case. They heard the testimony of Fred Perry, Leslie Sharp and Patrolman John M. Clark and one or two others connected with the bank and within a half hour returned an indictment charging Smyly with grand larceny. A few minutes later he was taken before Circuit Judge Tracy with a number of other prisoners and entered a plea of not guilty. His bond was fixed at $1,000 and he was taken to jail.

The haste in this case was necessary as the grand jury was about to make its final report before adjourning at noon. The grand jury would not be empaneled until next February.

Patrolman Clark and Chief Schuler, who met over the case, with Chief Perry and found several single dollars the thief had dropped while trying to make his escape. The officers turned over the money to the grand jury bills. The exact amount stolen could not be ascertained until the bank checked up.

Mystery of Electricity.

So thick and fast come the developments of science in these days that men are losing their sense of amazement, says the New York Commercial. The impossible becomes the actual so often that it is unsafe to say that anything can not be done. A few months ago the first telephone message was transmitted across the continent. Today we hear that a still greater distance has been bridged by the wireless telephone. Forty years ago a current of electricity could not be made to jump more than a few inches across a vacuum. Today there is no known limit to it, or rather to the capacity of new instruments to detect it. Some electrical engineers believe that messages could be sent to the moon and perhaps out into infinite space through the ether just as easily as from San Francisco to Honolulu through the atmosphere. With all this, no man can tell us what electricity is. All we know about it is that when a certain amount is done certain results follow.

Recipe for Hog Cholera and Black Leg.

A gentleman was in Burlington, one day, last week, told the following, which is of considerable interest to farmers: He said he once owned a bunch of nice hogs, which the cholera attacked and they were dying fast. He refused to sell them to a buyer, whom he told the hogs had cholera. The buyer said that he could cure them. The hogs were sold. The buyer had a pack of thirteen flies, and soon as a hog was discovered to be sick the thirteen flies would be started off and allowed to feed on it until it fell, and in every instance the hog was cured. The gentleman said the same treatment is a sure cure for Black Leg among cattle. Remember! It takes 13 flies to do the work.

Last Monday Gov. McCreary spoke at Nicholasville. Senator Beckham at Falmouth and H. V. McCreaney, at Harrodsburg, in the interest of the Democratic State ticket.

Gov. McCreary insisted that every Democrat in Ky., ought to support the ticket, and work actively for it.

Senator Beckham urged that the voters lay aside their differences at the primary and elect the ticket that was nominated.

McCreaney said that so far as this campaign is concerned the liquor question is settled and that he is not in time for discussing it. He said he accepted the result of the primary and will give the whole ticket his loyal support.

The local night school began Tuesday night with fair attendance.

JURORS DENOUNCED

By Judge For Failing to Indict Men Charged With Election Frauds.

Though unprecedented frauds were shown to have been perpetrated in the August primary in Pike county, the grand jury failed to return any indictments, as four of their number would not concur in the opinion of the others, it is said.

Following the failure of the jurors to indict, Judge J. M. Robertson denounced the 4 held responsible for the failure in strong terms. He said that in view of the clearness of the evidence it was the duty of every juror to unite in an honest endeavor to purify the ballot in Pike county and that so long as these outrages were countenanced by so dignified a body as the grand jury honest elections would forever be an impossibility.

The grossest frauds were unaccounted for in all parts of the county and evidence of many flagrant violations of the law were shown the grand jury it is said. The jurors declared that they were unable to fix the guilt for the stuffing of the ballot boxes in the Cornub precinct with newspapers and returning them without any ballot. They added that it was reasonably certain that the ballots had been removed and the newspapers substituted after the ballots had been taken from the voting place.

In the Lower Elkhorn precinct glaring irregularities were shown to have been practiced by the members of the Republican and the Democratic parties and it was evident that the election there was not legal it was pointed out. A majority of the voters declared the report of the jury, merely cast their ballots on the table without swearing to their inability to vote within the booth. Among those who voted this way were several school teachers. Election officers of both parties agreed to the manner of voting, the report stated.

Whisky was used freely at the primary and one of the election officers was drunk at his post of duty according to the evidence heard by the investigators. Fraudulent names were used in the voting and one of the election officers in his testimony declared that many of the names on the stub of the ballot book were unknown to him.

In this precinct unused ballots were secured near the voting place and one of the officers entering over the voting place merely rode up on his horse and called out the ticket he wished to vote.

Mayor Bell Acquitted.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 14.—Mayor Joseph E. Bell was today acquitted of the charge of conspiracy to commit felonies in connection with the primary and election of 1914.

The jury which returned the verdict was composed of six Republicans, three Democrats, a Socialist, a Progressive and a Prohibitionist. Five of the jurors are farmers, two carpenters, a janitor, a blacksmith and a contractor and two are retired.

Judge W. H. Eichhorn in his instructions stated first that under the law of this State the jury has the sole right to determine what facts have been established and what the law is applicable thereto, and added: "While you have the legal right to disagree with the court as to what the law is, it is your duty to weigh carefully and consider the instructions given you by the court."

While the indictment is against 128 defendants, he said, only one is now on trial and the question you have to determine is whether the defendant, Bell, is guilty as charged."

Mayor Bell was indicted with Thomas Taggart, Chief of Police Samuel V. Parrott and 125 others June 22, and on July 3 four more persons were indicted.

All were charged with conspiracy to commit felonies such as are defined in the election laws of the State and the laws against bribery and blackmail. On arraignment day seven of the indicted men pleaded guilty, and two others made the same plea. The others were charged by H. (Bud) Gibson and Ernest Roder, the two who changed their pleas, were two of the States main witnesses. Others of those who pleaded guilty also took the stand for the State.

The indictment against Mayor Bell was on forty-eight counts, but five of these were ruled out.

Europe Buying Hogs.

Prediction that Europe would eventually be forced to buy heavily of hog product in the United States seemed to be more good. Sales on that account have been on an extensive scale this week. France is buying clear backs and the demand has revived. Packers are shipping lots in large quantities to eastern branch houses and have depleted frozen meat demand. The south has resumed buying of rough sides and the prospect looks more luminous than at any time in months past, from last Saturday's Chicago Market Report.

E. P. Morrow, Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky, still speak in Covington next Saturday night.

A large crowd attended the all-day meeting held with (Aunp) powder Baptist church Tuesday. A very fine and abundant dinner had been prepared for the occasion and was enjoyed by everyone present.

HAMLETT'S REPLY TO E. P. MORROW

Hopkins County Voters Hear Every Charge Explained

EDUCATION ADVANCED

Kentucky Climbs from Forty-third to Near the Top Within Three Years Under Hamlett's Administration—Shows How Economy Has Been Practiced.

Hundreds of Democrats from Western Kentucky gathered in Madisonville, Hopkins County, on October 4th, and listened attentively to the opening of the campaign by Barksdale Hamlett, present Superintendent of Public Instruction and Democratic nominee for Secretary of State at the general election on Tuesday, November 3, 1915.

Mr. Hamlett was liberally applauded and it is quite evident that the solid Democracy is behind him. He answered every charge made against him by the Republican nominee for Governor Edwin P. Morrow, and showed of gross extravagance in the last Republican administration.

A verbatim account of his address follows:

Fellow Citizens: As the Democratic nominee for Secretary of State, and the present Superintendent of Public Instruction, I am addressing myself particularly to what Democracy has done for education in Kentucky, and to an offensive reply to the Honorable Edwin P. Morrow, who has viciously attacked an Administration that has done more for the cause of popular education and the improvement of the public schools of Kentucky than has been done by any Republican administration in the history of the State, or that will be done by any that might come in the future.

There is a natural hostility on the part of Republican leaders to popular education and progressive movements tending to the building of a great Commonwealth. Thomas Jefferson, after being the author of the Declaration of Independence, counted it his next greatest achievement that he used the remaining best efforts of his life in building a public school system for Virginia and in planning a model for America; and we honor Jefferson for his posthumous story as much for this as for any of his other great achievements.

Progress Under Democracy. From the beginning of our public school system in Kentucky all progress and improvement in the system has been accomplished when the affairs of State were in the hands of Democrats and Democratic Legislatures.

We have modeled our system after the plan of Jefferson, the founder of Democracy and the Democratic Party of America. We have developed in spite of the opposition of such small politicians as Morrow, R. C. Green, the illiterate "Franklin" Branker, the stupid "Bank-failure" Brunker, the wise and austere one-time Democrat Walker, the millionaire mountaineer Lewis, who, I am informed, has handled school funds in times past, and others of this ilk who have never once nor time to mention a system of public education commensurate in its efficiency to that of any commonwealth in America. I exclaim, as Cicero did, "O tempora, O mores!" and with the "Bard of Avon, 'Alack the day' when such men, such a Cincinnatian habit, should parade themselves before an intelligent public and dare to stand in the way of educational progress—who would attempt to deny to the children of this Commonwealth their rightful heritage which they should enjoy liberally, through an equitable distribution of the State's equipment.

I am glad to state to the people of Kentucky that I know, from written and verbal evidence, that even the thinking, sober citizenship of the Republican Party of Kentucky today condemns such men and their insidious aspersions, directed at the bed-rock and foundation of the existence, maintenance, and progress of a great Commonwealth.

From Forty-third to Near Top.

Since 1911, when the Republican Party was dethroned by an overwhelming majority, on account of promises made by Democrats in a platform of principles, Kentucky has moved from the forty-third in the scale of literacy close to the top, and today stands in the vanguard of Commonwealths of America. In fact, the eyes of the whole nation are upon her, and she is pronounced by the leaders of every State as the one State that is leading today in education and the dissemination of knowledge.

Schools increased 45%. We have not only increased the attendance in our public schools forty-five per cent within three years, but we have added to the revenues for school purposes, directly and indirectly, more than three millions of dollars. We have increased the school term in every rural district from six months to seven months, increasing at the same time in the aggregate all teachers' salaries, and in many cases the term has been made eight, nine or ten months, all of which has been done without a mill increase in taxation. In fact, the rate of taxation which was formerly twenty-six cents and a half on the hundred dollars for public school purposes has been decreased to twenty-six cents.

Replies to E. P. Morrow.

Now, for the present, I pass over Mr. Morrow's sophomoric ebullitions in which he states that "political campaigns are primarily for the benefit of the people," etc. But I come directly to certain specific statements that he made in his opening speech at Bowling Green.

We have today a balance in the school fund of one million dollars. At the corresponding date in 1911, under a Republican administration, there was a balance of $314,034. We promised the people of Kentucky four years ago "most rigid economy" in the Department of Education, and we stated to the people that we would not stand for any reduction of the school fund, since it was, and is, clearly in violation of statutory law and the Constitution of Kentucky. We condemned unequivocally misappropriation of school funds. Mr. Morrow speaks of "large cash balances." I will show you why their balances were not so large. Their books, December 31, 1911, show a credit to the Sinking Fund of $73,827.84; School Fund, $445,014.43; total balance, $518,842.27; deficit, General Expenditure Fund, $249,123.33. They turned over to the State Treasurer a balance of $269,718.34.

I would like to know why they did not turn over that "sacred and inviolate" school fund, under the law and Constitution, of $445,014.43. I would like to know why they refused to do so, and why they misappropriated those funds, and what they temporarily did with those funds.

From this, you can see why their cash balances were not so large. I need not quote you sections 154 of the Constitution, and Section 4371 of the Statute and Section 4372, wherein it is stated, "Except as otherwise expressly provided in this chapter, no part of the common school fund, nor of the revenues thereof, shall be used for any other purpose than the payment of the salaries of the teachers of the common schools." And Section 4373, which states, "The Auditor shall keep accounts in relation to this fund. He shall once in each month make a transfer to the credit of said fund, all receipts into the Treasury, and shall also make a transfer to the credit of the common schools, up to the date of said transfer." Section 4371 states, referring to a previous section and to the Constitution, "The foregoing shall constitute the annual resources of the school fund, and shall be paid into the Treasury and shall not be drawn out or appropriated except to pay the expenses of the State Department of Education of whatever kind or character."

I want to know what this Republican administration did with this $445,014.43, or such part of it as was unaccounted for when they turned over to Mr. Rhea, the new State Treasurer, altogether, school fund, and everything else, the sum of $269,718.34. At the time when this was done, I personally called the attention of Mr. Farley, the Republican Treasurer, to the fact that there appeared to me to be something rotten in Denmark. This gentleman facetiously stated that I had "much to learn," and that I would discover when that the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction was regarded, among Republicans, as an insignificant position "without authority," and that I had better "keep quiet" and do as Republicans had done, leaving such matters to those "higher up."

Economy of Present Administration. This present Democratic Administration has kept inviolate and sacred every penny of the school fund. Hence, the "large cash balances" in the Treasury that have been referred to, and for which this Administration has been viciously attacked. When there was this balance of $445,014.43, shown by their own books, to the credit of the School Fund, the Republican Party paid a warrant of $108,756.50, and this warrant had been paid due the teachers of Kentucky since October 5, 1911. What were they doing with this "sacred" and "inviolable" fund? They used these "sacred and inviolable" funds in the settlement of State warrants and for the purpose of showing a "small cash balance" in the Treasury. In the meantime the poor school teacher went without her pay, three months past due, while the Xmas holidays were passing and the rigor of winter fast approaching.

Republican's Extravagance.

I have in my hands the photograph of a bill that shows that the "rapes" of Kentucky's childhood's opportunity, the embezzlement of childhood's sacred heritage. I have here and present as an exhibit a picture of a warrant for $1,800, payable to an undertaker out of the school fund of Kentucky, and charged to the school fund of Kentucky for materials furnished in the erection of the State Capitol building. I have before me in my hand a photograph of a bill that shows that the "rapes" of Kentucky's childhood's opportunity, the embezzlement of childhood's sacred heritage, for which $3,751.29 was to be paid, and was paid out of the school fund of Kentucky for work done in various offices, including that of the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction, and General Administration, and for the office of the Clerk of the House, Senate, and for other work done on the third floor in the new Capitol. This was payable to an undertaker and paid out of the school fund of Kentucky, which the Constitution of Kentucky lawfully prohibits to be used for "inviolable" and "sacred."

filed in the records of this transaction, which reads as follows:

"O. K. Charge to J. G. Crabbe (School Fund).
"According to agreement with commission for altering Hall of Fame.
C. M. Fleener."

"This estimate was allowed and ordered paid by Board of State Capitol Commissioners, June 7, 1909."
Edward M. Drane, Secretary."

I have also before me a duplicate of a contract made and entered into between the Capitol Commission of this Republican Administration, under the terms of which the school funds were paid to Republican undertakers; and this agreement and contract approved by the Superintendent of Public Instruction under this administration.

Incidentally, I might mention that of $1548 that was paid out of the school fund for six small silk curtains about the size of a pocket handkerchief, to be used in the Hall of Fame, that the light of day might be shut out from these precincts wherein were supposed to reside the hopes of Kentucky's childhood, and the future of Kentucky's manhood and citizenship.

I want you to note that this same Dr. Bruner, who was a member of the State Board of Education at the time, and a member of the State Capitol Commission at the time, and who is the same Dr. Bruner who presided over the destinies of the now defunct Commercial Bank and Trust Co. of Louisville, voted for and authorized by the voters of Kentucky the creation of a "sacred fund" and that he was a member of the Sinking Fund Commission, charged under the Constitution with the protection of this fund; and the same Dr. Bruner who attacks this present Administration in its management of the school finances of Kentucky.

I want you to note that Mr. R. "Pee" Green, who is the Republican nominee for Superintendent of Public Instruction, endorses all of this, and that he is the same Mr. Green who is an infamous carpet-bag Republican, hardly yet a naturalized Kentuckian; and who has been fed at the public crib of Kentucky by the hands of Democrats, for years, as a "professor" in the State Normal School at Bowling Green.

Explains Morrow's Charges.

Now, referring to certain items in Mr. Morrow's Bowling Green speech to wit: $63.75 for motor car service, charged to the credit of this present Administration, and it is a credit to this present Administration, that this money was spent on behalf of the resolution of denouncing the conduct of teachers' examinations in Kentucky. Mr. Morrow and his associates know that this expense for motor car services covered a period of more than two months and that this service was rendered by your humble servant as Superintendent of Public Instruction, doing his duty to conserve the very bed-rock, foundation and morale of the public school system of the State. As a result of the expenditure of this money, there has been no more stealing and selling of examination questions in Kentucky, and the illicit traffic has been completely broken up and eliminated.

He refers to an item of $45 for taxi-cab services in the city of Louisville. He knows that this was paid as of one date, as is customary, but that it covers items extending over more than a month, on account of services during cold, dark and winter nights, in an effort to assist in the recovery of $100,000 back taxes due the school fund in the Highland Park Graded School District, near the Southern Railway and Railroad Company. The records of the Jefferson Circuit Court show that this money was recovered and paid over on account of the efforts of your humble servant in the prosecution of this case. He refers to a small item of $2.95 on account of (to make an amusing dialing car between Frankfort and Paducah, and other items expended on account of this same trip to Paducah, which covered a period of three days, amounting altogether to $28.65 in all. He knows that this was a legal expense, and that it was paid out of the results of which the State today is proud. On account of a call and a summons from the Livingston County Circuit Court, demanding the service of your humble servant and the speaker, I had an expert prosecutor in the County Superintendent of Schools, alleged to have embezzled the school funds of the State and county; and the money was recovered.

More G. O. P. Extravagances.

I want to speak briefly of some little expense matters incurred under the Republican Administration. In 1910 there was passed an Act at the instance of the Republican Governor, allowing the Governor to entertain at his expense at National Governor's Conference at Frankfort, but on account of some joker left in the bill, this expense was decided to be a permanent appropriation. However, I believe that that is all right, and we are not going to make it a precedent, but let us see how the funds were expended by Republicans: On June 28, 1910, there was charged to the State $29.00 for one trip to Lexington and return; June 28, $57.13 for a trip to see Mr. Roosevelt in Louisville, and there was charged $23.40 for meals, car, baggage, cab, porterage, and an item of one five-cent street car fare. I find on October 29 an item of $21.63 for trip from Louisville to Bowling Green, for the purpose of making a speech before the Normal School. I find on November 10 an item of $10.00 for Green trip for this Republican Governor paid $3 for one lunch and that he paid $1.50 for one supper.

I pass over many items similar to this, including some large sums, all of which were paid out of the school fund, and which I feel the present Governor James B. McCreary would contribute to be business of a purely personal nature, and not chargeable to any expense fund allowed by the State.

I find that he charged another five dollars for a telephone call for a reporter on December 13, and in addition to this, $6.30 for "presents" and "courtesies" to chauffeurs of various automobiles, and on account of "courtesies to guests." Next I find a charge of $1.00 for a telephone call, here given verbally to the Louisville Courier-Journal, November 5. Miss Nora Brown, Frankfort, Ky. Home 7:35, P. & C. Tell Mansion, Augustus E. Willson, on January 10, the same official was paid $4.44 for entertainment of visitors and their wives at the Louisville Country Club, which occurred on December 2-10, prior to this date. April 18, 1911, $60.00 paid to the Capital Motor Car Company for one trip, January 27, 1911, $25.75 for one fund $11.00 and express charges. They not only divert the funds of Kentucky and disburse them through an undertaker, but use the general expenditure fund for the purchase of a funeral design to be placed upon the graves of the dead.

I do not have to make charges, but merely to state the facts as I am doing. "I give you the facts and figures of these accounts; I leave judgment to your common sense."

Mr. Morrow made mention of a typewriter desk bought by the Department of Education for $110, which was a duplicate of a certain similar type of desk bought at the same price from the original contractor and made to order. Now, I want to give you some more figures in regard to this question of the purchase of furniture.

Luxuries Purchased by Republicans. I find that they bought for the Adjutant General's office a typewriter desk for $114; for the Insurance Department, a desk for $225.00 for another one. They paid $150 for three easy chairs in the Prison Commission office. In the office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction they paid as follows: One desk, $177; one desk, $134; one desk, $120; one roll-top desk, $50; one easy chair, $50; one soft-cushioned sofa, $125; one umbrella rack, $16. In the office of Dr. Bruner, the Secretary of State, two desks, $554; one clothes rack, $69; one plain desk, $100. Department of Agriculture, $160. Governor's office: One flat-top desk, $338; one sofa, $150; one revolving book case, $60; one hat rack, $34; one umbrella stand, $34; one plain book case, $35; one typewriter desk, $217.

Again, in the office of Secretary of State, one flat-top desk, $175; one typewriter desk, $220; one roll-top desk, $149. I am omitting items amounting to thousands of dollars, for lack of time and space to mention them. I do find again for Dr. Bruner's office two more typewriter desks, $344, not listed separately, and one roll-top desk, $120. In the office of the Assistant Secretary of State I find a typewriter desk, $172, and one umbrella rack, $95. One wooden bench for the lobby of the Auditor's office, $47.50. In the Treasurer's office, one desk, $120; one roll-top desk, $132; one easy chair, $185, and many other costly and expensive items. I find a desk for the Librarian's office for $177. I find three easy chairs at $55.00, and a great many of what they style as side chairs, that amount to thousands of dollars. I do not know what side chairs are intended for, but doubt if there is sufficient space in the entire State Capitol to afford storage room for all of the side chairs bought and paid for under this Republican administration. I find that the janitors, contracted for by Republicans and paid for by Uncle Sam and John Jones, who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, pulling the plow line over live through hot summer days.

Such figures are a record of service to the people, comparable to that exhibited in the famous Pennsylvania State Capitol graft disclosure. I find that these Republicans bought a number of chairs at a most exorbitant price for pages in the Senate Chamber. Evidently they were preparing for the extra help charged to the Democrats at the present time, and I find another item of $378 for easy chairs that are never used on any occasion, and four more sofas amounting to $560. I find an item of $1,000 for a roll-top desk, and many other items of money expended for more side chairs, etc.

Mr. Morrow has referred to an item of drinking water. The Republican Administration preceding the present administration, installed at approximately $90,000, a plant of which was for the purpose of furnishing to the offices in the State Capitol refrigerated water, filtered and refrigerated. It is a well-known fact, Mr. Morrow and his associates know, that this plant, built by his own party, and is yet an absolute failure, and that that never was supplied by this expensively built plant either filtered or refrigerated water to any Department in the State House. I consider it just as much a righted wrong as to provide myself and my associates with pure water on hot summer days when serving the people between the hours of 7:00 A. M. and 12:00 at midnight, as any other Department in the State Capitol, and I state that it has been a constant source of complaint to the people to purchase and provide drinking water just as they have purchased and provided ice and other small necessities incident to the conduct of these offices at the expense of the State.

Printing Placed by a Commission. Mr. Morrow refers to printing bills and printing contracts; he mentions an item of $6,000, which is the most accumulated by the present Republican administration and paid for by the present administration. This is, therefore, a part of the deficit left by the former Republican administration. He states that all the printing of the State is done by the State Superintendent, and that a statement he knows to be false. The State Superintendent of Public Instruction has no jurisdiction under the law in the matter of letting a printing contract. He (Mr. Morrow) knows that the law provides for a Printing Commission, composed of the Governor, the Secretary of State, the Auditor of Public Accounts, the Attorney General and the Treasurer, and that all printing contracts for the Department of Education have been subjected to the scrutiny and are directly under the control of the State Printing Commission, as provided by law. He insinuates extravagance in the matter of the amount of printing done by this Department. Mr. Morrow endorses in his party platform free text-books, free printing and a seven months' school term, and yet viciously repudiates all of them in his speeches.

Printing Sent to Every School in State.

During the present Administration there have been sent free to the people of Kentucky—Democrats and Republicans alike—text-books, to the value of millions of pieces of printed matter, that have been in a nature sent to them as free text-books. We cite for instance the State Course of Study, which is a text-book in every school in Kentucky and a guide for practically every State in America. In addition to this, we cite the Arbor & Bird Day Book, 25,000 copies of which have been distributed this year free to the people of Kentucky, and which has done more for the conservation of our natural resources and accomplished more for the good of the people of our forests than all else done in the previous history of Kentucky.

This department has distributed free to the people hundreds of thousands of pamphlets, bulletins and books, including the State Course of Study in Kentucky, and the Official Manual of Kentucky, all of which have been given to the people and for which this department has been most cordially commended. The cost of these publications is but a trifle compared to the cost of the printing by the people of the State. We have no apologies nor any defense to make for any publications issued or any printing that has been done by this department; we have done it for the people, it has been paid for by the people, and the accruing benefits have been received by the people.

G. O. P. Printing Order.

We wish to note, however, for the benefit of an unsuspecting public, that under the previous Republican administration, on December 6, 1911, five days prior to the inauguration of James B. McCreary Governor, as shown by the orders entered on pages 43 and 44 of the records of the Printing Commission, there was an order made by the Printing Commission directing the Commissioner of Public Printing to let a contract for the publication of a certain pamphlet, having to do with certain parties, represented by certain individuals, were presumed to be the Inter-State Publishing Co. The contract for the printing of these bulletins was approved by George A. Lewis, Superintendent of Public Printing, and presented to the subsequent Democratic administration for approval and payment. This was the first information which the new Printing Commission, composed of James B. McCreary and his associates, received of the fact that their predecessor had authorized the Superintendent of Public Printing to let a contract to persons other than the regular contractor. It is a well-known fact that Mr. Lewis was called before the Commissioners to explain why the contract price for this job of printing was so greatly in excess of the price for work done under the regular State contract. The Superintendent was required to furnish an estimate of this work under the regular State contract. It was found that the Inter-State Publishing Company was charging $1,718.80 for what the State, through its regular contract, would be required to pay $1,165.78. It was also found that county report No. 4, which under the special contract amounted to $1,702.06, would amount to only $1,022.00 under the State contract, and would have been let by a Democratic administration and a Democratic Printing Commission. The Democratic Printing Commission refused to pay under this special contract made by Republicans with some spurious public benefactors, and saved the State on two items, $1,161.72. It is also a notable fact that this special contract has disappeared and can not be found in the office of the Superintendent of Public Printing.

Turns the Light On. Now, my friends, there is nothing so clarifying and purifying as sunlight, and I have taken the pains to have before me facsimile copies and photographs taken from the originals of all these illegal acts.

I need not refer to the fact that Mr. Morrow has himself admitted his false statement and error in regard to the balance of the school fund. It existed in the school fund of 1914 of $683,000, and that the per capita was kept at $4.00. He has apologized already to the public for making such a statement.

Secured Seven Month School Term.

I would like to add here, however, that on account of $8,000 accumulated by the conservative business management of the school funds, I did, arbitrarily, on account of what I conceived to be my authority as executive, state that I would declare a seven months school term. I was immediately advised by my legal advisors that the school term could not be done without Legislative enactment. Then I did declare a $4.50 per capita, the largest that had ever been declared before in the history of Kentucky, and every teacher in Kentucky knows that the salaries were paid promptly every month. I then drafted a bill for the following Legislature, which was passed, and the result of which was the establishment of the seven months school term which we now have, at a per capita of $4.50.

"Branches" Franks, of Owensboro. Now, I have noticed that a certain man, whose name I know as "Branches" Franks, from the city of Owensboro, has attacked the Department of Education, also in a most vicious manner. I have never heard of Mr. Franks being a friend to the cause of education, nor to any other worthy cause. I know that there is in the records of the Franklin Circuit Court that Mr. Franks was indicted and tried for an alleged crime that would make one so sensitive as he claims to be blush in shame and keep himself in obscurity, instead of in bold hypocrisy attacking the decent and honest servants of the people and the innocent children of this Commonwealth. I do not know how Mr. Franks has become so prominent in the politics of his party, nor how he has grown so bold, but I have been told that he has succeeded to do with the equalization of liquor revenues, whatever that is; I do not know. But, I am informed that it was in his case a most lucrative business, and, on account of his experience in such matters, he became Collector of Internal Revenue and retired from this office a millionaire after four years' service. This is all rumor to me—I do not know that it is absolutely true. However, it is told by Republicans, and I am sure they would not disparage Mr. Franks intentionally.

I do not take time to refer to the attacks of the other "small" gentlemen on this Republican ticket, and those interested on what is being said. The time is too short. The Honorable Judge Lewis Walker, for instance, a turn-coat Democrat, who would sell his birthright for a mess of pottage, and yet with all that being a Republican, I feel kindly towards him in spite of his misdeeds. He has people whose ignorance is commensurate with their avarice, and I pass him by, and put him in a category with the heretofore referred to, R. "Pee" Green.

Endorse Woodrow Wilson. Now, in conclusion: The Democratic ticket is led by a princely statesman whose ability and achievements are comparable with those of a Woodrow Wilson, an Ollie James, or any of the greatest Democrats of this age, or any other age. The fact that the Republican nominees for Governor and Secretary of State are so weak, and that all of his lieutenants to direct their attacks at the insignificant office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction is indicative of the fact that they are desperate and know not where to turn, nor how to form their lines for an attack.

Morrow's Doom is Sealed.

The fact of the business is, Mr. Morrow, and every man on his ticket, realizes and recognizes, and acknowledges already, ignominious defeat, and by their mad attacks upon the bulwark of the Commonwealth, the public school system, they evidence the fact, and notoriously parade the fact, that their attitude is retrogressive in all things and especially in this one great business of the State. Mr. Morrow sealed his doom in his first attack as speech at Bowling Green. A man of such low ideals, and of so small conceptions of what a great Commonwealth should be and how it should be developed, is not fit to be the someone even for the great office of school trustee, in this State. The Republican ticket, the most radical type, condemn him for his unwarranted, blundering attacks, based on hypocrisy and the intense desire to get an office.

Too Far Advanced to Consider Hypocrisy.

I tell you again, my fellow citizens, that the people of Kentucky have advanced too far to consider such an act and hypocrisy. Their homes are too dear, and their love for the "little red school house" as the church by the wayside is too pure to listen to a man, or set of men, who would preside over what should be better ideals, a cause, and an attempt so to have faith in the people of Kentucky. I have faith in the God-fearing men and fathers of Kentucky, to the rescue of whose little children I have seen and heard my life and effort. I have faith in the school teachers of Kentucky. I have led for four years Kentucky's great "standing army" and I tell you that America's standing army is today that body of school teachers of white-robed men, who will do the work and that it will be due to the efforts and the ideals of this army that America will go forward continuously in peace, love and prosperity.

A Reconstructed Man Costs $300. With exhibitions and catalogues of artificial limbs now brought to notice one gets to calculating the cost of a reconstructed man. Seemingly a little more than $300 would suffice. A pair of artificial legs cost about $150 and a pair of arms about $100. Eyes, ears, drums, etc., cost $75 each, eyes $30 a pair, and an ear. Without heart and brain a man is worth about $300. With them—the price might change—London Chronicle.

Little Danger of Horse Shortage

No fears are entertained locally that the European demand for horses will cause a shortage in these animals. The horse on the local market is a drag. It is almost impossible to give a horse away now. It is the general opinion that horse flesh was never at so low an ebb as at the present. Various reasons are given for the low demand for horses, but the chief one advanced by nearly everybody is the growing use of the automobile.

In one family in Davies county there was quite a large family of boys and each had his horse and buggy. Their feed was not thought of as there was plenty of hay and corn grown on the farm and the animals were fed. Shortage of feed for the last few years has brought home to the owners of animals that feeding even a driving horse for its use a few times in a week was useless and the horse was sold. In this same family a little Ford was bought and now the boys have all discarded their driving horses and take their rides on riding their girls around. On occasions two or three of the boys will splice in and the car take them all on one trip.

There are not many farms in Davies county where there is not an automobile. Slow indeed is the farmer today who does not own an automobile. He is looked down upon as being old-fashioned and not up to the times. The tendency, of course, is to do away with the old farm tractor and at the same time the farm tractor is getting, in its work in crowding out the patient plow horse. With one of these tractors from seven to ten acres can be turned up from sun to sun and there is no danger of a dead animal the next morning. Also, and this is a fact that is largely, the driver doesn't have to trail along behind, but rides comfortably in a seat merely holding a steering wheel.

In the city, at the same time, taxicabs and motor trucks are rapidly elbowing out the animal drawn vehicles. One large house put in one large truck and discarded three double teams. A smaller delivery truck was installed and two small wagons were thrown upon a pile. Of this course, spells lack business in the horse market.

Mules have a better standing and are bringing fairly good prices. Proprietors of the Mule Cafe in West Fifth street, is now in the market for fifty mules and is offering moderate prices for these animals only. The $200 and $250 mule, of five hundred dollar price is a thing of the past, in the belief of the raisers of the tender footed long-ears. They will be valuable for some time, it is hard to replace the mule with the negro of the South. Cotton fields and mule followed by darkey still will exist for years to come yet.

Care of Wives and Children a Problem.

Hartford, October 14.—The prospect of convicting 95 more men of 100 indicted "possum hunters" in this Ohio county, and thereby leave their wives and approximately 400 children dependent on the county's charity, is said to have prompted the Commonwealth's representative to pause for the time being in the further prosecution of the cases.

When Judge T. F. Birkhead convened the special term of the Commonwealth's Attorney Ben D. Ringo announced he was not ready to try the remaining cases. Court was ordered adjourned.

The regular term of court convenes next Monday, and while there are trials of 20 or more alleged "possum hunters" set for next week, it is said authorities actively none of the cases will be tried except that of Clayburn Wilson, accused of having killed Geo. Maddox, a negro, and was staged by the regulators at Rockport. Wilson was located at McCook, Neb., and was brought here by Sheriff Keown and placed in jail.

Many appeals from prominent citizens, it is said, have reached Prosecutor Ringo that he be lenient with the 100 men and be tried in connection with the Possum Hunter outrages. In this request the County Attorney is said to have joined.

Since the prosecutions and convictions at this special term of court the organization of regulators is said to have been put out of business. Among the men accused there is said to be general repentance and the tacit understanding that if the prosecutions are dropped they will not participate in any more escapades.

James Ashford and Harrison Mad dox, two of the few accused men who have been in jail, were today allowed to go on parole on their own recognizance by the prosecutor, he not desiring to detain them longer in jail.

Mr. Jordan says it takes six gallons of cider to make one gallon of syrup.—Clinton Times-Week Gazette.

G. W. McKinley, of Catawba, has in town Monday and gave us his bee and honey record for the season. He started in the spring with twelve colonies of bees, and by the end of the season he had added three more. Eleven colonies of young bees were added from swarming. From these stands he has sold $105.25 worth of honey. From one colony which had been condemned by the County Bee Inspector as having foul brood, he got three new colonies. McKinley said his position honey. This colony proved to be the best in his apiary.—Falmouth Outlook.

Probably the most unusual accident which ever occurred in Central City was one at Noffsinger's grocery last Saturday. Mr. Noffsinger has had a large coffee pot in his kitchen some time. The pot measuring about three feet in height, on Saturday Evelyn Hancock, an eight-year-old girl, was moved to investigate the interior of the vessel. She got inside without much trouble, but couldn't get out. Furthermore Mr. Noffsinger and his wife, and Mr. M. A. Summese and several other men couldn't get her out. Finally it became necessary to cut her in. The girl was released. The little girl, she was not injured.—Central City Argus.

The Effect of Alcohol on the Man Himself.

Dr. Carolyn Geisel, the noted lecturer and scientist, gave a second delightful address at the White Temple, Tuesday evening. The church was crowded to its capacity. The Normal business College, delegates to the convention, and representative citizens of Bowling Green being present. Dr. Geisel's address was as follows:

"I spoke to you last night out of a woman's heart, tonight I will talk to you tonight, you were my patients, as a medical man. I want you to study with me the effects of alcohol upon the man himself. You are the subject treated from the political side and from the financial side, 'Alcohol on man himself,' I will take you to consider tonight. I will take my text from the Brewers' paper. They say the drunkard is a defective, and they tell the truth. Of course he is a defective. We know that, when he cannot get his life insured, he is not a good risk. We saw he was a defective when we saw his wife for the wash tub. He cannot get a job in a saloon. They want sober men to preside at the bar—they won't employ the man they are drinking. Who is a drunkard? A man made in the image of God; the finished product of the saxon's own business, and they finish the reason that they can make a man defective, that business ought to be put out of the world. It is not enough to put it out. It must be put off the earth. One of the first errors to be corrected in the medical world was that alcohol was a good thing. It is not. It is a poison. It is a nerve cell in your body there are prolongations that run out from the body of the cell, these are the inhibitory nerves—the fibers that say, 'No, no—the fibers of negation. Alcohol effects these inhibitory fibers first of all. Von Schosser, of Kielberg University in 1901, was laughed at, but now the medical profession say, 'Why did you not make us understand it in the beginning? The reason that the drunkard's brain is so gone is that these nerves are the first ones injured. Another error was that 'alcohol is good for digestion.' It is not. It is a poison. Mr. Cropper states that most of the people delay setting their taxes until the last day and that it is an impossible matter for him to handle the vast amount of business in one or two days, and he would like to call to make settlement before that period, especially those who are unable to transact the business over the telephone, as the more they delay the greater attention.

Mrs. B. K. Menefee was unanimously elected Associate Grand Matron of the Order of Eastern Star at Bowling Green last week at the annual session, and has since been receiving congratulations on all hands for the honor is one that anyone should feel proud of having it conferred on them, and it could not have been bestowed on a more worthy sister nor one that will wear it with more credit to the fraternity or pleasure to herself. Walton is especially proud of the honor being conferred on one of its ladies and we all join in congratulations.

The meeting for the organization of the proposed loose leaf tobacco warehouse at Walton is to be held at Walton opera house next Saturday at 1:30 o'clock, when the full plan and the general details will be explained. The capital stock will be $10,000 and the shares $10 each. Hill & Young, experienced tobacco men of Carrollton, propose to manage the concern, agreeing that after all expenses are paid and six percent on the capital stock to the club, the balance of the profits left after these disbursements at their compensation. John E. Williams, who is representative of the R. J. Reynolds tobacco company, only subscribed liberally to the stock but states that he will have his firm station a buyer here. The old cannery building is to be used and is offered the corporation at $1,000 which is a bargain.

Two Brothers Meet.

Rich Hill, Mo., Oct. 12. John C. McWeathy, 87 years old of Urbana, Ill., and Joseph I. McWeathy 81, living five miles southeast of this city, met here today for the first time in 38 years.

The two brothers left their old home in Petersburg, Ky., in 1853, John moving to Champaign, Ill., where the brother lived for three years later while on his way to Vernon county, Missouri, where Joseph I. has since lived. They had kept up a regular correspondence, but neither had made the visit, although living within 500 miles of each other—St. Louis Republic.

As it was done last year, so this year at the request of Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, the teachers of the Burlington school, volunteered to give their time and services in conducting a night school at the High School building for a number of evenings. The night school is conducted under the instruction of those who can not read or write, but is held for the benefit of all young and old. Each night is held at 7 o'clock, and the meeting to which all are invited to take part in the simple exercises, and enjoy the social hour. Twenty-three were in attendance the first night. Sessions each night this school week.

AT THE AGE OF NINETY-ONE

Leicester Nichols Passes Away at the Home of his Daughter in Rising Sun, Indiana.

Father Time and the Death Angel again removed from our midst one of the old and highly respected citizens of this county, when on the 17th inst., Leicester Nichols was called to his reward, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Acton, of Rising Sun, Indiana, with whom he had been living for some time.

He had been in feeble health for several years, by reason of the infirmities of age, but ate a hearty dinner and supper the day he died, and after the evening meal had a fainting spell and passed away at 10 o'clock that night.

Mr. Nichols was born in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, on the 11th day of Dec. 1824, and consequently would have been ninety-one years old had he lived until his last birthday.

In his early youth he moved with other members of his family to Illinois, which was then a well known Baptist minister, after a brief stay there, he ran away and went to Virginia, from which place he came with Henry Dadd Smith, to Boone-co., where he has always made his home, only being temporarily absent with his daughter who lives in Rising Sun, Ind., at the time of his death.

On the 28th day of February, 1849, he married Nancy Willis Dicken, a daughter of Jas. Dicken, a well known Baptist minister of this county, the Rev. Robt. Kirtley, their neighbor and friend performing the ceremony.

His wife preceded him to the grave several years. He leaves three daughters, Mrs. J. Frank Casson, Mrs. Lystra Smith and Mrs. Harry Acton, and one son, Egbert Nichols, and numerous grand and great-grand children, to mourn his death.

At the outbreak of the Civil war he left his family and espoused the Union cause and served in the war as a brave and faithful soldier. He was a well educated, well informed man, and kept a daily diary of the movements of the army with which he served, that if published would make an interesting book.

He was a Republican in his political views, but never fell out with his fellow-men over politics, and always held the county officers in high esteem and was a great admirer and regular reader of the Boone County Recorder.

He was a devoted husband, a kind and loving father, a good neighbor and an honest and upright citizen, and everyone who knew Uncle Let, as he was commonly known, especially to the younger persons of his community, will bear testimony to these many good traits of character, and also to his sunny disposition and genial nature.

He was a carpenter by trade and many of the older buildings of the North end of the county stand as monuments to his ingenuity and skill as an honest and master workman.

He was a Christian in the real sense of the term and all that it implies, and the writer, and we believe the Editor, sincerely believe, that his reward in the world beyond will be great as his many good deeds here have earned and as he so justly deserves.

His daughter with whom he was living gave him every care that a loving heart and tender hands could bestow on a parent.

His remains were laid to rest besides those of his wife in the Petersburg cemetery, at noon Tuesday.

The young friends of Morris Rouse and wife, provided with many useful household articles, called on the family Saturday night as a donation party.

An unexpected rise in the price of potatoes is unwelcome news to the school children, and not purchased their winter's supply.

The heaviest fog of the season was that of last Friday morning, and it was hereby noted before it lifted.

The teachers in this magnificent district held quite an interesting meeting here last Friday afternoon.

"THE NORTH KENTUCKY FAIR"

The Stockholders Meet on The Grounds at Florence and Organize. Capital Stock to Be Seven Thousand Dollars, at $10 a Share. Four Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty Dollars Paid In. Nine Directors Chosen.

Pursuant to the call published in the Recorder last week, a large number of those who have taken stock in the proposed new fair assembled on the grounds at Florence last Saturday afternoon to pay in their subscriptions and organize a new company. B. F. McGlasson, of Ft. Pleasant, acted as chairman, and Hubert Conner, of Hebron, was chosen secretary of the meeting.

The first thing the meeting proceeded to do was to ascertain how much money had been subscribed and paid in and the report showed that $1,750 had been paid in on subscription but the exact amount subscribed could not be ascertained from the fact that some of the subscription papers were not in possession of the meeting and no one present knew the amount for which these papers called.

The question of a name for the new organization caused considerable discussion, several names being proposed. Some of the citizens of Florence were anxious that it be called the Florence Fair, but the consensus of opinion was that that name would be too local, and finally the name "The North Kentucky Fair" was decided upon, which is both comprehensive and very appropriate.

The next thing in order was the reading of the articles of incorporation which had been prepared by Edgar C. Riley, and it came to the names of the nine incorporators, on motion of J. C. Hughes, a committee of three to select the names of the incorporators, was appointed by the chair. Instead of only nine the committee selected the names of eighteen from which the selection was to be made. The report was adopted and a ballot was taken, the names of the nine men receiving the highest number of votes to be the nine incorporators, who will constitute the board of directors until their successors are elected and qualified, the regular annual election to be held each year on the last day of the fair. The votes were not confined to the names embraced in the report of the committee, and a considerable time, the shades of night beginning to fall before the count was completed, which showed the vote of the nine and the names to be as follows:

C. W. Myers, 241
T. L. Sweetnam, 186
Hubert Conner, 159
C. F. Blankenship, 140
Scott Chambers, 140
W. P. Beemon, 134
J. E. Williams, 134
C. B. Young, 112
Edgar C. Riley, 112

There was a large number of scattering votes which caused the delay in ascertaining the result. The men chosen as incorporators and directors will organize by electing of their own number a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer.

The North Kentucky Fair will be in the list in 1916 asking the patronage of the public, and judging from those who will have it in charge it will be a hummer and one that will merit public patronage.

Heard a Boone County Boy Lecture.

Rev. Edgar Riley returned home last Thursday night from the Christian Church Conference held at North Middletown, Bourbon county. He was enlightened with the exercises of the conference and the entertainment of the visitors. He says that the lecture that created the most favorable comments of any delivered while he was in attendance was delivered by Otto S. Crisler on Hog Cholera. Mr. Crisler is a member of the conference by the Kentucky Experiment Station to deliver the lecture as he is regarded as one of the best posted men in Kentucky on Hog Cholera. Over three hundred people listened attentively to the speech, Rev. Riley being the only one in the large audience with whom the speaker was acquainted. Otto Crisler is a Boone county boy of whom all are proud.

Attended their Old Neighbor's Funeral.

County Clerk W. R. Rogers and his sister, Miss Nellie, went to Salem last Friday to attend the funeral of their old neighbor and friend, Mrs. J. E. Ransom. Mrs. Ransom had been coming some time previous to her death. She was a daughter of the late Thos. Vest, and spent her entire life in Verona neighborhood. Mr. Ransom has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in his bereavement.

Very Fine Apples.

The handsome sample of apples ever seen at this office were brought in by Mr. Everett Southern, of Ft. Pleasant neighborhood, one day last week. They were very large, a beautiful color and perfect in shape. An orchard that produces fruit like them is bound to prove a source of revenue to its owner, and give splendid returns for the careful attention it receives.

Made a Long Trip in His Auto.

Rev. H. B. Hensley, of Bellevue, was a caller at this office last Thursday, having come there in an automobile from Tipton, Indiana, to which place he will move his family some time in December after having a sale of such personal property as he does not desire to take to his new home. Mr. Hensley is much pleased with the location he has chosen for his new home.

Lebus Looking After the Warehouse.

Hon. Clarence Lebus, President of the Burlington Tobacco Co., and his son, were in Burlington a short time last Friday enroute to Petersburg and Bellevue, to dispose of the tobacco warehouse built in these towns by his company several years ago. He said in speaking of the buildings that he would take for them fifty cents on the dollar cost.

Building a Bridge that is Needed Badly.

County Engineer Goodridge, assisted by William Utz, colored, was engaged several days the past week building abutments for a bridge on the road leading from the Petersburg Pike at Mrs. Holton's to Lawrenceburg ferry. Many years ago that was one of the best roads in the county but it has been neglected until its condition was miserable.

Dr. E. W. Duncan, of Rising Sun, attended the best medical meeting held at Lexington, last week, and was delighted with his trip. A visit to that part of Kentucky is good even for doctors.

John Cloud and N. E. Riddell spent a day or two last week at the Masonic Grand Lodge in session in Louisville. They left Louisville at 5 p. m. and 5 m. were in Burlington, having autoed 16 miles of the trip.

Miss Hazel Akin, of Plattsburg neighborhood, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, Jr., last Sunday. Miss Eva Akin was the guest of Mrs. Sullivan the past week, returned home with her sister last afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Keylich returned last Saturday from a week's visit with friends and relatives in Chicago. They were delighted with the country through which they traveled and especially with the fine roads.

B. W. Campbell and wife and their son and wife, and H. B. Riddell, of Cincinnati, were in Burlington a few hours last Sunday afternoon. Messrs. Campbell and Riddell spent their youthful days in Burlington, and they enjoy a visit to the old town any time.

Double Turns Working. The wire department of the Norton Iron Works has gone on double turn to get out a rush order for two wire mesh for European countries. This wire is being painted dark gray and differs from the usual barbed wire in that it has four prongs or barbs instead of the shape of a fish hook.

Reconstruction Work Completed. The work of reconstructing the two miles of the Lexington pike, beginning at the end of Ft. Mitchell car line and extending towards Covington to what is known as Porters pond, is completed, but the entire two miles will not be thrown open to travel for several days.

Remains Moved. The remains of the infant daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rice that were interred in the Hebron cemetery between 30 and thirty-five years ago were exhumed last Friday and moved to the family lot in Odd-Fellows cemetery at Burlington.

Three Took the Civil Service Exam. Civil Service Commissioner Elijah Stephens, held an examination at the court house, last Saturday, for postmaster at Grant, Kentucky. Those examined were Mrs. Jas. G. Smith, Otis Deck and Elsie Scott.

A Big Crowd at the Sale. A very large crowd attended T. E. Randall's sale last Saturday. The fine German Coach stallion, Plutarch, and the Jack were sold, as no one seemed desirous of buying the rest of that class of stock.

Putting in their Best Licks. The political orators are getting in their best licks now, having only a few days more in which to instruct the voters for whom they should cast their ballots next Tuesday.

HEBRON. In connection with excellent school work Hebron school has created an active interest in basketball, having played two games of ball with Constance school, and won out. They have also organized two basketball teams, one of girls and one of boys, and will be ready by the time the basketball season opens to play any grade team in the county. The writer finds a better spirit of co-operation among parents, teachers and pupils, than he has ever found in his six years of teaching in the public schools of Ohio.

FRANCESVILLE. Misses Beasie and Alma Muntz spent Sunday at Jno. Eggleston's. John Utzinger and wife spent Sunday with his relatives in the North Bend neighborhood.

Miss Sadie Morehead, of Taylorsport, was the guest of friends here several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clint Riddell had as their guests, Sunday, Messrs. Paul Sick and Edward Stran, of Hamilton, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Grant, of Bullittsville, and Mr. and Mrs. Adella Seathorn.

Mrs. James Popham, Mrs. Will Zimner, Mrs. Henry Haberly, the Rev. and Mrs. E. A. Early, of Petersburg, visited the school here last Friday afternoon. The school house is a credit to any village, and those who have added more land to the grounds and cut down the unnecessary trees, putting a fence around it, making a road to the place, placing the name of the school over the gate. The improvement in the exterior of the place shows what five teachers like Miss Youell and Mrs. Hogan, and an earnest, energetic trustee, like Howard Garnett can do. It is a work like the "waves dropped in the ocean" that the waves do not stop here but spread farther than we can imagine. The youths going forth into life from such schools certainly will make better men and women.

VERONA.

On the evening of October 23d, the Rhetoric Class of the High School department presented a Narrative Program as a result of the first month's work upon that subject. There was a well filled house, and an appreciative audience.

The literary exercises were over, hot coffee, ham sandwiches, ice cream and cake were served in the commodious dining room in the basement. Never before did the operations of the Civic League show to such advantage. The large crowd was accommodated; all of the lunch prepared was used, just a sufficiency and no more, hence the ladies are beginning to compliment themselves upon their ability to avoid waste by having "left overs." The enthusiasm of the League is running high, realizing in union there is strength.

Getting the Dollar From Under the Stump Deepening the Farm For Bigger Crops

How Up to Date Farmers Are Easily and Economically Realizing on Land Hitherto Impossible of Cultivation.

The Third Dimension of the Farm an Important Factor to Greater Crops and Bigger Dividends.

ABOUT 400,000,000 acres of land included in farms throughout the United States are unimproved. Figuring that each acre could be made to produce at least $25 worth of produce per year, there is approximately $10,000,000,000 production being lost annually. Quite a tidy figure. And when we take into consideration that in many cases it requires only the removal of sundry stumps and boulders to make this land profitable, it certainly looks as though something might be done to save the waste. "Stumping with dynamite" is both an economical, quick and labor saving method as well as one which is growing in popularity daily.

The method involved in the blasting of a stump is to confine a quantity of explosive in such a manner that when exploded the expanding gases will lift the stump out of the ground. To secure best results the charge should be placed in the soil well under the base of the stump at the point where the resistance offered to the force of the explosion will be equal on all sides.

Where the soil is of a heavy clay or plastic nature a slow acting powder is preferable, such as farm powder or stumping powder. Where the earth is sandy or loose and is apt to permit the easy escape of gases a fast explosive, such as 40 to 60 per cent dynamite should be used. The condition of the soil with respect to moisture also has a great influence upon the amount of work that a certain quantity of powder will do. After heavy rains when the soil is saturated to the base of the stump and the subsoil is just damp is a most favorable condition.

No set rules as to the amount of powder necessary to blast a certain kind or size of stump can be given, since different conditions govern all cases. Two stumps of the same size, kind and age of cut, when one is grown on well drained soil where the roots must penetrate a great depth for water and the other is grown on soil where there is always water near the surface, will demand different treatment for extraction. The older stumps, especially if from timber free from resin, require less powder. The exact amount necessary for set conditions can, however, be readily determined with a little experimenting.

Few tools and supplies are required. A one and one-half inch wood auger with a shank about four and one-half feet long, a medium sized crowbar, a round pointed shovel and a wooden tamping stick, together with the powder, fuse and caps, will serve to fill the bill.

WISE farmers are beginning to realize that a farm goes farther than length and breadth. Depth is a vital factor, and incidentally this third dimension has a clearly identified influence upon the producing value of the earth's surface.

Thus "vertical farming," a newer method of agriculture, is rapidly developing. Merely to scrape the bristles from a hog's hide is not enough. Deeper cutting is essential in order to reach the bacon. And experience has shown that to simply plow or turn the top soil is very often only the scratching of the surface when it comes to bumper crops.

Often the productivity of a farm is limited by the tight clay or hard pan underlying the top soil. Costly implements for tilling this upper soil and taking care of increased horizontal or surface acreage are all right in their way, but to go deeper into the farm, to increase its fertility and productivity by increasing its depth, is a matter that the practice of vertical farming accomplishes quickly and economically, and very often a single cartridge of explosive will convert several yards of otherwise useless subsoil into half an acre of new root feeding surface. Thus, instead of spreading out and embracing more territory, vertical farming enables the farmer to really concentrate and by intensive methods conserves in both labor and expense. At the same time the resulting increase in crops emphasizes the profitable features of the process.

And there is a practical reason for this. By breaking up the subsoil oxygen is admitted into the ground, and the pent up natural fertilizing elements of the lower soils are released and utilized. A reservoir for the storage of water is created, and a good home for the roots is produced. Good roots are essential to good plants. Men who look below the surface realize these facts. They know also that a plant produces only in proportion to the extent of air, water and nourishment given its roots. Thus is the newer method of vertical farming both logical and profitable.

This method of farming vertically is in itself easy, simple and labor saving. A half cartridge charge of farm powder placed well down into the tight subsoil at intervals of about a rod, tamped properly and fired carefully will do the work quickly and economically. Subsoil blasting, however, can be done successfully only when the subsoil is dry.

Few tools are required for the work.

Straightening Streams With Dynamite

The ancient Egyptians were noted for their crops because, as history states, they "sowed their seeds in the Nile." This does not mean that they actually cast the seed in the river. At certain seasons of the year the Nile overflows its banks, depositing on either shore a rich silt or earth that is highly conducive to bumper crops, and the wise ancient Egyptians, realizing this, profited thereby.

Water is a necessity. The thulest brooks up to the largest rivers play an important part in the scheme of things inasmuch as they are nature's way of both irrigation and drainage. But being formed according to nature's dictates their courses do not always jibe with man's desires or needs.

Diagram of Stream Troubles That May Be Corrected by Blasting.

Rock ledges impede their progress. Overhanging stumps and trees retard their flow. Numerous irregularities cause them to meander about in apparently wasteful ways, and man's carelessness has added to these troubles by allowing driftwood and loose earth to form dams and sandbars.

All of these things help to hold the flood of waters back and cause either flooding or swamps, which not only occupy land that could be more profitably used for farming, but also form fine breeding places for mosquitoes and other obnoxious pests. Incidentally they cause an annual loss running into millions of dollars per year.

In this day of enlightenment such things are both wasteful and, one might add, criminal, especially so in view of the fact that almost instant relief may be had by a few well placed charges of dynamite. Not only will these blasts straighten out the kinks and bends and remove ledges and sand bars, but they will deepen and improve the channels as nature has really intended. Incidentally by straightening the winding course of a creek much area of tillable land can be obtained and farm operation in many instances made much easier.

Blasting Ground For Tree Planting

Much has been written on how to plant a tree or trees, but if the experiences of scores of famous orchardists have any weight on the topic, then the practice of using dynamite preliminary to planting young trees has fully proved its merits.

The writer has personally seen specific examples of the value and excellence of tree planting with dynamite on a private orchard in Delaware, the best time in the fall, because at this time of the year it is easier to catch the subsoil in dry condition. Blasting in the spring for spring planting, however, is much better than planting in dry holes, notwithstanding the fact that the subsoil is apt to be wet or damp.

If the holes are blasted in advance of the time of setting the trees they are left without further attention until difference in growth between the undynamited tree and the tree planted in blasted ground being so unmistakably in favor of the latter that no adequate comparison could be made.

Furthermore, there are so many sane and logical reasons for this method of tree planting that even the most skeptical could not fail to be convinced. Obviously when a tree has to use a large part of its energies in forcing its roots through the hard soil it cannot be expected to make the same rapid growth and come into such tree planting time, unless it is desirable to add some manure or fertilizer to be diffused through the soil. This is an excellent practice, especially in poor soil. If the earth is soft, sticky clay a few pounds of lime scattered in the hole will materially assist in flocculating the clay and keeping it permanently granulated and sweet.

Immediately after the blast the soft blasted ground should be dug out down to the location of the charge, where a hole will usually be found about the size of a bushel basket. This early bearing as a tree would that had the ground in which it was planted thoroughly prepared by dynamiting beforehand.

No tree should be planted over hard or impacted subsoil without first resorting to blasting, so that the soil may be made open and porous. Such blasting not only creates channels, increases absorption of soil moisture and permits deeper rooting, but it also induces better growth and larger yields.

must be filled to prevent settling of the tree after planting. The roots should be placed in a natural position in good top soil, covered with more top soil and treaded down firm. The hole can then be filled to a little above the surface with subsoil.

The fact that nearly all commercial orchards use this method proves that it pays in reduced first year loss, earlier fruiting and larger and better yields.

Burrowers—Beware!

Gophers and prairie dogs are the bane of western farmers, while in the east woodchucks are the type of burrowing animals that cause the tillers of the soil to forget some of the things the dominie tells them on Sundays.

Dou Leonardo Ruiz, a California rancher, says "dynamite is the proper medicine to give ground squirrels, gophers, prairie dogs, etc."

Take an inch and a half or two inches of dynamite. Put it in a bit of cloth or several thicknesses of paper to form a small round cartridge. Tie the cloth or paper firmly about one end of a piece of fuse twelve or fourteen inches long, but do not use a cap.

Insert one of these charges well into the mouth of every hole and pack loose dirt around the fuse, leaving enough of the end outside to light easily. Light the fuse and go on to the next hole. There will be no explosion.

There being no cap or other detonator, the dynamite will simply burn, filling the hole with dense, poisonous fumes that will almost instantly stifle and then kill every living thing inside.

Explosives In Road Building

One of the newer methods of road building that is fast winning the endorsement of the better versed contractor is that of employing dynamite for reducing the heavy work.

Grading through hard ground or rock, for instance, is tedious and requires time and labor. The use of dynamite for blasting such material is a welcome relief. Both rock and hard clay may be loosened in the cut by well placed charges of explosives if holes are drilled into the ground a little way up the bank and loaded. Careful spacing and loading for electrically fired blasts will result in bringing down both classes of materials in the best possible manner.

In loosening shale and rock to facilitate hand or steam shovel work dynamite is also very effective, while stumps may be blasted from the roadside just as though they were being removed from a field to be cleared and cultivated.

Boulders are also easily shattered by suitable loading and when of hard rock may be crushed into surfacing stone. The side ditches as well as the long outfall ditches can also be blasted in keeping with the nature of the ground. In fact, there are no limits practically to the many uses and advantages of dynamite for road building when careful and thoughtful attention is given to the work.

Incidentally the planting of shade trees for roadside improvement and attractiveness is greatly facilitated by the judicious use of a little dynamite. It is a recognized fact that trees planted in blasted holes grow much more rapidly and progress more favorably than those planted in the average spade dug ground.

Digging a Ditch In a Flash

Things move quickly nowadays. The village of yesterday is tomorrow's metropolis. Speed is a requisite, and power methods that smack of rapidity and labor and money saving are in demand.

Ditches that once consumed many days of hand or machine labor are now being blasted out in almost the twinkling of an eye. By degrees man is learning to adopt some of nature's simple, but mighty forces. And the gullies and valleys that old Mother Earth has created by her natural upheavals and eruptions are being duplicated in a smaller way by some of the more progressive and up to date farmers.

Digging ditches with dynamite is simply a newer and more improved method of trench building. The method employed in wet work is simply to punch holes from eighteen to twenty-four inches deep along the line desired to ditch and then load each hole with a charge of 50 per cent straight dynamite.

Long stretches of ditch can be loaded and fired at one time. One cap placed in a cartridge of dynamite in the middle hole of the line of charged holes and fired will do the work.

A single row of holes can usually be depended upon to excavate a ditch from seven to nine feet wide and about thirty to forty inches deep. Where larger ditches are required the holes can be made deeper and loaded heavier, or two or more lines of holes, spaced from three to four feet apart, can be used. Incidentally the holes can be made in the roughest kind of swamp or in flood muck beds, where other methods of ditching are practically impossible.

When the soil is dry or the weather is too cold to use the propagated method of blasting described above low freezing farm or stumping powder is used in holes spaced farther apart, often in large ditches as far as four or five feet. In this case each hole must be primed with an electric cap, as the explosive shock will not propagate in dry ground.

The cheapest linen foot of small ditch is obtained by using the electric firing method and farm or stumping powder.

BLASTING DITCHES THROUGH SWAMP.

Priming a Dynamite Cartridge

To properly prime a dynamite or farm powder cartridge four things are essential—the cap, the fuse, the cartridge and a crimping tool. The method in itself is very simple.

First crimp the priming cap about the fuse, using the crimping tool as is no immediate danger in handling a stick of farm powder if the user will use but an ordinary amount of care and intelligence.

A common incorrect method of priming is to punch a hole right through the cartridge, pass the capped fuse shown in the illustration. Next punch the end of the crimping tool, sinking the hole deep enough to entirely bury the cap. Insert the cap into this hole and tie the fuse to the side of the cartridge if, then insert in another diagonal hole below the first hole. No tying is necessary to hold the cap in the cartridge. This method is called "tacking the fuse through the cartridge." It is unsafe and unreliable. The fuse is likely to break at the sharp turn and the powder train split fire through tridge securely with a stout piece of cord.

Crimping the Cap to the Fuse.

If the job is done carefully and correctly the entire outfit will look like illustration No. 4, and the priming will be complete.

Ignorance, fear or carelessness are the causes of most accidents. There the break, setting fire to the cartridge instead of exploding it, or the fuse may miss fire altogether, leaving an unexploded charge in the hole, or it may hang fire for half an hour or half a day and cause a serious accident. Short cuts do not pay in handling explosives.

BUILDING GOOD ROADS

More than 80 counties in Kentucky are actually at work building roads under state supervision and with state aid. Twenty-two counties have asked for and been granted such aid and are now preparing to begin work. The state-wide road building movement is on in earnest, and it is here to stay.

At the two penitentiaries, at Frankfort and Edwinstown, there are 2,000 men convicts. A large proportion of that number are physically capable of working on the roads. Instead of being so worked, they are let out to prison contractors at an annual loss to the state.

At the coming election, a constitutional amendment to work the convicts on the roads is to be voted on. It has been twice submitted by the General Assembly and once adopted by the people. That adoption was nullified by a failure to advertise the amendment within the prescribed 90 days. The necessary advertising has now been done. The whole question is in the hands of the voters, and both political parties have declared for adoption in their state platforms.

The prison contractor is opposed to adoption. It will put an end to his profits. Organized labor is a unit on wanting to see the amendment adopted. It will put an end to convict competition with free labor. It will put men at work on the roads where there is now a scarcity of labor.

In the state of Virginia, it was found that convict labor effected a saving of $1,500 a mile in the cost of building roads. In a score of other states, where this labor is used, it has been demonstrated that roads can be built with convict labor at half the cost of free labor.

Convict labor on the roads has proved good for the state and good for the convict. It has helped him physically and morally. It has, in many instances, restored him to good citizenship, and a convict restored to good citizenship is an asset; a convict released to follow a life of crime is a liability.

If Kentucky wants the advantages that come from convict labor on the roads, all that will be necessary will be to vote Yes for the amendment. If Kentucky prefers to let the prison contractor get richer at her expense by continuing in effect a system of slavery, the amendment will be defeated.

But the voter who goes to the polls and fails to vote on the amendment will overlook an opportunity to do his county and the state good service.

STORY OF HON. OLLIE JAMES' BOYHOOD

Beginning of A Career That Led To The U. S. Senatorship.
When Ollie James, the giant Senator from Kentucky, had finished high school at Marion at the age of sixteen, he sought a position as page in the Kentucky State Chamber. His immediate State Senator was approached and promised him a place in the good offices of his friend, the Lieutenant Governor, and presiding officer of the Senate. When the Legislature assembled young James presented himself. The Lieutenant Governor declared he had forgotten the matter entirely and had appointed all the pages. "But," said he, "they are a lot of spindly-legged weaklings, and scarcely able to carry themselves. They ought to be one page strong enough to lift heavy records and newspaper files." "Come and look my candidate over," said the Lieutenant Governor. When the Lieutenant Governor had a look at the giant youngster outside he gasped. "Show the Governor how strong you are Ollie," said the Senator. Whereupon Ollie James picked up the Lieutenant Governor in one arm and his Senator in the other and trotted upstairs with them. "Heavens!" said the presiding officer, "make a place for the boy! Make two places for him." As soon as Ollie James was installed he organized the pages of the Senate and House and established them at once as a power of the Legislature. This was the beginning of a career which has already progressed to a leading place in the United States Senate.—Louisville Herald.

There will be preaching at Bullittsburg Baptist church next Sunday.

Blackleg is prevalent in several localities in Kentucky. Losses have been reported from Boyd, Wayne, Pulaski and Lawrence counties. Cattle need not succumb to blackleg if vaccine is procured and administered at the proper time, but it must be injected before the animals become affected with the disease, says Dr. Robert Graham, of the Kentucky Experiment Station. Blackleg vaccine is the only safe method for the prevention and control of this disease, exemplified by the fact that last year 6,563 cattle were vaccinated with Government vaccine distributed by the Experiment Station, with a saving of 99.99 per cent of the cattle vaccinated. This furnishes sufficient evidence that vaccination of cattle against blackleg in infected localities can be relied upon to prevent the development of the disease.

MUSIC AND HEALTH

Influence Was Recognized Even in Biblical Times.

The power of music to influence the health of the listener has been recognized from early times and became historical in the attempts of David to drive out Saul's demon. We believe no one has been bold enough to ascribe any direct influence of tonal vibration upon the material of the body, but the medium of the nervous system, marvelous changes, physical and chemical, come to pass, and the effects of the art, which above all others, plays upon the emotions and is certainly more than trifling. Even the unmusical, those who are not especially susceptible to sweet sounds, are affected differently by a jig or a funeral march.

A national society of musical therapeutics was founded last year and the names of a number of physicians appear on the list of members. A magazine for the purpose of disseminating the movement to use music as a means to health has been started, and it seems as if the subject would be looked into deeply and the place of music as a therapeutic agency placed in its proper perspective, for reference in suitable cases.

One wonders what is the general influence of the present ragtime craze upon the mental and physical condition of its hearers. Being in no wise serious but, on the contrary, happy-go-lucky in mechanism and performance, it certainly cannot depress vitality and is far better in this respect than the popular melodies of a generation or two since, which were, with a few exceptions, tinged with melancholy. The American jingles of the present day create an emotional atmosphere of restlessness and excitement which is typical of American life, and which is opposed to health only so far as our national restlessness and lack of poise tend to make us a people whose mental disease is nervous exhaustion.—New York Medical Journal.

Hoop-Snake Churn.

"I saw a hoop snake drink a gallon of sweet milk out of a crock in my cave last week," said one of our farmer friends, whose confidence we shall hold sacred because of the candid reputation for truth and veracity he now enjoys. "The snake then crawled out of the cave, stuck his tail in his mouth and rolled like a hoop down the hill. He lost control of himself and could not put on the brake, so he skidded against a small sapling and laid 'blow-out.' When I got down the hill, there on the ground lay the punctured remains of his snakeship, and beside him a pound of butter."—Ex.

A Strange, and Pesticiferous Fly.

A fly that is a stranger to the farmers has made its appearance in this locality, and is very annoying to stock, especially cattle. It bites them on the front legs between the hock and the knee, shortly after which a lump about the size of a pea will appear and finally develop into a blister. The animal will lick and rub the blisters until they become sores that sometimes stiffen the animal's legs until it can move about with only considerable effort. If one of these flies bite a person, sore results but it is not painful.

Another Oil Company on Deck.

The Kentucky Independent Oil Company took out a license, last Thursday, to peddle its goods in this county. The agent who was here Thursday was operating a large motor truck on which was a large, several hundred gallon capacity, the outfit looking like John D. may have some real opposition in this territory.

In Collision with a Buggy.

GOOD ROADS A MATTER OF PERSONAL INTEREST.

A short strip of road about a quarter of a mile in length has been built near the Willadean Nurseries and the Sparta Lumber Company by Chas. B. Carver and John F. Donaldson, proprietor of the Willadean Nurseries. Mr. Donaldson and the Sparta Lumber Co., contributed liberally to the building of the road, and in way of donations and also furnished teams for the work. It is thought that with the aid furnished by those who will use the road in the way of labor and teams, the total cost of the quarter of a mile will not be over $50. If all the roads in the county were as good as this small strip we could claim the distinction of having the best roads in the State. It is virtually a macadam road, and will last for years as an excellent thoroughfare. The low cost in actual cash at which it was built only goes to show that the secret of good roads, especially in counties where the road fund is limited or inadequate, lies in the co-operation and aid of the citizen who live along the road where the improvements are made. The same help and co-operation as was noted in the building of this strip of road, if brought into play all over the county, would build just as good roads, as is this macadam road, and will accomplish this desired result at all if the people will respond as they should.

The great trouble experienced in carrying out the plan of support in projects of this nature has always been that every man thought the affair was purely a public one, one in which his part was that of a user and not that of a builder of a road. It is hard for him to view the road and the desirability of its improvement as he would a portion of his farm, where improvement was needed. In other words his view of these things usually goes just as far as his fence which separates his land from the road—and stays there. And of course, adherence to this view of the matter will never build good roads. The average farmer desires good roads, but feels as if he had done his part in the matter when he had paid his taxes. And it is that old feeling of an individual not caring to subscribe his individual labor and means to a public utility that is keeping the roads in their present low state of repair. He feels that the county owns the roads and therefore must maintain them. Where the county is rich in tax revenue as are some which have taxes accruing from big corporations, that view is all right, but where there is nothing of that nature in a county from which the latter can derive the essential revenue, the view is wrong and will never accomplish anything. Good roads will follow as people change their views concerning them, and in this county, at least there will be but slight improvement until that has come. Whether or not it will remain a problem for the next generation to solve remains unseen, but the indications are that it will, unless a radical change is experienced soon, and people, as a rule, are slow to change from old and accepted views.—Warsaw Independent.

Women Should Go to Kansas.

Here are some of the things a woman may legally do in the Sunflower state. Can take back her maiden name after her husband is dead, without any legal process or legislative act. Can keep her own name when she is married. Can persuade her husband to take her name and give up his family name if she does not like it. Can keep her maiden name and her husband can keep his.

Can retain her maiden name for business transactions and use her husband's name for social affairs. If wife does not like either her own name or husband's family name they can change to a name that does suit.

A woman can wear men's clothing without any restriction except that she must not pose a man.

She can vote at every election. She can hold any office in the state and run for congress.—Ex.

MEANS SAVING TO TAXPAYERS

"If such a venture is to be made by the state, a bill should be carefully drawn, after mature consultation with those who have had actual and successful experience in the handling of matters, and before the meeting of the legislature. No half-baked, hastily prepared legislation should be introduced in this connection."

USING CONVICTS ON HIGHWAYS

Many States Have Abolished Contract System of Working the Prisoners

WORK CONVICTS ON ROADS

Kentucky Could Possibly Save From Twenty to Thirty Per Cent of the Money Expended For Road Work if the Public Highways Says Commissioner Terrell.

Frankfort, Ky.—(Special)—R. C. Terrell, Commissioner of Roads, when asked for his view regarding the employment of convicts on the roads of the state, granted the following interview on this subject:

"In recent years the convict labor problem has been one that has been given a great deal of attention, and prison reforms have brought about a study of conditions as they exist, with a view of how they could be bettered, and as a result, most of the States have abolished the contract system of working the prisoners and have established the more modern system of using the convicts on the public highways, and in the prisons for the purpose of preparing material for the highways, and on other public works in the various States. Reports from various Highway Departments over the United States show conclusively that convict labor can be used to an advantage in road building and at a saving of both to the county and State in the cost of labor for this class of work.

"In the biennial report of Mr. T. F. Tynan, Warden of the State Penitentiary of Colorado for the year 1912, it is shown that there was built one hundred and fifty-seven miles of road through the mountain sections of that State, at a saving, according to his estimate, of $223,479.56; that the average cost per day per man for the laborers engaged in this class of work was 32c. He further states that the convicts were able to do the work of not only ordinary laborers, but some were found able to perform the services required of experienced men in drilling, blasting, laying masonry, blacksmithing, and other skilled labor. With such labor commanding a salary of from $2 to $5 per day, this without a doubt, shows that convict labor can be used to advantage on heavy construction work, and in places where more or less permanent camps can be maintained.

"Virginia also has succeeded in this undertaking, as is shown by the results. For the past nine years convicts have been used on the public highways of this State, and Mr. F. St. J. Wilson, former State Highway Commissioner, and now the Assistant Director in the United States Office of Public Roads at Washington, D. C., stated that more than 1,500 men were used on the public highways of Virginia in the year 1912; that from forty to seventy-five were grouped together in a single camp—separate camps being maintained in each county—and that the cost of clothing and feeding them, and general maintenance of the men was 52c per day for a period of three years; that the men were not specially selected, but that the road forces were made up of prisoners as they were presented at the prison; that men who were physically weak, or even cripples, were often sent out as part of the road force. He further states that the contractors who contracted for the work had very frequently offered $1 per day for men furnished by the State.

Under our present system in Kentucky the State receives the magnificent sum of 75c per day per man employed under contract, and the State is required to feed and clothe the prisoners and a great many of the prisoners are let at a lower figure than that stated above.

"Kentucky could possibly save from twenty to thirty per cent of the money expended for road work under the State aid plan, if the convicts could be used on the public highways, and in the preparation of the materials which go into the highways. It would be possible to establish semi-permanent camps in the various counties where limestone is available in large quantities and prepare this material for road building, ready to be delivered by rail or motor truck to roads under construction for use in road construction, and maintain practically the entire season.

"In Edmonson County, Kentucky, there exists an unlimited deposit of rock asphalt, which is a hard sandstone—the finest road building material known—containing from seven to nine per cent of bitumen or asphalt base. This material has an overburden of from ten to twenty feet of sand or rock, and lies in a horizontal strata of from six to twenty feet in thickness. Would it not be a fine thing to establish here a permanent convict camp, where the material could be used in the stripping of this material, quarrying and pulverizing and loading it ready for shipment to the counties of the Commonwealth? The actual cost of production, or even a reasonable per cent of profit could be charged by the State for the material, and at the same time very materially reduce the cost for use in road construction, and in turn to the counties for their limestone, macadam, or other hard surfaced roads, a splendid, long lived, and lasting material, that is dustless, noiseless, durable and at the same time water-proof. Other camps might be established for the purpose of preparing limestone, sandstone, and still others for the manufacture of brick to be used in the surfacing of roads, and a very efficient organization might be had for the placing of concrete roads as is now being used in Illinois, Georgia, and other States where that type of road is being constructed.

"The men become skilled in the performance of their duties, and this, while preparing them for a better existence when they have completed their term, also reduces the possibility of breaking up the organization by men quitting. Another important factor to be considered is the reduction of the cost, the reducing of the cost making it possible for all the counties in the state—not merely the rich counties—but practically all of them, to construct permanent roads. When one stops to consider that there are one hundred and twenty counties in Kentucky, most of them having a road fund ranging from $500 to $5,000, while some have a fund of more than $20,000, it is quite an easy matter to understand the advantage that convict labor would furnish these counties, where funds are limited, in the securing of permanent types of roads.

"The convict labor would not come in competition with free labor, for without it the counties would be compelled to build a cheaper type of road, and in many instances would not be able to build at all, while, with the convict labor, better and more durable roads could be constructed, as well as a more durable type of bridges. Even in the fabrication of steel material for the longer span bridges these could be obtained at a much cheaper figure, with the convict labor, than they could be done by contract.

"In summing up to the counties and to the State, and should not overlook the big advantage to the convict himself—the wholesome out-of-door labor—bettering him, mentally, morally and physically—a much more healthy occupation than that which he would find inside the prison walls."

Southerners Who Wore the Blue

Washington, Oct. 12.—The annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at the national capital the last week of September caused the mind of many to revert to the great war of 1861-65, about which there are some very crude and mistaken notions in the public mind. For example, it is held that the North "put down the rebellion." So it did, with the aid of the South, and is not at all extravagant to say that had there been no Union sentiment at the South "the wayward sisters" would have been allowed to depart in peace," as Horace Greeley advised.

The entire South contributed to the Federal armies 338,327 white soldiers, who on the bloody field of Gettysburg, and many other places, as many like number of combatants who wore the blue. Delaware, a Southern and a slave State, that cast an overwhelming vote against Lincoln in 1860, contributed a greater per cent of her available population to the Federal army than did any New England State. Kentucky, notwithstanding she contributed many thousands of soldiers to the Confederate armies, sent 70,025 to the Union armies, or 41 per cent of her population of military age, whereas New Hampshire gave 54 per cent, and Vermont 58 per cent. Massachusetts, always thrifty, is credited with 53 per cent, many of them negroes recruited at the South.

But it was left to Tennessee to live up to her name, the old "Volunteer State." Isham G. Harris, her great war Governor, the most of the time a fugitive from the State, saw to it that Tennessee's quota in the Southern armies was always full, and yet Tennessee contributed 31,092 white soldiers to the North, and the loyalty of the mountaineers of Tennessee, Kentucky and West Virginia gave the Southern Confederacy great aid, and permitted the scale in the big war. Missouri sent 101,111 soldiers to the Federal armies, Maryland, 50,319, and West Virginia, 22,063. In addition to the tens of thousands they sent South.

Suppose the 338,327 white men had all gone South in the big gray? It is possible the North would have prevailed in the end, but the struggle would have been greatly prolonged, and the chance are that Europe would have interfered to put a stop to it. I got the foregoing data from Col. John Bell Brownlow, of Tennessee, who commanded as fine a regiment of cavalry in the Union army as the war produced, and Col. Brownlow tells me that his congressional district, more soldiers to wear the blue than any other district in the entire Union, though it was also measurably represented in the Confederate army. I have never met a man of a vaster store of accurate knowledge of American political history than John Brownlow. He is a son of the famous Parson Brownlow, one of the colossal figures of that great war, a remarkable man of tremendous force of character, whose moral energy was like that of Luther or of Cromwell. He had in his veins Scotch-Irish blood was a kinsman of Jas. Buchanan and James G. Blaine on one side of the house, and on the other he was connected that that Preston family, the most remarkable for heredity of intellect our country has produced—ahead of the Marshalls, ahead of the Breckinridges—with which it was connected—ahead of the Adamsons, of Massachusetts.

Col. Brownlow relates that in 1862 he was in Cincinnati with his father, and while there Salmon P. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury in Mr. Lincoln's cabinet, visited his home city to confer with prominent men about the conduct of the war. It was immediately after the signal victories won by Lee and Jackson in Virginia and the Secretary was greatly depressed—in fact, he believed it was impossible to carry the war to a successful issue. There came to meet him numerous Congressmen and the Governors of Ohio and Indiana. Parson Brownlow also attended the conference, at which Morton and Brownlow were the only two who were confident of ultimate result. Congressmen and Curley, the man whom "Sunset" Cox had recently covered, all over with ridicule, was present at the meeting and very pessimistic.

The men at the South who favored the Union were giants—Andy Johnson, W. G. Brownlow, Thomas A. R. Nelson, Emerson Etheridge and others. Parson Brownlow also attended the conference, at which Morton and Brownlow were the only two who were confident of ultimate result. Congressmen and Curley, the man whom "Sunset" Cox had recently covered, all over with ridicule, was present at the meeting and very pessimistic.

These men loved the South; but they saw ruin in disunion and resolved not to let the Union. His theory has not yet done them justice, but it will in the final degree. Had there been no Union sentiment among these men, the South would have been no effort to restore the Union by arms.

But the separation would not have been long. Soon the South would have regretted the advantages of the Union. All the border States and North Carolina voluntarily abolished slavery, as they would have done anyhow had the New England anti-slavery society not butted in. When that concern was created the South was full of anti-slavery societies, and the South would have rid itself of the "institution" but for the meddling fanatics of the North.

But it was not to be. The sword was appealed to and about the fiercest war in history was fought to a finish. It was well enough that for that war we would not have known how rich we were. North and South, in the stuff of which magnificent heroes are made.

There is a movement on foot to erect a building for public purposes to be used as a public auditorium and gymnasium, the Walton Graded School and its teachers fostering the movement, and with a liberal subscription it could be easily built as the design is to make it roomy but not very expensive in style.

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Murphy, Dr. M. L. Urner and his mother, and Miss Freda Snider of Cincinnati, were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. B. K. Menefee last Sunday, and all motored over to Gardnersville, Pendleton county, where they enjoyed a big dinner in the woods and gathered a large quantity of hickory nuts, being also handsomely entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McNeill.

The Louisville and Nashville R. R. Company with its customary enterprise is making some fine improvements about the depot by spreading screenings over the ground about the building as to dispose of all mud or pools of water about the premises. The company is also making the necessary arrangements to construct a cement walk from the electric light plant to the street opposite the railroad crossing.

Rev. T. C. Crume, of Latonia, who began a protracted meeting at Walton Baptist church last week, is preaching nightly to a crowded auditorium, and having the best of attention from his large audience. Rev. Crume is an evangelist of strong qualities, his discourses being masterly arguments, delivered in convincing style, and the reasoning carries with it the conviction of the power of the gospel. The meeting will continue until Sunday night.

J. G. Tomlin, Jno. L. Vest, Carl Neumeister, M. Edwards, W. R. Rouse, D. B. Wallace and others were attending the U. S. Court at Covington as witnesses, etc., in the case of Carl Neumeister vs. The Miller Insurance Co., in which he brought suit for the recovery of the amount of insurance on the flour mill destroyed here July 8th, 1914 the policy being for $1,000 which the insurance company refused to pay on technical grounds.

Walton Lodge of Odd-Fellows will have a supper at its hall Saturday night, Oct. 30th, for the benefit of the lodge as it has had such a heavy sick—benefit list that its treasury is depleted and it takes this method of raising some funds. There will be a nice supper, oyster soup, sandwiches, coffee, ice cream, cake, etc., and at reasonable price. The supper will begin at 5:30 so that those desiring to appease their appetites without going home can do so. Help a good cause with your patronage.

John V. Crozer of Upland, Delaware County, Penn., and P. W. Ray of Bowling Green, Ky., were here Tuesday when they purchased the fine three year old mare "Lula Edwards" from W. Lee Gaines for $1,000 cash. The mare is by High Top and is one of the finest ever raised in this section. Mr. Crozer is a wealthy cotton goods manufacturer of Pennsylvania and owns several fine farms and high class live stock of various kinds. Mr. Gaines had several other offers on the mare ranging from $100 to $1,000 and concluded finally to sell to her reluctantly did so, as there was great promise for the mare, and her winning record in previous years the past year was great, and promised to be better next year.

Dr. S. M. Hopkins and wife moved here from Gardnersville, Pendleton county, last week, having purchased the residence and practice of Dr. G. C. Rankins. The latter will remain for 30 days to assist Dr. Hopkins in becoming familiar with his practice and the people with whom he had business relations, and then expects to go to Mason county to take up the practice. Dr. Rankins has many friends here who regret his departure and he carries with him the best wishes for a prosperous and happy future.

Dr. Hopkins and wife are most cordially welcomed to Walton and it is to be hoped that they will be pleased with their new home, and of this there can be hardly any question, as every effort will be made to make their residence here congenial in every respect. Dr. Hopkins is a splendid physician and there is no doubt but what he will have all the practice he can give his attention to, as the tobacco crop is large and his acquaintance very extended.

The meeting of those interested in the establishment of a loose leaf tobacco warehouse at Walton was held here last Saturday and the report made as to the progress of the solicitors of stock. About seven thousand dollars of the ten thousand dollars of the capital stock was subscribed, and next Saturday, October 30th, was named as the next day of meeting when it is expected that enough stock will be subscribed to warrant the work of organization. All who have subscribed and those who are interested in the establishment of the business here are requested to meet at Walton next Saturday, Oct. 30th, at 1:30 p. m., for the purpose of perfecting the organization. At the meeting last Saturday, Hon. G. E. Carroll was named chairman and D. B. Wallace, secretary. Quite a number of speeches were made, among the number being W. T. Hill and J. E. Young of Carrollton, J. G. Tomlin and others. Reports indicated that the market here would have buyers from several of the large manufacturing companies, and D. B. Wallace was commissioned to communicate with them and ascertain what might be expected if a loose leaf market was established here. It was estimated that the territory would furnish as much as three million pounds of tobacco for the market, and as the country here has been virtually put out of business the loose leaf market furnishes by far the best means of market for the tobacco crop. It was also the general opinion that if the warehouse was established that no one connected with it would be permitted to buy a pound of tobacco in the market, and that the fees for the selling, etc., would be made as reasonable as possible so that the grower of the tobacco and the legitimate buyer should have all that would properly be theirs. The men who have the movement in hand are determined that if the business is established here that it will be run fair and square. Come to the next meeting next Saturday.

GOT AWAY WITH GOOD SMOKE

One Visitor at Least Has Credit of Getting the Best of a Broadway Hotel.

In one of the Broadway hotels the clear stand is so near the desk that people frequently go to the wrong place to register. Last night a ruralist from up-state approached the stand. "What are your prices?" he asked the girl. "From 10 to 75 cents." The girl put two boxes of cigars on the show-case and he took a Havana worth a quarter. "Much obliged," he said. "Is it customary to set 'em up to every new guest?" She thought it was one of the commonplace pleasantries men unload on cigar stands. "Oh, yes," she said. "Where's the register?" he asked. "Right here," said the girl, pointing to the cash register. He considered it a pretty good joke and laughed. "But where's the book?" he asked. "I want to put my name down." "You don't have to register when you buy a cigar," said the girl. She couldn't imagine what was wrong with the man. "But I want a room." "Oh," came from the girl as she realized a mistake had been made, "the desk is right over there. This is the cigar stand. Get your room at the desk." As he left she dropped into a chair to laugh. A few minutes later one of the room clerks came to the cigar stand. "What made you tell that man we had rooms here for 10 to 75 cents?" he asked. "He said he'd take a 50-cent one. He's gone away with a bad opinion of us." "That's not the worst of it," said the girl. "He's gone away with one of our 25-cent cigars—free."

MAKING TEST OF FRIENDSHIP

Many Considerations Go to the Composition of a Real Attachment That Endures.

Why do you like your friend? If you answered this question honestly, perhaps you would say, "Because it is too much trouble to stop." The friendship, the intimacy, has become a habit, and it should be as much trouble to break it off as to change the air in our manner of life. This is not mere cynical selfishness. Of course you do like your friend. No friendship endures for long without some sincere regard on both sides.

But what are the causes of the regard? Perhaps a certain similarity of position, in tastes, for, after all, among grown-up persons, friendship cannot be active without some such conditions. You may once have been the dearest friend with somebody who is now much richer or much poorer than you. The affection still endures. But you are not really sincere. It is practically impossible to share each other's interests, the accidents of each other's life.

You may say, if you choose, that friendship is a spiritual thing, an affair of the soul; and that is true, but not all the truth. It is merely playing with words to pretend that people remain friends when they see almost nothing of each other. For friendship, like everything else worth having, is essentially active.

Black Hole of Calcutta.

If the prisoners in the famous Black Hole had been as well informed as modern scientists, there would have been no such death rate as actually occurred. The men died of suffocation and panic. Modern discovery has shown that air can support life if it is kept in motion, even though it has but a small amount of oxygen in it.

If the prisoners in the notorious dungeon had therefore formed in a mass and revolved round and round at a pace that would have been sufficient to keep up, not only would the contained air have been stirred up, but each man on the outside of the revolving mass would have had his face presented periodically to a small window.

In fact, in the light of recent discovery, the same incarceration could now take place without the loss of a single life; that is, provided the men were reasonably strong and healthy.

Honesty of Millers.

The revelations as to the huge profits made by certain millers recall the belief prevalent so far back as the days of Chaucer that this trade lends itself to sharp practices. This belief is illustrated by an epitaph in the churchyard of Great Gaddesden, Hertfordshire, England, commemorating "Mr. Thomas Cook, late of Noak mill, in this parish, who departed this life December 8, 1850, aged seventy-seven years. He was a poor, honest and tender father, and an honest man, although a miller." Even more pointed is an inscription copied by an eighteenth-century diarist from a tombstone at Calne:

"God works wonders now and then: Here lies a miller—an honest man."

The Farthing Is Mighty.

The significance of the farthing (half cent), which is being driven home to us by increasing prices, has always been clearly realized by the big men of finance. Grant Duff records how the late Lord Rothschild, when someone expressed contempt of the difference of a farthing in the value of certain gold coins, quietly remarked, "This young man has evidently no experience of large financial transactions." W. H. Smith, too, the founder of the famous bookshops, knew the value of the despised coin. When a customer spoke of striking the odd farthings off his accounts, he told him, "Sir, this business has been built up on farthings."—London Chronicle.

DAIRY

BREEDING FOR MILK SUPPLY

Breeds Improve the Thing for Which They Are Selected—Germany Makes Increase in Yield.

Cattle used to be bred chiefly for work. Therefore the cows did not give much milk. Breeds improve the things for which they are selected. If cows are used for stepladders we should by this time have them seven feet high.

In 1730 the work cows of Germany gave an average of a pint and a half a day. Interest in milk increased, and by 1800 the average yield was a quart and a half. Breeding went on milk-room clerks came to the cigar stand.

What made you tell that man we had rooms here for 10 to 75 cents?" he asked. "He said he'd take a 50-cent one. He's gone away with a bad opinion of us." "That's not the worst of it," said the girl. "He's gone away with one of our 25-cent cigars—free."

Breeds Standing at the Front in This Country Are Holstein, Jersey, Guernsey and Ayrshire.

In choosing the sire choose one from any dairy breed which may be preferred. The straight dairy breeds that stand in the front in this country are the Holstein, Jersey, Ayrshire and Guernsey. There are other good dairy breeds but these are the four oldest and best of all. The choice being made do not change the breed from which the sire is chosen and exercise great care in choosing the sire.

The individual points of a good dairy sire cannot be given in detail here, but two of these will be mentioned, because they are in a sense, indispensable. The first is the evidences of muscularity and bodily vigor. The second is, an amplitude of soft skin on the underline in front of the testicles, distinctly traceable milk veins and miniature tests of good size and wide spacing. The performance of the ancestry of the bull should be examined. The more good performers in the upward line of ancestry the better. Good performance on the part of ancestral dams means the giving of large quantities of milk rich in quality and persistence in milk giving for a long period.

The successive sires should be chosen from the same breed. If chosen from another breed disturbing factors are inevitable. This may not be apparent at the first, but it will later. The antagonism likely to result cannot be explained here. By adhering to this line of breeding the improvement should be rapid and continuous at least for several generations, but the improvement will be less noticeable with each succeeding generation.

CEMENT FLOORS FOR STABLE

Gutters Should Be Laid First With Slight Fall on One End—Use Wooden Trowel for Finishing.

When laying cement floors, gutters should be laid first with a slight fall to one end. These should be 4 to 6 inches deep and 15 to 18 inches wide. The distance from gutter to stanchion should be about 4 feet 6 inches for ordinary cows. Large cows may need 4 feet 10 inches or 5 feet, while heifers require only a 4-foot stall.

The floor should slope to the gutter from each side. The passage behind the cows should be at least 8 feet wide to allow cows to pass without crowding. The floor should be finished with a wooden trowel rather than a steel one as the latter makes a smooth, slippery finish that when wet is very difficult for the cows to walk on safely.

If drains are to be laid to carry off the liquid manure or the water used in washing the floors, they must be put in before the floor is laid.

TEST ALL THE DAIRY COWS

Wise Move for Farmer to Send Unprofitable Animals to Butcher—Many Are "Merely" Boreders.

If a cow is not well qualified for dairy purposes it does not pay to keep her for dairy purposes. There is economy in testing all the members of dairy herds and sending the unprofitable cows to the butcher.

Farmer in San Joaquin county, Cal., have organized for this purpose. Farm Adviser Lyons, who is directing the efforts of the organization, says: "The movement is one that means a great saving to farmers, and it is bound to spread over the entire state. It will probably be found that 20 and 25 per cent of the cows in the average herd are not paying for their keep. The dairyman will make money by selling these cows for beef."

Vaseline Is Beneficial.

Milkers who have difficulty milking dry should rub a little vaseline on their hands. This practice is not a filthy one, as wetting the teats, but has a beneficial effect upon them.

No Best Dairy Breed.

No dairy breed has a monopoly on all the good dairy cows. With the present high development of the various breed associations all the breeds have excellent stock.

Tuberculosis in Kentucky. Consumption is the most common and fatal disease with which the people of Kentucky are afflicted. It produces more than twice as many deaths as any other disease, causing one death out of every seven in this state. Our reports show that within the past two years there have been about 18,000 cases of consumption under treatment by the doctors of Kentucky and that 9,507 deaths have occurred from this dread disease, the death rate being 33 per cent. Of more serious import is it that 10 per cent, surviving will furnish the death lists for the next biennial report, unless the present propaganda on the subject shall produce some results.

Toll Is Great.

More deaths are caused by tuberculosis in Lexington than in any other city of its size in the country, says a declaration made by Col. L. M. Maus, Medical Corps, U. S. A., retired, and now in charge of the State Tuberculosis Association, who was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Fayette County Medical Association. He said that tuberculosis caused one death out of every six in Lexington while one out of each nine is the record in other cities of this size; that out of each 1,000 deaths in the state of Kentucky, 166 are caused by tuberculosis, a nd that in contrast to this the aggregate of all the beds in the state hospitals set aside for consumptives was only 210. He said that in Louisville alone 900 persons are on the waiting list to occupy these places in the state's sanatoriums.

Erect Sanatoria.

Col. L. M. Maus, secretary of the tuberculosis commission, said that it is hoped that within the next few years Kentucky will build one or more properly equipped sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis. He said the treatment has become a special science, requiring properly equipped environments, careful nursing and nourishment, pleasant surroundings and rest. There are too often lacking in small and imperfectly equipped institutions, where the watchful care of the patients is not constant.

Co-operate With Physicians.

Assuming charge of the office of the state tuberculosis commission Col. L. M. Maus, the newly elected secretary of the commission, said that he hopes to cooperate with physicians and health officers in the state in the eradication of this plague.

As soon as possible he expects to have the name of every person suffering from tuberculosis in the state listed in his office. The rich and moderately wealthy persons suffering from this trouble will be cared for by their own people. The state will be interested in caring for the indigent consumptives.

Jessamine Journal.

One great cause Colonel Maus in leaflet for W. C. T. U. has said:

Tuberculosis is a common result of parental intemperance and is far more common in drinking communities than in abstemious territory. We frequently find the children of the intemperate afflicted with hip joint disease, spinal affections, enlarged joints, enlarged enlargements, and scrofula, besides the active form of pulmonary tuberculosis. The International Congress on Tuberculosis which met in Paris in 1906, passed the following resolution: "That in view of the close connection between alcoholism and tuberculosis, the congress strongly emphasizes the importance of continuing the fight against tuberculosis with the struggle against alcohol."

How much longer will the parents and taxpayers of Kentucky be more willing to pay for sanatoria, hospitals, asylums and 100 dentists' bills than to prohibit the manufacture and sale of liquor? The State Board of Health has just voted to create a "Woman's Club of Kentucky" to prevent the manufacture and sale of liquor by teaching cleanliness and sanitation to the women of the state. T. J. is a most able assistant in teaching the effects of alcohol on the human body. Why are not more Christians women ready to assist Mr. Hugh S. Fullerton, a baseball expert, is reported to have made an extended observation concerning the relation between intemperance and the national game. It is said that he selected from among the players of the major league in 1904 the names of thirty men who were moderate drinkers and 30 who were abstemious. He kept track of these men for the past 10 years, and in the year 1912, 1913 and 1914, there were only two of the original 30 drinking men who were still playing fast ball, and there were 29 of the abstemious men still playing. In another table Mr. Fullerton shows that the non-drinkers have prospered in a ratio of 100 to 1 compared to the drinking players.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Caion, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Belle Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

Silo a Good Investment.

Last year the man who owned a silo congratulated himself because his big kraut barrel enabled him to use every vestige of the drouth stricken corn crop. This year he is just as thankful, but for quite another reason. Once safely in the silo the corn crop is in no danger from frost and every ounce of feeding value is saved. Of course it is poor policy to silo immature corn, but it can safely be stored away long before killing frost. Wet or dry the silo is always on the job. It is a genuine safety deposit vault that will not lose the value of every farm. While many persons consider the silo chiefly an asset for the dairy farmer some of its most enthusiastic supporters can be found among the cattle feeders. While there seems to be a diversity of opinion in regard to the fast producing value of silage all admit that it is mighty good ration to feed along with grain. Then, too, we find men on the larger farms, who keep a small herd of work mules or horses, feeding silage profitably even where few cattle are kept. In fact, there are few Missouri farmers but would find money spent for a silo a profitable investment. That's the opinion of the Missourians who own silos not ours alone.—Missouri Ruralist.

MAKING PROGRESS

THESE happy, healthy looking children were sent to this open air school in Louisville a little time ago because they were run down and anaemic. Warmly clothed and provided with special diet, they do their school tasks in a room with the windows wide open, so that the wind can blow over them. Without exception these children make rapid progress in school and improve in health almost beyond belief.

Shacks For Consumptives at Western Kentucky Asylum For the Insane

At the state asylum for the insane at Hopkinsville it was found some years ago that many of the patients were afflicted with consumption. The authorities consequently built two groups of buildings to accommodate the consumptive cases.

A central building, to provide a dining room, bathrooms, etc., was surrounded by groups of shacks, each having beds for three patients. The lower fourth of each side of the shacks was boarded up, and the section above was formed of canvas stretched over frames. These canvas screens were made in sections fastened at the top with hinges, so that any side might be opened to admit the fresh air and sunlight.

Dr. H. P. Sights, superintendent of the hospital, states that the death rate at the asylum has been decreased 40 per cent by the use of these buildings for the consumptives, and that many of the consumptives have been returned to the main building restored and some have been sent home restored both physically and mentally.

The two groups of buildings, accommodating fifty-six patients, were built for less than $8,000. Dr. Sights says further: "I think every county in the state should have a tuberculosis colony, and the county officials, who will take the time to look into the benefit offered their citizens, would not hesitate to take steps at once to establish such a colony, and do the greatest service possible for them to do with the amount invested. It will not be an experiment, as this state institution, with its limited funds, demonstrated fully the wisdom and economy of the project."

A SIMPLE SLEEPING PORCH

WHEN you build your new home plan to have a sleeping porch. If you do not like hot summer nights and stuffy winter nights indoors, build a sleeping porch like the one above on your present home. Place it in an angle so as to avoid drafts. The southeast or southwest side of the house is best.

The sides should be boarded up three or four feet to insure privacy and a reasonable freedom from drafts. The upper part should be covered with wire netting. Outside the netting hang canvas strips that can be raised or lowered from the inside.

A porch of this sort can be made for from $50 to $100, depending on the kind of finish and material used.

Starting the Day Right

THE first exercise of the day at this open air school for the treatment of anaemic children in Louisville is a cold shower bath. The bath lasts only a few seconds and is followed by a quick, hard rub with a coarse towel, so that the blood is brought again to the surface. The cold bath hardens any one so that an exposure to cold air and drafts is no longer dangerous. In addition the quick, cold bath sends each child to the school-room happy and alert for the duties of the day.

At the Dispensary

IN a number of cities in the state there are dispensaries where those who do not feel well may go for an accurate medical inspection. These dispensaries are maintained particularly to afford facilities for the examination of consumptives or those who suspect themselves of having tuberculosis. The visiting nurses in their rounds of the city direct rundown people to the dispensary for examination by the physicians.

The first step in the examination is to take the height and weight of the patient and to learn many other simple facts about the case. This work is done by the nurse, and the physician then makes a careful examination of the case. Where tuberculosis is found the patient is induced to return at regular intervals to the dispensary, and the nurses visit the patients as often as possible in their homes.

A dispensary at every county seat in Kentucky affording facilities for the careful examination of suspected consumptives under the supervision of experienced physicians and nurses would result in the discovery of thousands of cases at the early stage, when, with proper treatment, they could be restored to a reasonable degree of health. Consumptives ordinarily do not go to the physician till they are too far advanced for successful treatment. Consequently there should be visiting nurses in every county to search out the sick in their homes and bring them in touch with the physicians, either in dispensaries or at the doctor's office. About 5,000 Kentuckians die annually of tuberculosis. Not a single one of these deaths is necessary. But this death rate will keep up until there are proper provisions for finding consumptives in the early stage of the disease, and the dispensary, the visiting nurse and the health officer, who go out and look for the sick, comprise the most successful organization for the discovery and prevention of tuberculosis.

Why Not Sleep In the Open Air?

ALMOST every one who wishes it may have a sleeping porch. One may be built over the veranda of the home. If this situation is not suitable, two heavy poles and some cleats against the side of a house will support the platform for the bed. If it is not convenient to make over the bedroom window into a door, the bed may be put right close to the window, and you can crawl through the window into the bed.

Fresh air is the most important thing in the treatment of tuberculosis. Consumptives all over the country are building sleeping porches so that they may sleep out of doors.

If fresh air is good for sick people it must also be good for healthy people. Those who have tried sleeping in the open-air sleeping porches say they have never rested so well. Those who get up every morning in winter with headaches and feel generally out of sorts will always find that open windows in sleeping rooms will prevent that sort of feeling. Sleeping right out of doors on a porch is even better.

When you build your home plan for an open air sleeping porch just as you would for a kitchen. If you want one now, don't hold back thinking it will cost a large sum of money. This one was built for $20.

Build a porch where it will be protected from strong winds. It is also a good plan to provide it with curtains to keep out the rain and sun.

Help For Consumptives.

The State Tuberculosis Commission, Frankfort, Ky., will send to any physician, health officer or consumptive family, on request, a free copy of its new booklet on the home care of tuberculosis. This authoritative pamphlet is designed to aid and not supplant the physician. Its chapter on diet will prove especially helpful.

Children at an Open Air School

LOUISVILLE has a school for those anaemic, rundown children who are ordinarily subject to every form of disease. Such children are greatly retarded in school, not only through their poor physical condition, but also through frequent loss of time on account of sickness. Among those children also the germs of tuberculosis may later find good soil.

This picture shows the warm suits and caps provided for the children, who are kept all day long in the open air. Windows on both sides of the school-room are kept continually open.

At noon the children are given a substantial meal at the school and then rest on cots for about an hour.

Experience in Louisville and throughout the country shows that this combination of fresh air, nourishing food and rest under the supervision of a physician and a visiting nurse will produce remarkable results. The children uniformly show increased weight, better color, better spirits and greater activity. The school work is made subordinate to the care of the children's health, yet with fewer hours of instruction each day they make progress equal to that of normal children in the typical schoolroom. If fresh air is good for sick children it must also be good for healthy children. The day is coming, according to Dr. Landis of Cincinnati, when every schoolroom will be an open air room.

You visit the pen you keep your pigs in, but do you visit the school to which you send your children? Do you really know whether it is clean and well ventilated? Does it have good water and clean closets? If your school is not clean and well ventilated, protest to the teachers and trustees till the faults are remedied.

The Recorder's report as to the result of the election in the State was received from Louisville at 8 a. m. on Wednesday morning.

The local Democrats retired about midnight Tuesday night in doubt as to the result in the State.

It is not good politics on the part of party leaders to tell voters that a victory will be overwhelming when they know better. Such declarations beget apathy. Many of the Democrats in Boone were too busy to go to the election Tuesday, and some of the Republicans were detained at home for the same reason.

Every member of the local K. of P. Lodge is requested to be present at the meeting next Saturday night.

Besides her husband she leaves four children, viz: Mrs. D. O. Hudson, Mrs. J. W. Rankin, Mrs. Scott Smith and Grover C. Ransom to mourn her death; also seventeen grandchildren. She fell asleep in the arms of her Saviour at 4 o'clock p. m., Wednesday Oct. 20th, at the age of 73 years and nine months. BASKET BALL.

Burlington School Takes Both Games From Union High School.

On last Friday afternoon the basketball teams representing the Union High School were defeated by the boys and girls of the Burlington High School at Burlington in two fast and exciting games. The score in the girls game being 12 to 4, and boys score 31 to 11. The Union girls have been defeated in three games by the Burlington girls while the Union boys took the first game by a close score and Burlington the last two.

Basket ball is a clean, wholesome game and about as interesting as any school game that has ever been played. Team work is what counts and plenty of practice is necessary for the development of a good team. It is hoped that the people will learn the game as they have base ball and give it their hearty support.

For the girls Norma McGlasson, of Burlington, was the bright star, getting three pretty field goals and getting into nearly every play. Atha Eddins was the second, scoring two field and two foul goals. For the boys, Frank Milner, of Burlington, and Conner, of Union, starred. Milner scored the 31 points for Burlington, while Conner got 8 of the 11 for Union. But every member of the teams played hard and did their best to bring victory their schools.

Next Friday Burlington will play the Erlanger teams at Burlington, and good games are expected.

Following is the lineup and summary of the games:

Jonas McKenzie, our clever merchant, has a small yellow dog that answers all the purposes of a dinner bell or clock. Every day at 11:30 a. m. if his master has not started to dinner, the dog begins barking and starts toward home, looking back and waits to be followed. The same thing occurs when supper time arrives.—Mt. Vernon Signal.

Mr. J. N. Baker, one of the proprietors of Baker's Clean Grocery has gathered and measured ninety-five bushels of corn off one acre of ground. A few ears of this corn is on exhibition at the institute and shows for itself its perfectness in both size and shape. Besides the corn of this crop, Mr. Baker has raised a good crop of wheat and proved to his own satisfaction that there is money in raising wheat as well as in corn.—Hancock Clarion.

A very unusual occurrence came under our observation Friday last week when a valuable cow belonging to John M. Perkins, Jr., directed her tongue in quest of provender from a small opening in the stock barn and suffered the member to be bitten entirely off by a mule which was feasting on the manger. C. W. Suther land, the veterinarian, was called, and realizing that the bovine's life would be of short and painful duration, ordered it killed.—Mayfield Messenger.

While making excavations in the rear of the W. H. Northcutt building, occupied by the McDonald Company, at the old "Northcutt corner," workmen dug up an old silver spoon, which was covered with ashes and it was doubtless buried in the fire which destroyed the hotel at that corner in 1850. At the same time the court house was destroyed. The fire killed a number of children in the rear of the old hotel, which was built by the late C. A. Webster. The spoon is of an old-fashioned design, hammered out by hand. Mr. Northcutt values it as a relic connected with the history of the old corner.—Cynthiana Log Cabin.

 TOBACCO NOTES. *****

The new crop of tobacco coming into Mayfield rather rapidly for the early part of the season. The weed so far has been selling on the streets at from $150 to $6 a hundred and two dollars for hogs.

Tobacco stripping still continues in Montgomery county, and the quality is showing up better than expected, although there will be a considerable amount of low grades. Heavy fogs here have not done the tobacco any good with in the last week. There will be an abundance of tobacco stripped by November 20.

The new crop in McCracken county is all house d and cured, and from the best information we can gather, to take same as a whole, it is rather light in body, medium or short in length. Colors are very good, mostly brown or dark. Of course, there is a small per cent of this crop with length running from 26 to 28 inches and upwards. This percentage will be small.

With the exception of the lack of color and perhaps too much body in a good proportion of the crop, the crop of Virginia regarded by most buyers as one of the best crops in point of quality that has been marketed in many years. The tobacco is ripe, sweet and of silky texture. But color, which is so desirable an element, is conspicuously absent. The proportion of rough, coarse leaves is small. The quality in the common grades. The scarcity of brights and the preponderance of the darker grades have naturally made prices higher in the former and lower in the latter, as compared with last season.

Sidney Gaines, circuit judge-elect, has a conscience that permits him to sleep well. His residence is not to exceed 100 yards from the scene of last Sunday night's fire, and he slept through all the attendant confusion and knew nothing about the fire until he came into town Monday morning. At times showers of sparks fell about his house, and so quiet did he sleep that all thought he was not at home.

We extend thanks to our neighbors and friends, of Switzerland and Boone counties for their kindness in sending the brief illness and death of our father, Leicester Nichols; also to R. A. Steele, of Rising Sun for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral. The Children.

GOOD ROADS

AGITATION FOR GOOD ROADS

Less Being Said About Betterment of Public Highways Than Two or Three Years Previously.

What has become of the wide-spread good-roads agitation of two and three years ago? Is it dying down and giving way to something else? Have our roads been improved to such an extent that we can let up on the campaign that swept back and forth across the country or are we simply getting tired of it and somewhat indifferent about it?

There is no doubt in my mind that less is being said about the necessity for bettering our roads than was said two and three and four years back, writes S. C. Varnum in Farm Progress. I must confess that in the three states I have visited within the last six months I have seen nothing to convince me that we are even approaching the good roads millennium. I believe there is more work being done in some communities than was done a few years back, but in others there is little or no change. In some neighborhoods I am sure there has been a let-up in the work since the crusade started to die down.

It turns back upon the proposition that what is everybody's business is nobody's business. We have a spasm of the good roads fever and then our attention is gradually taken up by something else. We begin to neglect our part of dragging the roads and cease to donate work or money to the upkeep of the highways. We leave it to the road bosses or overseers and they are busy men, busy looking after their own private affairs, and the whole movement slows up.

Before we have anything approaching really good roads all over the country the machinery for looking after the roads will have to be created. A county highway engineer is needed, but we need something more. One man cannot look after all the highways, brick, stone, concrete, macadam and dirt, of any fair-sized county. We cannot keep up our roads without an organization to keep them all the time. Nor can we build them without putting more money into them and then following this with more money. Those of us who believe the Federal government ought to build all our highways will wait long and weary time if they wait till the government puts in the permanent roadways.

We are making a great mistake if we permit the good roads movement to die. Rural credit is an important thing, better schools and better churches are needed and better farming and marketing arrangements are of great importance, but the good roads problem will have to be partially solved before we can get the right answer to many others.

At every farmers' club and grange meeting, institute and fair this year the subject should be brought up and kept up. This fall we ought to get back into the battle once more, even if it is an old struggle. We may know all about the statistics which bad roads cost us yearly, but possibly the other fellow don't, or if he did know, has forgotten. Most of our movements have to be worked out and planned for in the winter, and we must see what can be done during the coming autumn and winter for better roads.

In the meantime we can drag and work and do a little missionary duty. Keep the road drag going every hour this summer when it is needed and when you can spare the time.

Commands Attention.
It is again the time of year when the subject of good roads commands practical as well as theoretical attention.

Greatest Chasm.
The greatest chasm between the producer and the consumer is the mud-hole.

Increase Farm Value.
A paved road leading to or past your farm ought to increase its value from $10 to $25 per acre.

LANDS

GIVE PEOPLE GREATER POWER

The people of Kentucky are interested, deeply interested, in education, as is shown by the advance made in the last ten years. The people want this development and advancement to be of a strong and lasting type, but this cannot be accomplished either rapidly or consistently so long as the school system remains in politics. Every good citizen and parent in this state wants the management of their child's educational advantages divorced from politics.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction is a constitutional officer and must be elected at a regular election of state officers, and he can not succeed himself. To make this a little plainer, it might be well to state that the name Superintendent of Public Instruction is one of the many names on the ballot, and interest in the election is centered, not on him, but upon the head of the ticket. Frequently a state ticket is elected on a big public issue, absolutely foreign to school matters, and the result is the Superintendent of Public Instruction goes into office, not as a school man, but as part of a successful party ticket.

No business could be carried on with thorough success if the general public knew that at the end of four years he must give up his position to a new and untried man, no matter what progress he was making. This is exactly what the state is now doing with its important business, the business of manufacturing strong citizens out of the raw material of childhood.

It is proposed to amend the Constitution of the state by striking from Sections 91, 93 and 95 of the Constitution the words "Superintendent of the Public Instruction."

The objects to be accomplished by this amendment are to enable the people of this state to take the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction out of politics and to continue in office for a longer period than four years any Superintendent whose conduct of the office is highly efficient.

Under the operation of the Constitution, which compels the election of Superintendent of Public Instruction for a term of four years, and which makes this officer ineligible to succeed himself, the people are prevented from eliminating the office from politics and prohibited from retaining in office an efficient officer.

The public, in urging this change, should bear in mind the fact that even with the quickest action possible under the law this amendment would not be effective until the candidate elected next August will have served his full term, so that no complications or ill feeling need be developed.

SKIMMED THE CREAM CLOSE

"Has anybody heard the latest news about the Newtons?" inquired Mrs. Jones as the Ladies' Aid Society of the Deer Run Church adjourned its regular monthly meeting.

"Why no, Mr. Newton ain't sick again, is he?" asked Mrs. Smith.

"Oh, no; he's all right again. In fact, he's passed our farm twice lately on his way to town," continued Mrs. Jones.

"The news I was referring to was that I heard it might be straight that the whole family's going to move to Louisville."

"Well I never. What's taking them to Louisville? Why I supposed they'd always live in this neighborhood. It was only year before last that Mr. Newton had that big old fashioned house done over from top to bottom and water an' gas put in."

"It's the children that's taking them. You see Nellie'll be fourteen this winter and she'll finish the eighth grade by Christmas. She naturally wants to go to High School. And then there's Henry, the next one; he wants to get ready to go to the State University, so there you are."

"Well I never. Look here, what're we going to do I'd like to know. If this keeps up it won't be very long until we won't have any children worth mentioning in our school, and we won't have many strong members left in our church, and no neighborhood that's fit to live in either. The Newtons ain't the first family that's left here and gone to Louisville to educate their children."

"Well I should say they ain't. I can't count the people that have left here in the last five years on the fingers of both my hands. And those that have left were the best we had, too."

"Looks to me like the people in big cities have shown a lot of sense in building big schools and making them attractive. If the cities have taken the same number of fine people out of every neighborhood in the State of Kentucky that they have out of this little neighborhood, they've about skimmed the cream pretty close."

"But what can we do?"

"Why can't we have good schools?"

"But schools cost money."

"Of course they do. If the big cities can get our best people to leave comfortable farms and homes, it must be a paying proposition. If it is why can't we do the same thing?"

"Why a big school would cost the neighborhood several thousand dollars a year."

"Well, suppose it did. If the ten families that have left here in the five years could have been kept here happy and prosperous, wouldn't it pay?"

"Yes, I reckon it would, because I heard my husband say that every time one of these fine families left, the neighborhood was that much poorer. He said it meant a lot of money gone, because these men rented their farms and spent the money they got in the big cities."

"You can say what you please, we're never going to have a fine neighborhood until we have real country schools."

"Yes, and now that you've quoted your husband, I'm going to quote mine. He said last night that we can do a tremendous amount of good improving our own schools, but that we should also move Heaven and earth to get our whole school system out of politics."

"Good; you tell him we are all with him in that, too. Good-bye."

To Increase the Army and Navy

There is a move being made to increase our navy and army. Why? Because of a terrible cry being sent up by the critics of Woodrow Wilson and the howl made by those who are directly interested in the manufacture of war and naval supplies. What nation today, is willing, to make war upon Uncle Sam? None, and it will be fifty years before they are able, if then. When the present great struggle in the east is over, what nation will be able to even amass an army? Can they raise soldiers from their graves or build up armies from the dead. Not so. Then why should the United States prepare for war? One reason alone appears, and to satisfy the critics and howlers of today.

Better set apart ten million dollars each for the forty-eight states of the American union with which to build good roads to build up our nation with this much money added to the state aid fund, boulevards could be built on all public thoroughfares and the people of the 'U. S. would be the proudest and happiest in the world and when the tocsin of war was sounded to repel an invading foe, the yeomanry of the country would arise from the hills and dales with a Spartan courage and determination that no army of paid hireling would dare to withstand. Give us roads, give us international improvement, give us a country that will cause her people to love her with an adoration that will be a stronger defense than a wall of soldiers. A billion dollars spent in roads in the United States will add millions more to each state in the wealth of the farms and will save millions in the wear and tear of machinery and the cost of transportation of crops to market and etc. when billions are spent upon battle ships will be wealth destroyed forever for they will be antiquated and if this were not so a total loss besides the investment would never produce even if it could be pronounced sane or safe. Every Senator and Congressman should be written to and asked to vote against all large appropriation for armies or navies and instead of voting for these they should be asked to vote for national aid for our roads.—Owen County Democrat.

Carlisle, Ky.—Tobacco speculators have been in Nicholas county offering to buy crops. It is reported that T. L. Jones, who resides on the Mayville pike, received an offer of an average of $12.50 per 100 pounds for his crop, which the grower refused. The offer was made by a buyer from Robertson county. The growers are encouraged over the outlook.

Keep a watch on your words, my children. For words are wonderful things. They are sweet like the best fresh honey, like the bees they have terrible stings.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

Everybody who has a garden should raise a few pepper plants to supply the table with the appetizing flavor in salads and made dishes.

Stuffed Peppers With Egg—Parboil six fresh green peppers for five minutes, after cutting off the stem and removing the seeds and white fiber. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a hot frying pan and add one finely chopped onion and let it cook slowly for ten minutes; then stir in three tablespoonfuls of fine bread crumbs, salt and pepper to season, with a little catchup. Drain the peppers and set them up in gem pans to hold their upright position. Into each put a tablespoonful of the mixture, then break in an egg, cover with more of the prepared crumbs and bake until the eggs are set.

Sausage With Banana—Select sound ripe bananas and pork sausages in the link. Cut the sausage apart, prick them and place them in a saucepan with water enough to parboil, leaving the saucepan uncovered; the water boils away and the sausage then begins to fry. When the sausages are done remove to a hot platter, take out some of the fat and to the remainder add the bananas, cut in half lengthwise and dredged with flour, fry to a golden brown and serve on the platter with the sausage.

German Coffee Cake—Take two cupfuls of soft bread spread that has become light, add a half cupful of warm milk, a little salt, a fourth of a cupful of melted butter, two eggs, well-beaten and three-fourths of a cupful of sugar. Add half a grated nutmeg, some raisins or currants and as much warmed flour as can be stirred in with a spoon. Put into a greased tin and let rise. When very light, moisten top with milk, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake in a slow oven 40 minutes.

Cheese and Nut Sandwiches—Mix together equal parts of grated cheese and pounded almonds, add whipped cream or mayonnaise dressing to make it creamy to spread.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

It is enough for a man to understand his own business, and not to interfere with other people's.

It has been abundantly proved that when food is enjoyed the digestive fluids are supplied more freely to the stomach and intestine.

FRUITS AS MEDICINE.

The more we learn about our diet and how valuable fruits are, rather than drugs, to keep us in health, the less we will need to employ drugs to relieve distress.

The modern tendency seems to be swinging toward the elimination of drugs and medicines entirely, but we still find them efficacious in time of need, yet the future generations, if taught to follow right living, may have no need of them.

The fresh fruits, such as oranges, grapefruit, apples and seasonal berries, are most wholesome when taken at an early breakfast.

Bananas are more heavy, containing starch, and should never be given to a young child without baking.

Fruits in moderate quantities do not exert medicinal effects, but they encourage the natural processes by which the remedial effects are brought about.

Lemonade is a cooling and refreshing drink in hot weather, and especially agreeable in time of fever. The danger of too much acid or too sweet lemonade is one which will cause trouble if taken too frequently.

Lemon juice is valuable as a complexion beautifier, as it whitens and softens the skin. Lemon also applied to corns often enough will soften and remove them, taking away the soreness and making them endureable even before they are cured. Blind on a piece of lemon, peeling side up, to the foot at night.

Raisins and figs split open are a relief to a boil or ulcer. A split raisin with a pinch of red pepper put into it and applied to the gum of an aching tooth will generally bring quick relief. A hot raisin put into the ear for earache is another old-fashioned and good remedy.

Raisins taken on a journey have saved many from car sickness. They should be thoroughly masticated, as the skins are hard to digest. The raisin is high in food value and will make a good lunch, both sustaining and agreeable.

COW TESTING HELPS FARMER

Members of Associations Enabled to Hire Tester to Keep Records—Expense Is Not Great.

(By PROF. OSCAR ERF, Ohio State University.)

Year after year many farmers milk cows that do not pay for the feed they eat. Cow testing associations assist the farmer in finding out those cows that cost him money to keep and those that are making money for him. Some cows start their lactation period with a heavy milk flow, but soon drop to an ordinary flow. Other cows give a more regular flow throughout the year. At the end of the year the latter cows will have probably produced the most milk, but the farmer very often will consider the cows that started well the most profitable. The main purpose of cow testing associations is to enable the members to hire a tester to keep records which, in practice, it is almost impossible for farmers to keep for themselves. Another feature of the tester's work is to work out for the farmers the most economical rations for their herds. The expense to the members of the association will be $1.50 per year for each cow in their herds.

To many farmers it may seem unnecessary to hire a man to do work which they are perfectly capable of doing. Many farmers are unquestionably able to do this work, but it is unlikely that, during the pressure of farm work, they will do it. Experience has made the tester rapid and accurate. He has at his finger ends the strength of the acid he uses, the amount to charge for roughage and concentrated feeds, and the analysis of the common feeds. It will take the average farmer some time to become familiar enough with the things to do the work as well as the tester.

Not only do the tester's records show which cows make or lose money for their owners, but they show to what extent each cow is profitable and what kind of feed at the prevailing price produces the most economic returns.

ATTACHMENT ON COW'S TAIL

Prevents Introduction of Dirt, Dust and the Like Into Pail During Milking Operation.

The Scientific American in describing a cow's tail holder, invented by E. Quick of Trinidad, Colo., says: The main object of the invention is to prevent the introduction of dirt and animal matter into the milk pail. The animal may not switch its tail in an effort to rid itself of insects, such as flies, mosquitoes, gnats, etc. It is well known that cows switch their tails continually, either to brush off insects, or from a nervous habit, and this tends to brush foreign matter, such as dirt, dust, and the like into the pail during milking, particularly when the tail is filled with the filth of the yard or pasture. The invention prevents such milk contamination.

Foundation for Separator.

A good, solid foundation is very essential to the smooth running of a separator, to be sure, but the separator must not be bolted down solid to the foundation. Just simply screw it down tight and level, care being taken not to have it down too tight.

Feeding the Dairy Cow.

When feeding the dairy cow remember that she cannot do two things with the same feed—that is, she cannot make beef and milk at the same time.

DAIRY NOTES

A good cow can be raised cheaper than she can be purchased.

If the mother is worth keeping the calf should be worth raising.

Use the Babcock test and know the good cows from the poor ones.

Keep the cream as near 60 degrees as possible while waiting for the churn.

If a patron will not dairy in a business way, is it surprising he finds no money in it?

Every heifer should have a chance to prove her worth in the dairy before being slaughtered.

Every purebred cow does not make money. Keep records and see if every one of your cows pays for its keep.

"Catching" Tuberculosis, or Infection.

TO the man who works for his living, falling sick with tuberculosis means a very real danger not only to his own life but to the lives of his wife and children as well. His wealthier neighbor may lay aside his routine cares and "take the cure" for tuberculosis without materially affecting his family's health or income. The consumptive workman, on the other hand, must give up his job and with it his only income, and at the same time he is frequently compelled to remain at home, a constant source of danger to his family, unless he is properly instructed. It may save you who read this article considerable money and suffering if you learn from it how to avoid the entrance of tuberculosis into your body.

Tuberculosis is infectious and communicable from one person to another. It differs in some respects from scarlet fever, measles, or smallpox, so-called "contagious" diseases, in that tuberculosis requires repeated exposures and certain special conditions to pass the germs from the sick to the well. It is not inherited, but must be communicated through one of the following sources from one person to another:

(1) The infection is derived in the very large majority of cases from the sputum discharged from "open" or ulcerating tubercles in the lungs.

(2) A certain number of persons, chiefly infants, estimated variously from one to ten per cent. of all cases, receive the infection from the milk of tuberculous cows.

(3) A very few others may possibly obtain the infection from the urine and fecal discharges of consumptives or from the pus joints or other parts of the body which are the seat of ulcerating tuberculosis.

(4) In a few extremely rare instances the infection is conveyed through the blood of the mother to an unborn child, but the offspring seldom survives long.

(5) No infection can be conveyed from tuberculosis of the "closed" or non-ulcerated variety, or after ulcerations are completely healed.

With regard to the manner of infection, still bearing in mind that tuberculosis must be communicated from one person to another, we find that by far the most frequent mode of infection is by inhalation; the second is by swallowing, and the least common, by inoculation of a wound or abrasion. Considering each of these modes of infection a little more carefully, we learn that:

(1) The bacilli are inhaled most often in dust. The dust is most often contaminated by careless spitting; but the germs may also be given out in the act of coughing (with the mouth unprotected) or hawking, sneezing, loud talking, singing or laughing. Quiet breathing carries no infection.

(2) The bacilli may be swallowed with food which has been contaminated with infected hands or otherwise, and also with the milk, butter and other dairy products derived from cows suffering from bovine tuberculosis.

(3) Inoculation by the infection of cuts, scratches, or abrasions is not frequently observed.

While no age, race, or class is immune against infection from tuberculosis, children are more susceptible than anyone else. At the age of 15, frequently as high as 75 per cent. of the population may show the presence of the germs, though not that many may be sick with tuberculosis. In view, however, of the fact that these germs may lay quiet in the body of the child for years, until with unfavorable surroundings his resistance is lowered, causing the disease to develop, it is extremely important that fathers and mothers do everything possible to keep their children away from danger of infection in their earlier years.

Everything should be done at home to keep the child rugged and healthy. The father and mother, whether they have tuberculosis or not, should be scrupulously careful in their habits of spitting and person hygiene. The working father owes it not only to his own health, but to that of his children to avoid tuberculosis in every possible way.

[NOTE—This is the Second of a Series of Five Articles Prepared by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, New York City.]

Comfort In Poverty

A VISITING nurse found this old lady dying of tuberculosis in extremely poor surroundings. There was no one to care for her except her old crippled husband, and there was not sufficient money to provide good food or clean clothing, nor did he know how to make his wife comfortable. Charitable people were interested in the case, so that fresh bedding and food were provided. Frequent visits from the nurse have helped in making this old consumptive woman as comfortable as possible in her last days. Without the care of the nurse she might have been a menace to her neighbors.

THE PEACEMAKERS

By MARTHA MCULLOCH-WILLIAMS.

The yards lay back with an alley between. The birds ought to have been neighborly. Instead each saw in the other a hated rival and crowded accordingly.

Trumble really should not have minded his summer cottage and literary workshop stood across the road, well back among sheltering trees. It had seemed to him ideal—a place of silent sunshine wherein he could work at racing speed. Racing speed it would have to be if his play were finished in time. To that end he had literally buried himself in the green wastes of Middleboro.

Here he knew nobody—even the tradesmen saw only his servant, Gills, the most capable fellow alive, thought Trumble. With slight help from a local scrubwoman, Gills kept the place going beautifully. The first fortnight Trumble had felicitated himself unreservedly on his choice of location. Almost in the twinkling of an eye the situation changed.

How irritated—who shall say? The cocks had been near neighbors for months, yet had been housed more than half the time, and let out only for exercise at different hours. Perhaps, also, it was something psychic. Until their owners fell out over red and blue ribbons at the spring show, there had been daily gossipings across the fence.

Now Miss Alameda Green merely sniffed when Sir Lancelot crowded and Job Trotter confided regularly to space that "that big brute of a black rooster" was "worse'n a fire alarm." Nelly, his daughter, glowered vividly in the raucous content. Imagine her delight when Gills let her know that the victim—the label meant—and who was the victim—a man who wrote plays that actually were played! Nelly lost her breath for almost a minute—in her wildest dreams she had not dared hope to see eyes upon such a miracle.

But she could do nothing. "How long will the play take?" Nelly asked. Gills shook his head sadly. "Couldn't say, ma'am—with peace we may finish it by September—but if this keeps up—well, we'll have to hunt new quarters, which will be upsetting," he added gravely.

"You mustn't think of that—you shant," Nelly declared briskly. That afternoon, while Miss Alameda napped and Job Trotter went fishing, Nelly and Hector Green, Miss Alameda's nephew and heir, held a close and secret council—of peace, not war. But they said nothing whatever about it to their elders and gave Sir Lancelot and Exeter extra feeds.

Next day was Sunday, and by a not unusual coincidence Nelly had such a headache she couldn't even think of church going. Hector recalled letters which must go out in tomorrow's mail. So the pair were left at home while their elders bled themselves to their respective places of worship.

But their piety was ill rewarded, for upon homecoming, each found the pride of his heart stretched limp and lifeless on the turf. Nelly and Hector had removed them from their respective harems and arranged them decently and in order beside the alley gate.

There the bereaved ones sorrowed for a breath, then rose up, wrathfully declaring simultaneously that it was the work of those envious townspeople—poison, most likely.

Both Hector and Nelly dissented stoutly. They had been on guard—no other person had set foot upon the premises. Clearly both had been stricken with some mysterious and fatal malady. The part of wisdom was to bury them instantly and as far away from their mates as possible.

Without waiting for further argument, Hector hustled the fallen birds into a feed basket. Nelly snatched up a light shovel, together they marched off, with the parting injunction, "Don't wait dinner for us. We will do a good job while we are about it." They did—walked three miles, chuckling and giggling along the way, what time they were not stilling the flutterings and squawking of their reviving victims.

"Gee! but I was afraid they'd come to life soon," Hector said. "However did you think of it, Nelly—feedin' em corn soaked in whisky till they went plumb to sleep?"

"Oh, I saw granny's geese get this way on cherries—those that were thrown away when she made fresh cherry bounce," Nelly explained. "They sobered up all right and so will these fellows. Dick Marne will take the care of them, I know—and maybe we can see a real play when we go to the city for our honeymoon."

"We will—if we have to walk home," Hector returned heartily. "We never have got beyond movin' pictures—but things will be different."

"Things were different. Trumble finished his play in idyllic quietude. Forthright later Nelly and Hector were married without a by your leave from anybody. Trumble dared not send gifts openly, but when they went to the city Hector had money in both pockets. Moreover, they saw not one but many plays—and that from the boxes. Wherefore they experienced not a little of the blessedness of the glorious beatitude—"Blessed are the peacemakers."

SALADS OF DIFFERENT KINDS.

In the mixing of combinations for salads there is a vast field to display artistic ability as well as agreeable color mixtures. Too many colors are not pleasing nor are colors which clash like beet red and carrot or tomato.

Well prepared and nicely garnished salad is a dish which graces any table. All vegetables should be crisp and cold.

Vegetable Salad.—A good combination is cooked carrots, cut in dice, cold green string beans, shredded lettuce and capers a few, served with mayonnaise dressing. Many people fear to try to prepare mayonnaise, as it has a reputation for separating on the slightest provocation. The secret of having a well made and smooth dressing is to have all the ingredients cold, not only the juice and egg but as cold as ice can make them. Mix the dressing in a bowl standing in ice water, and see that it is thoroughly beaten, then there will be no fear of its separating.

Pineapple Salad.—Take the circles of fine canned pineapple, drain and lay on a bed of shredded lettuce. In the center of the circle place a maraschino and on top of that a walnut. Circle with mayonnaise and serve well chilled.

Surprise Salad.—Take eight hard boiled eggs, one head of lettuce, two cold cooked beets, two cold boiled potatoes and half a cucumber. Cut the eggs in slices, the beets in dice, the cucumber in thin slices and the potatoes in cubes. Shred the lettuce, and make a nest for each plate. Mix the eggs, and vegetables lightly together place on the lettuce and cover with mayonnaise.

To Make Mayonnaise.—Mix in an egg dish a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and mustard, a teaspoonful of powdered sugar and the yolk of an egg. Stir until well mixed and thick, then add one teaspoonful of lemon juice and a few drops of chilled oil, continue adding oil until the mixture is very thick. Then add one lemon juice or vinegar, until two tablespoonfuls of the acid is used and three fourths to a full cupful of olive oil.

SUMMER FRUITS.

There is no possible way that the seasonable fruits may be served more attractively than in a salad. As a variety some of the following may appeal to the taste of those who like a change.

Watermelon Ice.—Cut the melon in halves, remove the seeds from one of the edible portion and chop it fine, add sugar and pack in a freezer, turn to freeze and serve like soft snow.

Chilled and Filled Cantaloupe.—Remove the seeds from a melon, cut in halves, fill with ice cream and place the halves together and lay on ice to chill. When ready to serve cut them apart and sprinkle with a little chopped preserved ginger or chopped nuts.

Musk Sherbet.—A most delicious sherbet may be made from musk melons. Scoop out the edible portion and to a quart of juice and pulp add a half pint each of orange and grape juice. Stir in three cupfuls of sugar and pour into a freezer, after the mixture is partly frozen open and add the white of an egg, beaten stiff, and mixed with a tablespoonful of powdered sugar. Repeat the process and stand three hours. Serve the sherbet in the well cleaned, trimmed and chilled cantaloupe shell.

Lucious Peaches.—A most delightful dessert is prepared from ripe, rich peaches peeled, cut in halves and seeded with care, which are then filling the hollow where the pit was with nuts or the nuts may be broken and sprinkled over the cream.

Raspberry Fluff.—To a pint of ripe raspberries add two-thirds of a cupful of cooked tapioca, mixing them lightly together with a fork. Now turn into a wet mold and set away to chill. Use sugar enough to sweeten the berries before combining the mixtures. When cold, unmold on a platter, garnish with whipped cream and large berries rolled in sugar.

Cherry Ambrosia.—Cook four tablespoonfuls of pearl tapioca in a pint of water, with a pint of stoned cherries, simmer until cooked, adding sugar to sweeten. Moth and serve when cold with sweetened whipped cream, and fresh cherries as a garnish.

SUMMER DESSERTS.

A dainty summer dessert is made of one-half cupful of peanuts, one cupful of mashed banana and half a cupful of grated coconut. Arrange on a small plate and pour orange juice over the mixture.

Fruit Foam.—Take a half box of gelatin, one cupful of water, two and a half cupfuls of fruit juice and three eggs. Soak the gelatin in cold water until dissolved.

Heat the fruit juice, which may be strawberry, raspberry or any other fruit, pour over the gelatin, sweeten to taste, stir all together and strain and cool. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff, beat into the jelly until it is foamy, pour into a mold that has been wet and with whipped cream. Prepare in time for the gelatin to thicken before using. The day before using is better.

Coffee Mousse.—To the yolks of five eggs add a half cup of boiling hot coffee and when cool add a cup of sugar and a pint of whipped cream. Mix well and pack in a mold to freeze. Let stand four hours.

Muskmelon Frappe.—Remove the tops from small muskmelons to form a cover. Take out all the seeds and membrane and place in a sieve to drain out all the juice. Scoop out as much of the soft pulp as can be easily removed and cut it in small pieces. To the juice add a quart of sweetened whipped cream; turn this into a freezer and freeze. Serve in the melon shells, a layer of frappe and a layer of the melon pulp.

Jellied Apples.—Wash, pare, quarter and core six tart apples. Take two cupfuls of sugar and the same amount of water, boil until a thick sirup is formed. Drop the apples into this boiling sirup and cook until clear and tender, taking care to keep their shape. When tender, skim out, place on a platter to cool and measure and strain the sirup; there should be a pint left. Take a package of lemon jello, dissolve in two-thirds of a cupful of hot water, add to the hot sirup, pour over the apples and into a mold. Serve on a platter, garnished with whipped cream.

SOME NEW WAYS WITH MEATS.

The seasoning of meat sauces, meats and combinations of meat and vegetables is one of the most important points in culinary art. The careless, haphazard seasoning ruins an otherwise appetizing and wholesome dish. Ruskin says "much tasting means no wasting," so the skillful cook seasons, tastes and seasons again until the right blending is obtained.

Southern Hash.—Put six potatoes, two onions, three green peppers and two large tomatoes through a meat chopper. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan, add the vegetables, with a cupful of soup stock and cook until the vegetables are done, keep covered and stir occasionally to prevent sticking. Add two cupfuls of chopped meat, cold roast beef is best, season well with salt a dash of kitchen bouquet and serve hot with toast points.

Baked Fish.—Place a slice of onion and lemon inside a well cleaned fish, ready for baking. Brush well with butter and bake in a moderate oven, basting occasionally with butter and water. Meanwhile cook one cupful of sliced tomato with a cupful of boiling water, a slice of onion, carrot, celery and a sprig of parsley, a bay leaf, a half dozen cloves, salt and pepper, for twenty minutes. Make a sauce, using three tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, add the strained tomato, a fourth of a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet, and the same amount of soda. Place the fish on a hot platter, garnish with lemon quarters, dipped in minced parsley, add a half cupful of thin cream to the sauce and strain around the fish.

Flagout of Veal.—The cheaper cuts may be used for this dish. Stew the meat until very tender with onion, parsley, a fourth of a cupful of vinegar and a bay leaf. Remove from the bone while warm. When cool, cut in pieces for serving, roll each in seasoned flour and brown in hot fat. For the sauce, use a fourth of a cupful of each of butter, a third of a cupful of veal stock, a half teaspoonful of Worcester sauce, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and three of horseradish.

W. G. T. U. NEWS.

(Furnished by Mrs. Belle Dickey.)

For World's Temperance Sunday, Nov. 14th, there is an unlimited supply of literature in all the church papers, Sunday school journals, as well as specially prepared services of responsive readings, etc. It is inspiring to think of the array of consecrated Christian workers who are preaching and teaching the youth and children the great principles of self control and sobriety and their effect upon physical and spiritual life. The seed sown in the hearts of children of the past generation are today being precious fruit. Let a part of every service be prayer for the tempted and that the elder brother may give grace to offspring of drinkers to overcome power of heredity, and thanksgiving for every victory over the gigantic drink evil.

Let me not then faint. With the power of Christ perfected in my weakness I am equal to every temptation, competent for every duty, equipped for every struggle, the master of every foe.—W. G. T. U., Princeton's President Speaks.

In a letter recently published in the Alumni Weekly, President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University makes a strong appeal to the alumni to discontinue liquor at their gatherings. He says:

"I am profoundly convinced that the time has come for the alumni to consider most seriously the advisability of a general movement to discontinue the free serving of beer in the reunion tents. We must not allow Princeton to fall behind in this conspicuous movement of the age in which we live. The spirit of self-restraint and self-control as regards drinking has grown so rapidly both abroad and in this country during the last year that it would be well for us to face the facts as they are and endeavor to create a new standard of conduct. Discussion a strong Princeton sentiment on this question. From my own observation and from letters which I have received from true and sincere friends of Princeton since commencement time, I am convinced that the day of rampant and honorific drinking is at stake, and that we, as Princeton men, must see clear and think straight on this subject."

Pike County (Ky.) Stays Dry.

Pike county, Kentucky, which on May 15, of this year, voted 68 to 55 against the licensing of saloons is dry. The court of appeals in an opinion by Judge Hurt, affirmed the local option court in holding the local option election valid. One of the criticisms of the election made in the suit of the liquor men was that the voters had no real division of precinct election officers between wets and dries. The court held that "the fact that they were all chosen from those favoring prohibition would not be a valid reason for setting aside the election."

Prohibition Prohibits in Alabama.

That prohibition in Alabama does prohibit, and that it has not caused the predicted business losses, were assertions made recently by Judge S. D. Weakley of Birmingham, late chief justice of Alabama, speaking at a public meeting. When he passed on the city may declare itself more powerful than the state. Do not believe it when you hear that in Mobile, Montgomery and Birmingham, the city does not prohibit, for I declare to you on my record as a Judge that prohibition does prohibit in Alabama. A large part of the canners are located in the organs. Therefore when a man of authority says that canner of the lip and tongue is useless, should not be and, furthermore, tells how it can be prevented, we are disposed to listen to what he says and some of us will act on the advice.

"Dr. Robert Abbe says in the New York Medical Journal that in this country cancer of the tongue, nine times out of ten, is chargeable to tobacco. The most of the other tenth come from rough teeth, tho a few cases are due to hot burning drinks. Cancer inside the cheek, thirteen out of 100 cases investigated resulted from the use of tobacco, from the fact of holding a small quid between the teeth and the cheek. The irritation from the teeth is the leading cause of the cancer on the inside of the cheek."

"Practically all the lip cancers are the result of smoking. Pipe smokers are more subject to lip cancer than are cigar or cigar smokers. Women rarely have lip cancer."

"In 100 cases of cancer of the mouth investigated by Dr. Abbe, thirty-six were on the tongue; fifteen on the cheek; 21 on the gums; fourteen on the lip; fourteen in the throat. Ten were in women; ninety in men. The men were all heavy smokers."

"Dr. Abbe's experience is that of every other man who gives his opinion to a great many smokers. Each smoker told of the danger is certain it does not apply to every other man. I am a heavy smoker for 20 years and no trouble. This means that the thing must be said and resaid until it is heeded."

Away with Alcohol.

Speaking of the effect of intoxicants upon those who drink Prof. Max Gruber of the Royal Institute of Munich, has declared: "It is scientifically established that even small amounts of alcohol weaken and paralyze our powers of observation, memory and judgment, the command of our intellect, our wills, and our reason, our impulses, our brains, our body; cut down the gains from exercise, the endurance of hardships, the ability to resist external injuries. Away with alcoholic drinks as a means of nourishment or enjoyment. All physicians who do not incessantly warn and admonish in this direction with good example fail to do their duty."

In an article having to do with cancer, its cause and cure Dr. William A. Evans, in The Chicago Tribune, calls attention to the part which tobacco plays in producing cancer. He says in part: "Among the more important cancers are those of the mouth—the lips, the tongue, and the gums. A large part of the cancers are located in the organs. Therefore when a man of authority says that canner of the lip and tongue is useless, should not be and, furthermore, tells how it can be prevented, we are disposed to listen to what he says and some of us will act on the advice."

Is Tuberculosis Curable?

EVERY once in a while people will ask "Do you really think Consumption can be cured?" and then, when they are told that thousands of cases all over the world bear witness to the fact of the curability of this disease, they wonder why their several friends and relatives, who died with tuberculosis, were not cured.

Tuberculosis is curable, but not everyone is cured, and not everyone can be cured. The chief reason why more consumptives are not cured is because they have waited too long before they heeded the warning danger signals of the disease, or because some doctor to whom they went did not recognize this deadly plague. In its early stages, consumption can be cured, and the patient can generally resume his normal life within a period ranging from six months to two years, depending on circumstances. As high a percentage of actual recoveries from tuberculosis may be found in really early cases who follow the right course of treatment as in almost any other infectious disease.

What, then, is the right course of treatment? This article cannot prescribe for individual cases, but it can and will tell what are the essentials in taking the cure for tuberculosis.

First of all, there is a good doctor on whom you can rely and whose advice and inspiration is most valuable to you. He will not give you much medicine, because there isn't any drug or "cure" that he can prescribe that will do more than to relieve some immediate symptoms, such as constipation, cough, headache, etc. If your doctor begins to talk of a "marvelous remedy" which will cure you, it is time you looked for another physician. That man is more than likely a quack and is simply after your money. There is no sure or quick "cure" or remedy for tuberculosis that you can buy at a drugstore or that a doctor can give you.

The second essential in the cure of tuberculosis is fresh air. To the healthy person the best tonic is fresh air at work, at play, and during sleep. To the consumptive, however, air is medicine. He must take it in as large doses as he can, the more the better. It may not be easy for one who has been accustomed to indoor work to live outdoors, but since fresh air is vital, he must accustom himself to being outside all he can. At sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis, patients are out of doors on porches or elsewhere almost all the time. If one is at home, he can with a little ingenuity arrange devices for outdoor sleeping and sitting. The National Tuberculosis Association, 105 East 22nd Street, New York, will send free of charge to anyone a booklet entitled, "Directions for Living and Sleeping in the Open Air."

The next essential in the cure of tuberculosis is rest. Like fresh air, rest must be taken as a medicine by the consumptive. The reason for rest is evident, when you stop to think the way the germs of tuberculosis work. As they destroy the tissues of the lungs or other parts of the body, they make a wound or a cavity. This wound, like a cut on your finger, will not heal if it is being opened all the time. To keep the lungs as quiet as possible, rest in bed, or in a reclining chair is absolutely necessary. The dose of rest you take will depend on your doctor's advice. He will tell you when you can get out of bed and when you can exercise and how much. But first and foremost you must learn to rest, in order to give the lungs a chance to heal.

Besides a good doctor, fresh air and rest, the cure for tuberculosis requires good, wholesome food. In normal health, food of the right kind is very necessary, but in tuberculosis it is doubly important. Food is the fuel which heats the body and gives it its energy or you might almost say "steam." In tuberculosis one must pay special attention to food, because he has to provide fuel not only for the ordinary functions of the body, but he must provide an additional supply to meet the waste and damage done by the germs of the disease. This doesn't mean that you must be continually stuffing yourself, for if you do that you will upset your stomach, bowels, and liver, and you will counteract all the good the food might do. Neither does it mean that you must eat just one or two kinds of food, such as milk and eggs, which some people think are a cure for tuberculosis. They are excellent foods for people who can eat and digest them readily, and every consumptive should try to acquire an appetite for them. But meat and potatoes and bread and butter and good vegetables and almost any other nourishing, wholesome food in plenty of variety are needed also. Don't rely on tid-bits and sweets, but stoke your body furnace with food-fuel that will keep it running in the best possible order. Your doctor is the best one to advise on foods.

And, finally, a last essential in the cure of tuberculosis may be summed up in these words: "Don't worry." Keep a hopeful state of mind. If you give up and say "It's no use," you will never get well, no matter how patiently you follow the other essentials of a cure. Getting well depends for the most part on you. Backbone, hopefulness and courage will do more for you than all the doctors in the world.

Just a word as to where to take the cure. If you can go to a sanatorium, do so. There are not enough sanatoria for everyone, however. So you may have to stay at home and fight alone. Remember, tuberculosis can be cured if you take it in time and do your part.

[NOTE—This is the Last of a Series of Five Articles Prepared by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, New York City.]

IN A LAW-RIDDEN NATION

Evils of Government From Which Americans Suffer Not Imaginary.

Representative Mann, of Chicago, the Republican leader in the National House of Representatives, told those present at a meeting in the Union League Club of this city the other day that the United States is a law-ridden country. We have more laws, more lawyers, more courts, more judges, more prosecutions, than any other country in the world, and also more in proportion to population. Mr. Mann might have added that we have more governmental agencies than any other nation. He did say that all our governments are too expensive considering what they accomplish.

Some years ago Mr. Mann was a leading member of the Chicago City Council. He has been connected also with other local governmental agencies, so that he knows by experience much about municipal as well as Federal official methods. His criticism of these methods is fully justified.

The evils of government from which the American people suffer are not imaginary evils pictured by academic students of public affairs. Representative Mann speaks out of his long and intimate practical experience. What he says is the simple truth.

One remedy suggested by Mr. Mann is that lawmaking bodies like Congress be provided with experts to assist them in their work. This is necessary, though it may seem like merely adding to the number of lawmaking officials and increasing the complexities of governmental machinery. It is true that we need simplification and reduction in the number of agencies of government. But the agencies left after that process has been wisely carried out should be equipped for first-class work.

The Federal Congress, State Legislatures and the City Councils should command the services of capable investigators and experts in legislation to help them perform their duties in the best manner. The prime need of a country suffering from too many laws is improved lawmaking facilities to provide fewer and better enactments. —Chicago News.

Playing no Favorites.

In each community in the county where an improvement in the roads is desired are to be found people who believe they are being discriminated against by the fiscal court in the matter of appropriations for turnpikes. The appropriation of the available road money has been distributed over the county as follows to assist in the construction of turnpikes, the county putting up one-half of the money required to build the road.

Appropriations for roads have been made as follows:
From Verona to Gallatin county line.
From Verona to Grant county line.
From Verona to Mudlick creek.
From Verona to Walton.
From Walton to Heaver.
From Union to Hathaway.
From Limaburg to Hebron.
From Hebron to Sand Hill.
From Petersburg to E. L. Grant's.
From Bellevue to Waterloo by way of McVie.

From Waterloo to Rabbit Hash.
From Rabbit Hash to Landing.

The above looks like a very equitable distribution of the available funds, so far.
As to the purchase and reconstruction of the Burlington and Florence turnpike. There are some who censure the fiscal court for that transaction, and talk as though they regard it as little less than a crime. The fact is it is the most important road in the county, being the main out-let to the city for a very large portion of the county's territory, the East Bend road, the Bellevue and Petersburg pike being among its feeders to say nothing of the roads that intersect it between Burlington and Florence.

To the reconstruction of the Burlington and Florence pike the State road fund contributes over nine thousand dollars, which it was impossible to secure to be used on any other road or roads in the county. It was up to the fiscal court to take over this road and improve it with the assistance of State aid, or to pass up the nine thousand dollars State aid for the benefit of other counties in Kentucky, and the court decided to accept the State's terms and acquire its assistance.

Some are making the charge that the reconstruction of Burlington and Florence pike is for the benefit of Burlington, seemingly ignorant of the fact that thousands of persons other than the citizens of Burlington and those along the pike, will use it. They talk as though it is an act of charity on the part of the county towards Burlington to buy and reconstruct the road. They are not aware that the town of Burlington and the property owners along the Burlington and Florence pike have been paying their toll regularly and at the same time paying annually road tax on property to the value of five hundred thousand dollars in round numbers. What has become of this road tax these people have been paying ever since it was levied? It has been applied, or wasted, on the roads of these who are now censure the fiscal court. The desire for the improvements of the county's roads is commendable in anyone, but he should bear in mind that his neighbors are entitled to respectful treatment, and harsh and unwarranted statements will get him nothing, and that he may be confronted by them some time in the future, very much to his discomfort.

When you see a person who is rantankerous because of the fiscal court's action in regard to the Burlington and Florence pike ask him if he is aware that the Burlington voting precinct and the property owners along that pike in Florence precinct pay road tax on $1,125,000.

IN THE SAILING DAYS

MEN WHO WORKED SHIPS HAD HARD, LABORIOUS LIVES.

"Rule of the Strongest" Was the Only Law Known, and Shanghaiing Was Accepted as a Matter of Course.

A great deal of sentiment is misplaced, or wasted, on the passing of the sailing ship and the age of sail navigation if there is truth in many of the old chronicles of the sea. The conditions of the men who go down to the sea in ships has mightily changed for the better within two or three generations. There was a time when "strong-arm" methods were commonly employed in getting work out of the crews and in operating a ship from a port to port. Brutality was not exceptional; it was common and according to the lights of the time was not based on as brutish a basis as it is today.

The practices which were then considered necessary and proper could not be countenanced today existing conditions have been a marked reversion to barbarous practices both on-land and water. An old writer has said that the principle on which most ships were worked was that "sailors were brutes, and must be treated as such." The law of the fist and the belaying pin was the only one they knew. Their crews seldom shipped willingly. The "shanghai" system invariably gave them their money. On the eve of sailing, in the dark watches of the night, boats would draw alongside and discharge their cargoes of inanimate men, bending secretly as one does who has been "doped."

Next morning, out at sea, merciless man handling, wherein "knuckle doctors" and monkey-wrenches played a prominent part, brought the luckless fellows round to a little consciousness. They might object, but they would be the skipper had their papers, signed with a cross, their receipt for a month's advance of pay. Remonstrance was met with an iron fist.

One of the consequences of the brutal practices was that, being so long and often reported to, they seemed to become necessary in the working of the ship. A moment's relaxation would have meant real mutiny. In the event of the vessel having to be abandoned it was not unusual for the afterward to take the only abiding boats at the point of the vessel leaving the crew to drown like rats. That was gentle precaution against a possible shortage of supplies.

The Yankee skipper, and especially the "Prisco hooker," had an enviable reputation among the men of the sea. An old authority on the conditions of the crew has written that the work aboard these ships was slavery. The men were required to work all day on deck, and keep an hour watches through the night. Tasks were invented for them. They were sent to overhaul skylights before breakfast, give them an appetite. They had to take the rigging barefoot, and woe betide the laggard. This was "Aboard my ship you mustn't walk and you mustn't run; you must blame well fly!" The charge has been made that all the efforts of the officers were directed at making life unlivable, so that the men would desert in the first port, leaving their back pay in the hands of the skipper. It was a profitable way of getting labor.

Every now and then there is an echo of the old-time shanghaiing practices, and a couple of generations ago such practices were particularly common. The system was to provide a seaman with board and lodging pending his signing-on in return for his month's advance of pay. It was to the boarding master's advantage to get rid of that man as soon as possible, and if he would not go willingly there were always the "fighting man" and the "dope." When there was a shortage of men the "outs" went out, shadowed like looking sailors, men and took the first opportunity of drinking.

The usual price of "blood money" which "skippers" bound for a long voyage paid for a man was $80, and boarding masters were not particular where those men came from nor their condition when they were shipped. It has been recorded that once an American admiral was "shanghai" in Tacoma, and that when he recovered he forced the skipper to put back into port.

A Democratic Legislature.

"The most astounding extravagance of the women of America is that we spend $10,000,000 each year for powder."

Mrs. R. L. Barker told this to the delegates to the annual meeting of the Women's International Missionary Union today in describing how American women make the money fly. She continued:

"We spend more for hats yearly than it takes to support the army and navy and several other Federal departments. We spend $10,000,000 for soft drink and $75,000,000 for candy. It is time to call a halt and to return to the sane ways of our mothers." New Orleans Cor. New York World.

The race for Governor at the election on the first Tuesday in this month goes to be too close for comfort. Giving the Republicans all they claim Stanley will win by something like 200 majority, say those in charge of Democratic headquarters at Louisville. About 400,000 votes were polled by Stanley and Morrow and an eyelash finish is the result.

His Winter's Meat for Nothing.

Mt. Sterling, Nov. 7.—A certain Republican in this neighborhood got his winter meat for almost nothing. Worked into a state of reckless enthusiasm by the campaign made by A. O. Stanley, his party's nominee for governor, a Democratic farmer living near this city, a few days before election, auctioned off his prize-winning Poland China hogs.

The highest bidder, according to the terms, was to pay cash, and in the event of Stanley winning by 15,000 the payment would stand. If Stanley's plurality over Morrow was less than 15,000 the bidder was to get all his money back except five cents for each hog.

The money has been refunded to the Republican.

Greatest Prosperity in History.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Secretary McAdoo, returning today from a trip to the Pacific coast, in which he visited many principal cities, said he had been convinced that the country had entered upon an era of the greatest prosperity in its history.

"Through my trip," said the Secretary, "I was impressed with the unmistakable evidences of prosperity, confidence and optimism in practically every line of business. There can be no doubt that we have already entered upon an era of the greatest prosperity in the history of the country."

Secretary McAdoo said the industrial and commercial activity of the country was based primarily on the nation's economic and financial strength and upon the awakening of the people to the opportunities for the expansion of foreign trade. "Because the United States has not heretofore possessed its full share of the world's markets, that we have had such extremes of prosperity and business depression in the past," said he.

The local papers all over the State are boasting of large pumpkins and a crop of late strawberries.

At last accounts, Shelby Acra, who was taken to a Cincinnati hospital last week, was going along nicely. He has typhoid fever.

William Bryan, who was raised from infancy by the late J. P. Blyth and wife, enlisted in the regular army in Cincinnati, last Thursday, and was sent to Columbus, Ohio.

It will pay every farmer now who has any horse-ense to raise some good colts. Whatever you do, raise good ones. Give the dung-hill, sire the go-by.—Farmers Home Journal.

The press of the United States comments in strong terms on Britain's offensive attacks toward American commerce and stands by the administration in its protest, though some believe that the tone of the note is too temperate.

Are Not Feeding their Meat Hogs. We notice some farmers have not begun to feed their meat hogs and some have none to feed. Corn is cheap and every man should be feeding at least enough hogs for part of his meat.

Appointed as a Delegate. Gov. McCreary appointed Judge John M. Lassing as one of the delegates to represent Kentucky in the Southern Commercial Congress to be held Dec. 12th to 17th in Charleston, South Carolina.

Two Games of Basket Ball. Two of the best basket ball games of the season will be played at the school grounds on the afternoon of the bazaar, Nov. 24. Come and bring your friends with you.

Reconstruction Work Resign. The work of reconstructing the Burlington and Florence turnpike was begun last week, and the contractor, Mr. Louen, will push the work as fast as weather conditions will permit.

Remember that Bazaar. Pies, cakes, candies, pop-corn aprons, caps, manual training articles and many other things will be on sale at the school bazaar in Burlington on Nov. 24, in the afternoon and evening.

Has Sold His Farm. A few days since A. B. Renaker sold to Fannie Easton C. E. Rector's 103 acre farm a mile from Burlington, on the Union road. To the old people it is known as the Ben Sherrill farm. Price private.

Business Increasing. The business of collecting taxes is growing more interesting at the Sheriff's office as the first of December, when the penalty is affixed, approaches. They are coming across fast and faster every day.

Thanks for the Pumpkins. Each of the RECORDER force is under obligations to Clarence Easton, who resides out on the Petersburg pike, for a generous supply of material for the construction of old-fashioned pumpkin pies.

Chickenpox Raging. Chickenpox in a violent form has made its appearance in Florence precinct, and some of the older people here are very ill of the disease, which, it is said, was brought into the neighborhood by an aged person.

Considerable Corn Husked. A very large percent of the shock corn has been husked in this part of the county, although the weather has not been favorable for that work. Corn on the hill is said to be better than that in the river bottoms.

Sent To The Infirmary. Frank Jeffries, of Bellevue neighborhood, was admitted to the county infirmary one day last week. The poor fellow has long been an object of charity, and to add to his troubles he is badly crippled in one foot.

Going West. Asa McMullen is now speeding towards Los Angeles, California, where he will visit his mother and brother. Frank, latter is not in good health, but his Kentucky friends and relatives hope that he will soon be restored.

Both Amendments Carried. The two amendments to the constitution voted on at the recent election, carried, and the tax system of the State will be given a general shakeup while arrangements will be made for working convicts on the public roads, etc.

Getting Together the Stone.

A large pile of rock is being assembled in the street at the east part of town, where they will be crushed for use on the Burlington and Florence pike.

Should Raise Draft Colts.

The ordinary farmer should raise draft colts. They are quick and easily handled, and by the time they are old enough for market they will have earned the cost of raising, and the selling price is nearly all profit.—Farmers Home Journal.

Very Little Tobacco Been Stripped.

Because of the dry weather the work of stripping tobacco has scarcely begun in this county. The quality of the crop cannot be determined yet, and very few sales have been made. In fact the buyers have not made their appearance and no prices have been quoted.

Will Have a Hunting Bee.

C. C. Roberts came in from the farm to spend last Saturday night and Sunday at home and attend church. While in Burlington he invited several of his friends to a hunting bee on his premises as soon as the open season comes. It is understood that he will furnish each guest with a hunter's license.

Watching the Count.

Mr. Shepperd, who, on the 2nd inst., was defeated for Commonwealth's Attorney in Kenton county, came to Burlington last Friday to be present at the official count of the vote to ascertain if there was any fraud or irregularity to the election of Mr. Morrow, Republican candidate for Governor. He discovered none.

A New School Journal.

The first number of Boone High News, published by Boone County High School appeared last Friday, and it went like hot cakes on a frosty morning. It is a well written, neatly printed folio, four columns to the page, and is calculated to be of great benefit to the students, who appear to be taking great interest in its publication.

No Goods They Could Steal.

The accusation that the Democrats stole Stanley's election as Governor is nonsensical. The Republicans have had no majority in Kentucky for many years from which the Democrats could steal, while the Democrats have been holding the State by a large majority. It looks like the stealing, if any, was done by the G. O. P., people, as the Democrats are the only ones in possession of the material that could be stolen.

First National Corn Show.

The first national exposition of corn in Brazil was held recently in Sao Paulo. It was modeled on those which have met with such success in the United States. It was held under the patronage of the State of Sao Paulo. The exposition was visited by prominent planters from many states, who took advantage of the opportunity to study themselves with high grade seed for the coming crops. It is the intention of the organizers to form "corn clubs" in the country, and the show to be conducted in the same manner as in the United States.

A Very Quiet Campaign.

Very few of the voters in this county knew on the 2nd inst., that they were the day to elect a Clerk of the Boone circuit court to serve a term of six years beginning the first day of January next. Charles Maurer, an incumbent, is the gentleman whom they elected. Before the last August primary election he and his friends kept mum, and his opposition developed only after he was declared the nominee as provided by law and his name did not appear on the primary ballot, and thus he was given the office for a term of six years. He is now filling out the unexpired term of James A. Dunbar, who resigned the office because of ill health. It is very seldom that a person is chosen to fill a county office in Boone without a contest, and some do not understand how Mr. Maurer put it over so easily this time.

Black Leg in Plattsburg Neighborhood.

Black Leg appeared in the Plattsburg neighborhood about two weeks ago and several young cattle belonging to Edward Botts, Frank Vossell and Charles Hensley died of the disease. A Lawrenceburg veterinarian was summoned and he vaccinated about all the young cattle in that neighborhood, and it is believed the disease is stamped out. Black Leg has been lurking in that and adjacent neighborhoods for several years, showing up among young cattle, and killing and some of them, but in every instance where the animal has been vaccinated before attacked by the disease, it would pay the farmers if they would have their calves vaccinated as soon as they pass the age of four months as it has been demonstrated that between the ages of four months and two years is the period during which an animal is most subject to the disease. All the veterinarians recommend that the carcass of an animal that died of black leg be burnt as the best mode of destroying the disease.

SIDNEY GAINES.

Sidney Gaines is now Circuit Judge-elect in this judicial district and Boone county is proud of him, and is satisfied that he will prove a worthy successor of long line of illustrious predecessors. Mr. Gaines is held in the very highest esteem in his native county and it was a pleasure for many to vote for him who were denied that privilege at the August primary election because of affiliating with the opposite political party. He will hold his term of court in Boone county in the first Monday in the month in Williamstown Grant county.

HON. W. P. CROPPER.

All recognize the above picture as that of W. P. Cropper, who will have the honor of representing Boone county in the next General Assembly of Kentucky.

That Annually Spelling Bee.

The preliminary spelling contests of the High Schools in this county will take place at Walton and Bellevue, Friday, Nov. 12th, at 2 p. m. Walton, Florence, Verona and Union will spell at Walton; Bellevue, Petersburg and Landing will spell at Bellevue. On the following Friday, Nov. 19th, the two winners will spell at Burlington. The teams are: A. M. YEALEY, Chairman H. S. T. A.

Basket Ball.

Burlington broke even in the basketball games with Erlanger here last Friday afternoon, the boys winning 32-10, and the girls losing 18-9. The girls were out played by Erlanger, but put up a good lively game. They were handicapped by having to play by the girls' rules when they had been in the habit of playing boys rules. The boys won easily, outclassing their opponents by a wide margin. The idea of the Erlanger boys seemed to be to ride on the backs of the Burlington team. Burlington put up a fast, clean game with every member trying hard to win, but to win by far play. This is the last game here until the bazaar games on November 24. The teams play at Erlanger next Friday. Following is the lineup and summary:

$10,000,000 for Poodles.

The retention of a majority in the Legislature will make the Democratic administration practical as a factor in the State affairs. Divided authority, the legislative branch of the government in the hands of one party and the administrative branch in the hands of the other, makes any constructive programme, however well conceived, a declaration of principles, merely. Legislative bodies will not give their cordial aid to administrations to which they are politically opposed, and legislative sessions in such circumstances degenerate into a spectacle of petty politics, profitable to every outside interest.

With a friendly Legislature the Democratic administration will have an opportunity to carry out the platform pledges and the exigencies of politics would, in the absence of a better motive, serve as a stimulus. The platform upon which the Democratic nominees were elected made several definite promises which now can be carried out at Frankfort. The outlook is that four years more of Democratic tenure of the administrative offices and a Democratic victory in the next legislative races will entrench the party in power if the letter and spirit of all of the promises made to the people are adhered to strictly.

The Democrats have an opportunity, and there is an alternative. The record for the next four years must be one subject to no impeachment even at the hands of partisanship. The signs of the times point sufficiently to the necessity for arriving at the beginning of the next gubernatorial campaign with the voters convinced that there has been no deviation of duty upon the part of the political party into whose keeping the state has been thrown margin, been given. The Legislature not less than the Governor and his aides, must keep this in mind.

Profitable Crop Rotation.

Many people are now busy with picking and storing the immense apple crop we have in Pendleton county this year. The apples that are kept until late winter will be the really valuable ones; and if a care is used in picking and storing, many will last until then.

Laying apples so that they do not touch one another on trays in the cellar is a good way. Apples may be kept by burying in chaff, chopped straw or leaves on the barn floor. Work the chaff between the apples and cover them two feet thick.

Where cellar room is wanting, apples or vegetables may be stored in a tump. For apples the space should be a space for air above the fruit made by roof of old boards before putting on—the earth. This prevents them tasting of earth.

Care should be taken to choose a place for the tump where the ground is dry and well drained. A tump made in the shape of a round mound is better than one made with a ridge, since it is easier to pick and a greater quantity of potatoes or like fruit from frost by a circular mound than by an oblong one. Dig a pit to a level below the local frost line, cover the bottom of the pit with dry straw, pile the vegetables or fruit to be tumped upon this straw, pack straw over the top of the pile, then bank up the earth around with a deep covering of earth. The surface of the tump should be closely packed, so as to shed as much water as possible. It is a good plan still further to protect it from rain and snow by a roof made of some sort of water proof material, if only an old tarpaulin or piece of oil cloth.

Home and School.

One hour's good, hard study by lamp light these winter mornings at an hour when the mind is fresh is worth 3 hours during the rest of the day besides you can bet on the boy or girl who will get up at that time of the day to study.

Every teacher and pupil should prepare all lessons at night no matter what the grades. All the studies should be thoroughly gotten and all class work supplemented.

In some schools in our land the primary grades do not have enough recreation. Unlike little folks are doing class work they are considerably like some folks when they get into the freshmen work they are not doing any good because not knowing how to study is as hurtful as being too indolent.

The student who would learn to study should read enough about the text to learn to love that study and take a broad view of the work and the work will become easier.

A teacher who finds that a class in a certain study is not doing the work it should do will do well to pay more attention to this class and to supplement the work and the time for a few weeks.

The student who lets his study go into one ear and out of the other will not do very good work. The work must be pictured on the mind.

The teacher who gives a few good quotations to the school each week and sees that they are memorized and called upon later will find that they help the student to grow in mind.

Many students of history cannot give a correct history of their own state together with its boundary.—Ex.

T. W. Minton & Son have just closed a deal for a million feet of hickory timber to be delivered at once. This means that the hickory mill will run full time all winter—Barbourville Mountain Advertiser.

Edwin Boster, of the Quinn section of the county, was here Saturday and reported that he saw and counted ninety wild geese flying over that section this morning. All were white except their heads and tip of their wings.—Princeton Leader.

M. J. P. Burlew, a prosperous farmer, of Mr. Hope, brought up a basket of fine blue strawberries. Tuesday, they are the progressive and never stop, ever bearing variety. They bear from May to hard freezing weather. The frost does not hurt them.—Pendleton Reformer.

David Scott voted here today for the fifty-fifth time. He has never voted in any election, never missed an election, and has always voted the Democratic ticket. The old gentleman was not feeling well, but came as usual this time, not wanting to break his remarkable record.—Interior Journal.

H. N. Rankin has made many large shipments of mules from this depot, but his largest single shipment was made on last Friday when 162 extra mules left here, that cost a total of more than $16,000. In the lot were suckling yearlings and two-year-olds, all being the cream of their class.—Nicholas Advocate.

From a half acre of Irish potatoes Mrs. John Messelman, who lives on the E. C. Cleveland farm on the Georgetown pike, near Paris, has harvested a large yield of big potatoes. She recently brought to Paris five specimens of the Sunflake variety, which weighed from one and one-half to one and three-quarter pounds each.—Bourbon News.

Historic old Blue Lick Springs, Nicholas county, the scene of one of the greatest battles in the history of Kentucky between the pioneers under Daniel Boone and the Indians, is to be shown off its cedars, for which it has long been famous. All of the cedar timber on the Blue Lick holdings has been sold to Memphis, Tenn., parties, and will be cut and shipped to Memphis.—Mayesville Bulletin.

The F. A. Neider Co., of Augusta, manufacturers of auto trimmings, is in receipt of an order from an automobile Co., in Detroit for 15,000 gross of clinch buttons—more than 25,000,000—for immediate delivery. This is the largest order ever received by this company, and these buttons will furnish more than 200,000 automobiles. The order will keep the plant busy until Jan. 1.

Last Saturday Mr. George Bell brought to the Era office a box of strawberries of his own raising. He says he had all the berries he wanted since they first came on last spring, and that the plants will continue to bear until snow falls. Eating fresh strawberries as late as November is an unusual thing, but there is no telling what can be done in Oldham county.—Oldham Era.

Aunt Tabitha Howe, said by the oldest citizens of Carlisle to be over 100 years of age, died here. She was a slave prior to the civil war, first belonging to the Clark family at Bunker Hill, then to the family of Geo. Crouch. All old residents, who recall how during the war and before, say she was an old woman then. Some estimate her age as high as 130 years.

C. M. Hall, of White Sulphur, recently reported an unusual catch, which he set his trap for what he supposed was a rat. The family had been hearing noises in a room on the second floor, and setting a trap near a hole in the floor the following morning, they were horrified to find a black cow snake caught, and in trying to extricate it, it was being bent the trap against the floor.—Georgetown Times.

The work of husking corn is receiving a fair share of the farmers' attention at present. Corn is ready for the market at prices ranging from $2 to $2.50 a barrel. Many are unwilling to take even the price of $2.50 for their corn, and are holding for better prices. While there is an abundance of corn this season, it is reported that the quality of the corn is not as good as was first expected.—Danville Messenger.

A new kind of swindle is being worked on automobiles owners in this section. A man comes to town, purchases paraffine oil at thirty cents a gallon, colors it slightly and then sells it as automobile polish at $1.50 per gallon. The polish makes a car look like new for a few minutes, but after that it catches all the dust in sight and there seems to be no way to remove it but to gradually let it wear off.—Danville Messenger.

Uncle Gib Doran and his wife will shortly celebrate the 62d anniversary of their marriage. Both are in good health and are still active. They have lived since their marriage in the same house on East Green street. Uncle Gib, who is one of the most highly respected citizens of the community, gives credit to the long life of himself and wife to the fact that they have always been strong advocates of fresh air. All their lives they have kept their house open in all kinds of weather so plenty of fresh air would be available at all times.—Danville Advocate.

THE STATE PRESS.

The largest sunflower ever reported in Kentucky was raised by S. F. Bowman, our County Clerk. It measures fifty-eight inches and has been on display in Fish's store window.—Mt. Vernon Signal.

Henry Ingram brought to this office a dozen unusually large hickory nuts. They all measured nine inches in circumference over the outside hulls, and the nuts themselves were of unusual size.—Oldham Era.

There is considerable disparity in the condition of the Carroll county tobacco crop. In many localities the early cutting is reported as curing up fine, with good color and light texture, and in other sections the conditions are not so good, as especially the late cutting seems to be rough and of inferior heavy body.—Carrollton News.

John Helton, of the Aaron's Run neighborhood, recently celebrated the hundredth anniversary of his birth. "Uncle John" as he is familiarly called, is hale and hearty, and says he never took a dose of medicine in his life. He is decidedly a man in an old-gomery county, and looks good for several years to come. He cultivated a small crop of tobacco this year and farmed generally on a small scale. He is very industrious and happiest when he is at work.—Richmond Climax-Madisonian.

Mr. T. W. Sheehan was the victim of a "blow" accident Wednesday afternoon, which may cost him his life. He was working on the Paris pike, just east of New-town, and in lighting a fuse for a blast, a spark from the fuse dropped into a can of powder, which instantly exploded with terrific force and several burning Mr. Sheehan from head to feet, and it was stated Thursday morning that his condition was critical. Mr. Sheehan suffered a similar accident several years ago.—Georgetown News.

Take your County Paper.

Hard Times for Calamity Howlers.

This is a year of plenty in Kentucky. Business in Louisville is speeding up in a manner most satisfactory to business men. It is decidedly disappointing to Republican officeholders. Let us have a glimpse of the State as revealed in a few paragraphs clipped at random from Kentucky newspapers.

There is such a wealth of acorns and hickory nuts in Breathitt county, according to a Jackson Journal, that hog ranchers have turned all of their pigs at large in the forest to become 300-pound porkers without eating a grain of corn.

The Lancaster Central Record is authority for the statement that second crop June apples are more luscious than those plucked from the same trees last June are burdening the boughs and bringing happiness to the boys.

The Climax Madisonian of Richmond tells of potatoes eight inches long and six inches in circumference, with additional volume in the form of irregular protuberances, being harvested in Madison county.

The Paris-Kentuckian Citizen and the Shelby News tells of unprecedented prices for farmlands in their communities.

The autumn peach blossoms in Todd county cause the Todd County Progress to burst into song. October grapes are also being eaten in that section.

Second crop strawberries are reported from several points, and honey bees are making honey from locust blossoms which have put forth during the mellow autumnal summer which followed the first frosts.

Fishing never was better. The Democratic administration has so conserved fish that the man who owns a cane fishing pole, twenty feet of fishing line and a dime's worth of Limerick hook has the tools of a better trade than that of a man with the pick and shovel.

The Glasgow Times tells of a man who dropped his baited hook into a deep still pool early Sunday morning to while away a golden hour before going to Sunday school and hooked an even pound channel cat which did not get back. He could invite the parson to dinner with perfect confidence in the fare provided.

Even the Republicans are getting a whack at the fat of the land in Mason county. The Mayesville Independent tells of eighteen empty pocketbooks being found in a woodland where they had been plucked from the pockets of wealthy Democrats during their deep engrossment in campaign eloquence, and rifled of their store of coined metal and greenbacks.—C. J.

Put on The Breaks.

There never was a time when there was such pressing necessity for the most rigid economy in the conduct of public affairs as exists today.

Half of the civilized world is at work destroying the accumulated wealth of nations. Half of the civilized world has called for gainful occupation for the surplus half of the laboring forces of each nation.

The property that is being destroyed and the property that should be created has formed or would form the basis of credit, and credit is the very breath of commerce.

Because we are outside of the war zone we are assuming the economic consequences of the war will not reach us. Some of them have already reached us.

Commerce, industry and economic progress are being wrecked by geographical lines. The world is in all of its branches the evil affects of the American Civil war upon economic conditions. We all felt again the consequences of the destructive forces involved in the Franco Prussian war. The Western nations did not escape economic loss traceable directly to the Balkan wars. It was the Balkan wars with their interruption of commerce and their destruction of property, with a forecast of a war that would involve all Europe—that was responsible for the hard times preceding August, 1914.

We must expect, therefore, a contraction of credit, a readjustment of values in new conditions of commerce, all of which summarized in one word, means disturbance throughout the world.

We must prepare for these disturbances by husbanding our resources, by accumulating capital, which is the dynamic force that must be used for the reconstruction of the waste places of Europe. Waste at all times is foolish and at a time like this it is cruel.

Yet, at this time we have in America more demands for public appropriations than we have ever had before. We are engaged in a nation-wide construction of county and State roads. This building of roads is sound economic. Good roads promote economic production and exchange.

But roads ought to be built without waste; but not in accord with the needs of the world's factors, nor of their demands; but in accordance with the needs of the different communities that have to pay for the roads.

We must have also increased appropriations for the army and navy, and for our fortifications. The demand for this increase runs from 200 millions, conceded by the President, to five or eight hundred millions demanded by different men and different organizations.

It is the part of wise statesmanship to keep down the appropriation for preparedness to the very lowest line consistent with safety.

Wall street speculation is affecting the minds of men everywhere, and the belief is that we have grown so suddenly rich that there is no sense in refusing to support any measure calling for large appropriation.

The whole world labors under an excessive burden of taxation, and this burden must be somewhat reduced. If we are to appropriate hundreds of millions for war purposes, we must curtail some of our appropriations, for peaceful progress, until the war burdens are properly adjusted to the shoulders of different nations.—Louisville Evening Post.

The Friend.

A friend is a person who is "for you," always, under any suspicions.

He never investigates you. When charges are made against you he does not ask proof. He asks the accuser to clear out.

He likes you just as you are. He does not want to altar you.

Whatever kind of coat you are wearing suits him. Whether you have on a dress or a hickory shirt, with no collar, he thinks it's fine.

He likes you moods and enjoys your pessimism as well as your optimism.

He likes your success. And your failures endear you to him the more.

He is better than a lover, because he is never jealous.

He wants nothing from you except that you be yourself.

He is one being with whom you can feel safe. With him you can utter your heart, its badness and its goodness. You don't have to be careful. In his presence you can be indiscreet, which means you can rest.

There are many faithful wives and husbands, there are but few faithful friends.

Friendship is the most admirable, amazing and rare article among human beings.

Anybody may stand by you when you are right; a friend stands by you even when you are wrong.

The highest known form of friendship is that of the dog to his master.

You are lucky if you can find one man or woman on earth who has that kind of affection for you and fidelity to you.

Like the shade of a great tree in the noon day heat is a friend. Like the home port with your country's flag flying after long journey's, is a friend.

A friend is an impregnable citadel of refuge in the strife of existence.

It is he that keeps alive your faith in human nature, that makes you believe it is a good universe.

He is the antidote to despair, the elixir of hope, the tonic for depression, the medicine to cure suicide.

When you are vigorous and spirited you like to take your pleasures with him; when you are in trouble you want to see him when you are dying you want him near.

You give to him without reluctance and borrow from him without embarrassment.

If you can live fifty years and find one absolute friend, you are fortunate. For of the countless number of human creatures that crawl the earth, few are of such stuff as friends are made.—Mystic Worker.

Tobacco Notes.

Tobacco stripping is going along nicely in Bracken county, and the tobacco is in fine condition for stripping.

Tobacco is curing nicely in Clark county and there are some fine crops which are about ready for stripping. Only a few, however, have stripped any.

Tobacco has cured up in the shape in Harrison county and the tobacco growers are waiting now for a rainy season, so they can begin stripping.

Little tobacco has been stripped in Cavale, on account of the continued dry weather. The farmers are very anxious for a suit able season so they can strip their tobacco and have it prepared for the opening sales.

The large Burley crop housed in Garrettsburg county is curing nicely under favorable conditions, and what the crop lacks in lightness of leaf will be offset by the excellence of coloring and quality. A few growers have done a little tobacco stripping.

The tobacco crop in Spencer and neighboring counties in south western Indiana, is hardly fifty per cent of normal, owing to unfavorable weather conditions. About 1,000 acres were planted in Spencer county, about two-thirds of it dark.

Brazil Corn Crop.

The first national exposition of corn in Brazil was held recently in Sao Paulo. It was modeled on those which have been held with success in the United States. It was held under the patronage of the state minister of agriculture. The exposition was visited by a prominent planters from many of the states, who took advantage of the occasion to supply themselves with high grade seeds for their coming crops. It is the intentions of the organizer to form "corn clubs" throughout the country, to be conducted in the same manner as in the United States.

When procrastination is the thief of time he may be justified in taking time by the forelock.

Success is a matter of luck only when it comes to some other fellow.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of Sunday School Course of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1912, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 14

DANIEL IN THE KING'S COURT.

LESSON TEXT.—Daniel 1:3-16, 20. GOLDEN TEXT.—Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.—1 Cor. 16:13.

The familiar story has been selected for the "World's Temperance Sunday"—it is the first record of his Babylonian experiences and is an illustrious example of those everlasting principles which govern a successful life.

I. Daniel's Position, vv. 1-7. Nebuchadnezzar, at the death of his father, returned to Babylon from besieging Jerusalem to take the throne. He carried with him Jehoiakim and a number of young men, "in whom was no blemish" (14). They were perhaps twelve years old. Among these were four who had been particularly selected for palace training and the name of each is compounded with the name of God; Daniel's meaning—"God is my judge." They are now alone in a licentious heathen palace and absolutely at the power of the king and his court. Their names are now changed; Daniel becomes Belteshazzar—favored of Bel. Such changing of names is customary in most heathen or Mohammedan lands even today.

A still greater danger or temptation confronts these young men, viz., that the king appointed them "a daily portion of the king's meat" (Am. Rev. v. 5). To refuse to eat invited ridicule and perhaps loss of life, but to eat was to break the Jewish law as to food (Deut. 12:23-25). See also (I Cor. 8:7-10; 10:27-28). Their captivity had been foretold (II Kings 20:17), but a change of location and name does not involve a change of heart as many a tempted one has discovered. These men in spite of natural appetites, danger of being thought peculiar, or even gratitude to king for lives preserved refused to eat the king's meat and to drink his wine.

II. Daniel's Purpose, 18:13. The real purpose of a man's heart not alone governs his acts but reveals what he is—God looks upon the heart. These men in spite of natural appetites, danger of being thought peculiar, or even gratitude to king for lives preserved refused to eat the king's meat and to drink his wine. Daniel purposed "in his heart" not to defile "himself." No compromise, no trimming because of being away from home, no partnership with the rich and opulent courtiers was to be "as clean as a hound's tooth." Men who dare to stand alone always find co-operation, so Daniel found those who stood by him (v. 12). Daniel exercised great tact in his dealings with the prince of the eunuchs but God had evidenced his protecting and leading care (v. 9) enabling him to win his way and persuade the eunuch to allow the suggested test (v. 12). If Christian workers would exercise more tact they would more frequently attain their desired ends (Luke 16:5). It is possible to be so unbendingly puritanical as to lay us open to a charge of Pharisaical pride. Daniel illustrates spotless purity, inflexible loyalty mingled with a sweet reasonableness that always gains its ends. Daniel had sufficient confidence in his God and faith in his actions to be willing to be submitted to the acid test of experience. His was a religion that could stand without being tried.

III. Daniel's Profit (Reward), vv. 14-21. He denotes such vegetables as beans and peas. Their diet was to be a general vegetable one. Samson as a Nazirite drank no wine. This age has yet to fully comprehend the reasonableness and efficacy of those ancient Jewish laws of sanitation and diet. Myriads of men are today engaging their graves with their teeth. The result of this test was that Daniel and his companions were delivered from transgressing God's laws and the prince of the eunuchs from being punished because of the physical condition of his charges. Beauty, health, and strength came to Daniel and his friends with the result of preferment, position, and influence at court (v. 19). They "stood before the king," (Rom. 14:10-12; I Cor. 3:10-15; II Cor. 5:9); (a) because of their unwavering loyalty to God and obedience to his Word (John 14:15; 16:28 R. V.); (b) because of their life of prayer, for it is the work of a Holy Spirit to lead us into wisdom (Luke 2:15; Acts 6:10) even as Daniel was thus blessed (v. 17) the spirit bestows diverse gifts (I Cor. 12:14-11); (c) and finally because having a special place in the purposes and plans of God their lives were counted precious in his sight (v. 27). Verily, "that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

Temperance Application.—This lesson suggests the value of total abstinence. "No user of tobacco has ever taken first honor at Harvard."—Longfellow. Temperance and self-control must begin in the home and be perpetuated in the strength and power of God which alone comes through an intelligent knowledge and obedience of his Word. There is no way to win success except by means of a complete victory; to compromise is to fail. The loyalty of such is not earth born and their victories are superhuman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Revell entertained with a Five Hundred party last Saturday night which was very much enjoyed by a goodly number of their friends. Delicious refreshments were served.

Richard Stephens, of Rabbit Hash neighborhood, has not been making his weekly visits to Burlington very long, but he is becoming pretty thoroughly accustomed and feels decidedly comfortable while here. The fact is he is breaking in very nicely.

J. P. Tanner, the popular and hustling rural mail carrier on Florence R. D. and H. V. Tanner and E. A. Renaker, of Erlanger, were callers at the RECORDER office last Saturday afternoon. They had called on the county clerk and secured his signature.

David Houston and wife, and Joseph Fisher and wife, were Saturday and Sunday guests of Johnnie Stephenson and wife.

Mrs. Fisher has been president of the county for fifty years and saw the county seat, for the first time, last Saturday afternoon.

Frank Rouse, Superintendent of the County Infirmary, is one of the thirty younger men of this county. He has not only looked after the infirm, but in the most satisfactory manner ever since he had charge of the institution, but he has found time to look after his family as well, improving it from year to year.

Hammett's Election Still in Doubt.

On the face of the returns received at the office of the Secretary of State, Judge James P. Lewis, the Republican candidate for Secretary of State has an apparent majority. Hon. Barksdale Hammett, Democratic candidate, of 412, but the vote of several counties is being contested, suits have been filed to prevent the counting of some portion of the vote returned, and it will not be known certainly who is successful in obtaining the office until the State Election Commission meets on Monday next to tabulate and declare the vote.

MORROW'S STATEMENT

ACCEPTING HIS DEFEAT

Not Willing to Plunge State into Strife That Fight Would Cause.

Hon. Edwin P. Morrow, opponent of Governor-elect Hon. A. O. Stanley in the recent campaign, issued a formal statement to the people of Kentucky last Thursday conceding his defeat and disclaiming any intention of instituting a contest before the Legislature. He went to his home in Somerset immediately thereafter.

Mr. Morrow thanks those who supported him and expresses the belief that only good will come out of the campaign. He predicts the Democrats within the next year will enact the people-only law, a corrupt practices act and a scientific and equitable tax law.

The statement follows:

"Tot he People of Kentucky:

"After eight days of doubt the closest election the State ever knew is at an end. The official count now discloses Mr. Stanley's election by a small plurality, and however or by what methods obtained I shall accept it as final.

"To the people of Kentucky, a contest before the Legislature would retard its progress, stop its development and create strife and bitterness. The welfare of Kentucky, its people and its material prosperity is above the ambition of any man or the success of any party.

"I have been defeated, I feel that out of my campaign has, and will, come only good for my State. I believe I have awakened the conscience of Kentucky to the extravagance and inefficiency in the conduct of the public business, to the desperate condition of the public treasury and, above all, to the truth that promises to the people bring only evil consequences.

"The next year will see enacted an anti-lulury law to destroy the 'Shack That Graft Built,' a corrupt practices act to protect the ballot and the public office, a scientific and equitable tax law. And in all the departments of State there will be an awakening and a guard placed over the expenditure of the people's money. Believing I will have been instrumental in procuring these results I feel that I have not labored in vain.

"I thank the people of Kentucky without regard to party for their personal kindness to me throughout the campaign and for their confidence in me as expressed at the polls. To those who fought and labored for me I attempt to give no word of praise, but gratefully acknowledge their aid. With all my power I shall continue the battle for the good of Kentucky and the welfare of her people."

"EDWIN P. MORROW."

ANOTHER OLD LAND

Shelburn Says the Crop of Tobacco is Light.

Silas Shelburne, a prominent warehouseman and tobacco buyer of Lexington, in an interview given out Saturday, asserted that he believes the crop this year, while of fair quality, is deficient both in acreage and in pounds over that of last year. Since the crop is "sound and clean," however, Mr. Shelburne says he believes the prices should reward the farmer liberally for his toil during the summer. Mr. Shelburne said:

"From what I have seen and heard of the crop of tobacco I am at a loss to know how the estimate published a few weeks ago in the tobacco journals and also in a number of our state papers was arrived at. I was not in the state at the time and did not see the report, but I am informed that it put the crop only a few thousand pounds less than last year."

"I suppose this estimate was made by state officials, and not very accurate, possibly it was gotten up some time ago, when the crop did look more promising. At present it does not take an extra good judge to see that the crop is very thin and light in weight—more so than any crop we have had in Kentucky for some years past. We do not believe that the crop in the Blue Grass belt will be more than two-thirds of what it was last year. In the first place, the people were disposed to cut their crops, fearing that they had lost money by overcrowding their barns, and owing to the low prices. Many of the tenants were left without the means or disposition to make another crop. Also owing to the cold and wet weather in the spring and the imperfect seed, a great many people did not put out as much as they expected to plant. So the crop is from 10 to 15 per cent short in acreage and from 25 to 33 per cent short in pounds per acre."

"This shortage, was, no doubt, largely due to the wet spell in June, which caused the plants to root too near the top of the ground, so they could not stand the hot weather that followed in July. The Burley crop last year was a very heavy one—about 307,000,000 pounds. This year we cannot hope for more than 200,000,000 pounds."

"With this shortage and with a good sound crop, we must expect fair prices for it. Certainly all the bright grades and all the good red working stock should sell at good prices, and the people will not be satisfied unless it does sell well. Most of the tenants came out in debt last year and with a shortage of more than 40 pounds to the acre this year they can not live and continue to grow tobacco unless they get better prices. I am very certain that but the good grades of tobacco will be needed, and that there will be a strong demand for it. I hope for and expect good prices for the crop, so difficult in exporting tobacco to some of the foreign countries that have been taking some of our common grades. I cannot expect those grades to sell as high as they would if the war was over."

"Our trade will meet on Monday night to decide what the market will open. I think it should open by the middle of the month, and you will certainly find that the Lexington market will afford greater, more complete and better prices than any other in the State."

Holds the World's Corn Championship.

An Illinois man now holds the world's championship in corn production. He raised 169 bushels and 61 pounds on a measure of ground. This record was secured by a combination of heavy fertilizing, careful cultivation and wise selection of seed.

How much it cost to produce this acre of corn has not been stated. Probably at present prices the crop was a profitable one. The average yield of corn in the State was raised to even half this figure at this time the price would drop till corn would be cheaper than wood, says the Chicago Journal.

When one considers the future the greatest importance of such a yield is seen. It is a prophecy of plenty for coming generations. It is proof that the plains of Illinois can support in comfort three or four times as large a population as is now dependent on them for food and this is equally true of two-thirds of the cultivated area of our vast country.

More Stock Should Be Kept.

Hogs and cattle are high and we must turn our attention to stock raising more. Hogs are a good price and should have a green pasture to run on for winter. Crimson clover, oats, rye or barley would make a good green pasture, if sown, early, for hogs, cattle and sheep.

Sheep do well in this country. The pure bred Southdowns with good care make good profit. They should have a green pasture of rye, oats, barley and plenty of clover for spring.

It costs more to raise a dog than it does a sheep and a hog. Why not get behind the dogs and but some good sheep and a brood sow and sow more grasses, clover, alfalfa, etc., for winter instead of buying it with right cut tobacco? Cut the timber off your pasture and give the grass a chance and see how your hogs, sheep and cattle improve.

Cattle do well here. We should have good cattle. As it costs as much to care for a scrub as it does a pure bred animal. You can also sell quicker and get more money.

The Sixth district is the only one in the State to make a Democratic gain. Not only that; it is the only district in which Mr. Morrow failed to carry a county. Mr. Stanley's majority was 7,034. The buying price for potatoes grown in Fayette county is fifty cents for graded stuff, but very few are being offered. It is an impression among wholesalers that the farmers are holding in hopes of a rising market. Ungraded potatoes are bringing only 40 cents. However, growers in this vicinity have learned to sort their crop, saving the small tubers for home consumption and stock feed.

A surgical operation of unusual features was that performed on Mrs. Julia Saunders, of Roseville, Tuesday. She is 73 years of age, and had an ovarian tumor weighing about forty pounds removed at Maplewood Infirmary. The fact of her age and the size of the tumor is unusual, and the operation was a very successful one. The work was done on local anesthesia, without the use of chloroform or ether, making the operation the more remarkable.—Glasgow Republican.

Back in the fifties, when the Hon. Lazarus W. Powell, of the city, was elected Governor of Kentucky, over the Hon. Archibald Dixon, also of this city, Dixon was apprised of the news that Powell was elected, is quoted as saying: "Oh, God, if I had to be beaten I'd rather be beaten by Laz Powell than anybody I know of." Powell's plurality in that memorable race was 872 in the State, thus showing a remarkably close race.—Henderson Journal.

Thursday night about 11 o'clock the residents of this city were awakened by the cries and quacking of a flock of wild geese which had become lost, and being attracted by the lights of this city had alighted in our midst. The scene about the courthouse seemed to be the center of attraction, and was filled with the wild fowl, several of which were caught by people residing in that neighborhood. After awaiting all the geese evidently found their bearings, and they rose and flew away in a northern direction almost as suddenly as they came.—Mayville Ledger.

Ossian Edwards, of Paris, yesterday closed a deal with W. E. Hibler, of Lexington, for the purchase of a flock of wild geese, which he will ship to Berlin, Germany, in the export trade. The price paid for the timber was not stated, but it is said to have been very large. Mr. Edwards' purchase was made in a spirited competition with buyers from Louisville, Lexington, Cincinnati and New York. The timber was taken from Mr. Hibler's farm near Paris, from where it will be shipped to New York for its long ocean journey.—Bourbon

Mr. Geo. This is indeed the proper spirit for the improvement of our roads and if each person in the county would keep the road in front of his own premises in good repair, which could be done very easily, it would not be long until our roads would be in first-class condition.—Cadiz Record.

Mr. Lear says that he can take the work of six boys or men and is always glad to do it. He will go ahead and stand in a lane or gate that he sees open and never allows one to go through. Mr. Lear is justly proud of "Fido."—Lancaster Central Record.

ROAD BUILDING

CONTINUANCE OF GOOD ROADS

Strong Movement Throughout Country for Honoring of Old Trails—Memorial Lincoln Highway.

No state in the nation is richer in road traditions than the state of Maryland. Much of its early history might be written from the records in which road construction, maintenance and highway figures. Some of the roads of Maryland are of ancient and honorable antiquity, and where these can be perpetuated—under conditions of modern transformation, the state is thereby engaged in preserving valued traditions while giving sanction to the established use of roads that have been traversed a century or more, says Baltimore American. There is a strong movement the country over for the honoring of the old roads and trails. This is manifest in the movement that contemplates a memorial highway to Abraham Lincoln. The Old National Turnpike has clustering about it traditions of history that have been transformed into literary lore under the magic pens of essayists and poets. In the far West agitation for the preservation of the old trails is gaining in strength, and the Old Oregon, and the Old Whiskey and other historic trails that date back to times immemorial will doubtless be preserved as far as possible and, where obliterated by the path of progress, will be marked. Thus the trails followed by the red men from Canada even down to Central America will in time be made matters of record and reverence.

While sentimental and practical considerations may not always be embraced if the conclusions of the good roads commission, yet these should be and doubtless are considered together in so far as the commission has enlightenment and understands the sentiment of the communities affected. But the main proposition is that the people of Maryland are a unit for the continuance of the good roads movement. Baltimore has been greatly advanced by the construction of paved streets from the country line, over roads that enter the city. It has deep interest in the prosecution of the good roads work for the benefit of the agricultural communities of the entire state. The traffic and transportation advantages are immense, while the state is thereby elevated in the view of the country at large. Let the good roads work go on.

CONTROL OVER LOCAL ROADS

State Highway Departments Should Be Given Some Measure of Supervision Over Thoroughfares.

The realization has become quite general that, in order to render maximum service, state highway departments should be given some measure of control over the construction and maintenance of local roads. For this class of roads an amount exceeding $160,000,000 is expended annually, with comparatively little result to show in the form of improved road mileage for this great outlay. The state of Iowa has met this situation by placing all the road work in the state under the direction of the state highway department.

Traffic is increasing so rapidly as to cause excessive wear upon the roads, especially in the vicinity of congested centers of population. This results in a heavy annual maintenance cost, averaging in the large eastern states not less than $750 per mile per annum. Many experiments have been made in the effort to devise types of road which can be maintained at relatively low cost. Thus far, aside from the cheaper forms of construction, the states are depending upon the various forms of bituminous macadam, concrete, and vitrified brick road. Yearbook United States Department of Agriculture.

Lay Tribute on Wealth.

Bad roads lay a heavy tribute upon our agricultural wealth every year. Only a small per cent of the farm, orchard, garden, and live stock products may be loaded upon cars without hauling. Some must be hauled over poor roads a long distance. This increases the expense of marketing, which, of course, means waste of our resources.

Horse Knows Good Roads.

If you want to know if good roads are good things, ask a horse.

Highway Improvement

COST OF ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Much Depends on Amount and Character of Grading Necessary—Other Factors Considered.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cost of a road is dependent upon not only the type of construction, but the amount and character of grading to be done, the cost of labor and materials, the width and thickness of surfacing, the character and amount of drainage required, and other factors of equal variability. Based upon general averages, it has been ascertained by highway specialists of the United States department of agriculture that under average conditions macadam roads can be built in southern states at from $4,000 to $5,000 per mile, gravel roads at from $1,500 to $2,500 per mile, road and clay and top soil roads at from $800 to $1,500 per mile. In New England and the other eastern states, macadam roads are reported at from $6,000 to $9,000 per mile, gravel roads at from $3,200 to $5,000, and bituminous macadam from $8,000 to $13,000, according to the character of construction, whether surface-treated, penetration, or mixing method. The bituminous type is quite general in the eastern states. As indicating costs in other sections of country, the state highway commissioner of Michigan reported in 1913 the average cost for macadam roads $4,300 per mile, clay gravel roads $1,500 per mile, and concrete roads about $10,000 per mile. The average cost of state highways constructed in Ohio in 1913 was $8,333. According to types in 1912, the brick-paved highways averaged $14,650 per mile and the macadam highways $5,550. In California the first 356 miles of the state system of highways cost an average of $8,143 per mile and consisted principally of this concrete with a thin coat of bitumen. The maximum and minimum figures given in this paragraph are not absolute, but are intended to present a general range of costs. The rates given include grading, drainage, surfacing, and engineering costs.

BOOSTER FOR BETTER ROADS

Cost of Transportation of Produce to Market is Lessened—Ditch, Drain and Drag Roads.

Good roads not only cheapen the cost of transporting farm produce to market, but make the country a desirable place to live in. We hear much talk about federal aid for good roads, yet if we wait for this movement to crystallize into a reality, the people of the country will be riding in mud for some time to come. The thing to do is to take of costs and buckle into a plan for local road improvement. Be a booster for the grading of roads and follow up the work with the King road drag for maintenance.

The principle of all good roads in all states is the same, viz., keeping the water out and off of the roadbeds. Ditch, drain and drag the roads. This is the tripod of good road building.

ADVANTAGES OF GOOD ROADS

Scarcely Secondary to Rail Transportation in Their Far-reaching Effect on Civilization.

The two great necessities of modern life are education and transportation, for civilization travels in the wake of good schools and good roads. Good roads lead in more good directions than the most far-seeing can contemplate. Commerce begins on the road, and byways; they affect school attendance and literacy; they control markets and prices, values of land, the development and contentment of the people, the cost and pleasure of living, and are scarcely secondary to rail transportation in their far-reaching effect. They determine the character and growth of the community, and the necessity for them cannot be overestimated, for a country that isn't worth a good road isn't worth living in.

Ishdo Boosts Good Roads.

The Idaho Motor association was perfected at Boise, Idaho, for the purpose of making a good roads campaign in southern Idaho. This marks an important step toward giving impetus to the good roads movement in the state.

Keep Weeds Down.

It does not take long to mow the growth along the roadside, ditch banks and fence rows. You could do it going to and from the fields, or when you have an hour to spare.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of Sunday School Course of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 21

JONAH A MISSIONARY TO NINEVEH.

LESSON TEXT—Jonah 1:1-10. GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I command you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.—Matt. 28:19, 20 R. V.

The story of Jonah is one of the most famous and most interesting in the Bible. In former series of lessons more extended use has been made of the book giving time to discuss its historicity and other questions involved. This time only one reference is used and that for the purpose of its missionary teaching. We accept the record of the book literally because similar facts are recorded in profane history but chiefly because of the testimony and the use made of it by Jesus (see Matt. 12:40; 16:4 and Luke 11:30).

1. The Prophet Proclaiming, vv. 1-4. Jonah "paid the fare" (1:3) and "out of the depths" (Ps. 130:1) God delivered him that he might fulfill his God-appointed task. Even so the nation of Israel is today crying from out of the depths of its woe among the nations and will certainly be "delivered" when the king comes, that it may take its rightful place and fulfill its God-appointed task. It is a wonderful testimony of God's grace (vii) that God's word came to Jonah a "second time." Once he ran from God's command but God is the God of the gospel of a "second chance" and a third if only we repent and do his commands, but God does not give a "second chance" to the unrepentant (Num. 14:10-12). The Holy Spirit sets forth the message Jonah is to deliver even so we are to proclaim the Gospel (see I Cor. 15:1-4) not the speculations of men nor the subtleties of philosophy. The messenger of God will find his message in the word of God and will declare it. It is the word which reveals God's love, his plan of salvation, and the destiny of the saints. "By the foolishness of preaching" men will be saved. The word "preach" literally means "to cry out" or "call out" and implies that earnestness and insistence needful for a true advocate or witness of God. But the power is not in us; it is not the word of God mingled with the theories of men, or with such added to the word. The Bible is the soul-winner's true staff. Nineveh, vast magnificent and wealthy could not atone for its wickedness; its greatness only increased its condemnation. Jonah did not spend any time to acquaint himself with conditions or to do sight-seeing but cried, "yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown." When he explicitly and minutely obeyed and delivered God's message he at once aroused and arrested the attention of the city. He did not attempt to present "cordons" or explain or defend his message. He did not seek to harmonize it with "current thought" nor give it a "modern expression." He was blunt and without compromise but gave an opportunity for repentance.

11. The People Penitent, vv. 5-10. Nineveh paid immediate heed to the man who did not slur over God's warning. Had the city continued in sin, it had not been delivered. Nineveh did four things and as a result they were saved: (1) They believed, "believed God" (v. 5). All true repentance is conditioned upon accepting God at his word (John 13:20). (2) They evidenced humiliation (v. 6). They gave such evidence by humbling themselves in the sight of God from the king upon the throne to "even the least." There was no apparent attempt to qualify or to evade God's decree, but rather to accept it and by taking proper place in his sight he delivered from the penalty of their just deserts. (3) They prayed (v. 8; cf. 6, 7). Their prayer was intense. The kind of prayer that counts with God must also count upon God, and God "is slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy" (Neh. 9:17). Prayer that is effective is (a) grounded upon the word of God (b) forsakes sin and (c) obeys the will of God. (James 1:22; 2:17). (4) They made sacrifice (v. 8). Mere humiliation and prayer does not effect a remedy unless there is a merciless judgment executed upon sin. Did Jonah fall in his mission? No! For God's predictions of ruin are not absolute and unconditional (Jer. 18:7-10). Chapter four is the record of Jonah's penitence and of God's loving-kindness.

Nineveh continued for nearly 200 years subsequently but it was then so completely destroyed that for nearly 2,000 years its location was unknown and disputed though now yielding a rich harvest for the archaeologist and Bible student.

Can a nation be stirred today? For answer witness Mott and Eddy in China. In 14 of China's chief cities during three months of 1913, 7,000 of the leaders of that nation enrolled as inquirers.

Have your class read carefully and prayerfully Psalms 2, Matt. 28:19, 20 (Golden text) and Rom. 1:16.

The Democratic majority in the next National House of Representatives is so close that the Democratic members will have to remain on deck all the time.

Barksdale Hamlett, who was the Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, appears to be defeated by Lewis, his Republican opponent, by something like five hundred votes.

Winter began to creep into this country by the way of the north west a few days ago, and forced the mercury down below zero in several localities, and putting a blanket of snow over this section Sunday night.

Candidates for offices at the disposition of the next General Assembly have begun their campaigns. Fortunately the efforts will be confined to legislators except where they appeal to a friend to pull for them.

A recent poll of the members of Congress indicates that a very large majority endorses President Wilson's position in regard to "preparedness," and that he will have no trouble securing the desired legislation on the subject.

Erlanger has three automobile repair shops, and each seems to have plenty of work for the force employed. There is money in automobiles for the builders and the repair shops, but the fellows who operate them find them a stimulus for the expenditure of his funds.

The Democratic party in Kentucky is busy just now checking up the mistakes it made where it came so near being defeated at the polls, while the Republicans are tearing their hair because they did not get out a few hundred more votes and come across with a victory.

Peace and prosperity reign supreme in the Petersburg Voting precinct since the question of "cow up" or "cow out" was decided by the sovereigns at the last election, and the cow's liberty will never again be imperiled there, the ballot box having proven a bulwark for her protection.

It's a thousand to one shot that the Democrats will nominate President Wilson for reelection, but whom the Republicans will select to oppose him is not apparent, but there are numerous gentlemen in that party who are preparing a boom to launch when they conclude the boom season has arrived. Next fall's Presidential campaign will be lively.

the farming community that large crowds from the country will visit it, and while in the city will spend money freely.

The Democrats and Republicans each had a special train load of speakers make a swing thru the State, the week preceding the election, telling the voters from the rear platform by what a very large majority they would win the election, proving themselves false prophets of the rainiest kind and creating apathy on the part of the voters. Results would have been better had the voters been told every vote was necessary to a victory.

Circuit Judge Charles Kerr made a special charge to the Fayette county grand jury concerning violations of the election laws. "Outrageous frauds have been committed," said he "and it is your duty to punish those who are the guilty parties." Mayor-elect J. C. Rogers, in an address to the board of commerce, said: "I have been designated in the campaign just closed as a liberal. I am liberal, but not in the same sense that my opponents intended to convey. There will be no violation of the law while I am Mayor. There will be no open town. There are in Lexington 109 saloons. Let them open on Sunday and there will be at least so many less saloons in Lexington on the Monday following."

In an effort to aid in the improvement in the horse stock of Kentucky the Kentucky Racing Commission has set aside an appropriation with which to purchase a number of useful Thoroughbred stallions. This Commission consists of a committee appointed by the Governor of the State to look after the Thoroughbred interests in Kentucky.

Known as a friend of the farmers, is Chairman of the Commission. Several of the Thoroughbred stallions that have been purchased. They are 16 hands and over in height and will weigh 1,100 to 1,200 pounds. They have been purchased with the idea of breeding large, active salable colts. It is not the purpose to place these stallions where there are already a number of first class stallions, but rather to place them out in the state where valuable stallions are scarce.

The Commission has a resolution will present these horses to the Department of Animal Husbandry of the State University of which Prof. J. J. Hooper is head, with the idea that this department will place the horses and keep track of them. It was believed that the Animal Husbandry Department would be in the better position to intelligently handle this proposition of raising the standard of horse stock in Kentucky than any other agency. It is desired to hear from farmers in the placing of these stallions. Farmers are asked to state the number of first class mares that could be expected and the favor with which the work would be regarded in their community. The stallion will be placed with a first class farmer who will be expected to keep the horse in good flesh, and in a clean stall with some pasture for exercise. Some of the horses will do to ride about the farm. None of them will be vicious and unruly.

There are many markets for half-bred horses. Some of them are used on the farms, some are sold as cross country hunters, some go to the army for officers' mounts and some are used as saddle and buggy horses. It is hoped that the stallions may be kept in the community to be used as brood mares, because an infusion of Thoroughbred blood makes a good foundation for the breeding of any class of horses.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Governor McCreary has issued a Thanksgiving proclamation setting aside Nov. 25 as Thanksgiving Day. The proclamation follows:

To the People of Kentucky: The year is drawing to a close and it is a time-honored custom of our people to turn aside a while in the autumn from their regular avocations of life in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many kindnesses and mercies. We have been blessed with peace and law and order, abundant crops and financial success and prosperity on every line. Health and happiness have been given to our people as much as, or more than ever before.

While war has devastated and desolated many nations in Europe, and millions of men have been killed and hundreds of millions of dollars have been expended, a Gracious Providence has enabled us to preserve friendship and comity with the nations with which we have to deal, and to bestow aid and helplessness to many in distress and in need.

Our people are more and more appreciating the part they have to play at a time when all the world is excited and aroused by unprecedented disasters and dis-appointments, and with an unanimity unparalleled all are hoping that our nation shall become the aiding and directing Peacemaker of the world.

Now, therefore, I, James B. McCreary, Governor of Kentucky, do hereby designate Thursday, the 25th day of November, 1915, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I invite the people throughout the State of Kentucky to observe that day and in their homes and places of worship render thanks to Almighty God. My testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal of the Commonwealth to be hereunto affixed. Done at Frankfort the 4th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, and in the one hundred and twenty-fourth year of the Commonwealth.

JAMES B. MCCREARY.

Post Yourself as to the Law.

Now that the hunting season is here it would be well for hunters or sportsmen, in addition to informing themselves as to the requirements of the State Game Laws, to get in touch with the Federal restrictions regarding migratory birds. The Department of Agriculture has issued a warning that Federal regulations as amended Oct. 1, 1914, will be enforced this year in regard to all migratory birds, even in states where local laws are in conflict with Federal regulations. The Government has studied the migration of birds as no state or individual can, and the shooting restrictions have been based on such findings. Every real sportsman will recognize the wisdom of these findings and cooperate in protecting certain birds for years to come, a closed season for years for some, indefinitely for insect-eating birds short season for others, and restricted areas for many. Study the law before getting out your gun!

When did you salt your stock? Remember you like a little salt each meal, plenty of good water, will help keep stock in a thriving condition.

W. T. U. NEWS.

W. T. U. NEWS.
Mrs. Belle Dickey.
The thing is having its effect.
The "Wetters" Stability League has not lost the voters.
There is no hysteria in the liquor camp over the Ohio results.
The liquor gang reads its doom in the reduced wet majority in Ohio.
The wets are feeling worse than the dries over the Ohio result.
Outside of Cincinnati Ohio went to prohibition with a whirl.
The more above and so far as the state is concerned all will be over John Barleycorn.
The little more education and per centage, Ohio will be as dry as the inside of a bake oven.
The country districts of Ohio are feeling dryer, and in the big cities are cutting down their wet votes.
Cincinnati wets believe in home rule, they say, but what kind of home rule do you call it which makes it possible for Cincinnati's wets to dominate the other 87 counties of the state?
Results in Ohio Please Illinois.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 4.—The defeat of the proposed Stability amendment to the constitution of Ohio is a greater victory for the dries than that of the wets in voting to retain the saloon in the state, according to E. Scott
McBride, head of the Anti-Saloon League of Illinois.
A great part of the Ohio dry campaign was directed from Chicago. Wet leaders regarded the Ohio result as an indication that sentiment in Illinois would be overwhelmingly in their favor in a state-wide fight.
"The defeat of the amendment," said Mr. McBride "is a victory for us. It means we will begin at once another state-wide fight to make Ohio dry. The fact that the pro-saloon majority in the state was cut more than half from the last previous state-wide vote there indicates to me that we will win the next time."
"The Stability Amendment, which was backed by the wets, provided that upon the defeat of a proposal by the electorate the proposal could not be submitted to the people again for six years.
It was vigorously opposed by the dries, under the leadership of William Jennings Bryan.
"We must remember," said Mr.
McBride, "that this was an off year, and that probably the vote was smaller than it would be at a normal time. We will be able to get an expression from a larger percentage of the electorate next time."
"Eventually we will win in Ohio, and by that I mean within two years at the outside. The wonderful advance in dry sentiment in cutting the wets' majority from the 84,000 they had at the previous state-wide election to the present figures indicates the trend of public opinion, not only in Ohio, but all over the country.

"As to the result in Illinois, the fact that we lost two small towns is not particularly significant, because of the fact that the sentiment for or against liquor in them is very evenly divided and the vote is likely to show a majority either way at any time."

Submission of National Prohibition
Theme of Discussion.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Altho it is a month until the new Congress meets, many of the members are dropping into Washington to get the "lay of the land."
While the problem of preparedness for war is the one most talked about in hotel lobbies and in the numerous conferences, the question of submitting national Prohibition to the states is receiving almost as much attention.

Prospects are much better for securing the necessary 2-thirds votes for submitting the Hobson amendment than a year ago. It is believed by those who are interested in submission that the fight this winter will be aided greatly by political conditions and the nearness of the presidential campaign. A number of leaders of both political parties who might otherwise be against the Prohibition resolution are said to favor it as a means of eliminating the liquor question from next year's national contest.
One reason why the dries feel confident that the resolution will be submitted by this Congress is the fact that Mr. Underwood is no longer Democratic floor leader. Mr. Kitchin, of North Carolina, will occupy that position in the next Congress and Kitchin is a dry and may himself become sponsor for the Prohibition amendment in the House.
Leaders of both parties fear the liquor question as an issue in next year's campaign. If the question is submitted to the states this winter it will no longer be a national issue, but the submission will carry with it a reference to the several states and it will then be fought out in the state Legislature. This gives the members of Congress a splendid excuse for voting for submission, even though they may be opposed to Prohibition.
Another thing that will help the amendment this winter is the fact that it had a majority vote in the House in December last year. Since that time several states have gone over into the dry column and the Prohibition area is rapidly spreading. There is little doubt that the necessary two-thirds majority can be secured in the Senate. The stiffest fight will be in the House, but it looks as if the necessary votes will be forthcoming.—American Issue.

SUMMER BREAKFASTS.

Except for those who are working at hard labor a simple breakfast of fruit, cereal, an egg and toast or a bit of bacon and a cup of coffee is a sufficient and satisfying meal. A nice way to treat a cereal that is cooked and is to be served cold, is to put it, while cold, through the potato ricer. When wanted, it is then in an attractive form to serve.

Corn Toast.—Cut stale bread in slices and toast. Cook three table-spoonsful of butter with one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion three minutes, stirring constantly. Add two tablespoonsful of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually, while stirring, two cupsful of thin cream. Bring to the boiling point and add two cupsful of canned corn, drained, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika, and one egg, slightly beaten.
Again heat to the boiling point, and simmer two minutes. Arrange on the toast which has been buttered and placed on a hot platter. Pour over the corn mixture and serve hot.

Creamed Salt Codfish.—There is no more wholesome dish for any meal than creamed fish. Pick the fish in small pieces; there should be three-fourths of a cupful. Cover with lukewarm water and soak. Drain, put into a saucepan, add 2½ tablespoonsful of butter, stirring until the butter is melted and mixed with the fish. Sprinkle with two tablespoonsful of flour and stir until mixed; then pour on gradually, while stirring, one cupful of scalded milk. Bring to the boiling point and let boil for two minutes. Add one egg, slightly beaten, just before sending to the table.

Southern Eggs.—Butter small rame-kin dishes and half fill with hot boiled rice. Slip a raw egg in each, season with salt, pepper, butter, grated cheese and a little chopped boiled ham. Pour in hot water to surround the dishes, cover and bake until the eggs are set.

Sautéed Tripe.—Wipe fresh honeycomb tripe, cut in pieces for serving, and parboil ten minutes, using equal parts of milk and water to cover tripe.
Drain, season and roll in flour. Sauté in butter.

It was fought by the mothers of

DAINTY SEASONABLE DISHES.

When one wishes to serve a fruit cocktail a little unusual in combination try this. Use a French potato cutter and cut out balls of the pink edible portion of watermelon or a mixture of musk-and water-melon could be used if so liked. Then pour over these rosy balls a sauce of orange juice or other combinations of juices which will occur to one. Serve in sherbet cups.
This is an especially attractive dish and one which will be enjoyed by all.
Of course the melon should be well chilled; it is best to pack the balls in ice after preparing them and serve well chilled.

Venison Heart.—This sounds out of season, but is perfectly allowable by law. Take three veal hearts, trim and wash well; slice in uniform slices and roll in salted flour. Fry four slices of bacon to a crisp brown, take out the bacon and add a small sliced onion to the fat; when the onion is a light yellow add the heart slices and fry to a rich brown. Heat a casserole and lay in the browned meat, add to the fat in the pan a cupful of soup stock, one-half a minced red pepper, a half a bay leaf, a clove of garlic and a teaspoonful of salt; cook covered for two hours. Five minutes before serving add the bacon. Serve with new potatoes and spinach.

Spanish Pepper Pot.—Scrub and boil two pounds of honeycomb tripe; cook in two waters until nearly tender. Add to the last water a small knuckle of veal, a piece of chili pepper (red hot), three whole cloves, two bay leaves, a pinch of marjoram and sage, salt, pepper and a clove of garlic pounded to a paste. While this is cooking, boil dried lima beans until tender, drain and add to the tripe.
Thicken the gravy and pour over all.

Fried Eggplant.—Cut peeled egg plant into one-fourth-inch slices.
Press to remove some of the juice by placing the slices under a weight.
Dust with salt and pepper and dip in a thin fritter batter; then fry a golden brown in hot fat.

HE USED A BOY

The lecturer was striving to give his audience a vivid idea of the value of a thorough education. He evidently felt that he had not said enough to be absolutely convincing for he paused and after looking over the audience, asked:

"Will somebody in my audience let me have a small boy on the platform for just a moment or two? Somehow or other I feel that you don't get the great importance of education in this rapid age in which we live. We must have better educated boys and girls if we are to keep abreast of the times."

When he had a bright-eyed youngster by his side, the man put one hand on top of the child's head and the other under his chin. The lecturer looked steadily at the people before him for a moment before he remarked impressively:

"You see I have put one hand under the boy's chin. I did that so that I might divide his head from his body for you. If you were to take all of this boy that lies below the hand under his chin and train it and educate it as carefully as possible, what would it sell for in the market where men are bought and sold? It would bring about $150 a day. You'd have a fine strong day laborer, wouldn't you?"

"Now let's see what about the rest of this boy, the small portion between my two hands, his head. Suppose we give it real training. Suppose we give that hidden part we call the brain, a real, strong, fine education. What's the boy worth now? Can you buy him in the market where men are bought and sold for $150? You have lifted him absolutely out of that class and the price he can command has grown immeasurably."

"What I am already striving to do is to make you see what possibilities lie in the boys and girls everywhere. I want you to think of the little school houses throughout the State as training places for this limitless portion of each child's life. I want you to see to it that your children and your neighbor's children have a place where this training may be done at its best."

"I BOUGHT A BUNCH OF PIGS"

"Got the biggest piece of news yet," yelled Dave Thurman as he rode up to the old blacksmith shop at Ashbottom.

"Well give it to us, Dave."

"John Hughes' gone to run for school trustee."

"No, you're jokin', Dave. John, he's too busy a farmer to bother with being school trustee, besides he hasn't got any kin folks teachin' school that I ever heard of."

"That may be so, but I got word about it mighty straight. His wife tol' mine he was goin' to run an' I reckon that's just about as straight as anybody could get anything. Here he comes now on his 'bay mare, an' you can ask him for yourselves."

When the tall, fine-looking man had given the blacksmith some instructions concerning the mending of a doubletree, he turned to the men and said:

"I'll bet anything Dave has told you I'm out for the office of school trustee for Ashbottom Sub-district."

"Yes, he said you were goin' to run, but we couldn't hardly believe it," answered one of the neighbors.

"Why not?"

"Well, because mighty few men ever wanted the trouble and bother of worryin' with a young teacher an' a lot of children. Besides there ain't a penny in it an' plenty of hard work if the man does his duty."

The candidate sat down on the frame of the grindstone under the big elm and quietly crossed his legs. For a time he was silent with an odd, bitter smile on his face. At length he arose and said:

"Any one of you men would fight if anybody told you that you really didn't love your children, wouldn't you?"

The men about him nodded their assent and he hurried on.

"You do love 'em; I know you do because I love mine, too. But boys, there's ever so many ways of lovin' children an' it's only lately that I've seen a new way to love 'em. My children have been goin' to school out at the little school house for five years an' I hardly ever gave 'em a thought. I voted for any ol' galoot that wanted to be trustee just like you have."

"What made you swap around in your ideas?" asked one of the men.

"Feedin' hogs an' keepin' my eyes open."

Large droves of turkeys are being marketed in Paris by the farmers of Bourbon and surrounding counties. The turkeys are reported as being in good condition, and the Paris dealers are paying 18 cents per pound on foot for them, delivered in Paris. Turkeys intended for the Thanksgiving trade should be delivered in Paris this week.—Paris Kentuckian-Citizen.

George Jones, of the Wine Sap country, showed the petrified head of some fowl, that he found a few days ago in a spring branch, that may have lived hundreds of years ago. It was about the size of a man's little finger and about two-thirds as long.—Hart County News.

The turkey crop in West Kentucky will be one of the biggest ever according to local poultry dealers, who say that the holiday bird will sell for well above the same prices as those of 1914. Dealers are offering twelve cents a pound on foot now.

A Miss Not a Mile.

Whew! But it was a close finish. A miss may be as good as a mile, but it is not as comfortable at the moment to be missed half an inch by a cannon ball "as to hear that cannon ball dropped a mile away. The swish of the thing thru the air takes your breath or knocks you down. This was the way of it when Morrow did not miss by a mile defeating Stanley.

Democrats haven't had such a shock for quite a while. With a Democratic Legislature and a Democratic administration the party is not only still in the ring, but also intact and in trim to go to work for the State's best interests.

The Stanley margin is so narrow that every good Democrat in Kentucky will heave a sigh of relief when the certificate of election is handed to the next Governor of Kentucky. It was a close shave for Stanley and the party, a very close shave, indeed.

As the Courier-Journal aptly puts it, a party so elected to power is a party on trial, and that is fortunate for the State. The State Journal rests confidence in the Democratic record being made such that the party on trial will be acquitted of any charge of inefficiency or insincerity that may be laid by the Republicans during their next campaign. But gentlemen of the administration, and gentlemen of the General Assembly, that record must be one of "stunts" and not of mere avoidance of doing anything flagrantly improper. Kentucky must move along the next four years.—State Journal.

Going Some.

A Frenchman, an Englishman and an American comfortably seated in a London club, were arguing as to which of the three countries had the fastest trains.

The Frenchman said: "I've been on one of our trains when it was going so fast that the telegraph poles looked like the teeth in a comb."

The Englishman spoke up: "In this country all of our express trains go so fast that alternate fields of carrots, turnips and sheep pastures look like a lamb stew."

The American said: "Well, you may not believe it, but I stepped aboard the Manhattan Limited in New York one day and in turning to kiss my wife good-bye, I kissed a woman in Philadelphia."

Baker, made most excellent music for the delightful occasion. "Mrs. Briggs of the Poultry Yard," a drama in three acts, and the laughable farce, "A Paper Match" will be given at the Beaver Lick Christian church, on Thursday night, Nov. 25th.

VERONA.

The marriage of Miss Hope Whitson and Mr. D. Hess Vest was solemnized Tuesday afternoon, December 14th, at 2:30 o'clock, at New Bethel Baptist church. The church was artistically decorated, the color scheme being green and white. The altar was lighted with white tapers. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. C. Wayman, of Louisville, in a most beautiful manner. Miss Alice Whitson, youngest sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and entered with the bride. The groom entered with Mr. Harvey Whitson, brother of the bride. The ushers were Messrs. John Vest, of Walton, and Jesse Hamilton, of this place. Miss Rose Whitson played Mendelssohn's wedding march as the bridal party approached the altar, and "Flowers Song" during the ceremony. The bride and bridesmaid both wore blue tailored suits and hats to match. The bride carried white roses and lilies of the valley—the bridesmaid pink carnations. After the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride, Mrs. A. E. Harris. Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Whitson, and dainty refreshments were served to the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Vest left for a number of days in Central Ky., where they will visit places of interest. After the first of Dec. they will be at home to their many friends in Verona.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. J. E. Thompson and daughter, Louise, of Augusta; and Mrs. E. T. Collins and son of Crittenden; Dr. and Mrs. Jones and son, Mr. and Mrs. John Vest, Mr. J. J. Hudson and daughter, of Walton; Mr. and Mrs. Leomia, of Independence; Mrs. Alfred Byers, of Kansas; Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Froman, Misses Anna V. Parker, Joan Craig, and Albert Craig of Ghent, and Mr. J. G. Hudson.

FLICKERTOWN.

Corn is selling at sixty cents around here. Edgar Northcutt is visiting her children near here. F. M. Voshell was the first to butcher in this locality. Curt White was a Saturday night guest at Holt White's. Owen Utz visited at James Minnor's, Saturday and Sunday. Mesdames E. Akin and family were Sunday guests at R. J. Akin's. The Ladies Aid Society met with Mrs. Fannie Gaines last Tuesday. Truman Riggs and wife visited at Bolivar Shinkle's last Tuesday night. Leslie Sobree and family called on J. W. White and family, Sunday afternoon. Cage Stephens sold his turkeys to a Lawrenceburg buyer at 18¢ cents per pound. For Sale—Two fresh cows with calves by their side. Call on J. W. White or phone on farmers line No. 8.

GUNPOWDER.

L. T. Utz is attending commercial college in Cincinnati. Frank Hossman, of Hebron, attended church at Hopeful, last Sunday. Mrs. Ray, who has been confined to her bed for several weeks, is improving. Lonnie Tanner and wife and Rev. Royer were entertained by W. P. Utz and wife last Sunday. W. P. Beemon, Robert Tanner, Lon Acre and others shipped a load of stock to Cincinnati, last Wednesday. Wm. Busby and wife, of Sedamsville, and Monte Martin and wife, broke bread with L. H. Busby and wife last Sunday. Lute Bradford went to Big Bone a few days since on a hunting tour, and brought home two rabbits as a compensation for his day's labor. A meeting of the Joint Council of the Boone County Charge will be held at Hopeful next Saturday, Dec. 4th, at 2 o'clock. Full attendance of the members of that body is desired as there is important business to come before the meeting. Rev. Geo. A. Royer, of Union Bridge, Maryland, visited the Boone County Charge and preached at Hebron last Saturday at 10:30 a. m., and at Ebenezer at 2:30 p. m. Rev. Royer is a very interesting speaker and made a very favorable impression on all of those who heard him.

DEVON.

Jas. W. Bristow was in the city, Monday. Ben Bristow has three young horses for sale. J. C. Conrad has a nice farm of 70 acres, for sale. Elmer Groger and Russell Miller made a trip to Bog Bone one day last week, and killed thirty-three rabbits. Mr. and Mrs. Hoba Watson, of Morris Station, were guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Watson, and attended the party Tuesday evening. Miss Alice Watson entertained a number of the young folks at a home Tuesday evening, with music and dancing. A delightful lunch was served by her mother, Mrs. James Watson. Howard First and Miss Tillie Cook gave the young folks a surprise by going to the city and getting married. The young couple have many friends who wish them much happiness.

Be Thankful.

This, Thursday, is Thanksgiving day, the day upon which, ignoring neutrality, Uncle Sam will make a general attack on turkey and hundreds of thousands of turkeys will be slaughtered.

CONSTANCE

Ira Ryle and wife, of Commissary, were week-end guests at C. J. Craven's. The supper given by the Sunday school was a decided success. $21.50 were cleared. Mrs. Mary Hey, who lives across the line in Kenton county who has been very ill of pneumonia, is better. Bro. Carter preached an excellent sermon to a large and attentive congregation at his last appointment here. Frank McGlasson, of Taylorport neighborhood, is remodeling his house, and when completed it will be an up-to-date home. Ray Craven and wife entertained Mr. and Mrs. Ryle Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Ollie Kottmyer had them for Sunday guests. Mrs. Kraft died at the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Kate Howard, last Sunday of blood poisoning. The funeral was held at Constance church, last Wednesday afternoon. Services by the ministers of the Bromley Lutheran church took place at 2 o'clock. The community was shocked Saturday evening when it became known that a strange man had been seen in the middle of the river. He left his hat and overcoat so that he was easily identified. It gave the captain quite a shock as nothing of the kind ever happened before in all the years that he has been on the boat.

FRANCESVILLE.

Several in this community went to Cincinnati, Monday, to see the famous Liberty Bell. Jerry Estes and daughter, Miss Katherine, spent Sunday afternoon at W. L. Brown's. J. S. Eggleston and family spent Sunday at Chas. Wilson's in Hebron neighborhood. A. Oden, wife and children, and Leon Ayler and wife spent Sunday at Chas. Beall's. Manlius Goodridge-batched his horse last Monday being the first in this community to do that work. Mrs. John Utzinger and son, Howard, and Mrs. Holland Goodridge, spent Sunday with Mary Frances and Emma Goodridge. The farmers in this neighborhood are making slow progress shucking corn and stripping tobacco because of the unfavorable weather for that class of work. The meeting at Sand Run closed Wednesday night with seven additions. Six were baptized in the morning and two on Wednesday afternoon, and one will be baptized later.

HUME.

Johnnie Fitzharris' new building is almost completed. Mrs. Fannie McLaughlin fell and broke her arm, Wednesday. Richard Schwinke was in the city, Friday and Saturday. Mrs. J. M. Jackson visited her daughter near Glencoe, last week. Miss Sallie Stachl was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Markesberry, Sunday. Jen Fennell and John Berning, of Covington, visited friends here the latter part of the week. Harry Baker, of Howard Miller, two of Gallatin's prominent young men, were guests at Arch Noell's the latter part of last week. J. B. Baker went to the St. Elizabeth hospital, and was operated on for a growth on one of his limbs. He is getting along nicely and will return home in a few days. His wife accompanied him.

PT. PLEASANT.

C. E. Tanner called Dr. Clore, of Erlanger, to see a sick cow one day last week. Thos. Bonar and Howard Tanner spent a couple of days last week visiting and hunting in Pendleton Woods. We had as guests last Sunday, Mrs. Amanda Tanner and daughter, C. B. Tanner and sisters, G. J. Miller and family and Nicholas Crigler. Those that united with the Pt. Pleasant church during the protracted meeting were baptized at 10 o'clock, last Saturday afternoon and received into the church Sunday morning. Sunday Nov. 14 Mrs. L. A. Popham celebrated her 62d birthday anniversary with a family reunion, consisting of her children, grand children and neighbors. She was presented a gold watch by her children. Mrs. Frances Clutterbuck entertained in her usual pleasant manner recently, the following guests: Robt. Clutterbuck and wife and Chas. Cooper, of Covington; Hal Hihouse and wife, John Clutterbuck and wife, Homer Baker and wife, of Ludlow; Jas. Day and wife, of Lexington; Ed. Osborn and wife, J. H. Baker and wife, B. H. Tanner and wife, J. H. Walton, Hubert Grimesley and John and Harvey Baker.

FLORENCE.

Miss Coreta Tanner spent Sunday with Miss Mary Utz at Devon. Mrs. Florence Walker was the guest of Miss Emma Scott, Sunday. Mrs. Lloyd Ayler and children spent last Thursday with Mrs. R. K. Tanner. Mrs. Sallie Fulton and Mrs. Chas. Fulton spent Thursday with Mrs. Albert Lucas. Mrs. Irene Cahill spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cahill, near Erlanger. Mrs. Matt Bradford has returned home after a visit with her brother at Erlanger. Mrs. J. R. Whitson was the guest of Mrs. Sallie Myers at Union several days last week. Mrs. Lizzie Bartel has returned, after a visit with Mrs. Noah Zimmerman at Guapowder. Mrs. Mollie Beemon had as her guest, Thursday, her daughter, Mrs. Lon Acre, of Limaburg. Mrs. C. Carpenter entertained Rev. Arnold and Rev. Bedinger and Wilford Mitchell Sunday. Miss Mildred Bouge was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Phil Kline in Covington, last week. Joseph Scott had as his guests, Thursday, his daughter, Gutzwiller and Tony Bentler, of Ohio. Mrs. Charles Hollinsworth, of Covington, was the guest of Mrs. Nettie Corbin, several days last week. The ladies of the Baptist church will give an Easter supper Dec. 4th at the old Catholic church. Lee Clutterbuck's little daughter, Thelma, was the guest of Mrs. Ed. Sidnor, Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Tom Arnold, of Williams-town, was the guest of his brother, Mr. Will Arnold, several days last week. Mrs. Mike Cahill entertained last Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cahill, Mrs. Pat Cahill and daughter, Mrs. Nora. Mrs. Will Goodridge and daughter were the guests of Mrs. Mollie Hughes at Cincinnati, several days last week. The Lecture and Pictures—The Passing Play, which was given on at the Christian church last Thursday night will be Friday night. Misses Mildred Boyce, Nannie Chubb, Messrs. Russell Mitchell, Charles and Russell Corbin, spent Saturday evening with Misses Louise and Edith Sanders in Erlanger.

BELLEVUE.

Miss Sophia Weisick is visiting relatives here. Born, to Hubert Loudon and wife, Nov. 13th, an eight pound boy. Miss Carrie Mae Rice, of Petersburg, is visiting relatives here. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McNeely, of Hathaway, spent Sunday here with their son, Ernest and wife. Mrs. R. W. Rice and daughter, Miss Nevada, spent last Tuesday at B. C. Rice's near Waterloo. Andy Cook and family, near Burlington, spent Saturday night and Sunday at J. J. Maurer's. Miss Lizzie Lee Rice, of Waterloo, spent several days last week with her husband, Mr. W. H. Rice. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mason spent several days with Leomer Loudon and wife near Waterloo. The bazaar, supper and entertainment given by the Bellevue school, last Saturday, was well attended and the fancy work, candy and cakes were disposed of at good prices. In behalf of the school, the staff all helped in any way to make this a success.

PETERSBURG.

Miss Edna Beall was in Cincinnati, Saturday. Miss Lou Allen is visiting relatives at Danville. Don't forget the bazaar at the Krutz Hall, Saturday, Nov. 27. Mrs. Wm. Chambers is visiting Mrs. Milo Atkinson in Memphis, Tennessee. Mrs. W. E. Ferguson was a regular guest of relatives at Moores Hill, Indiana. Miss Corda Rife, of Cincinnati, is spending a few days with Mrs. J. B. Berkshire. Mr. L. E. Keim and children and Miss Clara Swaezey were in Cincinnati Monday. Miss Agnes Thompson was the week-end guest of Miss Alice Walton at Burlington. Mrs. Alice Berkshire has finished her millinery season and returned home for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisher, of Lawrenceburg, were the Sunday guests of Mrs. Fanny Berkshire. Rev. Carter preached a very good Thanksgiving sermon at the Christian church Sunday morning. The ladies of Petersburg M. E. church will hold a parcel post sale and a social at Krutz Hall from 10:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. Saturday, Nov. 27th. Do your Christmas shopping early and help along the church. Repair fund at the same time.

A Knocker vs. Knockers

From Knockersville. (For Thanksgiving)

Ah, ye knockers from Knockersville! Why art thou so still any way? It has been nearly a year, since we have heard from your Honorable President's office chair, or your brilliant secretary's pen, like the warrior's sword, so mighty and bold in the battlefield of ten thousands, or a mighty number untold. Is it because you have gone to the German-Russian war, to find conquests you could never find here with your method of knocking at both friend and foe, or have you gone off on a little vacation on "a fishing bent," fell in the stream, getting a little well-deserved ducking and retreating from active office duties and quite ashamed to even knock for admittance to our gathering at our boundlessly filled board, growing under the weight of the good things of life, on this one of the greatest of our National Holidays, and giving up knocking as a bad job, only fit to be shunned by all well regulated mortals, or citizens of our country and nation, as they should?

As we gather around our festive board and I, in my mind's eye, gaze around on the bright and happy faces of both old and young, full of life, laughter and love for our National creed, so full of freedom for one and all of us, that makes us give our eyes for this one day, I know there's no room for that chronic knocker and nothing for him to do, if he has escaped to his old water grave among the finny tribes, but to crawl in the small end of a large stump, or to don the hood and cloak of the good and Holy Monks and his brethren, and isolate monastery to spend the rest of his days in humble repentance, then, looking at that remnant of his kind, he might have the knocking that should not have been, I cannot help offering my sincere and heartfelt thanks to my friends who have extended so many tokens to me of friendship, through sympathetic kindness and consideration, aiding me to bear the present hard day, that seems to have come upon me in all its humiliating forces, that has been so hard for me to bear, and I wish them many such tokens and nothing but good will to the knockers from Knockersville.

A Bad Spell.

The spelling teams representing the schools of Walton, Petersburg and Burlington, met at Burlington last Friday afternoon, to decide the winner of the banner given by the County Board, to be held by the High School winning the contest. This banner had been held by Burlington for two years and would have become their permanent trophy had they won it again this year. But this they failed to do, Walton being the victorious team. The spelling of the three teams was bad, Burlington missing nine, Petersburg nine and Walton seven words out of a total of forty-five each. The words were difficult however, and were words that usually escape the notice of High School pupils.

An Interesting Grange Meeting.

A very interesting meeting of the Boone County Pomona Grange was held at Excelsior Grange hall Saturday, Nov. 20th. Ray Rogers, of Hebron, gave a splendid talk on Grange work and the benefits derived by the farmers from organization and co-operation. The members were unanimous in the adoption of the Resolution offered by Worthy Master G. O. Hafer that 25 per cent of the proceeds of the sale of prize products shown at the Corn Show be donated to the Orphans Home of Covington. The members parted feeling that the meeting had been one of pleasure and profit to all.

Ed. L. Walker and son, Covington real estate agents, brought a party out, Tuesday, to look at G. W. Sandford's farm out on the East Bend road with a view to purchasing it.

MISS THERESA LASSING

Dies From Burns Sustained at Her Home Near Union.

Miss Theresa Lassing, 40 years old, Union, Boone Co., Ky., died last night at Booth Memorial Hospital, Covington, Ky., from burns sustained when her clothing caught fire from an open grate fire.

Judge J. M. Lassing, Newport, her cousin, said from what he could learn Miss Lassing was alone in a room, and it was thought that she was standing in front of a grate and her clothing became ignited.

The attention of a negro servant was attracted by her screams when she ran into the open grate. A bucket of water was secured and the flames extinguished, not however, before the woman was burned from her shoulders to her ankles—Monday Enquirer.

Miss Lassing was the daughter and only child of the late Hon. L. W. Lassing, of Union, this county.

Miss Lassing was residing at Elm Tree Place, on the pike between Union and Beech—which homestead she had owned and occupied since the death of her father many years ago, and the only one present when the horrible accident occurred was a colored man, who went to her relief when he heard her screams, but the flames had done their fatal work, her entire person being badly burned. This occurred between 8 and 9 a. m. Sunday morning, and she was in the hospital in about two hours thereafter and survived until eight o'clock that night. The funeral was preached at Union Presbyterian church at 11 a. m. Wednesday, following which the burial took place at Highland cemetery.

JUDGE BLACK AS A CANDIDATE

Newspaper dispatches tell of the rousing welcome given to Judge James L. Black upon returning to his home city of Bourbonsville after the election. Two brass bands met him at the station, and 100 automobiles were in the procession that escorted him to the Public Square, where an informal reception was held. The entire lawocracy of Kentucky might well have joined in the welcome for without Judge Black on the ticket everybody knows what would have happened. No more striking proof of the high standing of any citizen could be offered than 1,000 Republicans in Knox county deserted the log cabin in the Luskman race, and supported their fellow county man. With only 14 Democratic votes against him in Knox county in the primary, and the fact that his majority in the November election was by far the largest given to any candidate, Judge Black's running qualifies him for the high office of Governor, could not be more clearly established.—Elizabethtown News.

HAMLETT SEEMS TO BE DOWN.

On the face of the returns received at the office of the Secretary of State, Judge James P. Lewis, the Republican candidate for Secretary of State has an apparent majority over Hon. Barksdale Hamlett, the Democrat, the candidate of 412, but the vote of several counties is being contested, suits have been filed to prevent the counting of some portion of the vote returned and it will not be known certainly who is successful in obtaining the office until these suits are disposed of or until the State Election Commission meets on Monday next to tabulate and declare the vote.—Frankfort Courier.

Should Look After the Hauling.

As the State is taking a hand in road building the probability is there will be something done by the next legislature to regulate heavy traffic on turnpikes. Few roads will stand under the loads that the large trucks haul, and the use of trucks on country roads is increasing rapidly. Besides being damaged on the road bed they soon rack stone abutments under the bridges because of striking them, when on high speed. Both load and speed will have to be limited.

If Campbell county had given its usual Republican majority it would have been good-bye Mr. Standley. Judge Lassing, the candidate of that county, and has got it in line.

Edward P. Morrow is "in" in the Republican party in Kentucky, and some want him to become a candidate for Vice-President. Why not for President?

Pig cuts are being made in the price of automobile which will leave the purchaser more money with which to buy gasoline and keep up repairs.

Lexington and Fayette county hit Stanley hard but they are making a rush for his pie counter notwithstanding.

Russia is calling for a million more war stars. As a Russian can properly be called a human.

Col. Morrow accepted a splendid opportunity to make a grand stand play.

Blooming roses covered with snow was a sight to be admired on this editor's lawn in Dover Monday morning. That's mixing the seasons some—Mayville Independent.

Corn is showing a splendid yield in the county. Haden Moore had forty-five acres in corn on his farm at Mouth of John's this year. What is known as "the island," a tract of six acres, produced six wagonloads of thirty bushels to the load, making the total of 420 bushels in all produced on these six acres.—Mt. Olivet Tribune-Democrat.

After suffering for almost a year with what was supposed to be a cancer on his neck, Abram Rucker, a Confederate veteran, eighty-one years of age, obtained relief, when his daughter, who was dressing the sore, felt a sharp point and extracted a fish bone. The bone lodged in Mr. Rucker's throat over a year ago, and gave him some trouble at the time.—Falmouth Outlook.

Several of the English pheasants were sent to this country and distributed by the Game Commission. Since then these have been watched as closely as the wild nature would permit, and it is believed that they have done well in mating and raising broods. It is the purpose of the Game Commission to stock Kentucky with these large and toothsome birds, but for a few years yet they are not to be killed and every safeguard of the law and of public opinion is to be thrown around them to protect them. So if you are hunting and one of the big fellows gets up in front of you, resist the temptation and don't shoot him. Game Warden Crenshaw, who is here this week, says those sent here have increased about 100 this season and that next spring others will be sent to the county and possibly a lot of Mexican quail.—Calloway Times.

GREAT WORK OF KENTUCKY'S FISH AND GAME COMMISSION

COVERS AND STREAMS OF STATE BEING RESTOCKED WITH THE HOPE OF ONCE AGAIN MAKING KEN-TUCKY A SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE

EXECUTIVE AGENT WARD A BUSY MAN

Clubs Are Being Organized In the Different Counties to Promote Interest and Co-Operate With the Commission

When Daniel Boone and his sturdy pioneers came to Kentucky by the Wilderness road they found a land fertile beyond their wildest hopes, abounding with game and fish, upon which they were dependent for food and clothing. In reaching Kentucky, Boone and his followers found that the Indian tribes to the north, south and west had preceded them. To Kentucky the Indians made annual pilgrimage to kill their winter supply of game, which was found in great abundance and of splendid quality. At that time there was game in plenty for all, but the Indians looked with disfavor upon the presence of the white man, realizing that it meant the destruction of their favorite hunting grounds should they be left to occupy the land, so they stubbornly resisted by every possible means the advancement of the foreign hunter.

The Indian did not kill to excess and was determined that his heavy hunting ground should not be destroyed. Their stubborn resistance made the name and early history of "Kentucky" typical of its Indian name, "Dark and Bloody Ground."

The pioneer, like the Indian, took only of this supply for food and shelter, but with civilization grew the sport of hunting for pleasure, and so wantonly was game destroyed by this class of citizens that thoughtful and representative men soon realized that if game was to be conserved for future generations, it was necessary to enact laws protecting them during the breeding season.

The first game laws in Kentucky, of which there is any record, were passed in 1822, and were for the protection of fish. In fact, most of the early laws were measures for fish protection. At that time all laws in the state upon this subject were local or county laws and remained so until the adoption of the present Constitution. Since that time all laws enacted upon this subject have been state measures, applying alike to each county in the state. To the county authorities were charged the enforcement of measures of this character.

To the average citizen there was little necessity for the enforcement of these measures; in fact, there was so little public sentiment for the enforcement of these laws that they were openly violated without fear of prosecution. To those who gave the subject thought, it was apparent that it was necessary to create a new law and organization to enforce the laws and to trust to and charging others and specially named officers with their enforcement.

A bill was introduced in the 1910 session of the Legislature providing for the creation of a Game and Fish Commission, but was defeated. A similar measure, possibly wider in scope, was introduced in 1912 and enacted into law, which became effective in 1912. This law is found in its entirety in Chapter 35, Acts 1912.

To this Commission and its agents are entrusted the enforcement of the law and the restocking of fields and streams with game and fish. Authority was given to the Commission to appoint wardens throughout the state to enforce the law. Chapter 35, Acts 1912, made no changes in the then existing game laws, except that it provided that all hunters when hunting off their own land or that immediately adjoining their own, with the permission of the owner, should first secure a hunting license, for which they were to pay the County Court Clerk $1. The clerks were allowed to retain 15 cents for each license, directing that the remainder be sent to the Treasurer of the State, to be placed to the credit of the Game and Fish Protection Fund.

The law provided that five thousand ($5,000) dollars should be appropriated for the maintenance of the department during its first year. This sum, however, to be in the nature of a loan, and directed that the Commission should return this sum—or as much thereof as used—to the Treasurer from the first moneys collected from the sale of hunters' license. Of the $5,000 appropriated, only $420.71 was drawn from the appropriation in the months of June and July, 1912. This amount, and the remainder of the $5,000, was returned to the state in August, 1912. Since that time the Commission has not drawn one cent from the state's funds for the maintenance of the department, and it is especially provided that the state can not give any further financial assistance, and the State Treasurer is directed not to honor any warrants drawn by the Game and Fish Commission unless the money is in the State Treasury to the credit of the Game and Fish Protection Fund. All of this fund must be derived from the sale of hunting license.

During the year 1912 a call for volunteer wardens was made, the Commission agreeing should their number be sufficient during the next year, to compensate as many of the wardens as possible, the selections for paid representatives to be made upon the merit system and without regard to political affiliations. The Commission is grateful to the volunteer wardens for their services and is earnestly laboring to develop a paid, competent warden service as rapidly as their funds will permit. The Commission is not now able nor will it be for some time—to have a paid warden service in each county of the state, but even if this were possible, they could not accomplish the ends that they so earnestly desire until they have the co-operation and support of interested parties and representative citizens, and by this assistance and co-operation is meant, not only their assistance in securing the arrest and conviction of all violators, but by giving out the information in order that the general public might thoroughly know the reasons and necessity for the strict observance of the laws.

THE CONDITIONS EXISTING IN OTHER STATES.

Hunting License.
The resident hunting license law is not a new departure and prevails in every state in the Union, except Maine, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina and Mississippi.

Every state in the Union now requires that non-residents have a hunting license, except Arkansas, and there a non-resident is not permitted to hunt except upon his own land. All of the State Game and Fish Commissions throughout the United States and Canada are maintained and operated by funds accruing from the sale of hunters' license, and in each state, as in Kentucky, the property owner is not taxed to maintain a Commission.

Combination hunting and fishing license, permitting the hunter and fisherman to both hunt and fish upon a single license, is now in vogue in four states. Other states are sure to follow this plan, as in states where only the hunter is required to pay license, the fisherman is equally benefited, the fun being spent alike for the improvement of conditions for both, and it seems but just that the fisherman should contribute his part to the enforcement of the law and the restocking of the streams with fish, by which he is surely benefited.

HUNGARIAN PARTRIDGES

In May, 1914, we liberated 300 Hungarian partridges; twenty of these birds were sent to each of fifteen counties. The birds seemed to take very kindly to Kentucky, and many scattered broods were reported in the early fall, and in the spring of 1915 some reports were had of these birds. This fall we hope to get a report from the hunters that go afield that will give us definite information.

SCARCITY OF QUAIL

In 1911, during the session immediately preceding the creation of the game laws, the Federal Government discovered that large quantities of quail were being sold in the northern and eastern markets, and that these birds had been shipped in violation of the federal laws covering interstate shipments of game.

The commission firms distributing these birds were all prosecuted, and by tracing the shipments to the firms, the Government officials discovered that great quantities of the quail had come from Kentucky; in fact, 150,000 were shipped out of Kentucky in 1911, 13,700 being shipped from two points in Gallatin county.

All of the parties making illegal shipments were tried in the federal courts of Kentucky and convictions followed in every case. The United States Government knew, in a general way, that shipments were being made from Kentucky, but in this work, as in other branches of the Government, they desired to help only those states who were making an honest endeavor to help themselves.

It was the common practice of the larger hotels and restaurants in Kentucky, before the creation of the Game and Fish Commission, to annually sell large quantities of quail illegally bought and sold. A number of cases were made against one of the leading hotel companies in Kentucky, and we are pleased to say that this illegal practice has been stopped.

Cumberland River, one of Kentucky's great game fish streams, and which the Commission is restocking with pike perch and bass.

PHEASANT DISTRIBUTION

In March, 1915, a distribution of English ringneck pheasants was made by the Commission. These birds were purchased in England and shipped to Philadelphia, where they were received by a representative of the Commission and shipped in crates of fifteen birds, ten hens and five cocks, to each county in the state, where they were received and separated into flocks, two hens and a cock, and these birds were liberated by persons with whom the Commission had made arrangements, on lands controlled by them.

Reports from 73 counties show an increase of 2,636 birds, which indicates a gratifying condition and places the number of these splendid game birds at liberty in Kentucky at something above six thousand. Some of the birds were held in captivity, but in nearly every instance these experiments resulted in failure, but the birds that were turned loose and allowed to rear their own young, in practically every instance produced and raised a covey.

The result of these experiments have so encouraged the Commission that another importation of pheasants is planned, and we hope to liberate three thousand more of these birds in the spring of 1916. The distribution of pheasants aroused great interest, and we received many requests for settings of eggs and purchased 800 from a game dealer in Pennsylvania, which were sent by parcels post to those who had applied. We also shipped 265 from the Kentucky Game Preserve on Pine Mountain, in Bell county.

The reports show that a large percentage of eggs did not hatch, and where broods were hatched they soon died, so the distribution proved a failure.

It is unlawful to kill any ringneck pheasant at any time of the year, and the Commission appeals to you for your assistance in protecting them until they increase sufficiently to permit hunting.

DURING A LULL IN THE OPENING DAY CEREMONIES AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

The Panama-Pacific International exposition was opened by a wireless spark, dispatched by President Woodrow Wilson at Washington, and caught on the tendrils of a wireless aerial on the lofty Tower of Jewels at the exposition. Instantly the power was released in the mighty Palace of Machinery and the portals of the exhibit palaces opened. The scene is on the grand stand after the ceremonies had ended, Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, Gov. Hiram Johnson of California, Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of San Francisco, President C. C. Moore of the exposition and a notable group of visiting dignitaries being seen in animated discussion of the epochal event. In the press box the correspondents are seen flashing to the world the news that the exposition had opened.

Black Diamond Slaughtered.

New York, Nov. 17.—Black Diamond, aged buffalo, whose likeness is printed on $10 Treasury notes and is stamped on the latest five-cent pieces, was put to death here today.

He was more than 20 years old and the largest bison in captivity. He had been an inmate of the Central Park corral for many years.

Black Diamond's hide, which measured 13x13 feet, will be made into an automobile robe. The bison weighed 2,335 pounds, from which 700 pounds of dressed meat was obtained.

The teeth were in a remarkable state of preservation. The head, which will be mounted, sold for a considerable amount of money. The bison was killed because of old age. He was sold in the surplus live stock auction last summer and was left at the park subject to the call of his purchaser.

There is a deplorable condition of affairs existing in Kentucky in regard to the farmers' interest. We speak of their apparent lack of interest in affairs which vitally concern themselves, their families and their progress in the world's affairs. Farmers' institutes are poorly attended and the spirit of co-operation seems to be wanting. State, Government and county farm officials are doing good work, but their efforts are badly handicapped by poor support. Farmers can not expect their business to improve much under conditions like these. They should awake to their opportunities.—Hartford Herald.

One of the largest hickory nut crops ever known in the history of the county is about gathered. G. S. Patterson has sold over 800 bushels. Bucky & Jefferies have shipped about 800 bushels, also G. W. Maraman & Sons have sold about 800 bushels, besides what have been gathered and sold on other markets, all together more than 5,000 bushels, and most of them bringing $1 per bushel.—Shepherdsville Pioneer News.

The first drove of turkeys of the season was those brought to T. K. Sider "Turkey" by W. Gooch, the McKinney turkey man. There were between 200 and 400 in the bunch and he paid around 14c for them. From now on until Thanksgiving Mr. Gooch and his assistants will be busy rounding up the many birds he has purchased.—Stanford Interior Journal.

A. O. STANLEY

Short History of the Life of The Next Governor of Kentucky

Augustus Owley Stanley, the next Governor of Kentucky, was born in Shelbyville, Shelby county May 21, 1867, and consequently is in his forty-ninth year. His father the Rev. William Stanley, 83 years old, is a retired Christian minister. His mother, who was Miss Amanda Owley, is 76. He married Miss Sue Souper, of Henderson, in April, 1903 and they are the parents of three boys, A. O. Stanley, Jr., 11; Wm. Souper Stanley, 7, and Marion Shelby Stanley, 4.

Because Mr. Stanley's father was a minister, subject to removal from place to place as ministers are, the newly-elected Governor obtained his early education piece meal. In his teens, he entered State University, Lexington, and later entered College College, Danville, being graduated from that institution in 1889.

Educated for the law, Mr. Stanley began the practice of his profession in 1894, receiving his license in that year. He first hung out his shingle at Flemingsburg, Fleming county, and later went to Henderson, beginning the practice of law there March 17, 1896. He later formed a law partnership with Judge John L. Dorsey, of Henderson.

Mr. Stanley was a presidential elector in 1900 and two years later was elected to Congress for the first time from the Second Kentucky district composed of the counties of Christian, Daviess, Hancock, Hopkins, McLean, Union and Webster. He served that district in Congress for six consecutive terms, declining to stand for re-election in 1914, making the race for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in August of that year. He was defeated by J. C. W. Beckham, and a short while later began his race for the Democratic nomination for Governor, defeating Harry Chesney, his nearest opponent, by 37,863 votes.

Stanley's Official Plurality for Governor Is 471.

Following is the official vote for State Officers as made by the State Election Commissioners at Frankfort, Monday:

The race for Secretary of State is still in a squabble.

Mr. Stanley was given his certificate of election, Monday.

TOBACCO SITUATION

DIFFICULT TO GRASP.

The tobacco situation has assumed a most peculiar stage, in this and many adjoining counties there have been reported sales of crops ranging from eight to eight cents the pound and speculators are the purchasers. Whether these speculators are representing loose leaf warehouses or buying on their own responsibility, is a question that cannot be answered. The prices being paid by these men are far in advance of the market last year, but similar to prices in 1913, when after the season opened it was found that tobacco was from 25 to 30 per cent light in weight and good prices prevailed. The crops that have been sold in the county or rather those that have been reported to the Advocate appear to be along the eastern and northeastern boundaries. Albie Robertson, of Mt. Sterling, and R. O. Chambers, of Robertson, are the buyers who have bought the majority of these crops, and both are extensive buyers. Speculators from this city and county have been out but it is not known what they have done.

It is known that tobacco has cured nicely in the barn, with some exception of houseburn in the upper parts. Tobacco hanging in the bright of color and reported light in weight, and with these conditions through the burley belt, the seller may expect good prices, though it may not be safe for him to turn down an offer that will net him a profit for his labor.

The Lexington market will open shortly, when the leading manufacturers of the country will show their hand and the pace will be set for their buyers on all Kentucky markets. Much tobacco will be ready for the opening of the market as a thorough season was made by the continuous down pour of rain Sunday, Nicholas Advocate.

Storing Apples.

The most profitable crop rotation does not consist merely of changing the crops around from year to year, regardless of the relation of the crops to each other. The central aim in all crop rotation systems should be to leave each field in a better state of cultivation, better physical condition, and reasonably free from pests at the end of each rotation cycle.

No hard and fast rotation system can be laid down for any community, but the most profitable system must be worked out for each farm and, indeed, for each field. There are certain principles, however, that should be borne in mind in this connection in order to accomplish the most satisfactory results. For one thing, the movement there should be at least one leguminous crop in each rotation cycle. To this class of plants belong the clovers, alfalfa, peas, beans, etc. There should be also a sufficient quantity of live stock especially milk cows on each farm to utilize the roughage and to supply the desired quantity of stable manure, which, in addition to green crop plowed under, will furnish the necessary amount of humus to the soil. The conditions resulting from this treatment, if the soil is properly handled, will make the succeeding crops more vigorous and capable of offsetting in some measure at least, the effects of any pests that may appear. Again the successive crops in any rotation should be so selected and arranged that no two upon which the same pest may thrive will be grown in succession. The principles of disease control by means of crop rotation are based upon the fact that certain pests can thrive only on certain kinds of plants. Therefore, when the crops are changed and the food supply thereby cut off, the pest must perish or be greatly reduced in number.

—Richard Cobden, the greatest Business Man of the nineteenth century, once asked a concern from whom he was buying goods: "Why do you extend me over $200,000 worth of credit when you know I am not worth $10,000 in my own right?"

—And in reply came: "Mr. Cobden, we consider the moral risk more than the financial one. With us character counts."

—Character counts in everything from the honesty of a young boy admitting he cut down his father's cherry tree to the conduct of a Jewellery Store.

W. Carpenter. The men hunted till noon when they were called to a sumptuous country dinner for which the tramp over the hills had sharpened their appetites. About a dozen rabbits were killed.

Records of county clerks, according to information in the office of the State Game and Fish Commission, show that the hunting licenses issued are more and more to city residents, as the farmers are leaving the country and may hunt on their own and adjoining land by permission without a license. This also is having the effect of making the approval of farmers for the law and encouraging them to look after the game birds on their farm.

Dr. Y. F. Hopkins, of Thrall, Texas, and Rev. J. B. Bradley, of Butler, Pendleton county, are callers at this office last Friday. Dr. Hopkins is looking fine and says he is prospering in his new home of which town he is the mayor notwithstanding it is understood that it is not fashionable for Republicans to hold offices in Texas. He will return to his home in a few days, and expects to be accompanied by some of his old friends in Rabbit Hash precinct. Rev. Bradley is pastor of the M. E. churches in this circuit several years ago, is looking first-class, and was glad to meet his many friends here.

My next stop was at Fulton, Missouri, where I spent some ten days with my brother and sister and their families. I was very favorably impressed with Fulton and vicinity.

From Fulton I went to Kansas City, where I remained four days visiting a brother, uncle and other relatives.

One of the great enterprises of Kansas City is the Armour Packing Co. The packing house and stock pens cover about 50 acres and employ several thousand men.

Denver was my next stopping place. At the Holland Hotel I met two nephews, one on his way to Victoria, B. C. to his parents in Missouri, and the other one engaged in business in Denver.

From the latter I learned the address of John S. Gaines, with whom I spent two days. The capitol of Colorado is built of granite and is the finest capitol building I ever saw.

I took an electric car to Colorado Springs for Pike's Peak. The trip takes only two or three hours and fully repays one for the time and money spent. I did not reach the summit, but went high enough to have a grand view of the surrounding country and to almost freeze.

Returning to Denver I took the train for Salt Lake City, where I spent several interesting hours of sight seeing. From the scenic car one sees many places of interest and gets much information that would otherwise be missed on a short visit. The Mormon Temple is a magnificent structure of granite. It was several years in building and will doubtless stand for centuries.

After passing the irrigated belt near Salt Lake City, we came into a veritable desert, the trail all gliding in a series of V's in the sunlight. The Southern Pacific railroad passes through Salt Lake for a distance of about thirty-five miles.

The scenes in the Sierra Nevada mountains are varied to the extreme. Deep canyons, gorges, waterfalls, snow-capped peaks, with belts of spruce, pine fir and cedar, stretching away to the horizon, inspired one to a realization of the grandness and beauty of nature.

From the western slope of the mountains we looked down into the great Sacramento Valley, California. This was one of the most beautiful sights of landscape I ever saw. Acres and acres of vineyards, orchards, nuts, and other crops were in view for miles and miles.

In crossing San Francisco bay one may well realize the assertion that all world could safely anchor in her waters.

The Exposition is an honor to the people of California. The buildings, the exhibits, the beauty of the grounds, the Golden Gate where the waters of the Pacific ocean enter the bay are certainly impressive.

The exhibits are arranged in a park with their great expositions. The Golden Gate Park, Cliff House, and the long stretch of beach near by, are all places of interest to one unacquainted with the seaside.

The people of San Francisco are enterprising, sociable, and decidedly well dressed, apparently prosperous, and full of faith in themselves and the future of their city.

After a few days' visit in San Francisco I came out to Clayton to the home of my brother, Thos. This place is about thirty-five miles from San Francisco, in a valley well adapted to the growth of the wine grape, almonds, figs, English walnuts and olives.

The drive down the coast to Los Angeles, a distance of 500 miles from San Francisco, gives the tourist an opportunity of realizing what a great view of the state possesses. I stopped over night at San Jose, 45 miles from San Francisco, to visit a niece. This is noted as a fruit and educational center.

In Los Angeles I remained one night with Dr. W. K. Chambers. Of course, he was delighted to hear about his many friends of Boone county.

The next day I went out to Pasadena, where I called on Geo. L. Riley. He took me out in his automobile to see some of the homes of many millionaires of that town. George is doing well and lives in one of the finest cities on the coast.

San Pedro is the port for Los Angeles, which is 15 miles inland. Here I took a steamer which carried 800 passengers for Santa Catalina Island, 25 miles out in the Pacific ocean. On landing at the island we took a glass-bottomed boat, which gave us a view of the myriads of fish swimming the tropical waters, and sea plants peculiar to that part of the coast. Anything like a detailed description of the place would require more time and language than I have.

From Los Angeles to San Diego I traveled through about 125 miles of orchards and orange groves. The exposition at San Diego is a great credit to the people of Southern California. They received no State nor national aid, yet the exhibits and buildings compare favorably with those of expositions of greater pretensions.

Hotel del Coronado is one of the largest and finest in the world. Nature and capital have vied with each other in producing a scene like unto a vision of paradise. Upon my return trip I stopped over night at Los Angeles with Paul Hallam, of Washington, D. C. I hope to spend several days more at the exposition in San Francisco.

If any friend cares to write to me I shall be glad to hear from them, and will give them such information as I may possess. So far I am very much pleased with the State and the people.

Life is uncertain, and should I never meet the many friends in old Boone again in this life, I trust we may so live that we may meet in the life to come.

TEMP GRAVES.
Clayton, California, Nov. 15, 1915

"It Sure was" Badly Mixed.

About as bad a mixup as ever happened to the RECORDER or any other paper for that matter, was the arrangement of one account of the Slayback shower at Beaver as published last week. The gentleman who makes up the pages of the paper was not apprised of the nature of the communication under the Beaver heading, and proceeded to put the paragraph in the column, beginning with the shortest, placing the smallest one left each time until the paragraphs were all used, and it happened that the paragraph that should have been first was the last, while other paragraphs were out of their place. To the uninitiated it is hard to understand how such a mixup could happen but to a make-up man it is easy. Begin at the bottom of the communication and read upwards omitting the Beaver band item and you have it.

Hog Cholera Wipes Out W. B. Arnold's Herd of Fifty Swine.

Hog cholera has prevailed in Bellevue neighborhood for several weeks. Wm. Arnold has lost about fifty from the disease.

Wm. Arnold's neighbors have each lost a few. It seems that the disease was not recognized at first and got such a hold on Mr. Arnold's herd that it could not be controlled.

To be sure that there was no mistake about its being cholera, Dr. O. S. Crisler, of the State Experiment Station, was sent to the scene, one day last week, and pronounced the disease cholera, and gave directions for its treatment and elimination.

Dr. Crisler is considered the State's best authority on hog cholera as well as on several other diseases to which livestock is subject.

Went Gigger in November.

Lloyd Weaver, who resides with his father, Clinton Weaver, down on Gunpowder creek, started out to engage in an old fashioned coon hunt, one night last week, and when he went to cross the creek the first time he discovered hundreds of fish on the rifle.

He returned home and reported to his father, when they equipped themselves with rifles and torches, and went to the rifle where they killed as many fine suckers as they could carry home.

Full of eggs, the Weaver suckers, was raised on Gunpowder creek but he never before knew that suckers riddled in November.

Word came from the neighbors reports that bass were rifting this year, in August, something very unusual.

The Rev. Irl R. Hicks' 1916 Almanac.

The Rev. Irl R. Hicks' 1916 Almanac is by far the finest, largest and best ever before printed.

The Hicks storm and weather fore tellers have grown in their trust and value, and this splendid Almanac for 1916 should find its way straight into every home of the farmer in America.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks Magazine, Word and his unique Almanac should always go together, both for only one dollar a year. The Almanac alone is 35c, prepaid. Send to Word and Works Publishing Co., 3401 Franklin Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Fido Assisting in Educational Work.

In Boone county 1,333 dogs were listed for taxation in this year, which would produce that many dollars were there no delinquents.

Out of the dog tax collected this year $100 for sheep killed by dogs to the amount of $247.50 will have to be paid, when the remainder of the dog tax will be turned into the state school fund, so it will be safe to say that Fido and others of his tribe in this county will contribute to the state educational purposes this year.

Mrs. Smith Will Cancel the Stamps.

A few weeks since three applicants took the civil service examination for postmaster at Grant Bellevue, this county, the result of which examination has been sent Congressman A. B. Rouse, and it shows that Mrs. James G. Smith heads the list, consequently she will be appointed to fill the vacancy in that office in the near future.

The Growers Got Busy for a Few Days.

Growers were provided with several days good weather for stripping tobacco the past week before it closes. Of them the advantage of it and put a considerable quantity of the weed in the hand, while others only took down and bulked their crops.

The Local Abattoir Resumes Business.

L. K. Kirkpatrick's abattoir has begun operation again and will butcher a large number of hogs before it closes. He rejects all orders for meat from the counties that are engaged in war on the ground that he is neutral.

They Can't Come Too Thick and Fast.

For the next few days there will be a rush of business at the Sheriff's office caused by those who have delayed the payment of their taxes, but Sheriff Cropper and his deputy, L. A. Conner, will be able to take care of all comers.

A Boy's Temperance Pledge.

By S. R. Reno.

He was only sixteen years of age and was a clerk in a commission store in Baltimore, Md. It was a day when the drinking custom was, if not universal, the general habit, and it is sad to record that many youths fell into the habit. While many fathers were abstemious it was not with their children, and the old proverb—the fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are on edged—was, alas! too often sadly demonstrated.

It was in about the year 1829, and about this time six published sermons of Lyman Beecher, the father of the Beechers, had sounded the alarm on the temperance question in all the East. The Methodist preachers of that day, true to all the traditions of the church on this great question, also took up the alarm. The Rev. Henry Sleeper was one of these fearless advocates of temperance, and was to speak on a Sabbath afternoon at Hookstown, near Baltimore. This young man, sixteen years of age, resolved to go and hear him. He was a little late in arriving and found the old log church full, but this boy pushed his way up to the front and found a place right under the eye of the preacher. For an hour he spoke upon the text, "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled and said, 'Go thy way for this time; when I have a more convenient season I will call for thee.'"

Statistics, the tragedies in private and public life thru strong drink—all these were invoked by the speaker to stir the hearts of his congregation was stirred, and so was this boy! And when the speaker said that all the woes of the drunkard could be avoided by the right use of one word, and that word was "ABSTAIN!" and then urged, "Who will say now, 'I pledge myself wholly to abstain,' this boy went from that memorable day determined to TRY! When he returned to his father's house he called to the colored boy, and said to him:

"Clem, I am going to quit!" Then taking his father's Bible, the young man said: "Clem, this Book I believe to be the Book of God, filled with promises for the obedient and curses for the disobedient; and now, Clem, bear me witness that I have now to give up all God's promises and incur the evil of God's curse upon me if I let another drop of strong drink of any kind pass my lips for Three years; then, if I find I can get along as well without as with it, I pledge myself wholly to abstain all the days of my life. So help me God! Amen!"

And then closing the Bible the young man vigorously struck it to emphasize his sacred vow, and again repeated, "So help me God! Amen!"

"Clem" had not been used to hearing such maledictions as that pronounced upon strong drink, and it made his eyes stand out like dogwood blossoms, and he exclaimed:

"My Lord, Massa Granville, dat am orful! Never heard a pussion swear like dat a-way-a-fore!"

As "Clem" turned to go out this young man heard him say to himself, "Massa Granville done gone sho 'nuf of he tech a drop of drink agin!"

But this young man had passed his "Rubicon." He went out to the barn that had newly been whitewashed, opened the gate and swung it back against the barn, then he climbed upon it and then taking a nail and reaching the high as he could, he wrote in characters twenty inches long:

"With of April!"

His trial was great for about six weeks, so great that he had to reinforce it with going to the milk-house six times a day and drink a pint of sweet cream. But he DID drive the enemy from the entrenchment! May, June, and July 24 passed, and he had kept his pledge, and his covenant was unbroken. From that day to the close of his eventful life he was a mighty force in the Nation for the country's honor and a powerful advocate for temperance. Were he living today he would be to the temperance cause what the Matterhorn is to the Alps, what Pike's Peak is to the Rockies, a peerless advocate of temperance and for the total destruction of the liquor and licensed liquor traffic! He records the importance of this pledge in his early life in these words: "In my mind, and in writing this pledge, I built better than I knew; for, as it was followed by my blessed conversion and self consecration to God, it marked an epoch in my whole history and life."

This boy was the Rev. Granville Moody, Colonel of the Seventy-fourth Regiment of Ohio Volunteers, a warm personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, and few men were better known during the great war of 1861-65 than Colonel Moody.

A Criminal Indicted.

doubtless a grievous disappointment to the enemies of prohibition. As Dr. Abbott had previously written to another party that he was not in favor of State-wide prohibition, where a State-wide public sentiment for prohibition already exists, it was doubtless expected that the Doctor would take his usual stand against prohibition and in favor of regulation. But he seems to have experienced a change of mind. He says: "In common with most Americans, I have believed in the regulation, not prohibition of the liquor traffic. But the action of liquor dealers has made regulation impossible."

The great majority covertly dis regard or openly defy all attempt in the community to impose special regulations upon them." He then specifies: "The law forbids 'sales to minors,' to hab itual drunkards; 'sales at certain hours;' 'sales on Sundays;' 'sales except with meals;' 'except by hotels;' but all these restrictions are widely disregarded, and the American people are coming to the conclusion, the slowly, that the American saloon is not a national nuisance, but a national calamity, and are resolved to abolish it."

To the question, "Why is there a nation-wide uprising against the drink traffic?" the answer is because it is bad thru and thru, and the enemy of every national interest. It damages every legitimate business; it takes the earnings of the drinker and gives him that that is worse than nothing in return; it increases largely the burden of taxes, blights intelligence, and causes intellectual weakness, idleness, and insanity, on the one hand; it prevents the intellectual culture and development of the other; maintains an aggressive and destructive war upon the home, implicating massive cruelties upon helpless women and children. It is the saloon is practically a political club-house, where the worst men in the community as political candidates, and plan campaigns. Liquor dealers' associations are widely organized. Their chief business is the management of political parties and the corruption of officials. Saloon methods have so corrupted the body politic that it has come to be a proverb that "everything is fair in politics."

A political office is seldom obtained without the corrupt use of money. Men who would scorn to do a dishonest or corrupt act in ordinary business transactions will use the saloon influence and bribery to secure coveted political offices. Saloon immorality has dulled the keen edge of the political morality of millions of voters. In fact the saloon is a hot-bed of political corruption, vulgarity, profanity, obscenity, lewdness, and crime, and sets at defiance the law made for its regulation or suppression.

Liquor dealers, as a rule, are law-breakers and their influence tends to the destruction of all regard for law among the people. They refuse to obey the will of the majority when it interferes with their business. Laws erected for the protection of the Christian Sabbath, of minors, of inebriates, or for revenue, are consistently evaded with impunity. More than all other influences combined, drink dealers encourage the very foundations of the Republic. They are the instigators of lawlessness, riots, and mobs. They corrupt legislation, bribe judges, subvert witnesses, pack juries, and defeat the ends of justice. This monstrous horridness boldly enters the sacred domain of the Word of God and tramples beneath its unhalloved feet one of its commandments, every

Pleasing to Kentucky Farmers

Frankfort, Ky., November 17.—The last crop report that will be made by Commissioner of Agriculture Newman is a message of cheer to the farmers of Kentucky. The conditions indicate that they can celebrate Thanksgiving in good faith.

The final yield of the corn crop is estimated at 28 bushels per acre. This is three preliminary estimates. The final reported yield shows that Kentucky has that it ever produced.

The preliminary report of barley tobacco shows a yield of 441 pounds per acre, and the final estimate is 422 pounds per acre. Of dark tobacco the preliminary estimate was 874 pounds, while the final estimate is given at 861 pounds.

The final yield of hemp is estimated at 1,662 pounds per acre. The acreage of hemp this year is much larger than usual and the price is high, owing to the increased demand for American hemp as a substitute for fibers heretofore obtained in Europe.

The potato crop is large. The variation in yield is great, ranging from 50 to 300 bushels per acre, but the average shows 110 bushels of Irish potatoes and 81 bushels sweet potatoes (produced per acre).

NEW CROP COMING IN.

Lexington, Nov. 13.—The first of the new crop of Burley tobacco to be brought here for sale this season came in today when two of the local warehouses received receipts for the new crop. The receipts are reported medium in quality and of good body. The market does not open until December 1, and the demand in bulk is not expected to set in until about the 28th.

All floors have been cleared and thirteen breaks will be in line when the music starts December 1. With reasonable conditions, a large volume of leaf should be on hands.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. BELLER, Acting Director of Sunday School Course of Moody Bible
Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1915, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 28

AMOS, THE FEARLESS PROPHET.

LESSON TEXT—Amos 6:1-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—He that hath my word let him speak my word faithfully.—
Jer. 23:28.

Among the prophets Amos bulks large. His message (B. C. 787 ?) is most thoroughly modern and its application to our present day problems deserves careful consideration.—Read the entire book prayerfully. Chapters 1 and 2 enumerate the sins of the nation and of Israel: 3-6 contain addresses of the prophet: 7-9, 10 records his visions and the conclusion. 9:11-15 is a Messianic prophecy. The modern prophet of social service and those who neglect a proper consideration of "applied Christianity," both ought to ponder well this passage. I. Jehovah's Lamentation, vv. 3-6. The words of this lesson are those of Jehovah spoken to the house of Israel but apply to all people of all ages. Verse one is a prophecy of the master's grief over the holy city (Luke 13:34; 19:41). Outwardly rich and opulent, in Jehovah's sight the nation had already fallen (v. 2 R. V.) and there "is none (present tense) to raise her up." Israel is personified as a maiden sorely wounded. Spoken decades before, Israel did fall and has risen no more. But there is a possibility of mercy. There is here a command and a promise: those who obey the command will obtain the promise of life.

To "seek ye me" (v. 4) is to turn the face to him rather than to turn the back. It implies the forsaking of all evil thoughts, yet, our own thoughts and ways and to turn unto him who will abundantly pardon (see 55:6-7; Deut. 30:28). There is life for the most obdurate and outrageous sinner if he will seek the Lord.

II. The Prophet's Exhortation, vv. 4-9. The places mentioned in verse five had each been made sacred by God's presence and subsequently degraded by idolatry.—Bathul, especially so. (Gen. 12:8; 28:10-18; 1 Kings 12:29-30). These new religions and the false worshiping were beguiling even the sincere and unwary, hence the warning. "We need to beware of the manifold 'new cults' lest we depart from the faith of our fathers. America is today standing upon a social and religious crater in many ways similar to ancient Israel. God is either a consuming fire (Heb. 15:28-29; Mark 9:43-49) to the impenitent or else a minister of grace to those who repent. Verse seven is a suggestion regarding the rulers of that day and finds far too many counterparts in our own times. In verse 8 Jehovah exhorts the people to "seek him and live." In verse 6 the prophet utters the same cry. Now (v. 8) the appeal is to seek him because to do so is wisdom.

(a) It is he "that maketh the stars," the earth, yea, everything, and it is well to be on his side. (b) He "turneth the shadow of death into morning" (R. V.) (see Ps. 30:5). Who can comprehend the vast host of his saints for whom this has been done? (c) He "maketh the day dark with the night" (R. V.). This is he doing repeatedly. The God who set the day in its turn can also turn it aside; he has done it both past and present.

III. The Word of Application, vv. 10-15. Sinners always hate the man who rebukes their sin. Scripture is not needed to prove this fact, for we see it today. We are specifically warned against the praise of the wicked (Luke 6:26) and the true and upright witness for Christ knows that he is abhorred by those whose lives are crooked. (John 8:12, 20). Verse 11 (A. V.) sounds very much like many of the strictures that are being made regarding the acts of some of the rich of today. How frequently we behold mannerisms built from the needs of oppression deserted by the ones who anticipated their occupancy. How few fortunes are really expended and enjoyed by those who make the accumulation. The manner by which we accumulate, our conduct towards the just (Acts 7:52), our acceptance of bribes, and our neglect of the need of the poor is all known to God. (v. 12). "Therefore," even as today it is difficult and costly to get justice in our courts, even as iniquity is rapidly growing in the earth, about all the prudent man can do is to hold his peace, to wait upon God and watch for him. He it is who must call with trumpet voice (Isa. 58:1) even though he does now speak with human lips. The fourth exhortation to "seek" (v. 14) is to search after the good, though the time be an "evil one."

True goodness is to "hate evil and love the good" (Ps. 97:10; Rom. 10:9). By this test we may know if we really hate sin, if we are truly righteous.

We have churches and lack reverence; we have preachers but are not sufficiently conscious of our weak morals; we hear sermons yet our faith is flabby.

We can get on without armies and navies, airships and submarines, kings and legislators, yet lacking in all of the conveniences of modern civilization, but we cannot exist, much less grow, flourish and triumph without God.

But the burden I might have shared
Had left a heart with a bitter sting.
Or the thought that "nobody cared."

GOOD THINGS FOR WEDDING DAY.

Chicken is so well liked that it will never go out of style for any kind of a meal. —Melt a fourth of a cupful of butter, add a third of a cupful of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually a cupful of rich chicken stock. Bring to the boiling point and season with one and a half teaspoonfuls of paprika and a teaspoonful of salt; then add a cupful of heavy cream, one and a third cupfuls of chopped cooked chicken and two-thirds of a cupful of parboiled sweetbreads, cut in cubes. Let stand in the top of the double boiler to season 20 minutes. Serve with lettuce sandwiches. Spread fresh bread with butter and place a crisp lettuce leaf between two slices, with a spoonful of mayonnaise on each.

Pound Cake.—Cream a half cupful of butter, add one and a half cupfuls of pastry flour once sifted. Beat the yolks of five eggs until thick, add one and one-half cupfuls of powdered sugar, gradually, beating constantly. Combine the mixtures and add the whites of five eggs beaten stiff, and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Sift over one teaspoonful of baking powder and beat thoroughly. Turn into a buttered flour pan and bake in a moderate oven. Remove from the pan and cut in fancy shapes. Cover with boiled frosting, garnish with shredded coconut, fruit or rose leaves.

Strawberry Bombe.—Carmelize one-half a cupful of sugar, add one and one-half cupfuls of blanched chopped fruit, turn into a buttered pan, cool, then pound in a mortar and put through a puree strainer. Beat the yolks of four eggs until thick, add gradually three-fourths cupful of hot caramel syrup and cook in a double boiler until thick. Beat until cold. Fold in one and a third cupful of heavy cream, beaten stiff. Then add the prepared nuts, a few grains of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Line a mason mold with strawberry ice, turn in the mixture and pack in ice and salt, let stand three hours. Use one part of salt to two of ice.

Know that "Impossible" has no place in a brave man's dictionary.—Carlyle.

They that will not be counseled cannot be helped.—Benjamin Franklin.

None so little enjoy life as those who have nothing to do.

Let not the stream of your life be a murmuring stream.

THE SUNDAY DINNER.

A good dish for Sunday dinner is a roast of beef with browned potatoes.

The potatoes may be parboiled and added an hour before the roast is done and the gravy used for basting them. Thicken the gravy by using four tablespoonfuls of fat and four of flour; mix well and blend with water to make of the right consistency.

A good vegetable to serve with this roast will be onions. Cook them until tender, letting them soak at first in cold water with a half-teaspoonful of soda, then the strong flavor will be removed. Dress with cream, salt and pepper, and with a rich white sauce.

Lettuce and Asparagus Salad.—Take cooked asparagus tips, arrange on lettuce and serve with French dressing. Or a few sliced tomatoes and cucumbers, alternating the two, will make a most attractive and tasty salad.

Fig Pudding.—Take a cupful of chopped suet, one pound of figs, three eggs, two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one cupful of sugar and a cupful of milk. Mix well and steam three hours. For the sauce soften a half cupful of butter, add a cupful of sugar, and when light add a tablespoonful of vanilla and a well-beaten egg.

A most enjoyable vegetable salad which might be served for this dinner is in place of the one mentioned in the tomato salad, which has been well crisped in water and served with vinegar, sugar and thick cream, either sweet or sour. If sweet cream is used, less sugar will be needed. A dash of salt is an improvement.

Clear Tomato Soup.—For a dinner with the main dish a roast, a light soup will be most appropriate. Strain the tomato, add two tablespoonfuls each of butter and four cooked together, or cornstarch will make a clearer soup. Season with salt, onion, peppercorns and a little shredded green pepper if liked.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

If you entertain the supposition that any real success, in great things or in small, ever was or could be, ever will be of or can be, wrought from Fortune by fate and starts leave that wrong idea.—Bleak House.

LITTLE ECONOMIES.

If in the serving of meats one is careful to give no more than the person habitually eats, the waste from the table will be little. It is far better to serve a small helping and give a second one than that good food should be wasted. It is usually in the minor economies which are often beneath the notice where the wise housewife keeps within her means. One housekeeper who has tried the method of co-operation with her cook in holding to a certain yearly table expense has paid her $10 extra yearly, and finds they have even better food, for the cook takes a personal interest in both having attractive food and keeping within her limit. This is a method worthy of trial by other progressive women, and, by the way, it keeps the cook at least a year to try out the method.

Ox-Joints With Vegetables.—Two ox-joints have enough meat on them to furnish flavor to quite a dish of vegetables. Cut two ox-tails in pieces at the joints, put into a saucepan, cover with water and boil five minutes, drain and saute in butter, to which a sliced onion has been added. When well seared and browned add a half cupful each of carrots, turnips, celery, beans or peas, cover with boiling water and simmer until the vegetables are soft. Season well with salt, pepper and add a little parsley. Serve with a brown gravy poured over the ox-tails and vegetables.

Hamburg Steak With Cabbage.—Take firm outside leaves of cabbage, wash and drain. Prepare the steak by seasoning with salt, pepper a pinch of ground cloves, nutmeg and a little onion juice. Use half pork sausage in the meat combination. Form balls and cook in a little hot fat until well browned over, then wrap each cake in a cabbage leaf, skewer with toothpicks and place in the frying pan, adding a little boiling water, cover closely and simmer for a half hour, or until the cabbage is tender. Serve with a gravy poured around the cakes. Tomato sauce is very good as an accompaniment to this dish.

Our whole life is a story more or less interesting, but it is not until we read it by a clearer light when it is ended.—Dickens.

SEASONABLE FOODS.

A most delightful luncheon dish which may be used as a dessert or as a cake is this. Hollow out six sponge cakes or cup cakes and mix with the crumbs a few broken nuts, whipped cream, sweetened and flavored, a pinch of salt and eight chopped maraschino cherries with a tablespoonful of the cordial. Fill the cakes and garnish the top with whipped cream and a cherry. Serve on glass plates with a paper doily under the cake.

Chicken and Eggplant.—Take three cupfuls of stock and three small eggplants, a half cupful of cooked chicken and a half cupful of bread crumbs, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, two tablespoonfuls of orange juice and one of lemon juice, a little grated onion and salt and pepper. Cover the eggplant with boiling water and cook, covered, 20 minutes. Cut in two and scoop out the inside, leaving the shell thick enough to hold its shape. Cook the crumbs with one-half cupful of stock, add the chicken, chopped fine, one tablespoonful of butter, a beaten egg and seasoning. Fill the shells and bake 40 minutes, beating with stock and orange juice. Melt the remaining butter, add flour and brown, when smooth add the stock. Stir until thick and serve highly seasoned with the egg plant.

Chicken au Gratin.—Take a cupful of cold cooked chicken, one-half cupful of grated cheese, four tablespoonfuls of cooked rice, one cupful of tomato sauce, broad crumbs, salt and pepper. Cut the chicken into small bits. Butter a baking dish, place a layer of chicken at the bottom, then a layer of cooked rice. Pour some tomato sauce over this, sprinkle with bread crumbs, grated cheese and salt and pepper. Repeat this until the dish is full, having the last layer of bread crumbs. Place in a hot oven to brown.

Colemann.—Take six cupfuls of boiled cabbage, three of potatoes, one of corn, half a cupful of butter, salt, pepper and a cupful of milk. Mix all together, put into a buttered baking dish and bake for three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. Serve hot.

NOW HER FRIENDS HARDLY KNOW HER

But This Does Not Bother Mrs. Burton, Under the Circumstances.

Houston, Texas.—In an interesting letter from this city, Mrs. S. C. Burton writes as follows: "I think it is my duty to tell you what my medicine, Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done for me."

I was down sick with womanly trouble, and my mother advised several different treatments, but they didn't seem to do me any good. I lingered along for three or four months, and for three weeks, I was in bed, so sick I couldn't bear for any one to walk across the floor.

My husband advised me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic. I have taken two bottles of Cardui, am feeling fine, gained 15 pounds and do all of my housework. Friends hardly know me, I am so well."

If you suffer from any of the ailments so common to women, don't allow the trouble to become chronic. Begin taking Cardui to-day. It is purely vegetable, its ingredients acting in a gentle, natural way on the weakened womanly constitution. You run no risk in trying Cardui. It has been helping weak women back to health and strength for more than 50 years. It will help you. At all dealers.

S. L. Craven continues sick with pneumonia.

Mrs. Louisiann Kendall, of Zion Station, visited friends here last Thursday.

James Blandford of Glencoe, spent Saturday here with friends and on business.

Edmund M. Johnson sold his horse and buggy to Dr. G. C. Rankins last Friday for $250.

Jno. L. Vest spent part of last week at Williamstown on business pertaining to his law practice.

Jas. E. McCormack, one of the progressive and public spirited farmers of near Verona, spent Saturday here with friends.

Mrs. Eva Hudson returned last week from a very enjoyable visit to relatives and friends in Kenton county and Covington.

Judge J. G. Tomlin spent part of last week at Warsaw attending the Gallatin circuit court in which he had some law cases.

Clifford R. Rouse, fireman on the L. & N. Railroad, spent the week here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Rouse.

Mrs. Martha Rouse, who has been managing a millinery establishment at Rushville, Indiana, returned here last week to spend the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Rouse.

Mrs. D. M. Bagby, who has been undergoing treatment in a hospital at Indianapolis, returned home last week improved and with the prospect of complete recovery at an early date.

Dr. G. C. Rankins has bought a new Ford car from the firm of Hicks & Co. of Union, and will use it in his practice.

James Bird, an old and esteemed citizen of Nicholson, Kenton county, died at his home there last Saturday, aged 82 years.

Robt. Northcutt, of Indianapolis, fireman on the Big Four Railroad, spent last week here visiting friends and relatives, and enjoying a hunting trip. He reported killed 75 quail.

Tobacco buyers from the Falmouth market were in this quarter last week and bought quite a number of crops in Kenton county at prices ranging from eight to ten cents, tobacco to be delivered at Falmouth.

Will Go to Florida.

Dr. C. C. Metcalfe, who has been confined to his home for several weeks with pulmonary trouble, is improving slowly and will go to Florida to spend the winter so as to escape the rigor of the climate here.

Grant County's Next Rep.

Hon. J. M. Elliston, of Elliston Station, was a visitor here last Friday. Mr. Elliston was recently elected to represent Grant county in the coming session of the Kentucky legislature, and he will make one of the best representatives Grant county has ever had, for he is familiar with the wants of the people of the county and state.

Want to Build a Gym.

Monday night a meeting was held at the Walton school house for the purpose of raising sufficient funds with which to erect an auditorium and building suitable for a gymnasium. There was a good sized attendance and a nice program preliminary to the main object was rendered. The subscriptions to the fund amounted to about two hundred dollars. The building is supposed to cost about $1,000.

Medicos Entertained.

Dr. B. K. Menefee entertained the Boone County Medical Society last Wednesday night in a most enjoyable manner, and outside of a very entertaining program an elegant supper was served. Dr. L. C. Hater of Covington was the essayist. The other out of town guests were Drs. R. C. Coffield, G. F. McKim, C. A. Langsdale, of Cincinnati; Dr. McKee and Dr. Senour, of Union, and Prof. J. J. C. Gordon. It was the midnight hour before the "goodnight" was said.

Doing Good Work.

Will P. Beemon, of near Florence, the efficient County Assessor, spent last week here and completed the listing of the property in the Walton precinct. Mr. Beemon is one of the best assessors in the State, and while a few may be dissatisfied with him because of his faithful discharge of the duties of his important office, yet all recognize that he is only doing his duty, and if it was done indifferently or with a view to favoring any tax payer in listing property it would not be an injustice to the county but in the finality would cause greater dissatisfaction.

Has Resigned as Pastor.

Rev. Wm. McMillan preached his farewell sermon as pastor of the Walton Baptist church Sunday night when he tendered his resignation on account of his health. Bro. McMillan and family will move to Covington, Wednesday, where he expects to rest from his labors. His sons, Ray, Clinton and Sterling have secured positions in Cincinnati, and will make their home with their parents. Everybody in Walton regrets the resignation of Bro. McMillan and the departure of his family as they are loved and respected by all regardless of any church connection.

Doing a Big Freight Business.

The L. & N. and the O. & C. Railroads are having about all of the freight business the two roads can handle. Several months ago there were a great many idle freight cars and now the activity of the business has made such a demand that there is a shortage of cars necessary to meet the requirements. The L. & N. Railroad is now making preparations to put the big mogul engines on its road to do the freight business. These engines weigh 145 tons and have twice the pulling capacity of the engines now in use, and will consequently be a saving as it will dispense with double headers and the extra crew required when two engines are employed to pull a freight train.

Among the RECORDER'S visitors the past week were H. H. Clore, of Range Hall; Robert Ayler, of Lebanon; R. H. McDonald, of Petersburg; Harry Kilgore, of Francesville; W. E. Snelling, of Bellevue; Ed. Newberry, of Richmond; R. C. Gaines, of Idwell; Tim Sandford, of McVine; Mrs. C. E. Stephens, of Bullittville; L. H. Crisler, of Covington.

Thomas G. Tupman, who, many years ago, sold out at Kenton Heights, Kenton county, and moved to California, died at the home of his son, Robt. near Los Angeles, Cal., last week. His remains arrived in Cincinnati about noon Tuesday and will be buried in Highland cemetery Interment at 1 p. m. Friday.

Dr. L. H. Crisler, of Covington, was the guest of his venerable father, Thomas P. Crisler, and his sister, Mrs. Fannie Rice, last Tuesday.

Some snow storm Tuesday but the beautiful melted as fast as it fell.

Some comin' and goin' at the court house now.

Mrs. Hampton is Dead.

Mrs. Fannie Mae Buck-Hampton died at her home in Trimble-co., last Thursday after a lingering illness from consumption. Mrs. Hampton was the daughter of the late Rev. D. T. Buck, and was a most lovable young lady. She leaves a husband and a little son. The funeral took place Sunday. Miss Libbie Ingram of this place was at her bedside when she died and remained to attend the funeral.

Church Wonderfully Revived.

The Baptist church has been wonderfully revived and stimulated by the recent protracted meeting, and the membership feel greatly encouraged by the present condition of the church. Mrs. S. H. McCartt was admitted to membership by baptism at the regular meeting last week. The pastor, Rev. Wm. McMillan, has been untiring in his efforts to build up the church and keep it in good working shape, though his health has somewhat retarded his efforts, but he is an excellent pastor and his good work is showing constantly in the many among his membership, the good attendance at the meetings, and the kindness displayed to the needy when he suffered the effects of ill health. However he is growing stronger and will be able to even make his work more efficient, if he continues in the work.

Liberty Bell at Walton.

The world famous Liberty Bell passed through here Monday at 1:30 on its way home to the "City of Brotherly Love" after the long journey from San Francisco, Cal., where it had been on exhibition at the Panama Exposition. The patriotic spirit of the people was evidence everywhere by great crowds of people who assembled at the railroad stations to do homage to the bell that rung the proclamation of liberty to the United States at Philadelphia in 1776. The pupils of the Walton graded school were permitted to be at the railroad station and witness the passing of the old relic through the town. The bell was in charge of a committee headed by Senator Boise Penrose of Pennsylvania, the bell being on a flat car bedecked with flags and other decorations, and handsomely engraved cards, giving a description of the bell were thrown off to the spectators. The bell was cast in London in 1752 at a cost of $500. It was brought to Philadelphia that year and at its first trial was cracked by a stroke of the clapper. It was recast by Pass & Stow, "ingenious workmen" of Philadelphia, but the crack still remains. On July 8th, 1835 it was rung the last time during the obsequies of Chief Justice Marshall of the Supreme Court, the great expounder of the Constitution. The bell weighs 2,400 pounds, measures twelve feet around the lip and seven feet six inches around the crown. The small lettering about the crown is in two lines reading: "Proclaim LIBERTY throughout all the LAND unto all the inhabitants thereof, Lev. xxv, 10" and "By Order of the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania for the State House in Philadelphia."

Notice of Road Change.

Notice is hereby given that there will be offered at the regular December term of the Boone County Court to be held in Burlington, Kentucky, December 6th, 1915, a petition to discontinue and change a part of the road known as the Hudson Grade, leading from Richwood church to the Lexington pike.

Said discontinuance to begin at or near the gate leading to the residence of Mrs. Martha Hudson, and ending at a point in said road at or near the division line between the said Martha Hudson and W. H. Senior, a distance of one-fourth of a mile, approximately, and they will ask that said road be changed to and opened on the north side of a branch of Mud Lick creek, without crossing same as the road does at present.

At the same time and place the Court will be asked to appoint viewers to act in the matter according to law.

Notice of the above was given the undersigned November 17th, 1915. All persons will take notice of the above. C. W. GOODRIDGE, County Road Engineer.

He resides in a few yards of the postoffice at Erlanger, and when he heard the shooting preceding the capture of two of the men who blew the post-office safe, last Wednesday night, he hastened to the scene to take charge of the bodies of the dead, and was badly disappointed when he found all the shots had gone wild. However, the Coroner gives credit for doing a good job.

WILL HE DO IT?

Question Arises As to What Governor McCree Will Do About Youtsey.

In these last days of Governor McCree's splendid administration, when he is about to retire from a most valued service to his state the minds of innumerable Kentuckians, and residents of other states are wondering whether or not he will pardon Henry Youtsey. Hope whispers that he will, for Gov. McCree's motto has always been "Let the people rule." Thousands and thousands of persons have signed the petition for Youtsey's release from prison, and today the case was submitted to the people ninety-five out of every hundred would be in favor of his immediate release.

The leading papers of this state have all had editorials setting forth splendid reasons why the Governor should liberate Mr. Youtsey. The Courier-Journal of May 30, 1914, rightly says, "that the movement set on foot looking to the pardon of Henry Youtsey is founded upon Justice, humanity, and public policy. He was drawn into trouble by environment and circumstances, previous to this he was a young man of unblemished moral character. Certainly he has been punished enough. The guilty men are at large, one of them convicted by three juries sits in the Congress of the United States. To leave this man in prison defeats the ends of justice." This was copied in the Lexington Herald. The Owen County Democrat gives this thought, "Those who were principle were never punished, though Youtsey spent the better part of his young life in prison." It urges the people to sign his petition. The Owensboro Messenger says: "Youtsey was left to hold the bag. The argumentative force in his behalf is that the arch-conspirator in the whole scheme was so much better treated."

The Todd County Times among other things says: "Youtsey is the only man who has suffered for the assassination of Governor Goebel, but for him the Commonwealth would have signally failed to make out the strong case it did. It is hoped that Governor McCree will heed the appeal of the Confederate veterans at the Pewee V. M. E. Christmas Endeavor convention and others that he do so."

This was copied in many Kentucky papers. The Hartford Herold says: "there is no doubt but that Youtsey has been made the 'goat' in the case, and his pardon would be appreciated by many good people."

The Cincinnati Enquirer of December 17, 1913, stated that thru faithful services Henry Youtsey won his promotion to that place as private secretary to Warden Wells.

The Winchester Democrat of December 15, 1911, says: "that it was Governor Wilson's duty to pardon Youtsey and if he goes out of office without doing it his conscience should burn forever." These are extracts from the press, similar remarks have been made verbally thousands of times. The prison record of this man has been perfect. He has devoted himself resolutely to the task of making the moral conditions with in his walls better not only by precept and example, but by teaching. Hundreds of men have learned to read and write under his patient instruction. On Sabbath days he has taught the laws of Jehovah, and endeavored to obey them. Thirteen years of prison life has not degenerated the character of this man, he has made the best of his unfortunate position, hoping trusting for the day when he could walk once more from the floor into God's beautiful out of doors.

Surely in the heart of hearts of our Governor and in the knowledge of this great desire expressed by the people he will sign the pardon for one who deserves it and thereby ingratiate himself farther in the esteem of every lover of justice.—Winchester Democrat.

The Recorder has believed ever since Powers was pardoned that Youtsey ought to be given his liberty.

Kentucky in 1916.

Our correspondent "Savoyard," himself a native Kentuckian, writes from Washington about 1915 election results and 1916 probabilities, and concedes that Kentucky is as safe for President Wilson as Texas or Georgia. Local interests caused the recent State election to be so close, he observes, but in 1916 those interests will not assert themselves and the Democratic national managers are justified in feeling certain of Kentucky's electoral vote.

This is one of those things that it will be well not to be too certain about. Local interests did enter into the recent State election in Kentucky, and while they hurt in some places, they helped mightily in others. Everybody recognizes how much the Democratic judicial and congressional ticket helped in Louisville, and all over the State there were men running on the Democratic ticket for the offices who made votes for the whole ticket.

Next year's election in Kentucky will be different in many ways. National politics will have the whole field. The Republicans are without Federal, State or local patronage and they are fighting the better when so situated. There will be no local elections to help the Democratic Presidential ticket. Lastly, and most important of all, the Republicans are not being responsible for what is done at Frankfort during the coming winter, have everything to gain and nothing to lose from Democratic blunders or discomfitures. It is a serious error, the Ev-

Executor's Sale

MAGNIFICENT Farm of 177 Acres

TO BE SOLD At Public Auction On December 13th, 1915

At 1:00 O'Clock P. M.

At the Court House Door in Burlington, Ky.

As Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John T. Craven, deceased, I will sell at public outcry, to the highest and best bidder, what is known as "THE JOHN T. CRAVEN FARM"

This farm is located on what is known as the Florence & Burlington Turnpike, a free road, one mile west of the Town of Florence, Boone County, Kentucky, through which the Dixie Highway passed and is ten miles west of Cincinnati, Ohio.

It is improved with a splendid seven-room residence, three-room cottage, two large barns, one equipped for dairy purposes; two small corn cribs, one dairy house, one meat house and other necessary out-buildings, all of which are in fair state of repairs. This farm contains one hundred and seventy-seven acres, more or less, all in grass with the exception of about fifteen acres. The outside and five fences are in good condition and the farm is in a high state of cultivation. It is supplied with never-failing water and is splendidly adapted to stock raising and dairy purposes.

This farm is located within five miles of Burlington, the County Seat of Boone County, at which a splendid High School is maintained. In the Town of Florence, one mile distant, there are a good Graded School, a Baptist, Christian, and Catholic Churches. The pike leading from this farm to the City of Cincinnati is free, with the exception of about one mile. The tax rate in Boone County is very reasonable. This farm is located in a splendid community, surrounded by prosperous and well-to-do farmers, all of which are matters of the greatest importance to persons contemplating an investment of this character.

This farm will be sold for the purpose of settling the estate of the late John T. Craven, and I, as Executor of his Last Will and Testament, am fully authorized and empowered to make the sale and convey the same.

Terms of Sale—One-third (1-3) of the purchase money to be paid in cash, the balance to be in two equal installments in one and two years from date, evidenced by promissory notes, payable to my order as Executor, with interest at the rate of six (6) per cent. until paid, with a lien reserved in the deed to secure the payment of the deferred payments. Possession will be given immediately.

I retain the right to reject any or all bids. The successful bidder must be ready, on the day of sale, to comply with the terms of sale.

being Post believes, to minimize the damage that may be done to Democratic national prospects by policies that will divide the party in local matters. In the first place, Kentucky has two Democratic United States Senators, Mr. James and Mr. Beckham. Mr. James has been in the Senate for more than two years and has done good work, and his services have been duly recognized. Mr. Beckham has been twice Governor, has been chosen Senator and has a personal following that runs into the tens of thousands of voters. Mr. Beckham's party standing is exactly that of Mr. James, and Mr. Beckham's following must be held in local affairs. Mr. Beckham spoke everywhere for the State ticket in the campaign that has just ended, and his personal pleas sufficed to keep in line enough men to save the party from defeat.

Bracken and Nicholas counties have a very fine crop of tobacco this year, and this accounts for the fancy prices that have been paid in these counties. It is said that Pendleton has some fine tobacco as can be found anywhere in the Burley belt.

Another old tobacco grower, after years spent in worming and suckering tobacco, has gotten the second sight and is building a large chicken house, aiming to devote the rest of his days to raising his prize Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Reds scratch dirt for a living. Clark Thomas, of Caddo, is constructing a big chicken house to take the place of his tobacco barn, and he is going to raise chickens instead of tobacco worms.—Falmouth Outlook.

SNYDER & CRAWFORD.

It does not take the pains of a "Philadelphia lawyer" to see that the land values in Pendleton county are increasing by leaps and bounds. Dairying, sweet clover and alfalfa are the three prime factors in bringing this about. The people are fast getting away from the "habits of raising tobacco and the soil is being improved. The county is now increasing in population and the farmers who are exercising their muscles are making money. The day is fast approaching when there will be no cheap land in this county. Farmers in other and more favored sections of our State are learning of our great opportunities and coming here and investing in land, and this will make the prices boom. We are adjacent to the great Cincinnati market, which also enhances our land values. Land recently sold in the vicinity of this city for $50 per acre that could have been bought a few years ago for $12 and $15. Only last week a man refused an offer of $40 an acre for his farm which cost him $9 per acre.—Falmouth Outlook.

On another page will be found an interview with Mr. Logan, the State's next Attorney General, published first in the Lexington Herald. Mr. Logan's program for legislation and the transaction of the State's business is a good one, and if carried out will dispense with numerous sinecures.

SOME ALCOHOL.

Kentucky distillers and anyone in a position to produce alcohol are to have an opportunity to bid on the biggest contract that has ever been proposed. The alcohol is sought by the allied government for use in making ammunition. The quantity wanted is 20,000 tank cars. This is 30,000,000 proof gallons, and the quantity is better appreciated when it is realized that this is ten times the annual production of Kentucky. The distillers of the State are considering the proposal and are looking into the matter from all angles. It would follow just how profitable the contracts will be and if it will be advisable to stop making whisky for a time to take on this new line.

Many of the eastern papers have been predicting a free for all fight in Kentucky as a result of the closeness of the gubernatorial race. But the people, and the politicians are as calm as Indian summer. There is no prospect that with Stanley and Morrow, or the force behind either, a war for all fights would follow even in the event of a contest. Kentucky is a peaceful and progressive State, thank you, and ditions of 1900.—State Journal.

FRANKFORT PLANS ELABORATE ENTERTAINMENT FOR KENTUCKY HOSTS AT THE INAUGURATION

Top Left—Gov.-elect Stanley. Top Right—Lieut.-Gov.-elect Black. Top Center—The Capitol at Frankfort. Below Left—Gov. McCreary. Below Right—Lieut.-Gov. McDermott. Below Center—The Governor's Mansion at Frankfort.

(By Roger Burlingame.)

Frankfort, Ky. [Special]—Standing in the shadow of the magnificent $2,000,000 Capitol with his eyes resting on the statue of the martyred William Goebel, his friend and counselor, Augustus Owsley Stanley will take the oath of office as Governor of Kentucky at 12 o'clock, Tuesday, December 7, while the greatest throng that ever has witnessed an inauguration in Frankfort will be present to do him honor.

Carrying out his campaign promises Governor Stanley will once more proclaim himself the champion of economy, retrenchment and the rule of the people.

Arrangements rapidly being completed for the inauguration presage the greatest spectacle it has been the lot of Kentuckians to witness and from reports received by the various committees in charge of the details incident to the event, Kentucky from the Beargrass, the Bluegrass, the Penny-riple and the Purchase will be present to lend enthusiastic acclaim to the State's new Chief Executive.

Ohio Visitors Coming.

Vielling with the uniformed marching clubs from Louisville, including the Mose Green Club, the oldest and strongest political organization in the metropolis will be the Duckworth Club, the crack Democratic marching club from Cincinnati whose members will join the throng in Frankfort for the inaugural festivities as a tribute to the former Congressman who in many times of battle has been ever ready to go to the aid of his Democratic brethren in the Buckeye state. Henderson, the home of Governor-elect Stanley will send a special train with a brass band and a thousand enthusiastic "home folks" while Covington, Newport, Paducah, Owensboro, Bowling Green, Shelbyville and Lexington will have marching clubs in the big parade that is confidently expected to eclipse that of any former inauguration.

5000 From Louisville.

From Louisville alone 5,000 visitors are expected and it is believed the greater portion of the population of Lexington will spend the day in the Capital city. Already the advance reservations have exhausted the available supply of hotel accommodations and for days the members of the Accommodations Committee have been at their wits end to find quarters for the thousands of visitors who will be in Frankfort for one or more days. The committee has issued a call to the residents of Frankfort asking them to report the number of rooms they will place at the disposal of visitors and has fixed a standard price of $1.00 for sleeping quarters for persons who remain over night. The committee will have the addresses of all persons who have available rooms indexed and will have members of the committee assigned to the hotels and the depots to take visitors in charge and escort them to houses where they can secure quarters, at the price agreed upon. The Executive Committee in charge of the inauguration determined to do away with the idea of sending out invitations over the State inasmuch as the ceremony is an event of interest to the whole people and in lieu of the usual invitations has issued a general invitation through the columns of the various newspapers asking everyone to become a guest of Frankfort on the event.

Parade The Big Feature.

Naturally the parade will be one of the chief features of the inaugural day ceremonies with the inaugural ball at night as second in importance on the entertainment program. Here too will be displayed the determination of the committee to avoid any appearance of discrimination and the invitation that has been spread broadcast throughout the State including attendance at the grand ball. The fact that a majority of the visitors will remain over night and attend the ball is giving the committee some concern and the place for holding it has not yet been decided on. Of course a majority of the visitors simply will attend as sightseers but there will be so many persons dancing that it will require a floor much larger than has been available heretofore.

Robert A. Brawner, chief marshal of the parade and the members of the Parade Committee have formulated plans for the inaugural procession which will start from the historic Capitol Hotel and wind its way through the business section and across into the residence district in South Frankfort, enroute to the new Capitol. Chief Marshal Brawner has designated as aides men familiar with the duties of that office and in a majority of cases trained in the military maneuvers.

Program Not Complete.

The exact program for the inauguration has not been completed but will be announced a few days in advance of the event. Governor-elect Stanley is expected to arrive in Frankfort accompanied by Mrs. Stanley and their three sons on Sunday and they probably will be the guests of friends until they take up their home in the mansion. Governor James E. McCreary will introduce Governor-elect Stanley and Lieutenant Governor-elect James D. Black, to whom the oath of office will be administered by Chief Justice Shackelford Miller of the Court of Appeals. The inaugural address of Governor Stanley promises to be interesting not alone because of his gifted powers of oratory but for the reason that he will outline a plan of procedure for the next four years that will accord with the wishes of all Kentuckians.

The arrangements for police protection while the thousands of visitors are thronging the streets and the show places in Frankfort are being carefully looked after by Chief of Police Mangum and Mayor Joseph Rupert. Cincinnati will send a squad of trained men and Louisville and Lexington will furnish first-aiders of recognized ability to insure absolute protection.

Interesting Trip Promised.

Aside from the interesting incidents that will feature the inaugural parade the trip to Frankfort will be made the occasion for thousands of visitors to get a look at the new Capitol, the historic old State House, the Reformatory, the Arsenal, the Institute for Feeble-minded children, the Colored Normal School and the numerous other points of interest.

As usual Col. E. H. Taylor, Jr., proprietor of the Old Taylor distillery will keep open house and incidentally will extend to general invited visitors to roam over his magnificent Woodford county farm and see his champion herd of Hereford cattle and other prize-winning stock. Col Taylor's estate is destined to be the rival of the Haggis farm and already is considered one of the show places in the State. At Baker's distillery and the many others in and about Frankfort the welcome sign will be hung out to visitors while merchants and citizens throughout Frankfort will have the latching hanging outside. Varden Wells of the Reformatory is planning a holiday for the unfortunate incarcerated behind the grim walls of the Reformatory and thousands of visitors probably will take advantage of the opportunity to get a glimpse of the inside.

Rain Will Not Interfere.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the inaugural ceremonies at the Capitol has completed plans whereby a stand may be thrown up in a few hours either inside or out, according to weather conditions. The disagreeable weather that marked the inauguration of Governor-elect McCreary will have little effect should there be a recurrence, for the broad corridors and galleries in the new Capitol will hold several thousand visitors and in the event of rain the stand will be erected inside and the ceremony will take place there.

That the attendance will be larger than over before is conceded. The editors of all the Kentucky newspapers have been placed on the Publicity Committee and through their papers have extended the invitation to Kentuckians to be present and participate in the inaugural ceremonies. The Publicity Committee will have headquarters in a building adjoining the Court House, equipped for the convenience of newspaper men who will be among the visitors and a cordial welcome has been extended to all of the Kentucky newspaper-men to be present and partake of Frankfort's hospitality.

The beautiful scenery in and about Frankfort, the drives along the Kentucky river and the splendid roadways radiating from Frankfort will furnish opportunity for visitors to spend a portion of their time in pleasant sight-seeing trips after the inauguration ceremonies are concluded.

Cheap Railroad Rates.

All steam railroads in the State of Kentucky have published rates to Frankfort and return on account of inauguration Dec. 7th of three cents per mile plus twenty-five cents for the round trip. Tickets to be sold on Dec. 6th and 7th good returning until Dec. 9th midnight.

On above basis the round trip fares to Frankfort and return from the principal cities are as follows:

Louisville	$1.90	Covington	$3.55
Lexington	1.10	Newport	3.55
Richmond	1.90	Henderson	3.25
Pardis	1.45	Owensboro	5.30
Bardonia	2.95	Paducah	$4.85
Cincinnati	$3.65

HON. M. M. LOGAN,

New Attorney General Says Waste of State's Money Must Stop.

The Kentucky Democracy, holding its control of the affairs of the State by a hair's breadth, will apply itself to correcting the abuses which have grown up in former administrations, and will make a concerted effort to square itself with the people of this State by radical retrenchments and reforms, was indicated in an interview today between Assistant Attorney General M. M. Logan and a Leader representative.

Mr. Logan will shortly be advanced to the office of Attorney General and is the first of the members of the incoming administration to give definite expression to his state-ments and views will be regarded with much interest by the people throughout the State and especially by those Democrats who have been dismayed at the revelations of extravagance and indifference to law, which have been brought out during the last campaign.

"The most important business before the incoming administration," said Mr. Logan, "is the payment of the public debt. This must be done without increasing the State tax levy and can be done by the application of ordinary business principles to many departments which have been run without regard to business efficiency. In other words, we have got to do more business and less politics."

"The Constitution states very clearly that no money shall be paid out of the public treasury except in accordance with the definite provisions of the acts of the General Assembly. As soon as an Attorney General is sworn in, he is bound to see that this is carried out. The Auditor and Attorney General should be able to determine without difficulty whether demands made upon the treasury are in accordance with law and in every instance where payments are made without this authority, I propose to bring suit against the Auditor upon his bond for the recovery of all such sums paid out."

"Ever since 1892, there have been twenty or thirty porters and other employees on the State-house payroll. They have been getting an average of fifty dollars a month. Hereafter if they expect to stay on the payroll they will have to get an act of the Legislature to authorize the payment."

"The extra help around the board under where is a Constitutional provision which makes it lawful for them to be paid. As Attorney General, I do not expect to stand for the least deviation from the letter of the law. The spending of public money."

"There are some cases of State employees holding two positions and getting paid for both. I am familiar with all the facts, but I understand some of these are in the service of the State University and other similar institutions. I believe that an economy is being effected in this way, but before it is allowed in the future, I propose to bring suit against the Auditor. For instance, there are four or five departments, maintaining offices in the old Capitol buildings. The Auditor General's office will have a room for them here in the new building and they conduct their business with less expense and a material saving in time and money. I believe that the Finance and Com. Commission could not work in the office of the Department of Agriculture. The Forestry Commission could be placed in the office of the Board of Health. Subordinate clerks do the routine work for several such departments, and I believe $100,000 in salaries could be saved to the state every year by a reorganization of the State in any way impairing the efficiency of any department."

"My idea is, and I shall take it up with the new Governor and State officials as quickly as possible that the platform pliers of the party shall be put into the form of carefully prepared bills, introduced early and put through the coming legislative session with as little delay as is consistent with careful consideration. I am in favor of a conference of all of the State officials, the Governor, and the members of the Legislature, to draw up bills of that kind, to be introduced by the Governor and pushed through as administrative measures. I favor this because heretofore no one has ever taken the responsibility of passing bills in fulfillment of the party platform promises. I think it important to do this early in the session."

"The anti-pass law is one of these. It was not passed in the early part of the session it will not be passed at all. It is a difficult measure to get on the books, and the new Constitution expressly orders that it be done."

"The corrupt practices act is another. I believe such a law should follow the Federal statute and require the candidate to file statements both before and after the election that it may be public knowledge where the money came from and where it went. I would favor a law setting forth what illegal forms of campaign expenditure, and permitting any citizen to sue in any circuit court for the unlawful of any candidate for or without his consent. When any man or institution practices the rights of a citizen to sue for the illegal acts of his candidate, those acts will not be committed."

"It seems to be a popular idea that an anti-lobby act is difficult to frame, to avoid infringing on the rights of all citizens to suggest and use proper efforts to have what they may deem wise legislation passed. But the Legislature can easily demand that lobbyists appearing before committees show the nature of their interest, and can protect their members from undue pressure as easily as a court protects a jury from corrupt approaches."

"There are a number of other pledges which I believe the party must exact in the near future as it has the opportunity."

"I mentioned a saving in salaries as a step in economy. This is of course by no means sufficient to get the State out of debt. One of the biggest reforms can be effected in the administration of the Department of Public Instruction. The school fund has grown to enormous proportions, due to a steady increase in the value of taxable property. This year in spite of their capitis by $25, there is still $200,000 in the school fund. The increase in the tax values will continue, and should make it possible for not only the common schools but the State University and the normal schools to be supported out of the school fund instead of the general fund."

"The State is now spending seven million dollars a year on its schools, and I do not believe it is excessive. I would say that nearly half of it is wasted. What else would you call it, when the enrollment in the public schools is only one-half of the school census?"

"Of the seven millions spent on schools, four million comes from the State and the remainder by special county taxes. But the State fund has grown so big that many counties are sitting back and are making no effort to improve their schools by local support, but are depending entirely upon what the State drops in their lap."

"Many counties are in such financial condition that they must have some State aid. But they should not be given more than they are entitled to."

"It is absurd in the first place for the school age to be from six to twenty. Within this limit are thousands of young men and women who have finished their schooling who do not receive a penny's benefit from the per capita distribution. I believe that a business standpoint are merely dumplings upon which the counties hope to induce the State to hang an additional donation for school purposes."

"I am satisfied that if the school age is reduced from twenty to eighteen, the counties will still be able to pay for the education of the children. The State will have enough money in the school fund to pay for the education of young men and women of the ages of eighteen to twenty, and over, in the normal schools and universities."

"Those latter institutions are to all intents and purposes public schools, and they should be supported from the school fund. If this is done I will save between $300,000 and $400,000 a year out of the general fund. These institutions will be just as well provided for, the school children who actually attend university will be just as well provided for, or if not, the counties themselves will not be burdened to make up the deficit. I believe, however, that with economy and business attention, the increased wealth of the State will provide means sufficient for both the common school and the higher institutions. The plan I have suggested would merely prevent a large part of the school fund from being paid out in the way of salaries to those who do not go to school, but would turn it instead toward the higher education of those ambitious young people who seek it."

"The present system of allowing a State department a lump sum for clerks who are paid on a salary basis is a department chooses, is bad, even if not wasteful and extravagant. I believe that the Secretary of the State Superintendent being given a pot of money to spend on clerk hire, the Legislature should specify the number of clerks and the salaries to be allowed in each case. It would tend toward the selection of a few good assistants, instead of the temptation to spend the money out as far as it will go to pay political debts. A good many of the clerks around the State are not doing any work, but are paid for the work they are supposed to do, but there are a great many of them."

"The State Auditor is allowed $23,500 to spend as he likes for clerk hire. The Secretary of State is allowed $10,000 in addition to specified deputies and department heads."

"The State Superintendent's office has always claimed the right to employ such clerks and other help as might be necessary, although I do not find any such authority in the law."

"The Prison Commission is allowed to employ wardens, guards, clerks, and in addition such other employees as may be necessary. And the commission is made the sole judge of what is necessary. It was as good as telling them to go as far as they could. None of these officials should be the sole judges of how many employees they may put on the payroll or how much they may be paid. It is in high time that some such restrictions be placed."

"For the penitentiary, for instance, there should be a law fixing a definite ratio between the number of guards and the number of prisoners, thus removing the officials from the pressure of competition of having to find a job somewhere for some political pet."

At this point Mr. Logan was asked whether his office would take cognizance of the fact that two of the members of the Prison Board are holding their office in spite of evidence that both have violated the law relative to the making of campaign contributions, and that the Leader had pointed out that both officials had forfeited their offices."

Mr. Logan didn't reveal his plans. He merely said, "I have excellent information that there were no contributions of this kind made in the State campaign. What the Leader had to say may have had something to do with it. I should be glad to see the Commonwealth to the State, Mr. Logan believes, will come when public officials in the counties are paid straight salaries, but he thought that the moral improvement necessary was even greater than any financial advantage."

"I believe the fee system in this State is the most pernicious influence in the government," he said. "I take the Commonwealth Attorney, for instance. If a defendant in criminal case has money, the prosecution can either prosecute him in a way that will send him to the penitentiary, in which case the prosecuting attorney gets nothing, or he can, instead, the defendant's lawyer gully to a lesser charge, in which case he gets half of the fine imposed. In gambling and other offenses in collecting taxes, the defendant could be one of the most important features of any new tax laws, fences, where only a fine is imposed, the offender who is indicted is better off for the prosecutor, until the more active crimes of this kind are prosecuted, the more it resembles blackmail."

"The sheriff should be paid a salary. The assessor should be paid a salary, the county clerk should be paid a salary, the salaries of deputies should also be fixed by law."

"The salaries should be commensurate with the responsibility of the office and for services performed for the county, the county should pay. It is nothing more than common sense, although that county officeholders can hold fees which properly belong to the State or collect tax commissions for merely signing tax receipts. We do not have some new tax legislation during the coming administration. Economy and efficiency in collecting the taxes should be one of the most important features of any new tax laws."

"I do not believe that there have been any useless offices created. Although there are some new ones some offices whose incumbents are useless. I would be in favor of any new office which promises to save money. I would be in favor of any new office which promises to save money. I would be in favor of any new office which promises to save money."

"I think that there should be some one to collect the inheritance tax. At present it is nobody's business, and there is nothing in it for anyone who makes the effort. If the sheriff is to probate or other officer in the county collects it, the money all goes to the State. It should be the business of the county to determine whether or not the inheritance tax is due. There are many ways in which it can be collected, and I believe that an officer would be a valuable addition to the county government."

Mr. Logan expressed himself as in favor of fair legislative representation by all sections of the State. He said that redistricting could only be done at certain intervals and that when such a bill is prepared it should be fair and honest.

"I do not know how unpopular I may make myself in saying and doing all this," said Mr. Logan. "I expect that this will be my last public office, for I am not a candidate for any other."

"I believe it is true that no man can give his undivided impartial attention to the State. It is true, and still he is seeking other political office. He cannot pay politics and be the faithful servant of the State. The law cannot succeed himself. It is just as bad for him to use his office to get a re-election. The law would do as well to see the law amended to make every State officer ineligible to any other State office in the election prior to the expiration of his term."

"I prepared a bill of that sort once, and not only could not get it passed, but even had difficulty in getting anyone who would introduce it. I believe it would go far toward giving us a State government with more business and less politics."

Luke Given to State University.

The great thoroughbred stallion, Luke, that made such a reputation as the greatest race horse in Kentucky, and which was given to the State University by the Kentucky Racing Commission. The Commission purchased him from Senator J. N. Camden. The University has now been presented ten thoroughbred stallions to be used in improving the horse stock of Kentucky. The stallions are to be let to farmers in various communities in the state, and they are to serve mares at very reasonable prices.

The stallions will be sent out to their respective homes next January.

Bourbon county farmers are hating corn and stripping tobacco. The recent rains tending to bring the tobacco into case so it could be easily handled.

One of the most historic bells of the South American churches was discovered and brought to San Francisco by two Oakland junk dealers, Wm. Rosenfield and Lewis Holmberg, who have just arrived from South America on the steamer Curcio. They have been on a buying trip in Peru and Chile for two years.

The bell is 325 years old and hung in the Cathedral of San Agustino at Lima for more than two centuries. In the revolution of 1885 the Cathedral was wrecked and the bell disappeared.

The two Oaklanders bought the debris of the Cathedral and in excavating among the ruins found the bell. It was thought in Lima that it had been stolen 20 years before.

Peruvians wished to buy the bell, but the new owners thought it would be worth more in this country and refused to sell. The relic weighs 500 pounds and is of bronze, with inscriptions in gold. —San Francisco Chronicle.

The following is from the Owen County Democrat, owned and edited by State Senator-elect Littrell:

"By a majority of nearly forty thousand A. O. Stanley was made the nominee of the Democratic party defeating a man who ran in the interest of state wide prohibition. As Democrats we are compelled to believe the majority is right. To those who are willing to abide by the Democratic principle of the majority rules the liquor question is settled, so far as the party is concerned, and it should be. We had enough excitement over the question caused in many instances by those seeking gain. It is time for the next assembly to get down to business and to pass some constructive laws for the benefit of the people and not to block the legislature by a question that the people have settled for years. It has been rumored that the Republicans intend to even up with the Democrats will unite with the dry Democrats in the next Legislature and push a state-wide prohibition bill. This was done by the Republicans in 1910 when they attempted to put the burden upon the Democrats."

"The Republican platform adopted this year at Lexington was a local option and the county unit Judge O'Keefe, endorsed it, but they are still up to their old tricks and we are sorry that we have some Democrats that are weak enough to be caught by their bait."

"The next Legislature should passers of Kentucky for the tax payers of Kentucky or adjourn and go home."

Cheer Up.

These are dark days for the world. The shadow of war is heavier than ever on all hearts, whatever their sympathies. There is little exultation now even in victories, for we know at what a price of blood and pain every victory is won. But there are many things besides war in the world. Except for our active imaginations, most of us would feel life running on pretty much as usual. There is the same sunshine, the same life-giving air, the same autumn colors in the woods, the same joy in bountiful harvests. There is the same quiet satisfaction of soul that always comes with the fall season whether in country or city. Here in American isolation, we can live out our lives in spite of wars and rumors of wars. There is need to be sure of taking thought for the future, preparing against the time war may bring home to us the wretchedness that we knew half a century ago, but that Europe knows today. But that is a matter of calm decision, not for alarm and fear. We are today the most fortunate nation in the world. There is no reason why we cannot continue so. It is a good time for the nation to take to heart the philosophy that is preached so much to individuals—the philosophy of confidence, of optimism, of positive thought. It is right and proper that we should feel the woes of Europe, and it is our duty to alleviate them all we can. But it is wrong to let the woes weigh on your spirits until we lose our own buoyancy and poise. It is better to regard the war as a doctor or a nurse regards sickness—as something to be cured whose cure can be effected not through outbreaks of sentimentalism but through intelligent and cheerful service.—Ex.

Water Pan in the Henhouse.

How often do you clean up the water pans in your henhouse? You ought to clean them every day. For a dirty water pan is the surest way of spreading disease thruout your flock.

The best way of handling water in the poultry house is to keep it in a cheap flat wash basin that can be easily cleaned and refilled. It doesn't pay to bother with patent water tanks. You will have to fill them just as often as the basins and they are harder to clean up. Place the open basin on a box some eight or ten inches high and perhaps 18 inches square and make a runway to it. This keeps it from filling up with dirt and straw from the floor, and the hens do not climb into it in drinking.

Then put the box and basin in a sunny corner of the house, away from the roosts and nests, so that no dirt can fall into it from above.

Clean it and refill it with clean, fresh water every day and you will have put the disease germs to flight indefinitely.

Conditions Have Changed.

At the beginning of the war the United States owed England at least a half billion dollars which that country demanded and which our nation was in no position to pay at that time our factories were closed and our cars idle. Since then our factories have resumed work, our debt to England paid and that country has borrowed a half billion dollars and is desirous of borrowing more, at the beginning of the war the South was almost in a panic—today the money borrowed from the United States is being turned back to the South for her cotton. A notable fact for Kentuckians to consider is this, that of this five hundred million dollars spent in this country we do not get over six million of it mostly for tobacco while the state of Kentucky gets over forty millions. The state of Georgia gets twenty-five millions, Kansas gets twenty-one millions and the little state of South Carolina gets thirteen millions. This money was mainly spent for cotton, wheat, copper, iron, automobiles, hand tobacco.

While in this period of prosperity exists it having come from a period of adversity it will pay everybody to make hay while the sun shines and round up their business affairs because when things get high they are in a good position to come down. It behooves Kentuckians to grow more cattle, corn, mules and hogs.—Ex.

THE STATE PRESS.

Woodford county farmers are pretty well up with their work, and if not too cold, work in tobacco stripping will begin.

Weather conditions in Garrard county during the past week were quite different from the preceding week. This has been an excellent season for raising tobacco. The greater part of the corn has been shucked. Grass and the growing grain sustained the drop of temperature with but no damage.

Uncle "Bill" Williams, the man about town told us that he caught a possum the other night that weighed 73 pounds. This was a record for the county. Also that on the same night he "sired" a huge boar constrictor which looked to be about forty feet long. We don't vouch for this. Ask him—Whitesburg Mountain Eagle. Bracken county tobacco cured up well and from present indications it will be a first-class crop with very little bad in it. There is not much buying going on but occasionally a crop or two is picked up in different sections of the county. Most of the farmers are through shucking corn, never having had a better fall for that work.

Hunters who have been scouring the country in search of quail since Monday, when the open season, which closes Jan. 1, began, report that never before were quail so scarce, and fortunate indeed is the hunter who is successful as to bag three or four after a whole day's tramping. There are, as usual, plenty of rabbits and possums.—Meade Co. Messenger.

Over 14,500 turkeys have been purchased slaughtered and shipped out of Carlisle for the Thanks giving market this season, costing from 13 cents to 16 cents per pound on foot. Brent Bros. purchased and shipped 5,500; M. R. Ruddell, 5,000, and Lexington buyers 4,000 turkeys from Nicholas county. The Christmas market will open here Dec. 1, and turkey dealers report many of the birds yet in the hands of the farmers.—Nicholas Advocate.

Stripping tobacco has begun in Clark county and many thousand pounds will soon be ready for the market. Corn gathering is a heavy job in the county this year and most of the crop is still in the field. Shucking is going on, when the weather permits. The fodder is of a better quality this year than last and much lower in price. The grass is still fairly good and stock have been fed but little so far. Some fat hogs are going out but most of the farmers will hold till after the fat tending hogs are ready for killing.

Forestry Notes.

Ambushes grow better when planted in bunches. Weeping willows should be set out in "iers."

Hill trees bear more heavily in the fall, if planted near the front door, where the children can get at them readily. The White House lawn recently removed its pines and set out spruces. In other words, pining has given away to sprucing up.

Great oaks from little acorns grow but they are nothing to the great ashes that grow from little toe-corns.

Most of the chestnuts are dying out from a pest, but the mother-in-law joke still springs occasionally from another kind of pest.

It is considered a highly appropriate thing to plant rows of nut trees about insane asylums.

Family trees must be planted deeply, but shoe-trees grow just as well if merely heeled in.

A well-kept avenue of birches is considered correct for the approach to a schoolhouse. Russell Smith and Irvin Rue delivered to Herbert Kirk last Monday, four tons of coal, valued at $82. They consisted of milk, raccoon, opossum and skunk and were first-class.

Not so Dangerous Now.

The grade of the Limaburg hill on the Limaburg and Hebron pike has been reduced materially and it is now not so dangerous looking. Limaburg is a point at which autos should observe great care when passing because of the two roads that enter the Burlington and Florence pike there conceal conveyances thereon just as they are coming on the pike.

Colored People's Supper a Success.

The colored Baptist church gave a supper Thursday night to raise money for the benefit of the church. The leading item of menu was fresh fish fried in the most tempting style. On the bill of fare were numerous other dishes prepared in a manner peculiar to the best rules of the culinary art. The affair was a very satisfactory success to those who had it in charge, and a neat sum of money was cleared.

Appreciates the Recorder.

In renewing his subscription to the Recorder, E. E. Fry, of New Albany, Ind., writes. The remittance was received in due time, for which brother Fry will please accept thanks. "This will come in handy as turkeys will be high Thanksgiving, so I thought now would be a good time to let you know I had not forgotten you. The RECORDER is read with interest and seems like a letter from home. After a good many of my dear friends have passed on to that undivided country from whose bourne no traveler returns. With best wishes and kindest regards, I remain Yours."

Has a Cistern Filled with Cider.

Near Princeton, Ind., Albert F. Dougan has a 185 barrel cistern brimming full of good apple cider on his farm four miles southwest of that place.

Handicapped by the lack of barrels and the immensity of his apple crop, Mr. Dougan had a huge cistern constructed. It was well lined with concrete and a heavy coating of paraffin was placed over the concrete, which regular cistern pump, new and clean, fitted closely over the top. Then he started making cider with his big mill, a pipe carrying the cider from the press directly into the cistern, where the paraffin coating keeps the brimming full of fresh sweet and prevents fermentation.

The cistern, with its 185 barrel capacity, would not hold all the cider, and Mr. Dougan had to barrel considerate. He pumps the cider from the cistern the same as water.

Your are invited.

The inauguration of Hon. A. O. Stanley, Governor, and Hon. J. D. Black, as Lieutenant Governor, will take place at the Capitol, Frankfort, at noon on Tuesday, December 7, 1913. All Kentuckians, regardless of party affiliation, are most cordially invited to attend the ceremonies incident to the inauguration.

Clubs and other bodies that wish to participate should notify the Inaugural Executive Committee as soon as possible, in order that they may be assigned positions in the parade.

Inaugural Executive Committee.

Last Wednesday three strangers arrived in Erlanger in an automobile, and shortly after one of them called at the postoffice and bought a book of 25 1-cent stamps. The man had a bad eye and was recognized by Miss Helen Gurney, the postmaster, as the man who was in the office a few days preceding an attempt to blow the office safe a year or so ago.

Suspecting that plans were being laid to blow the safe, Miss Gurney notified the Postoffice Inspector in Cincinnati, who came to Erlanger Wednesday night with a posse of officers who were stationed at convenient points in the neighborhood of the post-office, which they watched until about 3 a. m. They say nothing when they saw members of the scene, two of whom entered the building by forcing open a rear window while the third acted as a lookout.

No effort was made to capture the robbers until the safe was blown, when the officers closed in upon the building, capturing without resistance the two who blew the safe, the look-out escaped under a lively pistol fire. The safe was badly damaged by the explosion while the plaster was jarred from the walls of the room and a window blown out.

One of the men was recognized by the inspector as a postoffice robber who has many jobs to his credit.

The prisoners were taken to Cincinnati and lodged in jail, and last Thursday a friend who called at the prison to see them was shadowed and five more men supposed to be members of the gang which has been busy with the post-offices in this part of the country for several months, were captured and lodged in prison.

Miss Gurney displayed rare detective skill in the way she handled the matter immediately following the appearance in her office of the man with the bad eye, and has received the congratulations of postoffice officials and many friends.

Once before last Wednesday night yeggmen had raided the Erlanger postoffice since Miss Gurney took charge.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL BAZAAR

Last Wednesday a Success Financially And Otherwise.

The bazaar last Wednesday was a success financially, $35.75 being the gross receipts. The expenses were about eight dollars, leaving about $27 net proceeds. Of this amount $25 is due the Board of Education, $8 on the piano and $17 on grading the school yard. The remaining $2 will be turned over to the Board as a fund to be used for installing a lighting system in the school house.

We feel that the bazaar has been a success in other ways than financially. It was the desire of the Faculty to present a program in the afternoon that would be high class and at the same time be entertaining and instructive. We do not hesitate to say that the basket ball games were the cleanest and best that have been played here this year. We are sorry that both of our teams could not win, but our girls did the only one left standing on Dr. Duncan's side, while on Mrs. Hughes side Jerry Fowler and Mr. Caywood were left.

The Faculty wishes to thank those who so generously donated. There was nothing asked for that was not given. The Faculty also wishes to thank those who offered their assistance in serving the supper. We wish it were possible to thank every one personally, but as we cannot, we take this opportunity of publicly doing so. We realize that a failure had it not been for the generous giving of friends both in provisions and service.

Whipped the Ram.

As Mary Robert Carter, aged about ten, was returning home from school a few days ago, he was attacked by a vicious ram as he was passing through his father's sheep pasture. He had been told by his father some time before, that in the event he was ever attacked by a sheep to lie down on the ground, and he would escape injury. Remembering what his father told him, and seeing no chance to escape an attack by the ram, Bob lay down, drawing himself up, keeping his feet towards the sheep, and every time he was about to deliver a butt he kicked it on the nose. After receiving quite a number of heavy jolts the ram gave up the fight and retreated. The little boy was not hurt.

Want to Build a Good Walk.

The proposition to build a concrete walk from the High School building to the corporation line of the town is being discussed and several liberal donations for the work have been proposed, in some instances by parties who are not very greatly interested further than to see needed improvements accomplished. The walk should by all means be built and every property owner in Burlington should assist in it as the school is an advantage to every one of them. It is hoped the agitation will not cease until the walk is assured, and, further, that it will be reality before this time next year.

Number Nineteen.

By a majority of two to one South Carolina on Sept. 11 voted to become the nineteenth prohibition State. Every county except one in which Charleston is located voted dry. Thus, after over 20 years trial of the dispensary system, first under state then county management, South Carolina announces that government control of the liquor business is a failure, and that prohibition is the only safe and sane way to get out from under liquor domination. The law goes into effect January 1, 1916.

Colorado Brewery Becomes a Pottery.

One of the largest breweries in Colorado, known as the Coors Brewery, has changed its business to that of a pottery, and contemplated plans will mean more men employed in a more enterprising business. It is stated on good authority that Coors' people have orders for a year ahead and indications are that they are losing nothing by changing their business from that of a brewery to a pottery.

Another large brewery in Colorado is now perfecting its plans for the establishing of a large condensed milk plant. This is an indication that Colorado breweries are adjusting themselves to new conditions and are losing nothing because of the prohibition law which goes into effect January 1, 1916.

Prohibition in West Virginia.

Who is G. W. Little? He is one of the big officials of the Ritter Lumber Co., a West Virginia employer of an army of men.

What does he think about Prohibition? Well, read this: "Prohibition has improved labor conditions from 25 to 40 per cent."

"Grocers have a greater volume of business and fewer accounts."

"Crime has been reduced 30 per cent."

"Property has advanced 40 per cent."

"There is less bootlegging than before Prohibition went into effect."

Resolutions Passed at National Convention.

Reverently acknowledging the guidance and help of our Heavenly Father in the work of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union during the past year, we come to this Forty-second Annual Convention with joy because of the daily verification of the truth of the promise "the way of the wicked he turneth upside down."

We rejoice because of the advance made in every line of our work; for the action of the American Insurance Union in classing saloon keepers and barkeepers as equally hazardous risks with soldiers and railroad men and their refusal to loan money on property in any way connected with liquor interests; for the recognition given by many colleges to the importance of the study of alcohol in its scientific and social aspects; for the action of the National Pharmacopoeia; for the increasing friendliness of the press in including brandy and whiskey from the list of drugs in the National Dispensary; for the increasing friendliness of the press in including brandy and whiskey from the list of drugs in the National Dispensary; for the increasing friendliness of the press in including brandy and whiskey from the list of drugs in the National Dispensary.

The result of the edict of the czar has proven the truth of our contention that prohibition is of greatest value in improving moral and material conditions.

We believe that total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the state and nation constitute the only rational solution of the liquor problem.

We believe in equal political rights for men and women and that the ballot in the hands of women is a weapon for the destruction of the liquor traffic.

We believe that society in conformity with God's law should maintain a single standard of morals for men and women.

We believe in a living wage and in equal pay for equal service in justice as opposed to greed of gain.

We therefore declare our purpose to work during the coming year with increased zeal and deeper devotion for the promotion of the foregoing principles and the accomplishment of our ultimate aim—a constitutional prohibition for the state and nation and for the establishment of a righteous nation.

Prohibition Increases

Property Values.

An interesting study in the increase of property values in wet and dry states is shown in statistics compiled from the census report on "estimated valuation of national wealth in 1890 to 1912" by Hon. Philmore Condit, of New Jersey.

The dry state of Maine had an increase in property value from 1890 to 1912 of 36 per cent.

The increased value in property in the six New England states of Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island was 33 per cent from 1890 to 1912. Maine is the only dry state in New England.

There was an increase of 212 per cent in the value of property from 1890 to 1912 in the Prohibition States of Maine, Kansas, North Dakota and Oklahoma. There was an increased value of 11 per cent in the property in the entire United States from 1890 to 1912.

It will be seen that the increase in the Prohibition States of Maine, Kansas, North Dakota and Oklahoma was almost double—in per cent compared with that of the entire country.

Georgia Legislature Makes

Prohibition Absolute in State.

Both houses of the Georgia legislature, meeting in extraordinary session, on the call of Governor Harris, have passed a measure providing for the elimination of all breweries, locker clubs and near-beer saloons. The bill specifically prohibits the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors in the state and defines liquor as any drink containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol. Present laws permit the manufacture and sale of drinks containing not more than four per cent alcohol.

This is one of the measures that Governor Harris urged at this special session of the legislature, saying, "I believe it is the sentiment of the great majority of the people of Georgia that some measure should be enacted which will facilitate the enforcement of our prohibition laws. The liquor question is fast becoming an economic question with all the governments of the world. The effect on the race is becoming so general in its evil results that the safety of the people has become involved. Whiskey is a satanic, ethical and philosophical writer—thinking men everywhere do not hesitate to urge the necessity of attempting to curb the results of intemperance by enacting such measures as shall be suited to the situation."

The Georgia legislature on November 3 passed a bill prohibiting liquor advertisement in the form in Georgia and making such advertisement a misdemeanor.

Why Farmer Should Vote Dry.

First, farmers have always stood for clean government. It is never the country districts that have been the strength of political corruption and rising rule. Whiskey politics prevents clean elections.

Second, the boys and girls from the farm are the strength of our country in the industry. One of the most trying things that parents have to submit to is to have their boys and girls go into the temptations of city life, the greatest of which is alcohol.

Third, the food products that go towards the making of drink are largely wasted because of being made into potent alcohol. They use the least amount of labor and their sales consume the wages of many families that otherwise would go into the purchase of a great deal larger amount of food products.

Fourth, as real estate carries the greater share of taxation, we farmers cannot afford to be taxed to pay for the housing and care of the whiskey business, namely, the occupancy of the saloons, poorhouses, and jails, the majority of whom are the victims of the liquor traffic and for the care of whom the expense fees are only a trifling annuity.

Fifth, the profits in the making and sale of potable alcohol are enormous. The day when we can have the abundance of denatured alcohol, one of the greatest coming benefits for our people. Denatured alcohol is a splendid hand and of the human race and potable alcohol one of its greatest curses.

Sixth, the "Little Brown church in the Wilderness" is against the liquor business.

Seventh, the Grange, the greatest of farmers' organizations, is fighting against the man for dry states. Let us all stand together and relieve the human race of the arch enemy of body, mind and soul.

History in the Making.

The 1915 "California Dry" campaign was officially ushered in on Sunday, October 31, with eloquent exhortations from about 1,200 persons. At the same time more than 20,000 petitions seeking to place two prohibition measures on the ballot for the November, 1916, election were circulated among the various congregations.

Reports from the election of members of the Virginia general assembly indicate that there will be a heavy majority in the house and senate pledged to the enactment of prohibition legislation to forbid the sale of intoxicants into the state when the law goes into effect January 1, 1916.

Lexington—A bond of $10,000, to be forfeited upon the arrest of Beach Harris for any offense whatever within the State, or upon his appearance at any time in Breathitt county, is the novel proposition which it is understood has been made to Governor McCreary, if the latter will parole or pardon Harris—who is serving a life term in the penitentiary at Frankfort for the murder of his father, Judge Jas. F. Harris at Jackson, several years ago.

It is said that it was proposed that the bond, if it was accepted by the state, should be in such form as to be immediately forfeited for any violation of the conditions.

It is not known what consideration will be given the proposition by Gov. McCreary or the Board of Prison Commissioners, if it has been made to them.

HISTORIC LANDMARK.

Remains of Pioneer Settlers to Be Moved—Railroad Yards to Replace Sedam Cemetery.

Progress soon will march over and level one of the historic landmarks of Cincinnati. The Sedam Cemetery, at Sixth street and Hillside avenue, the first burying ground established by white men in what is now Cincinnati west of Millcreek, must make way for an expansion of the Big Four Railroad yards.

The remains of twenty-nine pioneers whose names were well-known among men who lived in Ohio, between the two Missis, before Cincinnati had been named, rest on a little knoll above what was an aristocratic and picturesque section three quarters of a century ago. Then Riverside was the home of wealthy land owners and traders, while Avondale, Walnut Hills, Clifton and other suburbs were settlements of a few log cabins, with a few score inhabitants.

The body of Colonel Cornelius R. Sedam, an inmate of Jno. Symmes and one of the first settlers in the present boundaries of Hamilton county, rests in the cemetery. He was a member of the staff of General George Washington during the Revolution. After the struggle for independence he bought a claim along the Ohio River. It stretched along the stream from Millcreek to the present site of Fernbank, and several miles back into the hills. He founded Sedamsville.

Colonel Sedam was a member of the Order of the Cincinnati. He was admitted by Gen. Washington soon after he came from Holland to aid the colonies in fighting for freedom from Great Britain's rule. At that time the family name was Sedam, but when Washington entered the Hollanders' name on the records of the Cincinnati he spelled it "Sedam." The new name later was adopted by the Colonel.

When it finally was decided to organize a village Colonel Sedam and his friends were instrumental in having the name of the order to which they belonged perpetuated in the Cincinnati that exists to-day.

Colonel Sedam died in 1823 and was buried on the crown of the cemetery knoll. One of his sons, Captain Cornelius R. Sedam, Jr., an Indian fighter, is buried near the body of his father. Other relatives and several members of the Prather family, prominent in early history of Cincinnati, are buried near the Sedams. A negro servant of the Colonel rests at the foot of his master's grave.

Colonel Sedam's body was embalmed and sealed in an air-tight sarcophagus made from a block of limestone, and it is believed that his features may have been preserved, even though almost a century has elapsed since his death.

The monument which stood over Sedam's grave was removed several days ago, and after being cleaned and repaired, will be re-erected in the Spring Grove Cemetery. The remains of the Colonel and of others buried near him will be removed to Spring Grove in the spring. Mrs. E. S. Whitman, of Riverside, one of the descendants, is arranging to have a religious service attend the work of changing the grave.

Employees of the Greenville Gravel Company, who are cutting away the hills of which the cemetery knoll is one, to make room for railroad tracks, have found many interesting relics of early residents of Riverside. Earl Zimmerman, who is in charge of the work, has a collection of silverware, china, glassware and tools which were uncovered by workmen.

The gravel company has contracted with the Big Four to level the site within two years and a half and to furnish road for tracks that will total over eight miles in length for switching and storage purposes. The site to be leveled is part of a gravel deposit and a plant to screen and wash the product, with a capacity of 2,000 tons a day, will be erected—Equator.

Henderson, Nov. 28.—Early on the Sabbath morning a mob took this hunk, a negro from the jail and swung him to a willow tree on the bank of the Ohio River, not three blocks away. Eucker was charged with defending against her will. Mrs. Mary Hardin while on her way home from work Friday night. So quietly did the mob accomplish its work that not even the police were aware anything had happened until the victim was swinging to a limb.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday School Course of Moody Bible
Institute of Chicago.

(Copyright, 1912, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 5

UZZIAH'S PRIDE AND PUNISHMENT.

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 26:1-10, 15-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—A man's pride shall bring him low, but he that is of a lowly spirit shall obtain honor.—Prov. 29:23, R. V.

Again we consider the southern kingdom. No better character could have been chosen to illustrate the condition of rulers and people in the declining days of Judah's glory. Uzziah ruled for 52 years and his reign was almost midway between the days of Solomon and those of the Babylonian captivity.

I. Priest and Parents, vv. 1-5. The name Uzziah means "God has helped me," and no king ever had better advantages in the way of parents and counselors. To the influence of his parents he yielded in his youth (v. 4), followed the good counsel of Zachariah the prophet of God (v. 5), and as long as he sought the Lord, "God made him prosper." Ancestry and environment are not, however, a guaranty of any perpetuity in character.

II. Pride, vv. 6-15. Uzziah or Azariah (margin) made a fine start and his reign, considered as a whole, was one of the most brilliant in Judah's history. It bears some striking resemblances to that of Solomon in that the dangerous enemies became subject nations (v. 8). In the conduct of his campaigns Uzziah "waxed exceedingly strong" (v. 8 R. V.). Uzziah also greatly improved and strengthened Jerusalem and gave much heed to stock raising and forestry (v. 10). The secret of all of this prosperity was that he sought Jehovah. Christendom is not Christianity, yet it is a fact that in those lands where God is most highly exalted and most nearly followed we witness the greatest prosperity and men living amidst the most comfortable surroundings. Seek Jehovah, know his will as revealed in his word, and do that will when learned, is the only true basis of real and lasting prosperity. Uzziah also gave an exhibition of worldly wisdom that he strengthened the great nation (v. 9-10). Confidence in God does not paralyze human energy or make us presumptuous and careless (I Chron. 27:25-31). Uzziah brought the army up to a high point of efficiency (v. 13-15), using the best weapons known in his day. We, likewise, may be "marvelously helped" from the same source and upon the same conditions; viz., that we "seek the Lord" (Eph. 6:10; Phil. 6:13).

III. Punishment, vv. 16-21. (1) Pride—Uzziah's fall and shame is one of the saddest chapters in history. His strength became his ruin. "When he was strong his heart was lifted up." Poverty, struggle and adversity are not passports to glory though they have strengthened the moral fiber of thousands. The tempting tests of prosperity, gilded, perfumed and attractive are, however, far more hard to withstand. Pride always leads to (2) Presumption—Centuries before God had warned men that prosperity would lead to ruin (Deut. 8:11-17; 32:13-15) and Solomon also gave warning (Prov. 16:18). The subtlety of pride is the gradual way by which we come to look upon our prosperity as the work of our own hands, thereby forgetting the source of our power and becoming filled with a feeling of our own self-sufficiency. The next step was that Uzziah assumed to himself those duties (v. 16) which rightfully and exclusively belonged to the priesthood (see Num. 16:40; 18:7; I Kings 12:33; 12:14; Heb. 5:4). (3) Protesting—We now behold the strange spectacle of the king protesting for the wrong and the faithful priests Azariah for the right. A sad spectacle indeed when the head of a nation openly avows the wrong and persists in it despite the protests of the servants of God. The last part of verse 18 indicates the extent and perversity of Uzziah's pride. Admonition only aroused the anger of the all-conquering monarch. No honor ever comes from disobeying God (I Sam. 2:30; Dan. 5:37). Uzziah apparently (v. 19) was about to use the censer in his hand as a weapon in execution of his wrath, but God interfered (I Peter 6:7). Azariah is saved and Uzziah becomes a leper.

We must not press the teaching that all sickness is the result of sin (read Job).

Uzziah was forever separated (v. 21) and was in his death "unclean" because "His heart was lifted to his destruction."

There are four suggestions in closing: (1) Uzziah's pride had gone too far; secretly and perhaps unconsciously it had slowly, but surely permeated his whole nature.

(2) Leprosy was a fitting punishment for it was an emblem of the foulness of his sin.

(3) His leprosy condition was in marked contrast with what he had formerly enjoyed.

(4) His punishment shut him out effectually from the work of his kingdom—ability, strength, experience and ambition, all before the blighting blast of sin.

CHIEF ADVANTAGES OF CONCRETE ROADS

Construction of Concrete Road—Sand and Gravel Piled on Subgrade Ready for Use—Subgrade Prepared for Concrete Pavement—Road After Nearly Two Years' Service.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Interior of Agriculture.)

Concrete roads have shown a marked increase in popularity during the past five years, according to the road-building specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. In 1909 there were 364,000 square yards of such roads in the United States, while for 1914, the amount is estimated as 19,200,000 square yards.

The durability of concrete roads has not been proved by actual practice because there are no very old pavements as yet in existence, but from the conditions of those which have undergone several years' service, it seems probable that they will be found to wear well.

The principal advantages of concrete pavements which have led to their increased popularity are:

Durability under ordinary traffic conditions.

A smooth, even surface offering little resistance.

Absence of dust and ease with which it may be cleaned.

Comparatively small cost of maintenance until renewals are necessary.

Availability as a base for another type of surface if desirable.

Attractive appearance.

On the other hand, concrete as a road surface is noisy under horse traffic, and has a tendency to crack. Unless these cracks are cared for at once, they lead to rapid deterioration of the adjacent pavement and finally require difficult repair work.

In the past efforts have frequently been made to overcome these objections to a certain degree by covering the concrete pavement with a bituminous wearing surface. At the present time, the specialists in the department of agriculture hold that this cannot be economically justified, although it is possible that future investigation may change the situation in this respect.

In the present state of road science, however, it seems that where traffic conditions are such that a bituminous surface on a concrete road is practicable, a bituminous surface macadam road would be equally practicable and certainly cheaper.

Where traffic which is too heavy for macadam road uses a bituminous concrete road, the bituminous surface is likely to give way and the uneven manner in which it falls tends to produce excessive wear on portions of the concrete. For a successful concrete road, hardness, toughness, and uniformity are the most essential qualities.

These can be secured to a great extent by care in the selection of the constituent materials and the proportions in which they are mixed. Sample specifications are included in the bulletin, No. 249, Portland Cement Pavements for Country Roads.

These specifications are believed to typify the best engineering practice as it has been developed up to this time. They cover such points as materials, grading, subgrade and construction.

The cement, it is said, should always conform to some standard specifications for Portland cement, such as those issued by the United States Bureau of Standards or the American Society for Testing Materials. The sand should not contain more than 3 per cent of foreign material, and sand with more coarse than fine grains is to be preferred. The coarse aggregate may consist of either crushed stone or gravel. In either case it is very desirable that the coarse aggregate be well graded in size between proper limits.

The proportion of cement to the sand and coarse aggregate combined should not be less than about 1 to 5, and the proportion of sand to coarse aggregate not less than 1 1/2 to 3, nor greater than 2 to 3. A useful formula when gravel is used as coarse aggregate is 1 part of cement to 1 1/2 parts of sand to 3 parts of gravel. When crushed stone is used, 1 1/2 parts of sand may be substituted in place of 1 1/2 parts.

Ordinarily from 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 of the total cost of constructing a concrete pavement is for labor after the materials are delivered. This emphasizes the importance of efficient organization and proper equipment. Failure to take those factors into consideration frequently results in adding from 10 to 20 per cent to the cost of a concrete pavement.

The most economical method is to have the work of mixing and placing the concrete as nearly continuous as practicable. The work should be planned with a primary view of keeping the mixer going full time. The drainage structures, the grading, and the subgrade should, therefore, be completed well in advance of the mixer and provision made for obtaining all of the necessary materials without delay.

A common error is the failure to make adequate provision for delivering water on the work, and the amount which a given stream is capable of supplying is frequently overestimated.

ENSILING THE GREEN CROPS

Extensive Investigation Carried on by Nebraska Experiment Station—Six Small Silos Used.

The department of agricultural chemistry of the experiment station and college of agriculture of Nebraska has been carrying on an extensive investigation during the last year on the chemistry of the processes which take place during the ensiling of various green crops. Special attention has been given to silage made from mixtures of alfalfa and sweet sorghum.

Six small silos holding about one ton each were filled in September, 1911, with various mixtures. Two of these silos were opened during the second week of August, 1912, and the silage in each was found to be in perfect condition. The first silo contained a mixture of one part sweet sorghum and one part alfalfa, while the second contained a mixture of one part sweet sorghum and two parts alfalfa.

Alfalfa alone will not make silage, because the plant does not contain enough sugar to insure the production of sufficient acid to preserve the silage. The acid produced from the sugar in the green plant by bacterial action preserves the silage. By mixing sweet sorghum with the alfalfa the necessary sugar is supplied.

Weaning Time.

Weaning time is from six to twelve weeks. If the sows are to be rebred at once, the pigs should be weaned at eight or nine weeks of age. If one litter per year only is planned, the pigs may be allowed to run with the sow until twelve or fourteen weeks of age.

Number Nineteen.

By a majority of free to one South Carolina on Sept. 11 voted to become the nineteenth prohibition State. Every county except one in which Charleston is located voted dry. Thus, after over 20 years trial of the dispensary system, first under state and county management, South Carolina announces that government control of the liquor business is a failure, and that prohibition is the only safe and sane way to get out from under liquor domination. The law goes into effect January 1, 1916.

Colorado Brewery Becomes a Pottery. One of the largest breweries in Colorado, known as the Coors Brewery, has changed its business to that of a pottery, and contemplated plans which mean more men employed in a more enterprising business. It is stated on good authority that Coors' people have ordered new machinery ahead and indications are that they are losing nothing by changing their business from that of a brewery to a pottery.

Prohibition in West Virginia.

Who is G. W. Little? He is one of the big officials of the Ritter Lumber Co., a West Virginia employer of an army of men. What does he think about Prohibition? Well, read this: "Prohibition has improved labor conditions from 25 to 40 per cent. "Grocers have a greater volume of business and are better accounted for. "Crime has been reduced 50 per cent. "Property has advanced 40 per cent. "There is less bootlegging than before Prohibition went into effect."

Resolutions Passed at

National Convention. Reverently acknowledging the guidance and help of our Heavenly Father in the work of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union during the past year, we come to this Forty-second Annual Convention with joy because of the daily verification of the truth of the promise "the way of the wicked He turneth aside down." We rejoice because of the advance made in every line of our work; for the action of the American Insurance Union in classing liquor keepers and hardeners as equally hazardous risks with soldiers and railroad men and their refusal to loan money on property in any way connected with liquor interests; for the recognition given by many colleges to the importance of the study of alcohol in its scientific and social aspects; for the action of the National Pharmacopoeia; for the increasing friendliness of the press toward the prohibition movement; for the victory of state-wide prohibition in Alabama, Iowa, Arkansas, Idaho and South Carolina; for the increased interest in Congress on the question of National Constitutional Prohibition culminating in the majority vote in the House of Representatives.

The result of the edict of the Czar has proven the truth of our contention that prohibition is a greatest value in improving moral and material conditions.

We heartily commend an appeal to reason in the settlement of human difficulties and we are in accord with the efforts being made to establish a World's Peace Commission to offer programs of peace that will be acceptable to all nations.

We believe that total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the state and nation constitute the only rational solution of the liquor problem.

We believe in equal political rights for men and women and that the ballot for the woman is a weapon for the destruction of the liquor traffic.

We believe that society in conformity with God's law should maintain a single standard of morals for men and women.

We believe in a living wage and in equal pay for equal service in justice as opposed to greed of gain.

We therefore declare our purpose to work during the coming year with increased zeal and deeper devotion for the promotion of the foregoing principles and the accomplishment of our ultimate aim—constitutional prohibition for the state and nation, and for the establishment of a righteous nation.

Prohibition Increases

Property Values.

An interesting study in the increase of property values in wet and dry states is shown in statistics compiled from the census report on "estimated value" of national wealth in 1900 to 1912 by Hon. Ellmore Condit, of New Jersey.

The dry state of Maine had an increase in property value from 1900 to 1912 of 56 per cent. The increased value in property in the six New England states of Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island was 32 per cent from 1900 to 1912. Maine is the only dry state in New England. There was an increase of 212 per cent in the value of property from 1900 to 1912 in the Prohibition states of Maine, Kansas, North Dakota and Oklahoma. There was an increased value of 11 per cent in the property in the entire United States from 1900 to 1912.

It will be seen that the increase in the Prohibition states of Maine, Kansas, North Dakota and Oklahoma was almost double in per cent compared with that of the entire country.

Georgia Legislature Makes

Prohibition Absolute in State.

Both houses of the Georgia legislature, meeting in extraordinary session, on the call of Governor Harris, have passed a measure providing for the elimination of all breweries, locker clubs and "near-beer saloons." The bill specifically prohibits the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors in the state and defines liquor as any drink having more than one-half of one per cent alcohol. Present laws permit the manufacture and sale of drinks containing not more than four per cent alcohol.

This is one of the measures that Governor Harris urged at his special session of the legislature, saying, "I believe it is the sentiment of the great majority of the people of Georgia that some measure should be enacted which will facilitate the enforcement of our prohibition laws. The liquor question is fast becoming an economic question with all the governments of the world. The effect on the race is becoming so general in its evil results that the safety of the people has become involved, and statesmen, ethical and philosophical writers—thinking men everywhere—not hesitate to urge the states and legislatures the necessity of attempting to curb the results of intemperance by enacting such measures as shall be suited to the situation."

The Georgia senate on November 9 passed a bill prohibiting liquor advertisements, in any form in Georgia and making such advertisement a misdemeanor.

Why Farmer Should Vote Dry.

First, farmers have always stood for clean government. It is never the country districts that have been the strength of political corruption and vice. Whisky in politics prevents clean elections.

Second, the boys and girls from the farm are the strength of our country's industry. Whisky is one of the most trying things that parents have to submit to is to have their boys and girls go into the temptations of city life, the greatest of which is alcohol.

Third, the food products that go towards the making of drink are largely wasted because being made into alcoholic liquor they use the least amount of labor and their sales consume the wages of many families that otherwise would go into the purchase of a great deal larger amount of food products.

Fourth, as real estate carries the greatest tax burden, the farmers cannot afford to be taxed to pay for the housing and care of the legitimate product of the occupant of the asylums, poorhouses, and jails, the majority of whom are the victims of the liquor traffic and for the cure of the most vicious fevers are only a trifling annuity.

Fifth, the profits in the making and sale of potable alcohol are enormous. The average farmer when we can have an abundance of denatured alcohol, one of the greatest coming benefits for our country. Denatured alcohol is a splendid hand cleaner of the human race and potable alcohol one of its greatest curses.

Sixth, the "Little Brown church in the Wildwood" is against the liquor business.

Seventh, the Grange, the greatest of farmers' organizations, is fighting against the man for dry states. Let us all stand together and relieve the human race of the arch enemy of body, mind and soul.

History in the Making.

The 1916 "California Dry" campaign was officially ushered in on Sunday, October 31, with eloquent exhortations from about 1,200 pupils of the state at the same time more than 20,000 initiative petitions seeking to place two prohibition measures on the ballot for the November, 1916, election were circulated among the various congregations.

Reports from the election of members of the Virginia general assembly indicate that there will be a heavy majority in the house and senate pledged to the enactment of prohibition legislation to forbid the shipment of liquor into the state when the law goes into effect January 1, 1916.

Lexington—A bond of $10,000, to be forfeited upon the arrest of Beach Hargis for any offense whatever within the State or upon his appearance at any time in Breathitt county, is the novel proposition which it is understood has been made to Governor McCreary, in the latter will parole or pardon Hargis who is serving a life term in the penitentiary at Frankfort for the murder of his father, Judge Jas. F. Hargis, at Jackson, several years ago.

It is said that it was proposed that the bond, if it was accepted by the state, should be in such form as to be immediately forfeited for any violation of the conditions.

It is not known what consideration will be given the proposition by Gov. McCreary or the Board of Prison Commissioners, if it has been made to them.

HISTORIC LANDMARK.

Remains of Pioneer Settlers to Be Moved—Railroad Yards to Replace Sedam Cemetery.

Progress soon will march over and level one of the historic landmarks of Cincinnati, the Sedam Cemetery, at Sixth street and Hillside avenue, the first burying ground established by white men in what is now Cincinnati west of Millcreek, must make way for an expansion of the Big Four Railroad yards.

The remains of twenty-nine pioneers whose names were well-known among men who lived in Ohio, between the two Missis, before Cincinnati had been named, rest in a little knoll above what was an aristocratic and picturesque section three quarters of a century ago. Then Riverside was the home of wealthy land owners and traders, while Avondale, Walnut Hills, Clifton and other suburbs were settlements of a new log cabins, with a few score inhabitants.

The body of Colonel Cornelius R. Sedam, an inmate of Jno. Symmes and one of the first settlers in the present boundaries of Hamilton county, rests in the cemetery. He was a member of the staff of General George Washington during the Revolution. He was a soldier of independence, he bought a claim along the Ohio River. It stretched along the stream from Millcreek to the present site of Fernbank and several miles back into the hills. He founded Sedamsville.

Colonel Sedam was a member of the Order of the Cincinnati. He was admitted to the Washington soon after he came from Holland to aid the colonies in fighting for freedom from Great Britain's rule. At that time the family name was Sudam, but when Washington entered the Hollanders' name on the records of the Cincinnati he spelled it Sedam. The new name later was adopted by the Colonel.

When it finally was decided to organize a village Colonel Sedam and his friends were instrumental in having the name of the order to which they belonged perpetuated in the Cincinnati that exists to-day.

Colonel Sedam died in 1823 and was buried on the crown of the cemetery knoll. One of his sons, Captain Cornelius R. Sedam, Jr., an Indian fighter, is buried near his father. Other relatives and several members of the Prather family, prominent in early history of Cincinnati, are buried near-by. A negro body servant of the Colonel rests at the foot of his master's grave.

Colonel Sedam's body was embalmed and sealed in an airtight sarcophagus heaved from a block of limestone, and it is believed that his features may have been preserved, even though almost a century has elapsed since his death.

The monument which stood over Sedam's grave was removed several days ago, and after being cleaned and repaired, will be re-set in Spring Grove Cemetery. The remains of the Colonel and of others buried near him will be removed to Spring Grove in the spring. Edith S. Whiteman, Riverside, one of the descendants, is arranging to have a religious service attend the work of changing the graves.

Employees of the Greenville Gravel Company, who are cutting away the hills of which the cemetery knoll is one, to make room for a new building, have found many interesting relics of early residents of Riverside. Earl Zimmerman, who is in charge of the work, has a collection of silverware, china, glassware and tools which were uncovered by workmen.

The gravel company has contracted with the Big Four to level the site within two years and a half and to furnish work for tracks that will total over eight miles in length for switch-back and storage purposes. The site to be leveled is part of a gravel deposit and a plant to screen and wash the product, with a capacity of 2,000 tons a day, will be erected—Equiner.

Herderson, Nov. 28.—Early on the Sabbath morning a mob took Eliza Bunker, negro from the jail and swung him to a willow tree on the bank of the Ohio River, not three blocks away. Bunker was charged with retaining against her will Miss Mary Hardin while on her way home from work Friday night. So quietly did the mob accomplish the work that not even the police were aware anything had happened until the victim was swinging to a limb.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By E. O. BELLING, Acting Director of Sunday School Course of Moody Bible
Institute of Chicago.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 5

UZZIAH'S PRIDE AND PUNISHMENT.

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 26:1-10, 15-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—A man's pride shall bring him low, but he that is of a lowly spirit shall obtain honor.—Prov. 29:23
R. V.

Again we consider the southern kingdom. No better character could have been chosen to illustrate the condition of rulers and people in the declining days of Judah's glory. Uzziah ruled for 52 years and his reign was almost midway between the days of Solomon and those of the Babylonian captivity.

I. Priest and Parents, vv. 1-5. The name Uzziah means "God has helped me," and no king ever had better advantages in the way of parents and counselors. To the influence of his parents he yielded in his youth (v. 4), followed the good counsel of Zechariah the prophet of God (v. 5), and as long as he sought the Lord, "God made him prosper." Ancestry and environment are not, however, a guaranty of any perpetuity in character.

II. Pride, vv. 6-15. Uzziah or Azariah (margin) made a fine start and his reign, considered as a whole, was one of the most brilliant in Judah's history. It bears some striking resemblances to that of Solomon in that the dangerous enemies became subject nations (v. 8). In the conduct of his campaigns Uzziah "waxed exceedingly strong" (v. 8 R. V.). Uzziah also greatly improved and strengthened Jerusalem and gave much heed to stock raising and forestry (v. 10). The secret of all of this prosperity was that he sought Jehovah. Christendom is not Christianity, yet it is a fact that in those lands where God is most highly exalted and most nearly followed we witness the greatest prosperity and men living amidst the most comfortable surroundings. Seek Jehovah, know his will as revealed in his word, and do that which will learned, is the only true basis of real and lasting prosperity. Uzziah also gave an exhibition of worldly wisdom that he strengthened the defuncted of the nation (v. 9-10). Confidence in God does not paralyze human energy or make us presumptuous and careless (I Chron. 27:25-31). Uzziah brought the army up to a high point of efficiency (v. 13-15), using the best weapons known in his day. We, likewise, may be "marvellously helped" from the same source and upon the same conditions; viz., that we "seek the Lord" (Eph. 6:10; Phil. 4:13).

III. Punishment, vv. 16-21. (1) Pride —Uzziah's fall and shame is one of the saddest chapters in history. His strength became his ruin. "When he was strong his heart was lifted up."
Poverty, struggle and adversity are not passports to glory though they have strengthened the moral fiber of thousands. The tempting tests of prosperity, gilded, perfumed and attractive are, however, far more hard to withstand. Pride always leads to (2) Presumption—Centuries before God had warned men that if they would lead to ruin (Deut. 8:11-17; 32:13-15) and Solomon also gave warning (Prov. 16:18). The subtlety of pride is the gradual way by which we come to look upon our prosperity as the work of our own hands, thereby forgetting the source of our power and becoming filled with a feeling of our own self-sufficiency. The next step was that Uzziah assumed to himself those duties (v. 16) which rightfully and exclusively belonged to the priesthood (see Num. 16:40, 18:7;
I Kings 12:33; 12:14; Heb. 5:4). (3) Protesting—We now behold the strange spectacle of the king protesting against the wrong and the faithful priests Azariah for the right. A sad spectacle indeed when the head of a nation openly avows the wrong and persists in it despite the protests of the servants of God. The last part of verse 18 indicates the extent and perversity of Uzziah's pride. Admonition only aroused the anger of the all-conquering monarch. No honor ever comes from disobeying God (I Sam.
2:30; Dan. 5:37). Uzziah apparently
(v. 19) was about to use the censor in his hand as a weapon in execution of his wrath, but God interfered (I Peter 5:6-7). Azariah is saved and Uzziah becomes a leper.

We must not press the teaching that all sickness is the result of sin (read Job).

Uzziah was forever separated (v.
21) and was in his death "unclean" because "His heart was lifted to his destruction."
There are four suggestions in closeness: (1) Uzziah's pride had gone too far; secretly and perhaps unconsciously it had slowly, but surely permeated his whole nature.
(2) Leprosy was a fitting punishment, for it was an emblem of the foulness of his sin.
(3) His leprosy condition was in marked contrast with what he had formerly enjoyed.
(4) His punishment shut him out effectually from the work of his kingdom—ability, strength, experience and ambition fall before the blighting blast of sin.

CHIEF ADVANTAGES OF CONCRETE ROADS

Construction of Concrete Road—Sand and Gravel Piled on Subgrade Ready for Use—Subgrade Prepared for Concrete Pavement—Road After Nearly Two Years' Service.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Concrete roads have shown a marked increase in popularity during the past five years, according to the road-building specialists of the U. S.
Department of Agriculture. In 1909 there were 354,000 square yards of such roads in the United States, while for 1914, the amount is estimated as 13,200,000 square yards.

The durability of concrete roads has not been proved by actual practice because there are no very old pavements as yet in existence, but from the condition of those which have undergone several years' service, it seems probable that they will be found to wear well.

The principal advantages of concrete pavements which have led to their increased popularity are:
Durability under ordinary traffic conditions.

A smooth, even surface offering little resistance.

Absence of dust and ease with which it may be cleaned.

Comparatively small cost of maintenance until renewals are necessary.

Availability as a base for another type of surface if desirable.

Attractive appearance.

On the other hand, concrete as a road surface is noisy under horse traffic, and has a tendency to crack.
Unless these cracks are cared for at once, they lead to rapid deterioration of the adjacent pavement and finally require difficult repair work.

In the past efforts have frequently been made to overcome these objections to a certain degree by covering the concrete pavement with a bituminous wearing surface. At the present time, the specialists in the department of agriculture hold that this cannot be economically justified, although it is possible that future investigation may change the situation in this respect. In the present state of road science, however, it seems that where traffic conditions are such that a bituminous surface on a concrete road is practicable, a bituminous surface macadam road would be equally practicable and certainly cheaper.

Where traffic which is too heavy for macadam road uses a bituminous concrete road, the bituminous surface is likely to give way and the uneven manner in which it falls tends to produce excessive wear on portions of the concrete. For a successful concrete road, hardness, toughness and uniformity are the most essential qualities. These can be secured to a great extent by care in the selection of the constituent materials and the proportions in which they are mixed.
Sample specifications are included in the bulletin, No. 249, Portland Cement Pavements for Country Roads.
These specifications are believed to typify the best engineering practice as it has been developed up to this time. They cover such points as materials, grading, subgrade and construction.

very desirable that the coarse aggregate be well graded in size between proper limits.

The proportion of cement to the sand and coarse aggregate combined should not be less than about 1 to 5, and the proportion of sand to coarse aggregate not less than 1 1/2 to 3, nor greater than 2 to 3. A useful formula when gravel is used as coarse aggregate is 1 part of cement to 1 1/2 parts of sand to 3 parts of gravel.
When crushed stone is used, 1 1/2 parts of sand may be substituted in place of 1 1/2 parts.

Ordinarily from 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 of the total cost of constructing a concrete pavement is for labor after the materials are delivered. This emphasizes the importance of efficient organization and proper equipment. Failure to take those factors into consideration frequently results in adding from 10 to 20 per cent to the cost of a concrete pavement.

The most economical method is to have the work of mixing and placing the concrete as nearly continuous as practicable. The work should be planned with a primary view of keeping the mixer going full time. The drainage structures, the grading, and the subgrade should, therefore, be completed well in advance of the mixer and provision made for obtaining all of the necessary materials without delay. A common error is the failure to make adequate provision for delivering water on the work, and the amount which a given stream is capable of supplying is frequently overestimated.

ENSILING THE GREEN CROPS

Extensive Investigation Carried on by Nebraska Experiment Station—
Six Small Silos Used.

The department of agricultural chemistry of the experiment station and college of agriculture of Nebraska has been carrying on an extensive investigation during the last year on the chemistry of the processes which take place during the ensiling of various green crops. Special attention has been given to silage made from mixtures of alfalfa and sweet sorghum.

Six small silos holding about one ton each were filled in September, 1914, with various mixtures. Two of these silos were opened during the second week of August, 1915, and the silage in each was found to be in perfect condition. The first silo contained a mixture of one part sweet sorghum and one part alfalfa, while the second contained a mixture of one part sweet sorghum and two parts alfalfa.

Alfalfa alone will not make silage, because the plant does not contain enough sugar to insure the production of sufficient acid to preserve the silage. The acid produced from the sugar in the green plant by bacterial action preserves the silage. By mixing sweet sorghum with the alfalfa the necessary sugar is supplied.

Weaning Time.
Weaning time is from six to twelve weeks. If the sows are to be rebred at once, the pigs should be weaned at eight or nine weeks of age. If one litter per year only is planned, the pigs may be allowed to run with the sow until twelve or fourteen weeks of age.

Dr. Wm. W. Smith of Louisville, was a visitor here last week, being called to Beaver Lick to attend the baby of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Wilken.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Kipp and brother-in-law Chas. Buscher of Cincinnati, motored out here Thanksgiving to visit friends at the old home.

Thanksgiving was observed here as a holiday and in the evening services were held at the Baptist church by Rev. W. E. Morris of Irvington, Indiana.

The stormy season is here. I have an elegant line of Raincoat goods to order from. Made Balmecann or Slip-on; $7.50 to $16. J. R. Wallace, representative, Walton.

Miss Martha Rouse who recently returned from Rushville, Ind., where she had been in the military business, left this week for Asheville N. C., for the benefit of her health.

Mrs. J. B. Harris of Covington, and Lambert Rouse who is assistant postmaster at Stone Bluff, Ky., spent part of last week here the guests of their parents Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Rouse.

Prof. J. C. Gordon and daughters spent part of last week at their old home near Hebron where Prof. Gordon held a sale of his personal property Saturday, having sold his farm there.

Miss Zella Mayhugh who teaches in the graded school at Bellevue, and Miss Pearl Stephenson, who teaches the school at Lima, spent the Thanksgiving holidays here with home folks.

R. Attwood Guttridge who is farming in Butler-co., near Okeana, Ohio, was a visitor here last week spending a part of the time with his parents Mr. and Mrs. John Guttridge of Kenton county.

Mrs. Jas. Cross who has been ill for some time with an internal disease went to Louisville last week and is taking treatment at the Norton Infirmary and there is every promise of her entire recovery.

E. P. Northcutt has moved to the residence he bought from Geo. P. Nicholson, and Judge Chas. Strother and family who occupied the property have moved to the Tomlin & Miller property vacated by Mr. Northcutt.

The handsome new residence of D. E. Dudley situated on his farm in Kenton county, near Walton, has been about completed. Wm. Ransler & Son were the contractors and have constructed a very beautiful and modern residence.

Wm. C. Readnow, who represents a large firm in Cincinnati, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Readnow near town, and enjoyed the pleasures of a rabbit hunt, and also a visit to friends at Williamstown.

Mrs. J. M. Stamler and Mrs. B. K. Menefee, Assistant Grand Matron of the Eastern Star of Kentucky, spent Sunday in Covington, where Mrs. Menefee attended a large meeting of the Eastern Star at the Masonic Hall and made a splendid address before that body.

Arthur Dean bought from J. G. Tomlin the farm known as the Will Roberts place near Walton last week. The farm contains about 77 acres and the purchase price is $3,500. Possession was given at once. Homer Osborn who resided on the place as a tenant moved to Walton.

Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Morris and daughter of Irvington, Ind., spent part of last week here the guests of his sister Mrs. Levi S. Wolfe and family. Rev. Morris is pastor of a bank at Irvington, and also is the pastor of the Baptist church at that place. He was born and reared near Verona.

Married—John Smith and Miss Edna Webster were united in marriage in Cincinnati last Monday. The groom is a son of John Smith of near Verona, and the pretty bride is the daughter of Mrs. Vina Webster who keeps the toll-gate near Beaver Lick. The young couple will make their home on the farm near Verona.

R. R. Settle of Bowling Green,

State Banking Examiner, was here one day last week when he examined the Walton Bank & Trust Co., and was here Monday when he examined the Equitable Bank and Trust Co. He found both institutions in first class condition in every respect.

J. T. Cramer who bought the Furdall farm and moved here from Scott county, last spring, had his arm broken in some unaccountable way last week, supposed to be in working on the farm. Mr. Cramer felt a pain in his arm for several days and he is now recovering.

Married—Charles C. Carroll of Bank Lick, and Miss Margaret O'Brien, superintendent of the telephone exchange at Independence, were united in the bonds of holy wedlock at St. Cecilia Catholic church at Independence, Nov. 22d. The bride was formerly officiating. The young couple spent their honeymoon with friends in Louisville, and have returned to his farm near Bank Lick where they will make their home.

Miss O'Brien was formerly of Covington, and for the past two years has been in charge of the telephone exchange at Independence. She is a very popular and lovable young lady. The groom is one of the finest young men of this section and enjoys the respect and esteem of a large circle of friends, who wish the happy young couple all of the blessings of a happy and prosperous life.

A Big Price for Rabbits. Notwithstanding the fact that Kentucky is just now making an effort to re-establish a old-time hunting conditions and is restoring the fields with big game, Pennsylvania is short of rabbits and has requested Executive Agent J. Q. Ward, of the Game and Fish commission, to secure thirty-six dozen rabbits from the well-stocked fields of Kentucky. Pennsylvania will pay 35 cents the head for rabbits sent in good condition, and Mr. Ward is corresponding with people who he believes can fill the order. The men who secure the rabbits will receive the full amount offered by the State of Pennsylvania.

Big Tax Collections. The last days of Nov. brought a revival of business at the Sheriff's office, and Sheriff Cruser and his efficient deputy, L. A. Conner, were kept very busy making out tax receipts, while Sidney Gaines was bookkeeper and kept everything in exact balance. Last Saturday 219 lists were collected, amounting to $7,562.26, Monday 217 lists were collected, amounting to $7,303.02; Tuesday 160 lists collected amounted to $5,469.58. One-fourth of tax the county pays was collected in the past three days of November. The Sheriff is well pleased with the promptness with which taxes have been paid this year.

Getting Ready for the Corn Show. Many Boone county people are getting busy arranging for the corn show to be held in Covington on the 9th and 10th of this month, and it will undoubtedly be the largest and best show of that kind ever held for this county, and the people of the county should show their appreciation of the interest the Covington merchants are taking in it by making the exhibit large, consisting of everything that is listed for premiums. Look over the list and select such prizes as you wish to compete for and make your entries on time.

Lost His Opportunity. Superintendent of Public Instruction Parkdale Hamlett has announced that should he lose his injunction suit against the Board of Election Commissioners he will expose frauds, which he says, were committed in the election. If Mr. Hamlett is in possession of proof that frauds were committed at the election held November 2d it is his duty, as a law-abiding citizen, to expose the same, regardless of whether he win or lose his suit. Mr. Hamlett has thrown away a most excellent opportunity to make Mr. Morrow's grand stand play look like two cents.

Dr. Thos. Hifer, of Hebron, looked in upon the Recorder a few minutes last Friday. He was returning from a professional visit to Jothan McMullens over on Gun powder, and was about tired out. His large practice is keeping him very busy now, and he is not as spry as he used to be.

L. W. Webb, who was clerk of the Boone county court at the close of the war, died at his home in Saylor Park, O., last Sunday.

Congressman A. B. Rouse and wife left for Washington, D. C., to-day, Thursday.

A great many are taking advantage of the favorable weather to kill their hogs.

For several days the weather has been very much like that of March.

The box-ball people are giving demonstrations nightly.

County Clerk Rogers has issued 262 hunters' licenses.

Christmas comes on SATURDAY this year.

HOW TO BUTCHER HOGS.

Butcher hogs at home. Give them water, but no feed for a day before killing. Pluck the hog with an eight-inch straight-bladed knife. Be sure bleeding is done before scalding or the skin may be left too red.

A heavy blow with an ax between the eyes will stun the animal before sticking. The meat is spoiled if the animal is excited before killing, or the weather is warm afterwards. Scrape as quickly and rapidly as possible after scalding. The cold carcass is hard to scrape well.

Bleeding will be finished more quickly if the animal lies on a steep slope with its head down hill.

Keep the hog moving in the barrel. If the animal is left pressed against the barrel the hot water cannot get at that part of the carcass.

Scraping is easier if a shovelful of hardwood ashes or a lump of lime, some concentrated lye, or a handful of soft soap has been added to the water.

Use a thermometer. Do not attempt to scald with the water at above 150 degrees. A good scald can be obtained at 140 degrees, but it takes longer.

In opening the carcass, split the pelvic bone between the hams with a knife by cutting exactly in the center. To open the breast bone with a knife cut a little to one side of the center, but do not let the point of the knife get behind a rib.

IN A PROSPEROUS CONDITION.

According to figures based upon Government estimates and other authentic figures, the South is far richer today than it has ever been at any time in its existence, says the Florida Metropolis in an exhaustive review of conditions in the South.

The South will spend more in the next twelve months than she will have spent in any other single year in her history—$10,000,000,000.

Cotton, lumber and naval stores as well as all farm and grove products are commanding more than favorable prices.

Notice of Road Change.

Notice is hereby given that there will be offered at the regular December term of the Boone County Court to be held in Burlington, Kentucky, December 6th, 1915, a petition to discontinue and change a part of the road known as the Hudson Grade, leading from Richwood church to the Lexington pike.

Said discontinuance to begin at or near the gate leading to the residence of Mrs. Martha Hudson, and ending at a point in said road at or near the vision line between the said Martha Hudson and W. H. Senior, a distance of one-fourth of a mile, approximately, and they will ask that said road be changed to and opened on the north side of a branch of Mud Lick creek, without crossing same as the road does at present.

At the same time and place the Court will be asked to appoint viewers to act in the matter according to law.

Notice of the above was given the undersigned November 17th, 1915.

All persons will take notice of the above.

Local Happenings.

Judge Ben Stephens, of Florence neighborhood, was a caller at this office when the paper was published last Saturday. Mr. Stephens is in his eighty-fifth year, and there are very few men in the county who are older, and none who have served the public in as many official capacities, he having been Justice of the Peace, Sheriff, County Commissioner, County Judge and a member of the Legislature, in each and all of which his official acts were entirely satisfactory to his constituents. He made two trips across the plains with a team of oxen, at requiring 114 days to make a trip, the first of which was made early in the fifties when the California fever was at the height. He is a member of the Christian church and has been an Odd-Fellow longer than any other man in the county.

Mr. Stephens is exceedingly active for a man of his advanced age and looks like he will have no trouble reaching the century mark at least. He has lived all his life in a few miles of his birth place, and the county he never produced a more worthy and beloved citizen.

You are now thinking about that Christmas present you intend buying for friends, but doubtless have not decided what it shall be, nor where you will get it. Settle these questions at once by referring to the advertisements in this paper, where you will find presents galore advertised from a handkerchief to a diamond or gold watch. Make your selection today and call upon the merchant that has the article at the earliest moment possible and make your purchase.

W. C. Watts, of Bullittsville, this county, is a candidate for Door-keeper of the next House of Representatives in the General Assembly. Mr. Watts is a long Democrat and would serve the House in the most efficient manner if chosen as Door-keeper. He has a host of friends in this part of the State who would rejoice to see him chosen.

The will of E. A. Hughes, which was probated June 1, 1911, was produced in the county court last Monday to cure some defect in the original probate. It was an unusual proceeding and there is no record of its like in this county. E. H. Baker was County Judge when the will was probated the first time.

The Ladies Aid Society, of Burlington, will have a Christmas Bazaar and Oyster supper at Litterer Hall, Dec. 18th. Bazaar will open at 1 p. m., oyster supper at 8 p. m. Numerous Christmas articles will be on sale at very reasonable prices; also cakes, candies and all things good.

Raymond Johnson, 25, carpenter of Erlanger, and Miss Ida Tanner, 23, of Hopeful, secured a marriage license, Monday, and repaired to the High School building where they found Rev. H. H. Carter, who pronounced the marriage ceremony and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson went on their way rejoicing.

The McNeely property in Petersburg was resold by the Master Commissioner, last Monday. J. B. Berkshire was purchaser at $20, that being $100 more than J. M. Thompson bid off at the first sale.

A. B. Ingram has sent the Recorder copies of a Marshall, Mo., paper containing an account of a big corn show there. Some of the premiums on corn has sold for $25 a bushel.

R. W. Clark has opened a new jewelry store in the Cobb Block, Aurora, Ind., where you will find a complete stock of watches, clocks, jewelry, etc. Drop in and say, "hello."

Rev. R. H. Carter began a protracted meeting at Burlington Christian church last Sunday night.

W. L. Kirkpatrick is building a room in which to pack meat. As his business increases he adds to his buildings.

Robert Feldhaus and Miss Ethel Conly, both of Union, were married a few days since.

W. S. Eggleston, the member of the county board of education, was in town Tuesday.

Don't fail to attend the Corn Show in Covington today, Thursday, and tomorrow.

D. E. Bedinger, of Walton, has gone to Orlando, Fla., to spend the winter.

Born, to J. W. Aylor and wife Nov. 6th, a fine daughter, Cora Frances.

Newton Sullivan has the high score among the local boilers.

The county court day crowd was very small, Monday.

Two weeks from next Saturday is Christmas.

Addlesboro is dry.

A Very Large Sale

The sale of the personal property of Miss Theresa Lassing, deceased, will take place next Saturday and the Monday following. The usual stock, farming implements, etc., will be disposed of the first day, while the furniture, tableware, books and jewelry will be sold Monday, the second day, and a big day's work it will be. The furniture consists of nearly everything necessary to equip a home for comfort, many articles of which can be properly classed as antique and have been preserved by the native taste. The selection of this large stock of furniture was participated in by three or four generations, the last owner having been extensively in the latest styles.

The tableware consists of nearly everything to be found in the catalogue and is doubtless anything approaching it in quantity and elegance can be found in another private home in Northern Kentucky. The imported china ware is of the finest quality, the quantity very large and will excite the admiration of all who attend the sale—especially the ladies.

The large quantity of the finest of cut glass that will be sold is simply dazzling. Much of it had never been unpacked before the fact that it was to be sold by the administrator, Judge Lassing. This will be a splendid opportunity for bargains, no doubt.

The books, of which there are nearly 1,000, are mostly by standard authors, and many sets of these have never been unpacked and are in as good condition as when they left the bookstore.

This will be a rare chance for lovers of high-class literature to supply themselves with good reading at a bargain.

The jewelry, every piece of which is elegant, consists of four diamond Lavelier, Pearl Necklace, Cameo Necklace, Solitaire Diamond and Ruby Cluster, Diamond Ear Rings, Cameo Breast Pin and Lock, et. Gold Chain, two Gold Watches, Bracelets, 11-Diamond Cross and many other pieces of exquisite beauty.

There was ever a sale just like this, but it was not the recollection of any of the citizens now living. See the regular advertisement on another page.

Should Do Some Rethinking

The General Assembly, Kentucky will convene again in a few weeks, and soon thereafter it will be seen if the members can posing the condition of the State which was brought about by reckless appropriations, the creation of new offices and the increase of salaries. There never was a more opportune time to inaugurate reform all along the line in Kentucky, a move which will be exactly the opposite of the course pursued by several of the legislatures in the recent past. Too many men in this State are drawing big salaries from the Commonwealth, and not giving value received therefor, and it is said by some that they have had trouble keeping their friends on the payroll and out of the night.

A general cut in salaries, a judicious reduction in appropriations for the support of the State institutions, a reformation of the lines of the deficit—the treasury will continue to grow worse. Unnecessary offices and extravagant salaries are an encumbrance to the State's advancement. In that too much money is being used from which no return is derived. The coming legislature will have a splendid opportunity to do something of real benefit to the State if the members or a majority thereof will only rise to the occasion and do it.

More prosperous State and a less waste of money.

Personal Mention

Chas. Beall, of Francesville, was transacting business in Burlington last Saturday.

Joseph H. Graves and wife, of Erlanger, have gone to Seasson, Florida, to spend the winter.

Rev. Edgar Riley filled Rev. Carter's appointment at Florence Christian church Sunday night.

Otis Steward, of Cynthia, Ky., was the guest of Miss Shirley Tolson last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Annabel Kirkpatrick returned by the last part of last week from a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Warr, at Beachdale, Ind.

Andy Sheban, of Erlanger, was a business caller at this office Tuesday. He said they are arranging for a big time in his city during the holidays.

Sheriff W. D. Cropper, Circuit Judge-elect, Sidney Gaines and County Attorney N. A. Riddell attended the inauguration of Gov. A. O. Stanley, Tuesday, at Frankfort.

Major Conner, of Richmond, was a caller at this office last Tuesday. Mr. Conner is a member of the county board of education, and is giving his people considerable service.

Andrew Muniz, of the extreme north end of the county, was a caller at this office last Monday. Mr. Muniz comes to the county court every once in a while to see the recorder and always looks in upon the Recorder's office.

Judge Roberts came in from his farm to spend Saturday and Sunday with his family. Judge has succeeded in getting some of his neighbors to see the strange lights he discovered some distance in Pleasant Valley territory.

POLITICS.

The writer is a Boone county, Ky. boy, now in his 30th year. He will never forget his Boone county home near Ft. Pleasant church. But I am sorry to know that my native state is still in the past column. Today in looking over the Recorder I note a few paragraphs copied from the Owen County Democrat to which the writer would like to allude. After mentioning the fact that A. O. Stanley defeated the dry candidate who stood for State prohibition, the writer says:

"To those who are willing to abide by the Democratic principle of the majority rules, the liquor question is settled, and so far as the party is concerned, and should be." No doubt this writer would be glad to leave the settlement of this great question in Kentucky to the Democratic party.

Majorities may settle questions right or may settle them wrong. There is a well known and accepted fact that so far as the party is concerned, and should be." No doubt this writer would be glad to leave the settlement of this great question in Kentucky to the Democratic party.

W. C. T. U. NEWS.

(Furnished by Mrs. Belle Dieckey.)

Nontide Prayer.

Two questions of the greatest importance to the nation and State are before the people for their decision this month and in January. The submission of a prohibition amendment will surely go before Congress this month. This legislature in Kentucky ought to submit the question to the State and will if enough pressure is brought to bear. This is not a question for party decision. The people are asking for an opportunity to express their opinion.

The 1914 legislature only failed to submit the prohibition amendment by filibustering in the Senate when there were but two days left, and the bill was lost by parliamentary technicality. Great petitions must be carried to Frankfort, the churches and temperance people must arouse interest and canvass the territory near them for signatures to petitions and delegations be sent up when the bill is up for consideration. Let every W. C. T. U. member begin by conscientious observance of the noon-tide prayer hour and by asking herself if she is keeping her pledge to do all in her power to put down the liquor traffic.

Constitution Has Marching Qualities.

Topeka, Kansas, Nov. 16.—Another great decision concerning the liquor traffic has been handed down. This time the decision is by the Supreme Court of Kansas, and it sustains the Webb-Kenyon interstate liquor shipment law. The court was unanimous in its decision, one jurist, however, not being present. Wayne B. Wheeler of Columbus, Ohio, General Counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, defended the law which was fought by the bootlegging interests. The opinion was written by Judge West.

The decision furnishes cumulative evidence of the fact that the longer a state remains saloonlike, the clearer public officials think about the evils of the traffic. In referring to those who break the laws and the purpose of the prohibitory statutes, the court said:

"Congress has therefore undertaken to divest of its interstate character all intoxicating liquor shipped into the state for sale for an unlawful purpose—that is, for a purpose made unlawful by any law of such state. When the law of a given state makes it a crime to sell intoxicating liquor, Congress intends that any liquor shipped in for the purpose of violating such state law shall be treated as if it were interstate character, and that all the protection incident to such character shall be removed from it. This brings us to the vital question which will hang all the law of the prophets of this conviction, namely, whether the power granted to Congress by the constitution to regulate interstate commerce includes the authority thus to divest a given commodity of its interstate character."

No Protection for Violators.

"The citizen, who, driving close to the brink of danger, finds himself in the wrecked condition brought about by transgressing the law, will search with eagerness for some solace and protection in the great fundamental charter whence the body which enacted the law derived its power. Under these circumstances the searcher asserts with vehemence the right of the individual as against the assumed corrective power of the state itself, and the innumerable blessings of personal liberty find no greater champions or more eloquent eulogists than those who are accused of violating statutes prescribed for the government of their conduct. It may be said, however, that constitutions are not framed and adopted for the special benefit of those who disregard or stretch to the breaking enactments intended for the enhancement of the public peace and welfare, but for the good of the citizenship at large, and the protection of higher things, the things of real value to humanity which make life worth living. If conditions cannot remain stationary, and unless they retrograde they must advance, and when the law-making power of the nation upon serious thought and careful deliberation enacts a statute manifestly and unmistakably intended to promote the public health and morals and happiness it must be presumed, until the contrary is clearly shown that it acted within its lawful province and power."

Has the Marching Quality.

"The constitution, our fathers made had the marching quality in it. It has been supposed by some students of our national history that a written constitution is an incubus of tabular provisions. The supposition is not correct for the national constitution under the guidance of our great court of last resort, has grown and developed, not perhaps, like an unwritten one, but still keeping abreast with the demands of progressive history. "For it is of as much national importance to make men sober as to make them patriotic."

This decision is another evidence of the fact that we live in a government under which we have a right to better our conditions whenever a majority of the electorate desire to do so.

Decision Aids Drys.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—The U. S. Supreme Court yesterday laid down the principle that the crime followed the shipment, in instances of violations of liquor laws, and that persons making illegal shipments may be prosecuted in the state of destination as well as in the state of origin.

Six unlabeled trunks of liquor were shipped from Jolbin, Mo., to Jos. Freeman, at Cherokee, Kansas. The lower court quashed the indictment against Freeman and the Supreme Court reversed this decision.

The decision is regarded as important in dry states, in which, under this opinion, prosecutions against consignors of illegal shipments may be maintained as well as in the state from which the packages are sent. The court holds that the person shipping liquor may be prosecuted in another state. As courts in dry states are not expected to look upon liquor cases involving illegal shipment with as kindly an eye as in wet states, it is believed the decision will add new dangers to surreptitious shipments of liquor.

Acting as counsel for the James Clark distillery, against the Western Maryland, F. Graydon filed in the Supreme Court a motion to assign the West Virginia liquor cases for argument in 1916. These cases brought by the Baltimore Distillery against the Western Maryland Railroad and the American Express Company, involve the validity of the Webb-Kenyon law.

State News.

Pupils at a Henderson school are being operated on for trachoma.

There is a big demand for farms in the vicinity of Mt. Sterling, and they are selling for $125 to $150 per acre.

Jas. L. Powell, former sheriff of Carroll county, was acquitted in the Carroll circuit court last week, of the charge of raising tax receipts.

The Carlisle tobacco market will open with the first sale of the season Wednesday, Dec. 8th. Receipts for the opening sale thus far have been light, owing to the fact that the tobacco has not been in proper case for handling, cool dry weather prevailing. The quality of the tobacco received is reported as fine.

The Pine Grove tobacco market on the loose-leaf floor is active and strong. Fifty thousand pounds were sold, prices ranging from $2 to $2.50 a hundred. The advance over the last sale was from $1 to $2 a hundred on all grades. While the weed is light in weight this year it is of better quality than last year.

Our correspondent in Shaker Bend writes that rabbits are a thing of the past in that locality and very few birds. They seem to have died out during the cold spell last winter. Farmers should protect the few birds that are left on their premises during the coming winter.—Wilmore Enterprise.

The fur season has opened in Richmond, and local merchants have already bought several hundred skins. The most of the furs purchased are skunks, for which the price has been $2.50 for No. 1, and $1.75 for No. 2. Badger has not been very plentiful, and the prices range from one dollar to two and one half.—Richmond Climax Madissonian.

Dr. Fletcher Smith, 96 years old may be seen on our streets most any day the weather is good. His faculties are clear and he converses with intelligence on any subject. He has always been a student and a reader, and his remarkable memory adds proof to the theory that the more work the brain does the better work it will do and the longer it will last.—Dover News.

The Rev. Ezra Campbell is said to be the oldest minister of the Gospel in the United States, if not in the world. Recently he celebrated his one hundred and ninth birthday at the home of his grandson, Emory Campbell, of Floyd county, Ky. Mr. Campbell was born in what is now Wise county, Virginia, and lived there until he was past fifty years of age. He then moved to Kentucky and has lived here since. He is a member of the Baptist church and is now the pastor of three churches. He has been preaching for seventy years and has been young in action as most men are at seventy-five. Besides being the oldest preacher, he holds the record in Kentucky as the longest married man. In the past year he united over 200 couples in the bonds of matrimony. Friends of the old man have been endeavoring him to stop preaching and reside in a quiet way, but he says that he wants to die in the service of God.—Mt. Vernon Signal.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. BELLERS, Acting Director of Sunday School Course of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright 1915, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 12

JEHOVAH YEARNS OVER ISRAEL.

LESSON TEXT—Hosea 11:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love—Hosea 11:4.

A contemporary of Isaiah and Amos, Hosea continued to prophesy after the first captivity of the northern kingdom. His style is abrupt and figurative. Israel is Jehovah's adulterous wife, repudiated, but finally to be purified and restored. This lesson is a part of the second section of the book (4:1-13:8), which is a description of the sinful people.

1. "The Perverse Child," vv. 1-7. The "remnant" (ch. 6:1-3) had cried out for relief. (See Isa. 1:9; Rom. 2:5). Jehovah's reply (begins 6:4) is a severe arraignment of Israel's backsliding as contrasted with his grace. To understand this lesson read the entire book repeatedly. In verse 1 of the lesson Jehovah recalls to the nation the days of its childhood. Because of his great love (Deut. 7:7) he called them out of Egypt, the land of bondage; into Canaan, the land of blessing and liberty. Yet Israel sinned not its duty nor its obligation of gratitude. We are living under a greater obligation because of the greater redemption God has provided for us in the person of his Son. God here calls Israel "my son" (Ex. 4:22); we have the right to call ourselves sons (John 1:12; 1 John 3:1-2). Matthew's gospel applies these words to him who alone was fully and in the true sense God's son. Jesus is the summary of the whole nation in that he alone fully realized God's purpose in Israel (Matt. 2:15).

As contrasted with what a son is or should be verse 2 gives a picture of Israel's wandering. The whole history of the nation is one of going after false gods. (1 Sam. 8:7-9 and many other references). In those childhood days (v. 3) Jehovah taught them how to walk, and healed their hurts, "but they knew not"—God, as a tender Father, had watched over, taught, guided and healed (Ex. 13:14; Jer. 43:3; 63:9). Even so, in this present age God is a God of mercy and long suffering (Rom. 2:4); yet the mass of men "know not" what God is doing for them. In verse 4 the child has grown older and as mothers often fether a child lest it run away, so Jehovah endeavors to draw Israel to him with "cords of love." His cord of love now is the mighty power of Calvary (John 12:32). Jehovah not only drew but even sought to entice, for he "laid meat unto them"—Jesus will deliver us, for he bore our yoke (Matt. 11:28-30) and is for us the Bread of Life (John 6:35, 58). Love does not mean that the backslider shall be free from punishment. "Because they refused to return . . . the sword shall abide" (v. 6-8 and Heb. 12:6). Even so God did not permit them to go back to Egyptian bondage (v. 6). Israel was "laid to slings" in spite of the constant call to worship and serve him none "would exalt him."

II. The Pleading Parent, vv. 8-12. None can fathom the depths of the cry, "How shall I give thee up, How shall I deliver thee" (v. 8). Israel would perjure and still Jehovah pleads that perchance they would heed his cry (Jer. 9:7; Lam. 3:33). Admah and Zebolim were irretrievably overthrown with Sodom and Gomorrah (Deut. 29:33), shall Israel likewise perish? No! (v. 9) for "I am God, not man." God does not, like man, change—his covenants are not "cords of paper," his love is everlasting (Nu. 23:19). It is not God but man who is responsible for his destruction. The "Holy One in the midst of these" is there to save, not as an avenger. God has not come into our midst in wrath—God's passionate desire is to save those of love and redemption and as with Israel of old, so in this age, he will carry out these purposes in spite of our backsliding (Rom. 11:28-29). Verses 10 and 11 are prophetic of the ultimate repentance and restoration of Israel—Judgment shall pass upon their foes (Joel 3:16) and those of the dispersion (see parallel Isa. 11:11-16) shall gather, as "doves to their windows," and be once more "in their houses," i. e., set up as a nation in their God-given land. Ephraim (v. 12) sought to rule without or by casting off Jehovah (1 Cor. 4:8).

In Judah was the legal priesthood and the legitimate king, but the apostasy of Israel was more culpable because of the example of Judah which he had set at naught.

III. Promised Deliverance. In a most striking way Hosea flashes a note of hope and love through the cloud of gloom which hung over the nation as it drew closer to its doom, because the people refused to repent. Amos delivered his warning and returned to Judah. Hosea was a part of the nation which emphasizes such verses of his prophecy as the following: 3:1, 4:6, 11:4, 11:6, 6:4, 6:6, 2:15 and 10:12, which sound the message of hope like bulletins from the battle's front. Verse 9 is the final summary for Israel and for us as well.

The Kentucky Game and Fish Commission's handsome new fish car, in which the small fry are taken from the hatcheries to the streams and ponds of the state for restocking purposes.

GAME AND FISH COMMISSION IS AFTER VIOLATORS OF STATE LAWS

Over Five Hundred Men Convicted For Violations—English Pheasants Liberated By Commission
Are Protected For Number of Years

A Kentucky trainer and two of his champion bird dogs.

Frankfort, Ky.—(Special).—The Game and Fish Commission since the last report has convicted 551 men for violation of the law. They took the chance of beating the wardens. How much better it would have been for them to have taken out their license. They would have had the satisfaction of feeling that they were helping the enforcement of law and contributing to better game conditions and were not cheats.

The money collected for sale of hunters' license has been, and is being, economically spent for the enforcement of the laws and the restocking of the fields and streams with game and fish.

The Commission is taking this means of again warning the hunters, not only to take out their license, but to always carry them when hunting.

English Pheasants.

The 2,500 English pheasants liberated by the Commission are protected for a number of years, and a warning is hereby given to every one who kills these valuable and costly birds, that if caught, he will be prosecuted.

Now, Mr. Hunter, if you see a strange bird do not run your legs off to destroy it, but take every possible means not to injure it yourself, and do not let an opportunity escape you to urge others to do likewise. These pheasants were bought with your money, so see that they are protected until they increase sufficiently to allow shooting.

Conditions in Other States.

In other states where conditions are not so ideal as here they now have pheasants in plenty. It is up to you, Mr. Hunter, to do your part to help the Commission protect them. Get busy. Your warden will be in the field every day during the hunting season and for a considerable time before that, to see that each hunter has his license, and that the "Sooner" is curbed in his selfish desire. Please help the wardens, remembering that they are working for and not against you. We want to enlist the active cooperation of every man in Kentucky who has a hunting license in protecting your own game from the cheater. We want you to realize that it is you who are being cheated by the game hog, the pot hunter and the chap who hunts out of season without a license.

Our wardens are doing effective work. However, the state is large and unless the sportsmen and farmers report the infractions of the hunting laws, either to the wardens or to the State Department, some violators are bound to escape.

Hunters Themselves Lose.

What we wish to impress upon the sportsman who takes out his license and obeys the law, is that every violator of the law is a thief. Those who are about to deplete the game supply unwarrantably, either for gain or through greed, or who hunt out of season, to some extent succeeds in robbing the licensed hunter of the benefits for which he spends his money in purchasing his license.

If the sportsman can get the idea clearly into their minds that the law is for their protection as well as for the protection of the landowner and the conservation of valuable food supply, and that the violators of game regulations is beyond the law, a cheater against whom every man's hand should be raised, it will not be long until we shall again see the fields and forests full of game and Kentucky affording some of the best field sport in the country.

Now, Mr. Hunter, won't you help by setting a good example and spreading the sentiment for obedience to the law wherever you go? Condemn the unlawful hunter and the pot hunter and try to show him the light. If he does not take kindly to your suggestions, report the violation of the law to the wardens in your county and the office of the Commission at Frankfort. Boost the game and thereby make more pleasure for yourself and at the same time increase the value of the license for which you pay. The money you pay for your license is your contribution towards the enforcement of the law and the propagation of game. Get behind your money with your personal influence and conditions are bound to improve.

Lawful to Kill.

Quail, rabbits, squirrels, woodcock, wild duck, wild goose, can be shot from November 15 to January 1.

Unlawful to Ship.

It is unlawful to ship quail, native pheasant, or wild turkey within the State of Kentucky at any time, but these birds, when lawfully killed and in possession of the hunter, may be carried by the hunter, or in the baggage cars, when properly marked.

When shipping rabbits, squirrels, or wild ducks, within or without the state, the package should be plainly marked, giving the contents of the package, and the name and address of the consignee as well as that of the consignor.

It is unlawful to ship any game out of the state, or the hides of fur-bearing animals, without clearly marking the package as above directed. To ship unmarked is in violation of the interstate laws, and is punishable in the federal courts by a heavy fine and imprisonment.

Remember that it is unlawful to ship either within or without the state, by freight, express, parcels post, or any common carrier, any quail, native pheasant, or wild turkey.

Now, Mr. Hunter, you will say if approached that you intend to get your license before hunting. It is necessary to purchase your license from the county clerk of the county in which you reside. There will be many hunters in the fields on the opening day, November 15. What would be the condition at your county clerk's office if you waited until November 14 to get your license? There would be congestion. You would stand in line many hours waiting your turn and then possibly go away without it. You had made your arrangements to go hunting early the next morning and would go afield without your license. Mr. Game Warden would happen along and you would be distressed and embarrassed. Why take a chance?

Wen 17 to 16

The boys basket ball team went to Bellevue last Friday afternoon and defeated the team there 17 to 16. The Bellevue team put up a very strong game in the last half and came very near tying or winning out.

Attended the Inauguration

J. M. Eddins left for Frankfort, Monday morning to attend the inauguration of Gov. Stanley, Tuesday. Mr. Eddins was chairman of Boone county Democratic Campaign Committee preceding the last election.

Ready for the Holiday Trade

Your attention is called to the fact that Schanker's store at Erlanger will be amply prepared to take care of all your holiday wants. Call there early and do your shopping before the large stock of Christmas goods is exhausted.

Will Case be Called for Trial

The trial of the James L. Huey will be called in the circuit court next Tuesday. A very large number of witnesses have been summoned. If the trial is had it will require several days of the term, which will probably last two weeks.

Jerry Reed Dead

Jerry Reed, 62, died last Thursday afternoon, of paralysis at the county infirmary. He was received at the infirmary the day before his death. Undertaker Scott Chambers, of Walton, took the remains to Bellevue, last Sunday, where they were interred.

Miss Fannie Foster Dead

Miss Fannie Foster, who died Nov. 22nd, was laid to rest in Spring Grove cemetery, Ohio. She was the eldest daughter of J. H. Foster, who was an old resident of Burlington many years. She was a true and faithful Christian, now gone to meet loved ones in a better world.

Very Little Plowing Done

Very little plowing for the 1910 crop has been done. A small percent of the tobacco crop has been stripped, and a few and far between. About half the corn has been gathered and brings from 60 to 70 cents a bushel. Stock has required no feeding to amount to anything.

Ready for Circuit Court

Sheriff Cropper and his deputy, L. A. Conner, have their work for the December term of circuit court, which begins next Monday, all up and are ready for the bell to tap. Master Commissioner Maurer is also in the "ready class," and the term will start in its usually smooth manner.

A Splendid Inaugural Address

Gov. Stanley's inaugural address had the right ring, and no doubt, gave many of the sinners over the State a nervous shock. It was free from egotism, and if the next Legislature and the State officials will cooperate with the Governor along the route mapped out in the address his administration is bound to be a great success.

The Big Corn Show is On

A great many Boone-co. people should visit Covington today and tomorrow to witness the Corn Show held there under the auspices of Boone County Pomona Grange at Seventh Street Market House. The Covington merchants have provided a liberal list of premiums for exhibitors and done all in their power to make the show a big success, and the people should manifest an appreciation of their liberality and work in behalf of the exhibition.

Dixie Highway Meeting

A Dixie Highway meeting will be held in the court house in Burlington next Monday at 1 o'clock p. m. Mr. G. C. Gillbreath, general supervisor of the Dixie Highway will be present and will have with him a speaker of national reputation. At this meeting a local council will be organized so as to put the county in the organization in an official manner. Everybody is invited to attend this meeting and assist in giving the Dixie Highway a boost so far as Boone county is concerned. Remember the date of the meeting.

The Automobile is a Menace

It is claimed that the automobile habit is a menace to public health because it leads people to give up walking. We know people right here in Greenfield who have almost forgotten how to walk more than a hundred feet at a time—to their meals or to the front gate. But there is recompense for those who do not own cars, for they are kept jumping around so to avoid being run over that they are forced to enjoy the benefits of splendid physical exercise.—Argus.

Two Great Necessities of Modern Life
The two great necessities of modern life are education and transportation, for civilization travels in the wake of good schools and good roads. Good roads lead in more good directions than the most far-seeing can contemplate. Commerce begins on the country roads and by ways; they affect school attendance and literacy; they control markets and prices, values of land the development and contentment of the people, the cost and pleasure of living and are scarcely secondary to rail transportation in their far-reaching effect. They determine the character and growth of the community, and the necessity for them cannot be overestimated, for a country that isn't built on a good road isn't worth living in.

A Famous Temperance Lecturer

Farmer Lieutenant Governor R. P. Kennedy, of Bellefontaine, who is an orator of some ability himself, writing a series of articles in the Index-Republican, on "Great Orators I Have Heard," tells of a temperance address made by Tom Marshall, of Kentucky, at New Haven, when Governor Kennedy was a student at Yale, which he unhesitatingly says was the greatest oratorical effort it has ever been his privilege to hear.

Marshall's weakness was drink. It was a notable audience that faced him at New Haven—professors, clergymen, public men, students, etc. It was evident as the orator advanced uncertainly to the front of the platform, that he was under the influence of liquor. Before he had said a half dozen sentences, leaning too heavily upon the desk in front of him, it toppled over and desk and orator went down in a crash from the platform to the floor below. Pandemonium reigned. Women screamed and men rushed forward, believing that Mr. Marshall had been killed. But he was not seriously injured. Assisted to the platform he sat for a few moments on the little sofa there, and then waving aside the chairman, who was trying to replace the desk, he advanced unsupported to the front of the platform again, saying, "You may think it strange that I come here to lecture on temperance, but if the devil himself should come to lecture on sin, who should know he subject better?"

And then he launched into a description of the evils of drink that in less than five minutes had caused the vast audience to forget all about the startling and unfortunate episode of the meeting, which would have embarrassed an ordinary speaker so that it would have been impossible for him to proceed.

"That great audience, sitting entranced under his wonderful eloquence, was spell-bound as he poured forth his burning words of denunciation upon the crime of the century. He closed with an appeal which was as lofty as the sun and as burning as the sun, and sat down amid the tumultuous applause of that great audience felt that they had heard the greatest orator the nation had then produced, and thought I have since heard many of its greatest talkers and thinkers, not a single one measures up to the sublime standard of Tom Marshall of Kentucky."

The Last Chapter

With the assembling of the first session of the new Congress today begins the last chapter of the present national Administration.

And upon the nature of that chapter depends, in a large part, a decisive measure, the character of the next national Administration.

Upon the record, as already made, there is no doubt that President Wilson has the indorsement of the country. It is true he blundered as to Mexico, but that mistake has been overshadowed by the surprising excellence of an unequalled work of constructive reform that has left his political opponents without a foot of solid ground to stand on—opponents who are looking anxiously now to the next six months to give them the fighting chance which the past two years have denied them.

Their situation is a peculiarly trying one. Feeling that their hope is in no vitality of their own, but in the embarrassment of doing their utmost to effect that embarrassment, and yet conditions as brought about by the European war are such that they realize that it is going to be an exceedingly difficult thing to the issues most pressing without, perhaps, even more embarrassing themselves.

Unquestionably the new Congress has a great deal of important work before it—work which in its responsibility exceeds most of the work that other Congresses have been called on to do. But for the fact that the country understands the character of this work and demands that it be done, it would almost inevitably insure the downfall of the Administration doing it. It is this fact which at the same time strengthens the hands of those to whom it has fallen, and disturbs those who for partisan purposes would obstruct it.

That is why there is good warrant for the confidence that the Congress now assembling under the advice of the man who so far has won signally the approval of the country, will succeed in doing the work before it effectively and acceptably; that a satisfactory policy of "preparedness" will be inaugurated and a tolerable policy of paving for it will be provided. Perhaps the latter achievement will be more difficult, more fraught with danger than the former, but all things are possible under pressure of the existing temper of the people.

The Courier-Journal, in view of what he has already done, has insisted that the only man who can prevent Woodrow Wilson succeeding himself in the White House is Woodrow Wilson. Perhaps this might be revised by the addition of "or his Secretary of the Treasury." But that revision would be one more of form than of substance, for Mr. Wilson would have himself to blame if he allows Mr. McAdoo to lure him into the swamps into which no Democratic path has ever yet led.—Courier-Journal.

Had a Cleanup Day

W. L. Kirkpatrick made a cleanup of his 1913 purchase at the last Thursday, when he sent to market all the cattle, sheep and hogs he had on hand, except 35 hogs he had which will weigh from 200 to 500 pounds for slaughter.

Concerning the Dixie Highway

Walton, Ky., Nov. 27, 1915.
The Dixie Highway Association, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Gentlemen: Answering various communications from you and allied associations, with reference to the situation in Boone county, I have to say that for some months past and now the situation in this county is a puzzling one, and not at all satisfactory. It will, however, work itself out in a short time, and if I interpret the situation correctly, it will work out without agitation as well as with it.

Boone county has a population of about ten thousand; about three hundred square miles, and a tax list of seven millions. We have a road mileage of about four hundred miles; about two hundred miles are ordinary roads; about forty-five miles are in the beds of creeks, or practically so; and about one hundred and fifty miles of pike, not a mile of which is modern road.

Some three years ago our county voted to free the pikes of the county, but later failed to carry a bond issue because of misunderstanding a question, and because of doubt as to what is best to do. The county has never built a mile of pike in the county. About 75 miles of pike were built twenty-five and thirty years ago by stock companies, which with few exceptions have hardly self-sustaining. Some ten years ago about thirty miles of pike were built by the county, taking stock to the extent of about five hundred dollars a mile. These have hardly been self-sustaining. In the last two years approximately forty miles of pike have a road mileage of about building by the county paying one-half of the costs, the people by subscription paying the other half. There is more or less money spent every year upon or in freeing roads of the county by the Fiscal Court, but when a new road is opened or any special work done upon any of the roads in the neighborhood of the county, it has been the practice of the Fiscal Court to require subscription by the people directly interested, generally to the extent of about one-half.

There is now under construction under the present road law six miles of pike from Burlington to Florence. It cost six thousand dollars to free this pike of gates, and a contract was let for the reconstruction for about twelve thousand dollars. The county pays one-half of this, and the State the other half. This road it will be observed, is costing eighteen thousand dollars, and being built under the State Road Commissioner, and will be a modern road.

The eleven and one-half miles of the Covington and Lexington turnpike, which runs thru Boone county near its eastern border, passes thru Florence, Richmond, and Walton, forms one link of the Dixie Highway, and is now, as it has been since 1837, a toll road. The corporation owns one-half of this road and the county owns the other half. Under the Goebel Law, relating to that particular road the company is allowed to collect one-half of the statutory toll rate, but necessarily has the burden of maintaining the road, so that the stock is, and has been for years, practically worthless so far as paying dividends goes. That pike is not worth more than ten thousand dollars, but the company put a price on it of twenty-three thousand dollars, which made it out of the question for Boone county as such, in the state of its finances, to consider buying and freeing the pike during the year 1915.

The writer, aided by some others, undertook to aid the fiscal court in the purchase of the Covington and Lexington turnpike to the extent of five thousand dollars by voluntary subscriptions by persons owning property on the pike and otherwise interested in the Dixie Highway, but not withstanding the practicality and injustice of this plan, considered in connection with the history of pike building in Boone county and the history of road improvement in the county, it fell practically flat, especially on the north half of this pike, namely, the Florence end. The sentiment of the farmers on the pike was not at all encouraging, or appreciative of either the value of such a highway to the property along it or to the county as a whole, or considerate of what other pikes of the county have done and are required to do in order to get their roads improved.

I am so much impressed myself with the value of this highway to the property on it, and so much impressed with the fairness of a subscription to the extent of five thousand dollars by the people directly interested, that another effort will be made along this line. If I had my way, all road improvement as well as all other public improvement would be made by taxation, but owing to the history of our road improvement and the haphazard way in which it has been done and the mixed way now being done, it seems to me the very height of injustice that the people on the Lexington pike and some other pikes should expect a freeing of the gates and a rebuilding of its pikes exclusively by taxation, when the people on all other roads of the county are required to aid the Fiscal Court by subscription, usually to the extent of one-half, and if we fail to get the five thousand dollar subscription, under the present law with reference to intercounty-seat pikes, we are bound either this year or next to have the Lexington pike gates and reconstruction under the law referred to in the county in the State is certain money from

MAGNIFICENT

Farm of 177 Acres

TO BE SOLD

At Public Auction

On December 13th, 1915

At 1:00 O'Clock P. M.

At the Court House Door in Burlington, Ky.

As Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John T. Craven, deceased, I will sell at public outcry, to the highest and best bidder, what is known as "THE JOHN T. CRAVEN FARM"

This farm is located on what is known as the Florence & Burlington Turnpike, a free road, one mile west of the Town of Florence, Boone County, Kentucky, through which the Dixie Highway passes, and is ten miles west of Cincinnati, Ohio.

It is improved with a splendid seven-room residence, three-room cottage, two large barns, one equipped for dairy purposes; two small corn cribs, one dairy house, one meat house and other necessary out-buildings, all of which are in fair state of repairs. This farm contains one hundred and seventy-seven acres, more or less, all in grass with the exception of about fifteen acres. The outside and line fences are in good condition and the farm is in a high state of cultivation. It is supplied with never-failing water and is splendidly adapted to stock raising and dairy purposes.

This farm is located within five miles of Burlington, the County Seat of Boone County, at which a splendid High School is maintained. In the Town of Florence, one mile distant, there are a good Graded School, a Baptist, Christian, and Catholic Churches. The pike leading from this farm to the City of Cincinnati is free, with the exception of about one mile. The tax rate in Boone County is very reasonable. This farm is located in a splendid community, surrounded by prosperous and well-to-do farmers, all of which are matters of the greatest importance to persons contemplating an investment of this character.

This farm will be sold for the purpose of settling the estate of the late John T. Craven, and I, as Executor of his Last Will and Testament, am fully authorized and empowered to make the sale and convey the same.

Terms of Sale—One-third (1-3) of the purchase money to be paid in cash, the balance to be in two equal installments in one and two years from date, evidenced by promissory notes, payable to my order as Executor, with interest at the rate of six (6) per cent. until paid, with a lien reserved in the deed to secure the payment of the deferred payments. Possession will be given immediately.

I retain the right to reject any or all bids. The successful bidder must be ready, on the day of sale, to comply with the terms of sale.

O. M. ROGERS,

Executor of the last Will and Testament of John T. Craven, deceased.

the State, equal in extent to the money expended by the county upon intercounty-seat roads. This year our county as above stated, is spending nine thousand dollars together with an equal sum by the State on the pike from Burlington to Florence, which is a county seat road, or at least one link of an intercounty-seat road. The Covington & Lexington pike from Florence to the Kenton county line on the north, and from Florence to the Kenton county line near Walton on the south is the next link to complete the intercounty-seat road in Boone county from Burlington to the county seats of Grant and Kenton counties.

The five cent State tax collected in 1915 for road purposes is perhaps the greatest single step taken in Kentucky in the interest of good roads. The next and most important thing that could be done for roads in Kentucky is that the State taxes should be doubled, and ten cents voluntarily as a matter of equity and justice to subscribe some reasonable sum to aid the Fiscal Court in that work, say three thousand dollars, and by putting themselves on somewhat of an equality with the people in other portions of the county. Nevertheless it is better for the people of Boone county as a whole that it is done as it has been done, rather than not to be done at all. Likewise, it will be better for all the people of Boone county that the Covington and Lexington pike be freed and reconstructed in the same way, namely, by the necessary appropriation by the State and county than not to do it at all, even if the doing of it in that way works somewhat of an inequality and injustice to the balance of the county.

With the aid of a five thousand dollar subscription there is no doubt that this pike will be freed of gates and be reconstructed in the year 1916. Without the aid of subscription, there is no doubt that it will be done under the intercounty-seat law by 1917. The people of Boone county are that pike, and to be put something on an equality with the people of other portions of the county.

While I am delighted to see the Burlington and Florence pike rebuilt, as above stated, I regret very much that the people on that road and directly interested did not feel called upon voluntarily as a matter of equity and justice to subscribe some reasonable sum to aid the Fiscal Court in that work, say three thousand dollars, and by putting themselves on somewhat of an equality with the people in other portions of the county. Nevertheless it is better for the people of Boone county as a whole that it is done as it has been done, rather than not to be done at all. Likewise, it will be better for all the people of Boone county that the Covington and Lexington pike be freed and reconstructed in the same way, namely, by the necessary appropriation by the State and county than not to do it at all, even if the doing of it in that way works somewhat of an inequality and injustice to the balance of the county.

With the aid of a five thousand dollar subscription there is no doubt that this pike will be freed of gates and be reconstructed in the year 1916. Without the aid of subscription, there is no doubt that it will be done under the intercounty-seat law by 1917. The people of Boone county are ably able to build all their roads with such aid as they may get from the State of Kentucky, and the Nation if it ever gets into the road building business, and, for one, I would oppose one cent donation by any outsider or by any outside organization, even if such a thing were possible. The people of this county are too rich and too proud, if once they understand the question, to accept any such aid, even if it were obtainable, which I am quite sure it is not. There may be, however, some individuals, as may be found in every community, who are so penurious and small that they do hope in some way or other that somebody will make all the roads good without costing them anything.

It should be remembered that that portion of the Dixie Highway which lies in Boone county has already a sixty foot right of way and one of the best grades and road beds for a pike in the world. In fact when the old Covington & Lexington turnpike was built in 1837, and from that time until it was partly moved and its business taken by the Cincinnati Southern Railway, it was one of the finest turnpikes in the U. S. so that its reconstruction, when we reach the point of doing it, is not such a large task as it would be in most other sections.

It is hoped and believed that a number of the enterprising and large taxpayers of the county

Want to Reduce the Flow of Oratory

The New York Journal of Commerce informs us that one of the most important things that will be done during the approaching session of Congress will be the amendment of the rules of the United States Senate in order to do away with a good deal of Senatorial courtesy and permit a majority of the Senate to bring debate to an end.

Senatorial courtesy now provides that in a Senate of nearly 100 members a vote cannot be taken on any measure until all the Senators have said everything that they want to say in regard to the matter under discussion. In the end, and by something closely resembling sheer brute force, a majority in the Senate can wear out the minority and bring an important question to a vote, but dozens of matters which should be voted on and disposed of are indefinitely postponed because of the objections of a handful of men.

The usual objection to a reform of the Senate rules is that any other procedure but the present one will abolish debate in the Senate. This is nonsense. The Senate is a small body. Debate is, therefore, easier than in the large and unwieldy House. A change in the rules, however, weakens not the opportunity of each Senator to make his arguments, but the power of Senators to veto legislation that a majority of the country may wish. The present rules of the Senate have, at times, been used to advantage, notably in filibusters against extravagant appropriation bills, but the system is bad. The Senate should take all the time it needs to discuss important topics, but a majority ought always to be able to set a time for taking a vote. We do not believe, however, that the Senate rules will be changed at the next session. Men are slow to relinquish power, and the spirit of the Old Guard has not vanished from the Senate.—Ex.

Will Make Alcohol

The Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse company, in addition to its Elk Run Distillery in East Louisville, is fitting up its Lexington Distillery at Latonia, Ky., for the purpose of manufacturing alcohol to supply a part of the country, and the two distilleries named will be fitted up especially for this purpose.

None of the other distilleries of the company in Kentucky will be put into this service because of the expense required to make the change at this time owing to the high prices of copper. A Baltimore plant of the company, however, has been fitted up for the work.

The great need of alcohol can be understood when it is pointed out that it requires the equivalent of fifty gallons of alcohol for each charge of one of the great guns of the warring nations abroad. It requires 20 bushels of corn or sixty gallons of molasses to make fifty gallons of alcohol. The contract made by the Kentucky company will aggregate about $10,000,000.

Had Gold Teeth

The Louisville Post of recent date contained the following: Effie Scott is dead at Lakeland, and her diamond set gold teeth which are said to have been indirectly the cause of her mental derangement, have been turned over to John Walker, the administrator of her estate. Effie Scott, a negro washerwoman, was arrested several weeks ago on a lunacy charge and taken to the county jail. There it was discovered she had several gold teeth in front of three of which fair sized diamonds were set. She was said to have purchased these with savings accumulated in the heyday of her prosperity.

Later she lost many of the customers for whom she had acted as laundress, her earnings decreased, and she was compelled to accept a position as a cook. In this position her earnings were not sufficient for her to maintain the station to which she had been accustomed and this is said to have so weighed upon her mind as to cause her reason to become unbalanced.

While at the jail the woman loosened the gold teeth in her mouth until it became necessary to remove them. They were preserved, and, following her death at the Lakeland Asylum, were turned over to the administrator of her estate.

On the Right Track

The recent declaration of M. M. Logan, Atty General-elect, that he will oppose the paying out of money for extra help for the General Assembly during the coming session of the Legislature, is occasioning widespread concern on the part of legislators, who had hoped to reward various of their friends with easy jobs for at least sixty days, and those who have been in the habit of landing "extra help" berths during sessions of the Legislature. Not only will the newly elected Attorney General oppose the payment of extra help that may be employed in the future, but he intends to institute proceedings with a view to recovering money that has been paid out for extra help during the last ten years.

During the last session of the Legislature $151 a day was disbursed for extra help in the House and Senate, a total of $9,099 during the session of sixty legislative days. Taking this as a basis, the State has paid out for extra help during the last ten years a total of $90,000. It is this amount, it is said, that Attorney General-elect Logan will attempt to recover.

Those favoring extra help point to the fact that conditions have changed materially since the writ ing of the Constitution fixing the number of persons that may be employed by the House and Senate during a legislative session. It has been pointed out that during the last ten or twelve years the number of bills introduced during a session is largely in excess of the number offered previously, and that it would be practically impossible to handle them satisfactorily with a force such as that to which the House and Senate are limited by the Constitution. They assert that economy in time resulting from the expeditious handling of matters coming before the Legislature, is, in reality, economy in money.

They also call attention to the fact that the arrangement of the House and Senate chambers in the present capitol is such as to call for more doorkeepers and messengers than were necessary in the old building, the legislative chamber has four doors and the Senate chamber three doors.

Dr. N. B. Chipman last Saturday sold to a Louisville party his holdings of 150,000 pounds of low-grade tobacco. Dr. Chipman purchased this tobacco on the Falmouth loose-leaf market the past two seasons, and had it stored in his warehouses in this city. The reported price was 3½ cents, which will give him a small margin of profit.—Falmouth Outlook.

At a meeting of the loose floor the date of the opening sales was postponed from Dec. 7 to December 14. This is due to the lack of reasonable weather and the small amount of tobacco that is ready for the market.

Wm. B. O'Neal, of Covington, Wm. Foley, secretary Cincinnati Automobile Club, and S. W. Galbreath, of Cincinnati, Field secretary of the National Dixie highway Commission, were here last Friday in the interest of getting the highway thru Boone county in a proper manner, which means the elimination of the toll gates on the Lexington turnpike in the county, and an organization to put the highway in a first class condition. Preliminary steps are being taken to accomplish these measures and it is believed the entire matter will be arranged by spring time. When this highway is so cared for the travel will be greatly increased and the values of all real estate lying on its borders will increase at least ten per cent.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

At Walton, Friday and Saturday, December 10 and 11. Be Sure and Attend.

The Boone County Farmers' Institute will be held at Walton on the 10th and 11th inst--Friday and Saturday of this week. The institute is under the auspices of the State Board of Agriculture as provided by an act of the legislature. Those in charge of the institute will be men who have had practical farming experience, and are now operating some of the most successful farms in the land. Horticulture, soil, fine stock, poultry, etc., will receive attention, while there will be a lady lecturer on Home Economics and Domestic Science. Heretofore the Institute held in the county have not received the attention on the part of the farmers to which they were entitled, notwithstanding every one of them have been high class and calculated to be of much interest to the farmer. It is hoped that the Institute held at Walton this week will be attended by every one who can attend in person. The Institute is paid for by the State, and is designed solely to enlighten the tiller of the soil as to the modes of farming that have become imperative under existing conditions of the land. Changed conditions demand changed processes, and the farmer should endeavor to keep up with the times. Attend the Institute and learn some of the new methods.

RICHWOOD.

Mrs. Amanda Carpenter and Uncle Jerry Carpenter both have the rheumatism.
Beautiful peagant to be given at Richwood church, December 28th. Forty participants representing seven nationalities. Everyone is cordially invited. Don't fail to be there.
Miss Lillie Belle Hammond died at 7:30 p. m., last Friday after a few days' illness. She was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hammons, and a niece of D. B. Dobbins. She was of a lovable, amiable and cheerful disposition, a universal favorite at home and loved abroad by all, and though suffering for several years she bore her trials and troubles with a cheerful heart, and cheered her mother and uncle along on their voyage of life. She was secretary of Pomona and Excelsior Granges, and a member of Mt. Zion Methodist church. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Wilford Mitchell at Hopefield church last Monday, the interment following the services. Mrs. Hammond and Uncle Daniel were not able to attend the funeral. We will miss her kind and pleasant face and cheerful talk. The following from a distance attended the funeral: Raymond Snow, Dry Ridge; Mr. and Mrs. William Lancaster and son, Guy, of Williams-town; Mrs. Fannie Snow, Miss Bettie and Aggie and James Snow, Mr. and Mrs. Holquist, of Covington.

PLEDGES

To Uphold Stanley Pour From All Sections of the State.

The following is from Thomas H. Crosswell's Lexington letter in last Sunday's Enquirer:

Governor A. O. Stanley has made an auspicious beginning as Kentucky's Chief Executive officer. His inaugural address, commending to his friends and surprising to his enemies, is declared by the people and the press to have been one of the ablest and most profound discourses on public affairs ever delivered in this Commonwealth.

His declarations were attuned to the best thought of the State and the ring of sincerity was so pronounced that already there were being formed in various counties unnamed and uncharted associations of strong, influential, right-living, red blooded men who are pledging themselves and one another to uphold the new Governor's hands and help him, as one of them put it in conversation with the writer, "to move a mountain grown out of graft and speculation that is uglier in the sight of the great common people than any slag-dump that ever choked a stream of pure water."

When Governor Stanley said "there is an insistent demand for more business and less politics in the administration of fiscal affairs" he voiced the sentiment of every man and woman in the state who pays taxes on property and who is not feeding at the public trough thru some one's political pull; and when he declared that all superfluous offices should be abolished, and that the absolutely essential offices should be "filled with an eye single to the fitness of the man for the place, and no man is fit for any place who does not possess intelligence, integrity and capacity for labor" he drew an "amen" from every real business man in Kentucky. His desire to rid the state of political pets and secure a "maximum of service at a minimum of cost" appeals to all save those who have sinecures.

Governor Stanley's declaration to "drive out men who are without any visible means of support, without any legitimate business or profession, any occupation, ex-mandling, wily legislative schemers" has brought him applause and promise of assistance from every section of the state. His language was quite plain—so plain that it was not necessary for him to mention names, and the people have no trouble in understanding that he is unopposed to the righteous lobby and the righteous lobbyist.

The men he would oust from the Capitol are few in number, but, as he puts it, they "operate in impudent and undue defiance of law and decency," letting "insoproposed in certain quarters, and he has been equally as emphatic in his statements of determination to procure for the county unit a fairer trial through more rigid enforcement than it ever has had.

He believes this can be accomplished without the aid of the Anti-Saloon League, "my never want to hold another public office," said the Governor, "but when I leave this desk to give way to my successor as Governor that every man and woman and boy and girl who are in possession of reasoning power will say 'He certainly has been the Governor of Kentucky.'"

Job hunters in Kentucky just now are thicker than fleas in a hen house and quite as annoying to the people who have elected to office will hasten to keep these pledges and to inaugurate these reforms.

While he made no specific allusion to the subject of a revision of the taxing system which may require an extended or extra session of the General Assembly for effective consideration, Governor Stanley is not unmindful of the immensity of that task and will the Legislature not in convening at Frankfort on Jan. 4. It has been suggested to the Governor that he follow the example of President Woodrow Wilson and read his message to the members of the two Houses assembled in joint session, and he may do so.

That he does not intend to put his signature to any unnecessary or extravagant appropriation measure he indicated when he said: "To liquidate a heavy deficit, if possible, without increasing the burden of taxation, will require the greatest care and discretion in the appropriation and expenditure of public funds."

Concerning his determination to be a total abstainer during the time he is in office, and to exclude all intoxicating beverages from the table in the mansion, Governor Stanley said to the reporter the night before his inauguration:

"I am a vigorous, healthy man, ever fond of a good dinner and glass of wine, but I have determined to eschew the beverage, not because I believe that wine taken in moderation and temperance is harmful, but because I desire to set an example to the people of Kentucky that, however much I have been maligned and branded as a whisky drinker, and the tool of the whisky interests by men who have operated under a cloak of alleged state-wide prohibition, that I have a courage that is above their slander, and because I want it to be known and believed that every official act of mine shall be accomplished with a clear head."

Governor Stanley has let it be known that he will combat any attempt to embarrass his administration with a state-wide prohibition fight, such as has been

A Casket and Flank Trade.

How love laughs at locksmiths, and finds a way, when it is love of alcoholic beverages as well as when it is love of the Juliet or Hero, is illustrated in the conviction of the Tennessee Coffin & Casket Company, and one of its employees, at a Chattanooga, upon charges of shipping bottles of whiskey in coffin "without proper labeling."

There's a grim and solemn suggestiveness about the box which it is our common lot to fill that might be to many persons sufficient to make a coffin full of whisky an undesirable thing to receive. But extreme ly thirsty persons are not so easily diverted from the main purpose of their lives.

It was doubtless true that the coffins shipped by the Chattanooga consignors were coffins in a technical sense alone—mere long boxes full of booze—and that the consignees relished the juiciness of the best as much as they relished the juice of the corn which the "coffins" contained.

"It was the company's custom," contended the prosecution, "to inclose bottles of whisky to those who bought coffins." Not, however, in the way of premiums or as the equivalent of trading stamps or profit-sharing certificates. Persons ordering coffins for their customary use would hardly demand a bottle of whisky to close the bargain. But it must have been easy for the Tennessee Coffin & Casket Company to be filled with quarts to thousands of Tennesseans and residents of other States who regarded the container as a mere means of getting the stuff it contained, and well worth the price even if it were used as a pig trough.

Some one tells a sea tale in which a sailor was found drunk upon deck and confessed with a wink of humorous appreciation of his cleverness that he had "tapped the silent passenger," a corpse shipped in a sealed tin of rum to preserve it upon a long journey between the tropics and the point at which relatives of the deceased resided. So why should a thirsty customer of the Tennessee Coffin & Casket Co. balk at the suggestiveness of a long box stuffed full of bottles?—C.-J.

A guinea hen belonging to Mrs. Omer Shadady, at Cross Plains, stole her nest in the woods last summer and hatched a brood. When she came home with the flock a young quail was among the little guineas. This quail now full grown, has never left the flock of domestic fowls, and comes up every evening to roost alongside the mother guinea. The novel sight of a quail so leisely strolling about the Shadady premises excites frequent comment from visitors at their home.—Ver callies Republics.

WHAT CHANCE HAS KENTUCKY?

PEOPLE ARE ASKING QUESTIONS

Naturally no sane person cares "to jump out of the frying pan into the fire." Sane people always want to know, they are from Missouri and must be shown.

Since the matter of taking the State Superintendent of Public Instruction out of politics and of allowing him to succeed himself, has been widely discussed in the papers of the State, the sane people are asking themselves and other people questions. Some of them are asking, "If the office is taken out of politics and he is to succeed himself, will he be appointed by a board or will he be elected, and how?" Others are asking, "But if he is allowed to succeed himself in office mightn't a shrewd fellow get in and stay in for ever and ever?" These questions are the ones which every sane taxpayer and voter in the State should ask himself.

Before answering these very pointed questions for the sane people of the State, it should be stated, and stated emphatically, that people everywhere are extremely anxious to get the schools and the whole school system out of politics. The point which bothers the parent and voter is: what is the best method so that definite results will be accomplished? If the legislature which convenes this winter should pass favorably on the amendment eliminating the name, "State Superintendent of Public Instruction," from the Constitution, it would still have to be voted upon by the people of the State at a regular election. After the amendment had been passed both by the legislature and the people, the manner of selecting or electing a superintendent would be taken up by the legislature of the State.

If the people acting through their representatives in the legislature, still wished to elect the State Superintendent, it could be done on an "off year" when no State officers were being electd. In other words, it would not then be possible for him to be swept into office because he happened to be on the Republican or Democratic ticket. To make the necessity for an election at other than a regular State election clear, it need only be stated that nine out of every ten men who go to the polls, never know even the names of the men who are running for the office of State Superintendent. If anyone doubts the absolute accuracy of this statement, he should ask himself and nine other men the names of the two men for whom the people voted for State Superintendent last November.

A second plan for the securing of an efficient man for the most important position would be to have him appointed by a strong, non-partisan School Board. It must, however, be understood thoroughly that such a board would have to represent the mass of people of the whole State as well as the school men and women. In either of the above cases, it would always be to the distinct advantage of the State Superintendent to "make good" so that he might continue in office. Under the present system he must hold the office for four years then go back to teaching or he must use his position to secure for himself some other political office.

That the schools, and especially the rural schools, must be gotten out of politics goes without saying. The people and the legislators are sure to see this in a big, broad, patriotic way and carry the amendment. Afterward the legislature can surely be trusted to learn what other states are doing with this most important office and then decide what is best for the school children of the State. The time is now ripe to act, because the people and the men who will represent them at Frankfort this winter, will be more than willing to do anything in their power to further the interest of the children who can not help themselves.

WHY CHANGE DOCTORS?

MUST HURRY TO CATCH UP.

Kentucky is making progress with her present school system, but it is not nearly fast enough. She is so far down the line in the list of the states in educational matters that she must hurry even faster than she is now going to merely catch up with the main portion of the procession. The main obstacle to the rapid progress is the necessity for the changing of the Superintendent of Public Instruction every four years. No two school men, no matter how well equipped they may be for this most important position, can have exactly the same ideas and ideals. So, while a new Superintendent is striving to adjust himself to the work begun by the man leaving the office, or deciding what changes are to be made, the school machinery must at least slow down and time is lost.

There isn't a man, woman or child in Kentucky who doesn't wish to secure better rural schools and a more efficient school system. The biggest single thing they can do is to take the system out of politics. The next biggest thing is to allow the superintendent to succeed himself, if he has shown that he can really do constructive work. No one wishes the child-life of the state hampered or hurt by their having poor schoolhouses or a weak system. The Superintendent is not to blame because he is absolutely tied hand and foot by the Constitution of Kentucky. If he is set free, both the man and the system will be placed in a position to do real work for the school children of the state.

U. S. Senator Says Liquor Interests Have "Nationalized" Liquor Questions.

"I have been forced to the conclusion that the only effective way to deal with the liquor question is by and through the action of the national government," is the declaration of U. S. Senator Borah of Idaho, in reply to an inquiry from the state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League recently. "I say I have been forced to this conclusion because I am on general principles very much opposed to the national government taking over any work which can be done by and thru and within the states. The liquor interests have nationalized the question and experience shows that there can be no really effective method of treating it except from a national standpoint. The large distilleries and manufacturers of intoxicating liquors supply every state in the union from a particular manufacturing plant so that it becomes in every sense a matter which can be effectively controlled and regulated through the national government, which alone can deal with interstate matters.

National Problem in Every Sense.

"If I had felt that it could be dealt with by the states alone I would have much preferred to see it dealt with in that way. But I feel sure that it has passed beyond the control of the states and has become a national question in every sense, economically, commercially and politically. For these reasons, as a member of the sub-committee of the judiciary, I voted to report favorably the proposed amendment to the national constitution which was pending before Congress during the last session. Having made up my mind to the effect that I have, I shall of course continue to vote that way, as I never change my vote until I change my mind."

An Important Court Decision.

The United States Supreme Court has very recently handed down a decision holding that a man shipping liquor, without labelling it as such, from one state to another, may be prosecuted in either state. This decision is founded on the principle that the crime follows the shipment and that persons who are found making illegal shipments may be prosecuted in either state. This decision is one which can now be seen in his state, Governor Hatfield says:

"The law has been in effect long enough to be impregnated with the great results thus ed in the state of the destination as well as in the state of the origin of the shipment. It will make possible the prosecution of the offender in the dry State to which the shipment is sent and naturally gives greater assurance of conviction."

West Virginia's Transformation as Seen Through the Eyes of Its Governor.

Fortunate is that prohibition state which has a Governor who is wholeheartedly determined to enforce the law. Such a man is the Honorable Henry D. Hatfield, governor of the state of West Virginia. In an address not long ago in his own state he said: "I stand ready and willing to give the prohibition commissioner of this state and the local officials every support within my power, and if they find themselves incapable of controlling any situation, I stand ready to insure the full enforcement of the law—even to the extent of furnishing national guardsmen to act in conjunction with the civil authorities. The prohibition law must be enforced at any hazard or cost."

Of the results of prohibition as far obtained. By examination of the court records we find that felonies in counties where local option formerly prevailed have been reduced at least fifty per cent. What does this mean to the people? It has given birth to thousands of wives and mothers in our state who have heretofore been obliged to submit to lives of deprivation and desolation. It has preserved the homes of thousands of our citizens from degradation and want and brought to them happiness and sunshine."

John Barley Corn Responsible for Mental Disorders.

"Any effort to fight alcoholism will help us as much as it will help the criminologist and the charity worker, because it is not merely an individual problem but really one of communities," says Adolf Meyer, M. D. of Johns Hopkins Hospital, in an article in The Survey on "Organizing the Community for the Protection of Its Mental Life."

"What I feel most keenly is the necessity of organizing in our communities societies for total abstinence, to which it would be possible to join individuals who are slowly recovering from the effects of disease. Unless recovery of individuals in groups of normally living persons maintaining standards of total abstinence and providing social compensation for individuals, it is not often that they will resist for any length of time the attractions of alcohol and the attractions of destructive social companionship."

Dr. Meyer states in the course of his article that "in the much maligned state of Maine, there is absolutely no doubt that alcoholism is relatively much less frequent than in any other state of which I know."

He finds from personal investigation that "the nationalities that indulge largely in the social

CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge J. W. Cammack convened the December term of the Boone Circuit Court at 10 a. m., last Monday morning. Common-wealth's Attorney John J. Howe and all the other court officials were on hand, ready for duty. The first business was the organizing of the grand and petit jurors for the term.

The grand jury is composed of the following gentlemen: J. W. Kennedy, Foreman, J. M. Botts, W. C. Bondurant, R. L. Huey, J. A. Riddell, Butler Carpenter, Lawrence Chambers, J. H. Walton, Hiram Long, John Smith, L. T. Clore, Malchus Southern.

Petit Jury No. 1.—

Alonzo Gaines, Ralph L. Cason, W. A. Bullock, Lewis Terrell, W. M. Walton, Arnold-Bauser, Cam White, E. C. Garrison, J. O. Huson, Thomas Clore, Elmer Goodridge, C. S. Smith.

No. 2.—

Chas. Kelly, R. L. Green, C. F. Blunkbaker, Thos. Grant, Ezra Aylor, S. W. Hall, W. O. Rector, C. E. Clore, Holt White, Edward Rice, F. M. Shoshell, Leslie Sebree. Considerable business was disposed of during the day, with Circuit Clerk Alvin Steger, of Owen county, keeping the record, and Arthur C. Arnold, Circuit Clerk-elect, of Grant county, taking lessons as to how it is done. Mr. Arnold will take charge of his office the first of next month and he wants to get used to the judicial machinery when in action before he becomes a part thereof.

The grand jury adjourned Tuesday afternoon, having found five indictments, all for minor offenses.

This is Judge Cammack's last term of court, and he has left the docket around the district well cleaned, having worked hard with that in view, that his successor, Judge Gaines, might have an easier time until he is broken in.

The Huey will be called for trial Tuesday morning and by the middle of the afternoon the jury had been obtained for the trial and is composed of the following: Edward Rice, W. O. Rector, W. A. Bullock, F. M. Shoshell, Arnold-Bauser, Thomas Clore, Holt White, Cam White, Kirby Tanner, Owen Smith, Hubert White. The testator, James Linn Huey, was a widower and had no children. He lived in Covington for some time with his brother, Thomas A. Huey, to whom and his two sons, Jas. and Thomas, he willed his property, including to a considerable amount. The children of his other brothers and sisters desire the will set aside on the ground of undue influence. A large number of witnesses on each side have been summoned and the trial will consume all this week.

The respondents are represented by Rogers & Williams, and the contestants by O'Neil & Tolin.

Make Some Poor Person Happy.

Will you make some poor person happy between now and the first of January? It costs but little to do a good deed and it adds pleasure to the donor to scatter deeds of kindness. Many a well fed, well clothed child will have more toys than it can enjoy while in the neighborhood. There will be many a poor little ragged child with none, where mother must suffer because unable to buy even the cheapest toy for her loved one a little calico dress, a 25-cent pair of suspenders, a woman a pair of stockings will not miss the mark. Apples are cheap, yet many a poor child will go thru the holidays with none. Do a good deed and do less for those who have plenty. Do some one a good turn, you will feel proud of the act and probably some one else will catch the spirit and the happy smiles caused will be a pleasure to see. You will get credit up yonder. You will get the good feeling that comes after a good deed done here. You will not live always, you have done but little for those about you, turn over a new leaf and do good for awhile, and do not forget to buy a few of the Xmas seals and use them upon your letters.

HOPEFUL.

Jas. Waters is critically ill. Mrs. Linda Ross is visiting her son, Owen Ross. William Snyder and wife spent Sunday with Mr. Robt. Snyder. Henry Barlow and family spent Sunday with Mrs. Steve Robbins. Last Thursday Mr. Owen Ross had a "hog killing" time at his house.

Mrs. Callie Franks, of Latonia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. B. Johnson.

Miss Lois Beeman spent several days last week with Mrs. Chas. Hicks and Miss Lucy Wright in Covington.

All that was mortal of Aunt Patsy Tanner was consigned to the grave, last Friday. The funeral ceremonies were held at the house. Many friends attended, as she was a woman much loved and admired for her many virtues. The floral offerings were beautiful. She was 88 years of age and survived by two brothers, one sister, two children, eleven grandchildren and three great grandchildren. Sleep in peace.

Christmas Dinner

Thanking you for past patronage and wishing you a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Newton Sullivan, Jr
Burlington, Kentucky.

Mrs. H. C. Diers spent Monday in Cincinnati attending the funeral of her sister, Mrs. Gretchen Schultz, who died in New York City, Dec. 9th, in her 78th year.

Mrs. Schultz was a native of Germany and made her home in New York City, and crossed the ocean many times to visit relatives in the Faderland. She formerly resided in Cincinnati and often visited her kinpeople in Walton.

The interment was in Spring Grove cemetery.

L. T. Logsdon, assistant manager of the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse, spent part of last week here in the interest of the leaf tobacco trade shipments to Louisville, and made a fine impression.

Mr. Logsdon has been gradually building up the volume of shipments of leaf tobacco to Louisville from this section, and all who have shipped to him praise the treatment they received at his hands and say the market at the present time is really better than the Cincinnati market.

The Equitable Bank and Trust Company at the meeting of its board of directors last week declared a semi-annual dividend of four per cent, payable January 1st and will make the dividend an eight per cent to the stockholders in the future as the required surplus has been cared for as directed by the law. The earnings collected for the past twelve months amount to about fourteen thousand dollars. A full statement will be published in this paper as soon as it is completed.

A. Records Johnson has been elected secretary of the Walton Building and Loan Association, filling a vacancy caused by the resignation of J. C. McCallie, who was obliged to give up the position on account of his health.

Dr. Metcalf was very efficient in his work and extremely popular with the members of the association because of his affable nature and his untiring efforts to upbuild the interests, and he will be greatly missed.

Mr. Johnson, who has had considerable experience in the work, will, no doubt, give satisfaction and will be found at all times doing his very best to meet all of the requirements of his onerous position.

Married—Hugh F. Vest and Miss Geraldine Moore were united in the holy bonds of wedlock at Latonia at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. T. C. Crum of the Baptist church, Dec. 13.

The groom is a resident of Verona and a most exemplary young man of industrious, moral habits. He is son of Mrs. M. L. Vest, the Walton Atty. His charming bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Douglas Moore of Big Bone Springs and is a very pretty and lovable young lady who is a prize that was worth the winning and will be a helpmeet in the home.

The young couple have a host of friends who wish them a long life of happiness and prosperity, and Mr. and Mrs. Vest will make their home at Verona.

The farmers' institute held here last Friday and Saturday was highly attended owing to the short notice given of the meeting and the very disagreeable weather on the second day. Some excellent work was done by the efficient instructors, C. L. Clayton, of Oakland City, Indiana, and W. B. Anderson, of Velpin, Ind., who imparted much valuable information along practical lines, and those who attended felt greatly benefited by suggestion and the personal contact with these gentlemen who appear to be strongly enlisted in the work.

Had more time been given to the notice of the meetings the attendance would have been much greater. Messrs. Clayton and Anderson held the institute at Warsaw the first of this week.

Henry Taylor, of Hamilton, was a caller at the Recorder office yesterday. He is a witness in the Huey will case now on trial. His office is in Lexington and he is only when he has to make them.

The witnesses who are attending circuit court are having rough weather in which to go and come—cold but dry.

Prospects for a big snow were never better.

GUN-POWDER.

Hirb Rouse has moved to the Ollie Rouse property.

E. K. Tanner and wife spent last Friday night in Covington.

L. E. Tanner went to Covington on business last Wednesday.

Chas. Clarkson did some plowing last week for next year's crop.

Mrs. Martha V., better known as Aunt Patsy Tanner, died at her home near Hopeful church last Tuesday.

She was 83 years of age and was a native of Virginia, and a host of relatives to mourn her departure.

The funeral services were conducted at the residence last Friday by Rev. Willford Mitchell. She had been a consistent member of Hopeful church for a great many years. After the services the remains were buried in the family lot in Hopeful cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Frances Jane Tanner, 4th child of Henry T. and Sarah (Henshaw) Snyder, was born in Madison county, Virginia, Oct. 15, 1832, and entered into rest Dec. 5, 1915, aged 80 years, one month and 20 days. She was united in marriage to John H. Tanner, Dec. 12, 1852. To them nine children were born, three daughters and six sons; Leahy Medline, who died in infancy, was born Dec. 15, 1838, and in 1886 and the following who survive their mother: Benj. Harvey, Julius Spencer, Robt. Henry, Joel Angus, Mrs. Sarah Frances Clutterback, Mrs. Lena E. Keller, of Hillsboro, Ill., and James Perry Tanner. Mrs. Tanner was one of a family of thirteen children, all of whom have preceded her in death except Geo. Angus Snyder, near by, and Mrs. Elizabeth Vonnell, of Virginia. Her husband, John H. Tanner, died Dec. 12, 1895. She leaves 19 grand-children and nine great-grand children. She united with Hopeful church by the rite of baptism Nov. 29, 1852, and lived a life of modest trust in her Savior. The funeral services were conducted at Hopeful church, Tuesday, by Rev. Ezra Keller, D. D., of Hillsboro, Ill. After a very impressive service the remains were laid in the grave by the side of her husband in the Hopeful cemetery. Besides her immediate family she leaves a large circle of friends and relatives to mourn her departure.

IDLEWILD.

St. Anna's, won a number of ribbons at Covington corn show.

Mrs. Anna Gaines is confined to the house with a badly sprained knee.

Mrs. W. T. Berkehire spent Monday near Bullittsville with Mrs. Ida C. Balsly.

An unusually large number of our prominent citizens attended court, Monday.

The heavy sleet Saturday made it very unpleasant for all who have to go to work.

Misses Lulu Edwards and Mary Roberts spent the week-end with their friend, Mrs. Bernard C. Gaines.

E. O. Norman and Mrs. Norman and children were recent guests of his sisters Mesdames J. S. Asbury and W. B. Houston.

The fire Sunday night that destroyed $20,000 worth of staves in the Lawrenceburg cooper shop was plainly seen from this side of the river.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Grant, of Burlington; Mrs. Enos Barratt, of Lawrenceburg; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Grant and Master Charles Edward Grant, of Limaburg, were guests of Mrs. B. B. Grant, Sunday.

The establishment of the dyo works at Clay City has put new life into that little town. It is estimated that at least 300 men have been added to the population. There are no vacant houses and the hotels are filled to overflowing. —Winchester Democrat.

Were Pleased with the Corn Show.

Quite a number of Boone county people attended the Corn Show in Covington last Thursday and Friday, and were pleased greatly with the manner in which they were treated by the Covington business men.

Hog Cholera Stamped Out.

Hog cholera has been stamped out in Bellevue neighborhood. W. Arnold was the heaviest loser, about all of his hogs having died before Dr. O. S. Crisler was sent to the scene by the State. He soon put a quietus on the disease.

Promoted.

Mr. R. H. Smith, who, for a year past, has been district manager in Cincinnati of the Industrial, Health and Accident Department of the Great Eastern Casualty Company, of New York, has been promoted to General Agent. Mr. Smith is regarded as one of the most successful health and accident insurance men in Ohio, and is a brother-in-law of Mr. Root, C. McGlasson, of this county.

Has Been Rushing the Work.

Contractor Louen has been pushing the work of constructing the Burlington and Florence pike to get as much as possible done before bad weather interferes with favorable to him this fall, but he may have to knock off for several weeks most any time now, as weather conditions are very uncertain at this time of the year.

Enormous Quantities of Wheat.

Enormous quantities of wheat have been purchased in the Northwest for delivery in Chicago December contracts. Advances from Minneapolis say that as rapidly as the wheat is received there it is being shipped to Chicago, and that a large amount is leaving the stocks at Chicago are now assured. Never in the history of the Chicago market have the stocks of wheat been as small at this season of the year as are now shown.

Government will not Make Repairs.

Miss Helen Gurney, Postmistress of Erlanger, who recently thwarted the efforts of yeggmen to plunder the postoffice at Erlanger, has been informed that the safe, which was blown, must be repaired at her expense. Congressman Rouse, who brought the matter before the authorities in Washington, was advised that there was no fund from which the cost of making repairs to the wrecked safe could be taken. An effort is being made, however, to secure the plucky Postmistress a reward in the event the men under arrest are convicted. The first sleet of the season was that which put in its appearance Friday night.

A Big Tobacco Deal.

Lexington, Dec. 11.—Clarence Le Bus, President of the Burley Tobacco Company, has closed a deal with T. H. Kirk, of Cincinnati, by which more than a quarter million pounds of tobacco is transferred at a reported average of nine cents. The consignment of 250 hogsheads represents all of Le Bus' holdings of old tobacco. This is the best price for a crop at private sale reported this season. Heavy offerings are expected on local breaks Monday, as rain has been falling ten hours.

Hogs Killed by Snakes.

The Georgetown News says that J. M. Palmer shipped a car load of fat hogs from there to the Cincinnati market last Thursday and when the car was unloaded at the latter place, it was found that eight head of hogs were dead. Upon examination of the car a large copper head snake was found lying dead on the floor. When Mr. Palmer loaded the car he put in a lot of old bedding and Mr. Palmer put in fresh bedding without removing what was already in the car, and the snake was evidently coiled up in the old bedding when the car was loaded. The hogs must have stirred the reptile from its hiding place and then it was bitten by a snake, resulting in the snake killing eight of the hogs before being conquered by the disturbers of its secluded abode.

Large Sale of Personal Property.

The sale of the personal estate of Miss Theresa Lassing, deceased was held on two very disagreeable days, last Saturday and Monday, but the attendance was fairly large and among the crowd were many buyers, consequently the prices realized were very satisfactory. The largest crowd was in attendance last Monday, there being present many people who came from quite a distance. Monday's sale was confined to the household goods, books, jewelry, etc. The library of about one thousand volumes, many of the books being by standard authors, brought close to $200. The jewelry brought handsome prices, the amount realized for the diamond ring being approximately $1,000. The cut-glass was all purchased by S. C. Hicks, who paid a long price for it. Had the weather been fair the sale would have been immense.

Dixie Highway Meeting.

A fairly good sized crowd attended the Dixie Highway meeting held at the court house Monday afternoon. Mr. S. W. Gilbreath of Indianapolis, Indiana was the first to address the meeting, his good results to be obtained in showing the local benefits to be derived from the construction of the highway. He was given close attention throughout the address which made a good impression and left many of his hearers entertaining a more favorable opinion of the proposed Dixie Highway than they had heretofore. Mr. Gilbreath has made a close study of the proposition from every angle and brings out the good results to be obtained in a clear cut manner, and is prepared to answer any intelligent question propounded. The other speakers were William O'Neal, J. C. Clore, D. E. Castleman and J. G. Tomlin in the order named, each dwelling upon the numerous benefits derived from the Dixie Highway when it becomes a reality.

Other meetings will be held in this county to develop the interest that has begun to be manifested.

This part of the country has been experiencing quite a cooling off spell, the mercury going as low as 18 Tuesday and Wednesday mornings. A sleet fell last Friday night, and during the genuine winter has been present.

KENTUCKY LEADER IN GOOD ROADS

Began Building Macadamized Roads as Far Back as the Eighteenth Century

STATE AID LAW IN 1914

In 1908 the General Assembly of Kentucky Passed a Constitutional Amendment Permitting the State to Lend its Credit to the Counties for Rebuilding and Maintenance.

Frankfort—Kentucky was one of the first states in the union to establish state aid for road construction. As early as 1810 the General Assembly of Kentucky provided for the opening of roads to the Virginia line and began the construction of macadamized roads in 1820.

Prior to 1840, Kentucky had spent more than $2,000,000 in the construction of macadamized roads which were built on rights of way sixty feet wide. These roads were located on light grades and easy curves, and were graded twenty-four to thirty feet between ditches. Telford foundations between sixteen and twenty-four feet were used with a good macadam surface. This work was under the supervision of a state engineering department, consisting of a state highway engineer, at a salary of $5,000 per year, with a corps of assistants at salaries ranging from $1,100 to $2,500 per annum. Many of these roads are yet in a splendid state of preservation, and are rendering substantial service to the communities through which they pass.

However, the policy of internal improvement was discontinued prior to 1850, owing to the financial condition of the treasury, and a change in political parties, and it was not until 1908 that any attempt was made to revive a state system of highways.

In 1908 the General Assembly of Kentucky passed a constitutional amendment, permitting the state to lend its credit to the counties for road building, and to provide for the construction and maintenance of public highways.

A highway department was established to consist of the Commissioner of Public Roads and such assistants as the Governor might deem advisable, with an appropriation of not to exceed $20,000 per annum from the automobile license tax which had been accruing from 1910 as a state road fund.

The department was organized and Robert C. Terrell was appointed the first commissioner. The duties of the department were purely advisory, and while the counties were required to request plans, specifications and estimates of cost for the road and bridge work, which exceeded $500 in cost, they were not compelled to use the plans and specifications thus prepared. It was not until after the state aid law passed by the General Assembly in 1914 became operative that the state was really in a position to lend material aid to the counties. Although a great deal was accomplished by the commissioner and his assistants prior to 1910, it was only, as stated above, advisory, which in many instances it was hard to get the county officials to take advantage of the engineering assistance offered, but in 1914 the general assembly passed a law levying a five-cent tax on each $100 worth of taxable property in the state of Kentucky. The law further provided that the money should be distributed to the counties based upon the amount of money levied and collected in each county for roadbuilding, and that no county should receive in any one year more than two per cent of the total road fund. The department immediately set to work in the spring of 1915 to secure the co-operation of the counties in building a system of roads as laid out in the bill passed by the General Assembly, which provided that the roads should connect up the county seat of each county of the Commonwealth with the county seats of the adjoining counties by the most direct and practical routes, and the county seats of border counties with the state line on the most direct and practical routes leading from said county seats to the county seats of the adjoining counties in the adjacent states.

Why not nationalize highways as well as national waterways?

KENTUCKY'S STATE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC ROADS

(By Hon. James B. McCreary, Governor of Kentucky.)

A State Department of Public Roads was advocated by me when I was a candidate for Governor of Kentucky. After I was elected I recommended in my message to the General Assembly the enactment of a law providing for a Department of Public Roads, and an appropriation and a proper and comprehensive act was passed.

The people of Kentucky are in favor of good roads. They know that good roads mean a decrease in the expense of hauling products to market and in getting goods home from the place of purchase. They know that good roads increase the value of farms, mean better access to schools and to churches, and better and more attractive environments.

The Commissioner of Public Roads, appointed by me has been active and successful in his organization. He has sent bulletins and literature and has furnished plans and specifications and estimates of cost for many bridges and made many surveys for sites, assisted in road and bridge building, and the sentiment in favor of good public roads has been greatly strengthened.

The law creating the department set aside from the license tax on automobiles, which constitutes the State Road Fund, the amount which has been necessary to make the road service efficient.

The new road law in Kentucky has met but little opposition, and where it has been given a fair and impartial trial by county officials, and the county road engineers have been given an opportunity to perform their duties unhampered, it has been entirely satisfactory.

The State of Kentucky no doubt will continue the progressive policies so successfully instituted. A system of good roads is the basis of the country's progress and upon this largely depends its material development and prosperity. Public roads have been compared to the veins and arteries in the human body, by which the circulation is carried on, and when they are clogged, or are not in good condition, the usual functions are impeded and vitally diminished.

I am in favor of the United States Government aiding, to a proper extent, in the building of roads. Large amounts of money are appropriated annually by Congress for rivers and harbors, for irrigation and for government buildings, and in the same line Congress should appropriate money to aid in the construction of public roads.

This can never be an ideal country to live in until it is interlaced with a network of highways and the highways so marked as to direct the traveler, which road to take to reach his destination.

A man who is opposed to road improvement is worth about as much to a locality as a safety razor is to a colored man at a Georgia picnic.

Never can we have excellent roads until we adopt a patrol system of repair and maintenance.

MEATLESS SOUPS.

The oyster plant is now in season and makes a most delicious soup. Cut the salinity into thin slices after scraping well. Cover with a quart of water, to 12 good-sized roots. Cook gently for an hour until the plant is tender; add a quart of milk, two table-spoonfuls of butter and salt and pepper. Serve with oyster crackers.

The roots are so discoloring to the hands that the fingers should be well wrapped while preparing. Rubber gloves are best, but a cloth wrapped around the fingers exposed will do very well.

Clear Tomato Soup.—Add a pint of water to a quart of stewed tomatoes. Add a slice of onion, a half a bay leaf, a dash of celery salt and a few celery tops, a teaspoonful of salt, a chopped green pepper. Cook together for 15 minutes, put through a sieve, add two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter rubbed together, or cornstarch will make a clearer soup. Cook until the starch is well cooked. Serve with squares of toasted bread.

Cream of Potato Soup.—This is a soup that should be better known; is an economical and wholly satisfying one. Pare three medium-sized potatoes; cover them with boiling water; boil five minutes, drain and throw away the water. Cover with a pint of boiling water; add a slice of onion, a bit of celery and a bay leaf. Cover and cook slowly until the potatoes are tender. Put through a sieve, add a quart of milk, two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, rubbed together; salt and pepper to season. Reheat and serve piping hot.

Turnip Soup.—Put a tablespoonful of butter, one sliced onion and three slices of carrot into a saucepan and toss over the heat until the onion is yellow, then add four good-sized turnips which have been peeled and the meat chopper. Cover and let simmer without water over slow heat. There should be a pint of pulp. After 20 minutes add a quart of milk, two tablespoonfuls of blended butter and flour, a half teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet, salt and pepper and serve with croutons.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. BELLERS, Acting Director of
Sunday School Course of Moody Bible
Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 19

FALL AND CAPTIVITY OF ISRAEL.

LESSON TEXT—M. Kings 17: 1, 18.

OLDEN TEXT.—He that after being repeatedly hardened his neck shall surely be destroyed.—Prov. 29: 1.
In the sweep of our six years' cycle of study we prefer to consider this lesson first and use the Christmas story (Luke 2: 1-20) to illustrate the love of God which Israel (the last ten tribes) so basely outraged ere it passed into oblivion.

I. The Stiff-Necked People, vv. 1-13.

The fact (v. 6) of Israel's captivity has always appealed to the interest and the imaginations of men. The cause of the captivity was threefold:

(1) They "had sinned" (v. 7). It was not a single offense but a course of action which was performed (a) openly, "walked" (v. 8). For 250 years following Solomon's reign they had been openly idolatrous and trespassed upon God's grace. (b) "Secretly" (v.
9). Hosea's reign was the same as that of his 18 predecessors. Doubtless he was a good diplomat and politician, though his vacillation between Egypt and Assyria brought ruin, but in God's sight the secret acts and practices of the people were open and known (Ps. 129: 1-12; Heb. 5: 12).

Many today do in secret things "that were (are) not right." A clearer line of demarcation between the church and the world is sadly needed. (3)
They were consecrated to evil (vv.
10, 17). To cover our sins is not to cover (Prov. 28: 13); but if we confess our sins God's Son will cover them by the forgiveness of his atonement (Ps. 32: 1-5; 1 John 1: 9). Israel cared not, however, for his atonement, despite the fact it was that "brought them up out of the land of Egypt." It is passing strange that Israel should so fully violate the express commands of God (Lev. 26: 1; Deut. 28: 31; Ex. 20: 3-5, etc.). Some claim they did not possess the law, it being of a later date; a self-justification, but it is foolish proposition, but even so, how can men of our time violate so many of the plain precepts of the word of God? Does this prove that the Bible does not exist? The answer to this query is a sufficient answer to the destructive critics. Israel "sets up idols" (v. 10) and "burnt sacrifice" (see Deut. 12: 31) which things they did "to provoke the Lord to anger." (3) They abandoned themselves to evil. As though to remove all possibility of reformation they had not "served idols" (v. 12) but they sold themselves to do that which was evil" (v. 17).

II. The Sovereign God, vv. 14-18.

God's character and will had been fully set before the nation (Ex. 20:
2-8). Repeated warnings (v. 13) had been given by faithful prophets, also repeated forecasts yet Israel (v.
14) willful, they "would not hear" (v.
14), but deliberately followed in their fathers' footsteps. (2) Proud and vain
(vv. 14, 15) and (3) utterly abandoned
(v. 17), and hence must receive the judgment of God's righteous anger (see Ex. 20), or else God is not righteous. He repeatedly sought to turn them aside, but they slew his faithful prophets (Matt. 21: 33-35). God is calling in mercy with long suffering in this present evil age; unbeliever in God and his word is still prevalent; skepticism and loose morals everywhere abound; and when will they and call forever? (Prov. 29: 1; 1 Pet.
3: 9-10).

III. The Savior of Men, Luke 2: 20.

God's love for Israel was manifest (made plain) through his loving acts and the messages of warning proclaimed by his prophets. But we have a more marvelous revelation of his love in the person of his Son whose birthday we are about to observe.
Samaria lost its "crown of pride," but we may receive a crown of righteousness as the "sons of God" (John 1: 12; 1 Tim. 4: 8), but not so unless we obey (John 14: 23) his word.

Let us therefore take up the angelic praise (1) "Glory to God in the highest;" highest heavens, highest degree and quality of praise of him who is infinitely wise and loving.

(2) "On earth peace" with God, with man, in the individual heart and among the nations.

Peace of conscience because of sins forgiven, in fact, all blessings, happiness and prosperity because of peace due to victory over sin which is the destroyer of peace.

(3) "God will toward men," those whom God will well pleased, and God has good will only toward all men.

He loved sinful Israel and he loves us so that he "gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth need not perish but have everlasting life."
Even as the shepherds "found" the Savior (v. 16) so may all men who truly seek him (Heb. 11: 6; Luke 19: 10).

What better can we do on Christmas Sunday than openly to give God our best gift, our hearts' supreme love and devotion in return for his greatest gift to men?

Let us remember that to ignore grace will not set aside nor violate the judgment of sin.

Few Chinch Bugs Next Year.

The ranks of the chinch bugs have been so depleted and broken up by the heavy rains and the fungus disease that they will probably not appear in damaging numbers next year, according to T. J.
Talbert, of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

The field observations made last spring in different parts of the State showed an unusually large number of bugs and they indicated a more serious outbreak of the pest. Had it not been for the unusually wet season the chinch bug might have done a great deal more damage to grain crops than rains and floods.

The reports of farmers and the field observations from all parts of the State, made during August and September show that the chinch bugs are not numerous enough to do any serious harm the coming year.

Unfortunately the Hessian fly has not suffered so much and seems likely to cause great damage next year in many localities in which wheat was sowed too early.

"Like father, like son," says the old saw, but a girl may like the son without having any use for the old gentleman.

Among the things that are sometimes said to be true are good intentions.

STANLEY'S GOOD ROAD POLICY

The Address of Governor A. O. Stanley, Before Ky. Association, Sept. 15, 1915

COUNTRY MORE ATTRACTIVE

"Back to the Country" Problem Will Never be Solved Until the Country is Made More Attractive—Build Roads and You Will Lose None of the Sweetness of the Farm.

Louisville—Address of Governor A. O. Stanley before the Kentucky Good Roads Association, on September 15, 1915.

Ladies and Gentlemen: I am deeply grateful to my good friend, Bob McBryde, for his very kind reference to me. We should all be grateful to him for his years of tireless, patient and unrequited toil in behalf of this great movement, without expecting, without receiving, any other recompense than the gratitude of his countrymen and the well-earned debt of his country. With tongue and pen he has presented with marked ability every reason which can be assigned for this great work, and he has answered every objection which the ignorant or penurious might advance. The people of Kentucky have yet to learn the debt they owe this great journalist for a great work done.

I am not here today to attempt to entertain you with anything that approaches a formal address. I am not here to make a speech; if I am elected Governor of Kentucky, my time will not be given to saying things, but to doing them. (Applause) This is in its essence a matter of business, as well as sentiment, and to the fiscal side of this problem I shall in the main address my few remarks.

You cannot build roads, however advisable it may be, without money. To say that you are in favor of good roads is like saying you are in favor of good health, or good morals, good atmosphere, good looks, or good anything else. Nobody not a driving fool favors good roads just as he favors good health, or good weather. We all favor good roads, but we do not sense enough to travel over them. The question is, not whether it is desirable to have better highways in Kentucky, but how we shall obtain them. We all want them if we can afford them, because we must buy and pay for these roads ourselves. We will receive some aid from the Federal Government, but the Federal Government and the State Government alike tax the people for the money, so at least every dollar that is put in good roads comes directly or indirectly out of the pockets of the people who enjoy them. Then the question to which an intelligent citizen should first address itself is, not shall we donate, but should we invest the money toward this good work? If you go out to get money to build good roads on the same principle that you go to get money to educate the child, or to save the husband, or to build many miles of road. To get this money, you must in a way, take it from the people, with their consent, by taxation. But the people are not going to tax themselves to build the roads unless they are convinced that it is a good investment. And whenever the people find that they are making money by expending money upon the roads you will get the money just as quickly as you would secure it from a farmer: you have convinced that he would make money by buying an addition of 1,000 acres to his farm, that is for sale nearby. There is no trouble to induce men to spend money where they are certain or reasonably certain of a safe return. How is the expenditure of many thousands of dollars for good roads a safe investment?

Money and Results. I am separating it from its moral and aesthetic, its sentimental side. I am talking to you about the propriety of expending money for roads as I would talk to a farmer about the propriety of expending money for land. I would talk to the manufacturer of the propriety of expending money for machinery. As I would talk to the mine owner for spending money for a tipple, or an option upon so many acres of coal land. A great mistake that farmers have made is in not making a business-like calculation as to the cost of production, which bears no relation to the advisability of constructing good roads. A short time ago Charles L. Schwab, former president of the United States Steel Corporation and now president of the Bethlehem Corporation, the most gifted of all the great industrial masters of finance, made this startling statement: "One-third of the cost of the production of all steel products is the cost of transportation," and one of the secrets of Schwab's phenomenal success was that he never calculated the cost of anything made of steel from a needle to a thousand tons of armor plates, that he did not calculate the cost of laying it down, or of transporting it to the place of use, or to the consignee. The farmer does not calculate. He calculates the cost of the production in a rough way, by taking cost of the land, taxes, labor, and tools. When he calculates what it cost him to get in fifty bushels of wheat on his wagon or a thousand bushels of corn in his bin completes his calculation. But he has not estimated the cost of that article to its entirety, for no man comes to his bin for corn or to the threshing for his grain. Until he has calculated the cost of transportation he has not made an accurate estimate of the cost of production. What is the actual value of a free public highway? Let us see—four good horses and a wagon for example with four horses at $150 apiece, $600; the cost of shoeing and harness is to be considered, the whole will cost not less than $1,000, adding in the cost of maintaining these horses at $300 a month, or $3,600 a year and you have to add that to the original cost. In six years your thousand and horses and wagon is gone, as they will be worn out. The maintenance will cost you not less than $600 a year—$2.00 per day. We may say that the same team will do double the work over a macadam road as they will do over a dirt road. So that the farmer in the item of four horse team, wagon and driver saves at least one dollar per day by the use of macadam road. When the farmers have calculated the saving of one item of transportation, the taking of their products to the market, leaving out the pleasure of traveling over the macadam roads to himself and to his family, leaving out the advantages to the children in attending school, and his family attending church, leaving out the features of bringing him closer to the market or to the mill on the basis of dollars and cents, there is no better investment to the producer than in the making of a cheap and convenient means of bringing the farmers' commodities to the market.

GOVERNOR A. O. STANLEY

But let us take a broader and higher view. Every man who casts his ballot in the hope of receiving some pecuniary or personal benefit, either in emolument of office or some pecuniary advantage is a menace. By that I mean that the man who votes simply to keep up some political organization the man who votes at the call of a boss, the man who votes for money in hand is a menace to the liberty of a free people.

This government rests upon the disinterested devotion to high ideals of citizenship. It is the foundation upon which the republic rests because a majority absolutely rules in this country. And whenever that majority ceases to be honest this government will topple like a house of cards.

What has preserved this government for a hundred and fifty years or more? I will tell you: The simple citizen seated in a cane bottom chair on a rag carpet before an open fire place, with a Bible on his knees and his family grouped about him, his head bowed simply and reverently asking God to guide him through the night and arising in the fear of that same God at dawn to take up the simple tasks of the day. He votes of ac thought of profit to himself, but for the good of his family and the honor of his country and the glory of his God. This is the power upon which this republic rests and must forever rest.

Now we talk about this simple life, its high ideals, and its noble purposes, and yet there is in Kentucky a continual exodus from the country to the town. I make no warfare upon the city. I have lived in towns the most of my life, but what I mean to say, that what we need is more good people on the farms in the country. It will cheapen the costs of living in town. It will bring more customers, and a better life and new capital to our great cities.

It is an inevitable instinct for men to seek the society of their fellows, and rather as we have gathered here today in great multitudes. It is as natural as for partridges to gather in coveys in the field, or birds in flocks in the sky. It is essential to the happiness, the mental and moral welfare of mankind, just so much as food or clothing. The thing that has destroyed rural life, the thing that has destroyed the mental and moral welfare of mankind, just so much as food or clothing, is the isolation, the loneliness and isolation of life in the country. Our girls and boys who live in rural districts are literally marooned in the winter without access to the postoffice, the church or the school, or to the doctor in time of sickness, or to the store for the bare necessities of life in any other way than on a mule, belly deep in the mire. Our boys and girls simply will not be kept from the farm, despite the miles from any town under such conditions, however much you may talk about the noble life of the country. It is too often the most lonesome existence on earth. If you wish to live in the country and bring up your family around you, if you wish them blessed by the things which are good and sweet in rural life, then you must give them the pleasant things of life in the city.

Build good roads to the city, you will lose none of the seclusion and sweetness of the country. The sunniness and dew and the landscape are still there, the fertile fields and the lowing herds, and the scent of new mown hay, and the silent benediction of the evening are still yours. With good roads and automobile—if you cannot get an automobile, borrow a Ford—the wife and her boys and girls can go to church, they can go to the fair, they can go to places of amusement, they have the advantage of the pleasures of the city, and you have not been deprived of your country home or anything that makes it desirable or lovely. You will never solve the question of "back to the country" until you have made the country more attractive. You cannot keep your family in the country with ten or twenty miles of impassable dirt roads between them and the things they want for nine months in the year.

Increase in Prosperity. The country will be happier, more thickly inhabited if the roads were improved, and the city will finally increase in prosperity whenever you unite the two by macadam roads.

Both political parties—I am not here to talk politics—have condemned the contract labor system; both parties have told you that they are in favor of employing convicts upon the road. Now the counties have the right to employ whom they please with the money they raise themselves, and it is a vexed question to what extent, where the state can force the convict labor upon the county, as it must, more or less, in competition with free labor. In Edmondson county, especially, we have an unlimited deposit of rock asphalt, a material that will cover your macadam roads with waterproofing a thousand times more indestructible than oil; a substance, hard, yet elastic, that is as enduring as marble, and yet this vast and priceless deposit today is reached only by dirt roads that are almost impassable. This is a disgrace to Kentucky. I would see, and I hope to see, the labor of convicts, as well as others, employed in the development of these great quarries. I hope to see, the greatest road-making material ever known, spread over five thousand miles of boulevard all over Kentucky from the mountains to Mills Point.

I could talk to you for a week upon this subject. Oh, it means so much to Kentucky as a state. There is much to expect from the development of good roads. No other state in this union has such a variety and wealth of undeveloped resources; more coal than Pennsylvania; more hardwood than any other commonwealth; a greater variety of products than any other on this earth. Why is it that the wealth of the mountain and the wealth of the plain are not developed? It is because the people of the mountains cannot reach the wealth of the plains, and the people of the plains cannot avail themselves of the wealth of the mountains because of the cost of getting from one to the other. This is eliminated by connecting them by great highways. It will increase the fertility of the soil and the richness of the mines and the vast wealth of the forests.

Upon this great movement rests the happiness and the prosperity of the greatest people on earth, the people who live and expect to die in old Kentucky. God bless her.

A Pure Seed Law Needed

At the approaching session of the Legislature there will be an opportunity for the party in power to do the Kentucky farmers "a good turn." It should be done ungrudgingly and while the job is in hand it should be done thoroughly. Kentucky needs a seed law to protect buyers of field seeds from losses incurred through buying, in a highly competitive and unguarded market, seeds that are adulterated or without vitality.

There is a joker in the existing well appearing seed law which makes it impossible to convict any seed dealer unless it can be proved that he willfully and knowingly swindled the buyer. In justice to seedmen it should be said that there are perhaps not many cases of willful and deliberate fraud. But as long as European laws protect European buyers from inferior adulterated or dead field seeds of European or foreign production, and while there are some States in America which have made fair progress in the elimination of inferior seeds, Kentucky, without protection, is in a fair way to receive and plant a vast amount of seed that could not be sold in States whose legislation upon this subject is more advanced than that of Kentucky.

Federal Government agents, under instructions with which the farmers, assuredly, have no cause to quarrel, are telling Kentucky farmers that it is important to select and save their own seed corn, and risky to trust to a supply from a seed dealer's bin of shelled corn for the year's crop. If that is true, should not and need not, be true. And if it is true that it behooves the farmer to select his seed corn, he should select his seed corn from a reliable source. Shall he go about selecting his seed corn, his grass and other seed which he has not produced and which he cannot judge as to quality by appearance? If he has the time, the facilities and the requisite knowledge of how it should be done he may test samples, but the farmer who sticks a shingle nail through his galluses where the button was torn off in yesterday's strenuous war and strikes out before daylight with a lantern hasn't time to run a seed-testing plant in the guest room to provide himself with protection which the lawmakers can provide, and which is provided in Europe and in parts in America. His case should be investigated by the Legislature. The experience of States which have enacted laws better than Kentucky's should be considered.

A good seed law is valuable to every seed dealer who is honest and wide awake. It is not antagonistic to the interests of progress, it should aid the farmer by eliminating trash from the market, and by eliminating the necessity for competing in the matter of price with the dealer who sells worthless stock at a shade below the value of seed that will return the planter a profit. It weeds from the field of competition the dishonest dealer, always an annoyance to his more careful and sincere competitor as well as a source of loss to his customers.—C. J.

To Re-District the State.

Louisville, December 16—Democratic State Senators and Representatives from Louisville and Jefferson county have been conferring with a view to introducing before the next General Assembly, which meets in January, of a bill to re-district the state of Kentucky. The constitution provides for the re-districting of the state every ten years into 100 legislative districts and thirty-eight senatorial districts. The state has not been re-districted since 1893, however, and many inequalities exist in the population of the districts.

ROAD BUILDING

CONVICTS AS ROAD BUILDERS

Need for Co-operation Between State Highway and State Prison Departments is Outlined.

"The state highway department should hire convicts from the state prison department in exactly the same way as it would hire free laborers, and at the same price per day. During the hours of work the men should not be thought of as convicts, but simply as employees of the highway department. No payment should be made for a single hour not worked and a man discharged should be removed at once and permanently, while the highway department should have no responsibility for any authority over the convicts at any time nor in any manner except to conduct their work or to discharge them."

This need for co-operation between the state highway and state prison departments is strongly urged in a report made to the New York state highway department by David J. Shorer, who was in charge of the convict road work in Green county, New York, during the summer of 1914.

Mr. Shorer's practical experience has demonstrated the importance of the recommendation for co-operation between the highway and prison departments in conducting convict road work, which the national committee on prisons and prison labor has advocated for a number of years and has been instrumental in embodying into the laws of the state of West Virginia.

The work in Green county, New York, was carried on under most difficult conditions. The men arrived at the camp before the organization and equipment were completed. They were sent there without regard to their suitability for the work and almost one-fourth were totally unfit and had to be returned to the prison. Arrangements for feeding the men were unsatisfactory, while winter made efficient work impossible fully two weeks before they were removed from the camp.

In spite of these difficulties Mr. Shorer reports that, taking the 50 convicts who were retained at the camp, and comparing them with 51 civilians also working at the camp, the convicts averaged better than the civilians.

Improved Road in New York.

lans and as good as any ordinary contract gang. Under proper conditions he maintains there will be no difficulty in using convicts for this type of work with good results for the money expended.

The national committee on prisons and prison labor has specifically attention to this report and its conclusion that two factors are essential to the success of convict road work. Responsibility for administration must be placed in the hands of those competent to meet it, and the men encouraged through a system of rewards so that they feel they have something to gain through good work.

LOSS CAUSED BY ROAD THIEF

Farmer Forced to Haul Small Loads and Deprives Him of Opportunity to Sell Products.

The bad-road thief forces you to haul small loads; drive slowly; wrench and twist the life out of your horse, harness and vehicle, often breaking and damaging the latter until great and expensive delays are occasioned. It also steals your opportunity to dispose of your farm when you wish to sell, for no man will pay as much for a farm bordered by a poor road system as he will for one with a well-kept highway, and some will not buy a farm at all when the time and money which the loss of time and money, under the above named conditions exact, makes it imperative that you open all the drain ditches along the road, drag this silent, notorious thief to death with the King road drag.

The total sales of turkeys in the Carlisle market to date amount to approximately $10,000, at 10 cents a pound on foot. Several women in Nicholas county sold doves of from fifty to sixty-five turkeys. The stork is also dropping the Christmas turkey market opened there December 1 and it is reported that there is yet a fairly good supply of turkeys. The Thanksgiving turkey sold in the Thanksgiving market. The indications are that the Christmas prices will be about the same as the Thanksgiving prices, the highest prices in years were paid.

A sentiment in favor of former Vice President Fairbanks, of Indiana, for the Republican nomination for President is growing rapidly all over Kentucky, and indications are that he will receive the instructions of the state without much effort. His friendship for Kentucky Republicans is testified in every campaign when he was called upon to help us, has gained him the gratitude of the party throughout the state. He is a big brainy man, eminently qualified for the Presidency, and the one man upon whom the party in Kentucky can center its complete harmony.—Mt. Sterling Gazette.

Breeders of beef cattle in Kentucky are making preparation for one of the most interesting meetings in the history of their association. Among the members of this association are many and they always expect and enjoy a good time at their association meetings.

About 500 tobacco growers met at Livia, McLean county, and formulated a protest against the local tobacco market.

The system was condemned as a failure and working hardship and expense upon the farmer in forcing him to come a long distance to deliver.

The buyers of Davies county were asked to come and buy from the barn as they would do, and the growers pledged themselves to hold their tobacco in the barn until sold. The Commonwealth's Attorney and Incoming Congressmen were requested to take action and see if the action of the tobacco board in fixing the manner and rates for conducting sales are not in restraint of trade.

W. G. T. U. NEWS.

(Furnished by Mrs. Belle Dickey.)

When citizens and voters of Kentucky are invited to sign petitions for submitting constitutional amendments for prohibition to Senate and House of Representatives of the Kentucky Legislature, next month, they will do well to remember the following facts published by the Anti-Saloon League: Cost of Liquor Traffic to Louisville.

It is estimated that the average annual sales in each of Chicago's 7,152 saloons is a little less than $20,000. In Portland, Ore., 400 saloons is approximately $10,000,000. Louisville at present has an even 700 saloon licenses. Estimating the annual sales of each place at $20,000, which is a very conservative figure, it is more likely $12,000 or $15,000, the total amounts to $8,400,000, $11,000,000 of this is paid for taxes to the state, county and municipal government. This leaves $1,500,000 to spend for clothing food and coal.

And after this is done there would still remain $1,500,000 dollars to be deposited in the savings banks and loaned for the development of Louisville and the multiplication of manufacturing enterprises.

This one million dollars invested pro rata in other manufacturing enterprises, such as for instance the Kentucky Wagon Works, would employ, to say the least, as many men as any six million dollars now invested in liquor business would employ in Louisville. To this may be added the savings effected by the decreased necessity of maintenance of hospitals, penitentiaries, asylums, courts, etc.

The manufacturers of the necessities and conveniences of life employ more than six times as many men for the amount of capital invested as are employed in the manufacture of liquors. It will only make it necessary for the laborers to change to some other occupation. The money now spent by the people for liquor would then be spent for the necessities and conveniences of life. The inevitable increased demand for clothing and food, and for lumber, hardware and other materials for building homes, and innumerable other necessities and conveniences would require more and larger factories, more whole and more modern establishments, therefore more merchants, mechanics, laborers, clerks, etc., would be required in every avenue of manufacturing and business activity.

Labor gets on the average 51 per cent of the running expenses of all industries in the United States. In the manufacture of distilled liquors labor gets a little less than two per cent of the running expense. Only 2 per cent of the money used in distilleries. Those who go hungry because the money which should buy them food is now spent for liquor could at a single day eat all of the corn used in a whole year by distilleries.

It requires about one bushel of corn to make four gallons of whiskey. The drinker would pay at retail $16.00 for the four gallons, this $16.00 would enable him to buy all the corn meal for his family which could be made from the entire four bushels of corn, and he would have about thirteen dollars left with which to buy more corn meal for his family and to feed a cow that will provide them with milk and butter. It is readily seen that the farmers will be able to be compelled to raise more corn to meet this increased demand, when upon prohibition, the men quit spending their money for whiskey and begin to buy food for their families; furthermore, the increased demand will inevitably make higher prices for corn.

Do Saloons Help Business?

No, they invariably injure business; the business men of Richmond, Danville, Carlisle, Princeton, Marion and many other Kentucky cities are already giving written statements that they sell more goods and receive more prompt payment since the saloons have been closed since during saloon years. Itemized statements will be sent on request.

Prohibition and Criminal Records.

Richmond, Kentucky—Wet two years, 602 arrests for drunkenness—746 arrests for all causes.

Dry two years, 74 arrests for drunkenness—153 arrests for all causes.

Somerset Kentucky—Dry two years 230 arrests for drunkenness—726 warrants for all causes.

Wet two years, 988 arrests for drunkenness—1,977 warrants for all causes.

Bowling Green, Kentucky—Wet last ten months, 260 arrests.

Dry first ten months, 91 arrests.

Marion, Kentucky—Wet three years, 540 arrests for all causes.

Dry three years, 98 arrests for all causes.

Corbin, Kentucky—Wet two years, 1,600 arrests for all causes.

Dry two years, 386 arrests for all causes.

Harrodsburg, Kentucky—Wet four years, 1,632 arrests for all causes.

Dry four years, 477 arrests for all causes.

These, the adoption of Prohibition laws in West Virginia, according to a bulletin just published, has cut down the arrests in thirty-four towns and cities more than one-half.

During the two years 1903 and 1910, the wet counties sent one out of every three men to prison for every 724 of their population; while the dry counties furnished only one for every 1,842 of their population, more than two and a half times as many. That we may not be accused of an unfair comparison in this calculation, we omit Jefferson, Kenton and Campbell counties because these large cities have the largest number of criminals per capita.

Why is it that ninety-six of each one hundred prisoners in our Kentucky State Prisons are temperate men and only four in each one hundred Temperate men?

There can be but one answer; drink; drink arouses and provokes the worst there is in men; most men become angry more quickly when drinking; most men are more sensual when drinking. Every evil passion is aroused and the power of self-control is greatly weakened by drink. Men are very much more likely to commit crime when drinking and they are more likely to drink when it is convenient. Let us get it as far from them as possible.

The prohibition states have 118.8 insane for each 100,000 population. The liquor states have 27.6 insane for each 100,000 population. There is a deep significance in the low rate of poverty, insanity, crime and death as is shown in the official figures of prohibition Kansas.

A Forty-eight Kansas counties did not send a prisoner to the penitentiary in 1913.

In fourteen counties no jury has been called on in ten years to try a criminal case.

Fifty-three counties have empty jails.

Thirty-eight counties have empty poor houses.

The United States Bulletin May 21st, 1915, says Kansas has each person $1,229.61, while Massachusetts, the next to Kansas in wealth is nearly $300,000 less, being only $1,533.34 for each person, and Kentucky only $977 for each person. Kansas adopted state-wide prohibition in 1880.

During the last eleven years New York, one of the wettest liquor states increased its public debt $3.04 per capita, while during the same time, Kansas, one of the driest prohibition states reduced its public debt $3.31 per capita, a total of $6.35 per capita difference between wet New York and Prohibition Kansas.

GRANT COUNTY AND THE DIXIE HIGHWAY

The first section of the Dixie Highway in Grant county, that extending from Westminster to the Kenton county line, a distance of about twelve miles, was received by the county and State Highway department, and the contractors, Messrs. Woodruff, and the contractors, for constructing the road. From Westminster to the Kenton county line there are 12 miles of the road, about 11 miles of which belongs to the county, the remainder lying in the corporate limits of the towns of Dry Ridge and Crittenden. One mile of this road was built in 1914 by M. Billiter, of this place.

Barring the sections of the road lying in the incorporated towns, it is in fine condition for travel and is in better condition than it has been for years. The only fault that can be found with this is its narrowness, and this is unavoidable, as the funds for widening the road were not available. There is now fourteen feet of metal, sloping from the edges to the center, which is several inches higher than the edges.

The remainder of the road, that part extending from the corporate limits of Westminster to the Scott county line, a distance of about 12 miles, will be constructed next summer. This part of the road is already in good condition and it is probable that less money will be required for its construction. The contract for constructing this 12 miles will be let in the early spring and it will be finished by next fall.

This road is being constructed with State Aid. The county pays half and the State pays half. The route is also availing themselves of State Aid. Both Dry Ridge and Crittenden voted bonds to build their part of the road and the State will put up half of the money required. The contract was to have been let for each of these towns last Tuesday, but there were no bids. It is now proposed to let the contract for building the roads through these towns at the same time that the contract is let for building the 12 miles of the county's road south of Westminster.

Practically nothing has been done towards constructing the highway through Boone county. The toll gates are still kept up. Efforts are being made by the people of Cincinnati and Covington to interest the Boone county people in the highway, but so far very little has been accomplished. It is claimed that a narrow strip of Boone county along the eastern border of the State will be let up. Boone county has just finished the road extending from Florence to Lexington thru State Aid. It is hoped that her Fiscal Court will wake up to the necessity of taking the toll gates off the Lexington Pike and improving that road at an early date.

A man—very much interested in chickens was heard the other day to express uneasiness for fear the crop reports might show that the wheat crop was larger than the poultry crop. Few of us realize how great a factor is poultry in the success of the average farm. The bulk of the poultry does not come from the ordinary farm but from the ordinary farm where poultry is considered a byproduct.

The work of the Commission has a real economic value. There are 12,365 miles of running streams in Kentucky, which under present conditions produce considerably over one million dollars worth of food fish each year, when figured at 10 cents per pound, which could easily be doubled if the laws of the state be enforced.

In 1912 the game wardens captured and destroyed 1,088 hoop and wing nets, 67 seines and traps, and tore out 22 dams and fall traps. It is estimated that one hoop net will take 1,000 pounds of fish a year, so the 1,088 nets which were taken from less than 500 miles of streams represented 1,088,000 pounds of fish a year.

The United States Government, through its Fisheries Department, have facilities for distributing fish to the various states, but they have refused to plant fish in territory that is not protected.

The State Commission distributed, in 1914, 8,473 live fish.

In 1915 (this spring) 8,937,083 live fish.

Total number of live fish distributed in Kentucky in 4 years was 31,781,809.

Record Wool Cargo

W. F. Burbank, Cincinnati representative of the Empire East Freight Line, has been notified that the largest shipment of Australian wool ever imported thru San Francisco is being transported eastward by his road in connection with the Big Four.

There are 12,800 bales in the shipment, which was brought to this country in the big steamer Aetna, owned by San Francisco parties.

The shipment originated at Brisbane, Australia, was shipped November 1, and arrived at San Francisco December 1. The wool is being carried in four special trains.

Perhaps the reason some women speculate in stocks is in the hope of being aquired.

Paris, Dec. 16.—A black and white skunk, peacefully wagging its tail, meandered down Main street for two blocks this afternoon, followed by a pack of dogs at a respectful distance, and caused pedestrians to scurry in-doors. Tempted by an offer of $5, a negro finally captured the animal in a sack, and the city authorities disinfecting Main street.

Lagrange, Dec. 16.—Jack Henderson 28 years old, negro, who is accused of the murder of John Fox, 55, postmaster and station agent for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad at Glen Arm, pleaded guilty when arraigned here today. The killing occurred December 1, last. Henderson was taken back to Louisville to await trial in February.

BOONE CO. RECORDER

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

Concerning the Dixie Highway.

By virtue of the power vested in me by the Dixie Highway Association, I hereby call a meeting of the citizens of Boone County at 11 o'clock a. m., Monday, January 3, at Burlington, for the purpose of organizing a Local Council for Boone County in conformity with the Constitution and By-laws of the Dixie Highway Association.

J. G. TOMLIN.
Temporary Chairman by Appointment.

At the request of numerous taxpayers of Boone County, I hereby call a meeting of the citizens of Boone County at Burlington on January 3 at 1 o'clock p. m., to consider, discuss and decide whether it is wise to continue the systematic, unsuccessful, unfair and expensive method of pike freeing, pike building, pike reconstructing and road working, or whether it is wise to vote bonds to the amount of $200,000 to be used as needed, thus enabling the Fiscal Court to buy the necessary machinery and to build and maintain roads and pikes on a uniform system.

J. G. TOMLIN.

To the People of Boone Co.:
Having made a formal call for a meeting at Burlington Jan. 3, of the citizens of Boone County to consider the road problem, some explanation as well as a preliminary statement would seem in order. I wish it clearly understood that I seek no notoriety, and that I have no axe of any kind to grind. My whole desire is to see Boone County prosper financially just as I have in the past desired to see her schools improved, and her temperance laws enforced. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that I desire to see her now take the position financially and educationally which her soil, her location, and her people justly entitle her to; which in my judgment, ever since I have resided in the county, has been denied her for fifty years; which in my judgment now will be denied her for the next fifty years under the past and present system of roads.

No county, in fact no given section, large or small, can attain much importance without proper transportation facilities. What is adequate in one section is inadequate in another. Those in Boone County are so situated that she is entitled to the very best, and she will not any way near reach her possibilities without good system of pikes; and the better those pikes are made the greater are her possibilities.

Nature gave Boone County a great water front on the north and west; placed her within an hours ride of one of the greatest and most important centers of population in the world. Her capital built through her eastern and southern parts two of the greatest trunk line railroads in the world. There settled here in an early day a thrifty and intelligent citizenship which continues to this day. The moral tone is unusually good. But with the kindest feeling in the world permit me to say that citizenship has been and still is to a certain wise and sound foolishness.

Aside from the pleasure, the comfort and the enjoyment of good roads (which after all are the best things in life) and to place the question on the ground of alone of money, it has been, now is, and will continue to be the most shortsighted and most wasteful policy possible to longer delay the expenditure of large sums of money in making our roads first class. Since under the past and present conditions our population has actually decreased since 1880, there cannot be progress in wealth or art in any section with a decreasing population. The reason is plain: the wealth (remembering that all wealth is accumulated labor) is continually carried away. Not only so but the young men and women go elsewhere with their brain and muscle; education to inheritance. While this process is going on there is neither wealth nor people coming in. What has been the cause of this? There are many factors contributing to it, but the great underlying cause has been and is now our inadequate roads. Make the roads modern, suitable for present day travel and Boone County in the same period of time will double in population and quadruple in wealth. We have no mineral wealth, but we have a very good soil and a climate, beautiful and varied scenery, good and intelligent people, and a healing water known throughout the civilized world. Outside capital is ready to invest and improve on a large scale. If we have first class roads in Boone County, not one road but all the roads of Boone County are needed to attract business to the springs and the county generally. Not a spot in Boone County is more than one hour's ride to Pounain Square on a modern road. Boone County is peculiarly fortunate in being on the line of the Dixie Highway. That road completed and open for travel from Chicago to Florida is worth more than a railroad or a traction line, considering the present and future importance of the auto and its probable influence on road building and road maintenance in this country. Here let me state a proposition to the people of Boone County and invite any anti-pike man and any anti-road man to answer it, namely: "The greatest element of value to real property is travel." The lot or the farm by which there is the greatest travel has the greatest value. This proposition is universally true in cities, towns and country. If it is true, it follows that any policy which will increase travel by our property is a wise one from the standpoint of wealth. This rule of value is peculiarly applicable to Boone County, at this time, being the day of the Auto, and of the national highways, the county being on the Dixie Highway and being the home of the incomparable Big Bone Springs. To shorten this article, why should not the people of Boone County use their heads as well as their hands? Why be hewers of wood and drawers of water? Why not let people come to us when they want to come? Let them to them and trade with them? Learn from them and from us? That is what commerce and intercourse means. At this time, let us consider our neighboring counties and our neighboring States? I charge my home county with having been dishonest with our neighboring counties and States. I charge she continues to use their free, good, roads, and to give them in return bad roads or toll roads, she will continue to be dishonest. That is contrary to Boone County character, and I have confidence in my county that when the people understand this they will reject it and do it quick. As a solution of the whole problem, on Monday, January 3d, I will move the adoption of the following resolution to submit to the people of Boone County the question of a $200,000 bond issue; and I will stand ready to support it against all comers that day in a campaign in its favor; with this proviso, however, that the pikes now contracted but not built be built out of the bond and the people released from their subscriptions. Respectfully Yours,

J. G. TOMLIN.

The Dixie Highway As An Advertisement

Much has been said about Advertising the South. A recent very pat editorial in the Macon Telegraph "On Getting Down to Cases" elicited the following letter which shows how very important an asset the Completed Dixie Highway will be to the South.

Editor, Macon Telegraph, Macon, Ga.

Dear Sir:-
I have read with a great deal of interest your editorial in today's issue on "On Getting Down to Cases." Certainly you have hit the nail on the head; I am the greatest believer in the world in the advertisement and I have wondered many times at the vast amount of literature and so-called advertising which has been put out at enormous expense, tons of this stuff has been wafted about by the janitor and ashman, possibly it will be read and at some time, but now grown out of date. I have in mind several cities and localities in the West, and particularly in the West, put out at enormous expense, tons of this stuff has been wafted about by the janitor and ashman, possibly it will be read and at some time, but now grown out of date. I have in mind several cities and localities in the West, and particularly in the West, put out at enormous expense, tons of this stuff has been wafted about by the janitor and ashman, possibly it will be read and at some time, but now grown out of date.

Latterly the automobile has come to our midst, and has brought with it the touring fever, and people are branching out. They have read and possibly read and now they are out to see for themselves. Missouri has no longer a lone claim on the "Show Me" road. The whole nation, and especially the automobile traveling public are saying that Colorado Springs and Denver, Colo., are before my mind's eye as examples. They early realized the benefit of automobile travel, and their convictions were set to work on the main and most important road. This year, if it be known that the owner could take his own car and see things a three months' touring season showed $50,000 lost in Denver alone with a good increase in settlers and investments. California, also, has prospered in kind. Both these states have prepared the way and have led to the people who were gazing westward, real live intelligent men who have by word of mouth presented the facts. The pioneer tourists came back singing loud the praises of the roads and the country possibilities, and in consequence thousands of thousands have flocked Westward.

Now we have these great states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida, each with their parading highways, each presenting a complete historical and scenic advantages particularly their own. Rarely has the hardy pioneering automobile tourists from the North had so brave the dangers of mountain streams, rivers, and bad roads intervening, returned to his home without singing the highest praises for all these states. The burden of his complaint has been the difficulties he has encountered in getting through the madding crowd of it is to be reckoned with, and that seriously. Let us take the headwaters of the Ohio river and the headwaters of the Mississippi, draw a line northward through the mountains with Chattanooga as the meeting point of the two lines, Fargo North Dakota will be at the top of one line and New Orleans, La. at the top of the other. In the triangle thus formed, and tributary to it, are a million and more automobile owners. Look at the map of the United States after drawing these lines, compare the distance to be traveled in reaching San Francisco, or even Denver, from any given point within this funnel, and the distance from the same point to Macon, Georgia, or even Miami, Fla. Take your geography and run over the topography of the two sections. Is there any appeal to all to the motorist to come South in preference to the West? Use less question! Such an analysis answers all arguments and emphasizes the great work of building The Dixie Highway; emphasize the absolute interest of each particular community to the whole proposition.

There are barriers at present, which only the most hardy can surmount. With the proper, systematic and business like co-operation, the barrier will be broken down, the flood of travel will be loosed, and can easily be induced to flow this way. These "Show Me" fellows will be shown one of the most beautiful and God blessed regions in the country. Their seeing will be only a step to believing. Then your salesmen and promoters will find fair game. It should not be a hard matter to convince the intelligent man who sees with his own eyes.

Individually and collectively, we are all more or less selfish. Like to the phrase "Intelligent self interest." This is the selfishness of the big broad person who can beyond his own door yard and past the twenty-four hour day. "Intelligent self interest" is the selfishness which implies our support of town, city, county, state and nation. And it is which should inspire the support of a great National idea such as The Dixie Highway.

The promotive organization, The Dixie Highway Association, has as its Officers and Directors, and Commissioners, a collection of the greatest public spirited men in America today. Rarely can be found men of their stamp who are willing to give time and money, energy and nerve, to the promotion of such a project, they realize the immense possibilities of these four states alone and are willing to stand by the organization which will do more in practically presenting these good things to the people who are willing to be shown, than any other medium yet thought of. Give these million and more motorists the safe and sane artery over which to travel and the other things will follow. Years of experience, years with our fingers on the pulse of these people, years of practical study and association with the great and growing touring public, was responsible for the suggestion of The Dixie Highway and a consequent intimate knowledge of the thoughts and desires of these millions only clinch the thought and idea that the greatest asset to all these four states and their sisters is The Dixie Highway.

Elbert Hubbard is once reported to have said he was the only man alive who was able to make the public pay to hear him advertise his own goods, which in a measure was true and in a greater measure, will be true of the tourist travel which will be inspired by The Dixie Highway and the most wonderful country thru which it will lead these people who are paying their own expenses to be shown, and in the very nature of things can not help but advertise and advertise again and again, each time they tell the story there are listening ears, and awakened desires. This, therefore, is business, practical business, and "Intelligent Self Interest."

The Dixie Highway not only will be when the time is ripe, but is to have said he was the only man alive who was able to make the public pay to hear him advertise his own goods, which in a measure was true and in a greater measure, will be true of the tourist travel which will be inspired by The Dixie Highway and the most wonderful country thru which it will lead these people who are paying their own expenses to be shown, and in the very nature of things can not help but advertise and advertise again and again, each time they tell the story there are listening ears, and awakened desires. This, therefore, is business, practical business, and "Intelligent Self Interest."

Support of The Dixie Highway movement, therefore, means the biggest advertisement for those four States: Kentucky, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida, have ever seen or could ever buy. The greatest amount of credit is due to the newspapers such as yours, in this movement, it shows that you are in tune with President Wilson's idea when he said "It is of the most importance that the people of this country should think in large figures, should think together," and have caught the big idea and have well supported and boosted Xen Scott, 49, farmer, and Miss Grace Sutton, 37, were married at the home of the bride near McVie, at 6 o'clock p. m., on the 22d inst. The happy couple have the best wishes of many friends. The Recorder being one among them.

Very little of the 1915 crop of tobacco has been sold in this county. An element of uncertainty surrounds the market that makes the local buyers afraid to take hold. Very little of the crop has been stripped.

Judge Lassing, of Newport, and B. B. Hume, of Covington, were among the business visitors to Burlington, Monday. Judge Lassing had business in the county court and Mr. Hume was looking for the fellow who wants to buy an automobile.

Former United States Senator Cockerell, of Missouri, died at his home in Washington, D. C., last week. He was a native of Kentucky and a general in the Confederate army. It was his command that the late W. T. German served.

Messrs. Elmer and Howard Kirkpatrick spent last Saturday night and Sunday with their sister, Mrs. W. R. Davrainville, in Newport. Mr. Davrainville was one of the Campbell county Republicans who assisted in the election of Governor Stanley.

Geo. C. Voshell, and son of the late Mathias Voshell, who resided many years in the Plattburg neighborhood, is dangerously ill of paralysis at his home in Aurora. He is over eighty years of age a fact that is against his recovery. He is a brother of L. H. Voshell, of Union, this county.

Shortest Day of the Year
Tuesday was the shortest day of the year, and the days will now begin to grow longer, but it will be several weeks before the increase can be noticed.

A Good Time to Subscribe
Now is a good time to subscribe for the Recorder to send to some friend as a New Year's present. Those who have moved from Boone county, especially, will appreciate it.

The New Ball Band
Have you seen the new "Ball Band" white wool felt boot, with Red Gum Article? See them at SCHANKER. Also a complete line of other "Ball Band" rubbers, articles Gum and Felt Boots, at very low prices.

Outdoing Itself
The Falmouth Outlook appeared last week as a seven column, twelve page paper, brim full of local matter and live advertisements, the whole being neatly printed. The Outlook is in a class to itself as a county paper, and is being pushed along by a force of hustlers.

A Jailor Jailed
Robert T. Wallace, jailer of Fayette county, got on a "whiz" the first of the week, was fined for contempt of court, locked up in his own jail and that institution turned over to a deputy sheriff, and then his aunt died and left him a sixth interest in a $10,000 estate.

A Good Paper to Have
You can get the Frankfort Daily Courier until April 1, 1916, and the Boone County Recorder one year for $2. Send in your subscriptions at once. You will want to know what the Legislature is doing, therefore you will need the Daily Courier. It will cost you 50 cents until April 1, 1916.

Merit Rewarded Again
When the House Committee on Postoffices and Postroads was organized upon the assembling of Congress, Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, who was the seventh ranking member of the committee last year, went to fifth place, and was advanced to the chairmanship of the important sub-committee on Parcels Post.

A Big Deal in Aurora
Joseph Small, receiver, on Tuesday sold at public sale the plant of the Royer Wheel Company in Aurora to L. T. Moore of Cincinnati for $40,150. Mr. Moore is a brother-in-law of former President William Howard Taft. The plant will be operated as heretofore and will also manufacture last year's trucks, Lawrenceburg Press.

Supply of Boozes Getting Small
There is less booze in Petersburg now than there has been for nearly a century. Only 1,200 barrels on hand and it is predicted they will be gone by the first of next June, and the factory is dismantled and the buildings partly razed. No doubt Petersburg imports will increase but they will never equal in volume the annual exports for about 100 years past.

A Very Great Success
The bazaar last Saturday afternoon and night under the auspices of the ladies of the Baptist church, was a success in every particular, about fifty dollars being cleared. Nearly all the fancy work was disposed of while the oyster soup and other edibles were consumed by the liberal patronage, accorded by the citizens of the town and vicinity. Those who managed the affair are delighted with the manner in which their efforts were rewarded.

A Big Butter Record
A special from Buffalo, N. Y., states that Lady Pontiac Johanna, a cow used at $80,000, has just broken the world's record for butter production by yielding 658 pounds of milk in one week, from which was made 4,341 pounds of butter. This eclipses the former butter record of 351 lbs. The record cow was milked four times daily under supervision of a representative of the New York state agricultural department.

Better Discontinue the Chance Business
While instructing the grand jury of the December term of court, Judge Cammack called the jury's attention to the facts that in other parts of the district the juries had found that in nearly all of the stores in the different counties, the merchants were selling chances on jars of oysters, boxes of candies and conducting raffles for boxes of shells, knives and other merchandise, but that the juries had not indicted but warned all merchants that all such games of chance and devices are games of chance and gambling and to stop the sale of them at once and unless the sale is stopped indictments will follow and he instructed the grand jury to do the same in this county. The grand jury found that some of the merchants in this county have been selling chances on different kinds of merchandise and no indictment was returned but all persons are not to sell chances on any kind of merchandise. The ordinary kind of schemes used are of the punch board and bumper number variety. The person selling the chances as well as the owner of the property is guilty and is subject to a fine of from $25 to $100. Complaint was made that some of the merchants in the county keep their places of business open for business on Sunday. This is a violation of law and if the merchants continue this practice, indictments are certain to follow.

Notice is hereby given that there will be offered at the regular January term of the Boone County Court, to be held in Burlington, Kentucky, January 24, 1916, a petition to discontinue and close a road known as the Burlington and Union road, leading from the toll-house on the Florence and Union turnpike, about one mile northeast of Union, to a point where said Burlington and Union road intersects the Burlington and Gunpowder road near Pleasant Valley school house, which is about 2 1/2 miles from said beginning point.

The road which is to be discontinued, from the point of beginning follows the meanders of Fowler's creek crosses and recrosses same several times till it reaches a fork of Gunpowder creek, crossing same, after which it crosses Border's Branch and then retrains to the said branch and follows up the same till it reaches the said Burlington and Gunpowder road.

Notice of the above was given the undersigned December 13, 1915. All persons will take notice of the above. C. W. GOODRIDGE, County Road Engineer.

A LETTER TO SANTA CLAUS

PROTECT THE FUTURE.

There is only one way in which Kentucky can protect herself in the future from "possum-hunting," tobacco scrapings and other acts of lawlessness. That safe and certain way lies through the careful upbuilding of every rural school in the state. Giving every child an education is not enough; make every child take an education, and the future prosperity of the state is absolutely secure. Allow even a small percentage of the children of to-day to grow up in ignorance and they become the law-breakers of the Commonwealth.

Protect the future welfare of every community with better school houses, with all the children in them, and peace, happiness and prosperity will become a trinity of power in Kentucky.

In this good year 1915 a man without an education is practically helpless. In 1916 his position will be worse and with each succeeding year it will grow even more difficult for him to earn a good living. The child that will grow up to a man in 1925 is in school or out of school today. How many will there be in this helpless plight in 1925 will depend upon the schools and the school system of the state now.

WHAT AILS THE BOY?

If the average father who wonders why his boy hates to go to school, would pay a visit to that self same school, he would understand perfectly. Why should the boy care to go to a small country school house that is uncomfortable? Why should the boy be anxious to attend a school where the teacher is underpaid and overworked? Why should he be interested when his parents are so little interested that they never darken the school house door?

Make the school attractive, arrange matters so that the teacher is neither underpaid nor overworked, show interest by visiting the school occasionally, and the average boy will not strive to stay away.

If every small community in the State of Kentucky is able to buy and run half a dozen autos, each one of them can afford a good school. The money paid for the machines is spent, but the money put into the schools would be invested in the future prosperity of the children and the state itself.

No one objects to giving money to build a fine church. Why should the building of a fine school house be a different proposition?

SHE HAD A REAL VISION

The fitful flames in the grate under a row of well-filled stockings lighted the faces of the young farmer and his wife. Both faces wore the Christmas smile, the smile which tells the story that

"Christmas comes but once a year, but when it comes it brings Good Cheer."

Gradually the smile died in the woman's eyes and the curve of her lips straightened into a hard line. Her glance left the flickering flames to run over the row of grotesquely fat stockings along the edge of the mantle. Slowly she arose, walked into an adjoining room, and looked at the rosy fat cheeks of her brood of youngsters who were dreaming of the glorious morrow.

When she again dropped on the stool by the man's side, he turned to ask: "They are all snug and sound asleep, dreaming of Christmas Day, ain't they little women?"

"Yes," she answered, listlessly. Putting his hand under the woman's chin he lifted her face to look deep into her eyes before he said:

"Something's worryin' you. What is it? Don't let's start out the night before Christmas with any worry on our minds. Have you forgot to get some present for one of the children, or what?"

She nodded her head emphatically and explained:

"Yes, that's it exactly. We've forgotten all about the best present of them all and one that lasts all the year."

"Well, but what is it?"

"It's the school."

The man began to laugh and then checked himself as he saw the pain in his wife's face, so he merely said, quietly:

"Go ahead, little woman, an' tell me what's on your mind."

"Here it is. I've been sitting here thinking of all the thought and love we've put into the children's stockings considering Christmas may bring them some joy. I've thought of all the love we've put into their children, as you have sort of pic-planning and spending for the children's pleasure to-morrow."

"Well, don't you think that's all right?" he asked her as he put his hand over her's where it rested on the arm of his chair.

"Oh, yes, of course I do. I want to-morrow to be the happiest day the children have ever known; but there's a bigger thing than Christmas that we have forgotten, and that's the school-house where they go day after day."

"What do you want for the children in the way of a school?" the man asked.

The woman did not answer the question, but went to the mantle and picked up a small electrical toy above her ten-year-old son's stocking. For a moment she held it in her hand and then asked:

"Why did you buy this for Jim?"

"I bought it because he's wild about electricity and it's the newest electrical toy I could find."

"That's just what I expected you'd say. The parents in this neighborhood have bought their children up-to-date toys, even if they had to borrow some money with which to do it. They want to-morrow to be a real Christmas for the kids."

"What about the school, little woman? It seems to me you're doing a lot of beating around the bush."

"No, I'm not, I'm trying to get you to the point where you'll see that, while we are dressing our children in 20th Century clothes, giving them 20th Century toys, and 20th Century trunks and candies, we haven't provided a 20th Century schoolhouse, nor a 20th Century school system. I mean that these preparations," and her gesture took in the bulging stockings and the toys on the mantle, "come but once a year and do not have much of an effect on the child's life. What we need is to give our children, especially those that live under the blue skies that cover our farms, real schools, no matter what they cost. If parents would only use some of the Christmas-giving spirit in developing our country schools, the country would be so much happier for the women and the children from one year's end to another."

KENTUCKY'S ROAD COMMISSIONER

Robert C. Terrell Has Successfully Put State Good Road Laws Into Operation

HEAD OF STATE DEPARTMENT

Called From the Chair of Rural and Highway Engineering of State University by Governor McGreevey—Great Work Accomplished During the Past Three Years in Blue Grass State.

Frankfort—Kentucky's Road Commissioner, Robert C. Terrell, who has successfully put into operation the good roads laws of Kentucky and for the past three years has been the head of the road department, was born near Bedford, Trimble county, Kentucky, in 1884. After finishing the common school of that county, he entered the State University of Kentucky and graduated from that institution in 1906, receiving the degree of bachelor of engineering, and was given the master's degree in civil engineering in 1908.

Immediately after receiving his degree in 1908, he took charge of the location of the Duck Fork extension of the Louisville & Atlanta railway, now a portion of the L. & N. system. In addition to locating the road, Mr. Terrell mapped and opened up a large coal field for the Kentucky River Coal & Coke Co., which was afterwards leased by the Big Hill Coal Co. of Pennsylvania. In June, 1907, after completing the work with the Kentucky River Coal & Coke Co., Mr. Terrell was employed by the Arkansas, Louisiana & Gulf Railway at Hamburg, Arkansas, as assistant engineer on twenty miles of construction, where he remained until his completion in the summer of 1908.

ROBERT C. TERRELL
Kentucky Road Commissioner.

Through Mr. Terrell's influence with the Board of Trustees of the State University of Kentucky, there was established the chair of rural and highway engineering in the Department of Civil Engineering of that institution. He was unanimously chosen professor of that chair. He immediately began the campaign to secure not only the undergraduate students in the course, but also arranged to have the practical road builders of the state to take short courses and attend lectures during the winter months. The course grew very popular, and many students were enrolled in both the two and four-year courses for undergraduate students and large numbers of the county road men, as well as the county judges and magistrates matriculated for the lecture courses.

In 1912, when the Department of Public Roads was established by the General Assembly, Governor McGreevey called Mr. Terrell from the chair of rural and highway engineering of the State University of Kentucky and appointed him the first Commissioner of Public Roads of Kentucky. Mr. Terrell assumed his duties on July 1, 1912, and has untiringly given his time and attention to the upbuilding of the road system of the state. Through his efforts and the showing made by the department prior to the meeting of the General Assembly of 1914 was made possible the passage of the state aid road laws in Kentucky, which provide for intercounty seat system of highways and a five-cent tax, together with the license tax on automobiles to be spent for the construction of the state system of highways, the state paying one-half the cost and the county one-half the cost of such improvement.

Mr. Terrell, through his splendid corps of assistants and thorough organization, has had active supervision and charge of the preparation of the plans, specifications and estimates of cost and actual construction of more than one thousand miles of road, and has thoroughly demonstrated to the citizens of the Commonwealth of Kentucky the advantage of having roads constructed on scientific principles, and has made popular the new road laws and has been successful in securing the co-operation of the county officials throughout the state.

Mr. Terrell, when interviewed on the subject, stated he was well pleased with the success of the new road laws, and that a good showing had been made this year, and that fully fifty per cent more work would be accomplished during the year 1916, as the county officers of nearly every county in the state have already signified their intention of taking the proportionate part of the state aid fund for the coming year, and many more counties are preparing to vote bond issues.

FARMERS' WEEK JANUARY 4 TO 7

Will Be Held at Lexington Under the Auspices of the Kentucky College of Agriculture

MANY DEPARTMENTS COVERED

Report is Made Up of the Annual Conventions of Eleven State-Wide Farmers' Organizations—Lectures and Various Demonstrations in Women's Work, Covering Several Subjects, Cooking, Canning, Etc.

Lexington.—There is no event of the year that can more advantageously claim the time and attention of the Kentucky farmer than Farmers' Week, which will be held at Lexington, Ky., January 4 to 7, 1916, under the auspices of the College of Agriculture. Farmers' Week is made up of the annual conventions of eleven state-wide farmers' organizations, covering as many departments of farming. It is needless to say that any one attending these meetings will come in contact with the more progressive farmers, stockmen and fruit growers of the state. There is opportunity here for interchange of valuable experience and for making the acquaintance of the most eminently successful men in all branches of agriculture.

The schedule of exercises is as follows:

Tuesday, January 4th.—Meetings of the Kentucky Beef Cattle Breeders' Association and the Kentucky Alfalfa Growers' Association.

Wednesday, January 5th.—The Kentucky Poultry Association, the State Swine Breeders' Association and the Kentucky Bee Keepers' Association.

Thursday, January 6th.—The Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association, the Kentucky Corn Growers' Association, the State Horticultural Society, and in the afternoon, a joint meeting to discuss the more advantageous marketing of all kinds of farm products.

Friday, January 7th.—The Kentucky Sheep Breeders' Association, the Kentucky Dairy Cattle Club, and a meeting of tobacco growers.

During the first three days of Farmers' Week, there will be lectures and various demonstrations in women's work covering such subjects as cooking, canning, household sanitation, sewing, the exhibition of labor-saving devices for the home, household furnishing and interior decoration and instruction in all matters pertaining to the betterment of woman's condition in the home.

Exhibition, for benefit of visitors, of Selden Fern's Sensation (2nd prize winner Louisiana Purchase Exposition, 1904), at Elmdorf Farm, Lexington, Ky.

Special attention is called to the conference on marketing. For many years, agricultural study has dealt largely with problems of production. The standardization of farm products and the more advantageous marketing of the same have received only casual attention. It is time for the farmer to give careful study to better methods of marketing farm crops, as well as to more advantageous methods of purchasing supplies. Men of wide experience in these subjects, from Kentucky and from other states, will address this meeting. The regular program will be followed by a general discussion of the subject in which all interested are invited to participate. Immediate practical benefits are to be expected from this conference.

Handsome premium lists have been provided for competitive exhibits of the following products: Corn, wheat, oats, cowpeas, soy beans, tobacco, poultry, honey, fruit of various kinds, butter, cream, milk and various articles of woman's work. The premiums include money prizes, medals, trophies, merchandise, farm implements, etc. Chief among these prizes is the Experiment Station Medal which is offered for the best exhibit in poultry, beekeeping, dairying, tobacco, farm crops, woman's work, and also for the best exhibit of fruit. This medal is of bronze of most beautiful and attractive design. It will only be awarded for really high class exhibits in the classifications indicated in the above. All of these premiums have an intrinsic value. Their greatest value, however, lies in the moral effect upon exhibitors winning such prizes, for when once the habit of producing the best is acquired, the exhibitor will never again be content to be a mediocre farmer.

Everything in connection with Farmers' Week is free.

After attendance at these meetings, the open-minded, progressive farmer returns to his home greatly refreshed and benefited by what he has seen and heard, and with renewed enthusiasm for his work.

All of these meetings and exhibits have been put at a time when farmers can most conveniently arrange to leave their work. Reduced rates on all railroads.

PRODUCTION OF BEEF CATTLE

Breeders of Beef Cattle Making Preparations For Interesting Meeting

DISCUSS MATTERS OF INTEREST

Will Get Together at the Agricultural College at Lexington on Tuesday, January 4th, to Discuss Various Matters of Interest Relating to the Production of Beef Cattle.

Lexington.—Breeders of beef cattle in Kentucky are making preparation for one of the most interesting meetings in the history of their association. They will get together at the Agricultural College, at Lexington, on Tuesday, January 4th, to discuss various matters of interest relating to the production of beef cattle. These men usually have some kind of guessing and judging contests with different grades of steers, the animals being killed and dressed in the presence of the company. Among the members of this association are many of Kentucky's foremost citizens, and they always expect and enjoy a good time at their association meetings.

POULTRY IS GREAT FACTOR

A man very much interested in chickens was heard the other day to express uneasiness for fear the crop reports might show the wheat crop of this year to be of greater value than the poultry crop. Few of us realize how great a factor is poultry in the success of the average farmer. The bulk of the poultry supply does not come from poultry farms, but from ordinary farms where poultry is regarded as a by-product.

Kentucky has every year one of the best poultry shows in the country. The show this year will be held the week of January 4th, at the Agricultural College, at Lexington. A very handsome premium list has been provided, and on January 5th the poultry raisers will get together for a big convention. A good time is promised to all who attend. All is free.

Students judging dairy cattle on the Experiment Station farm.

THE ANNUAL PORK CROP

If it were not for the cholera, it is hard to tell the value of the annual crop of pork that Kentucky would produce, this state being so admirably adapted to swine raising. As it is, Kentucky has many of the best herds of swine of the various breeds to be found anywhere in the country. The Kentucky Swine Breeders' Association, an old substantial organization, will hold its annual convention at the Agricultural College, at Lexington, on January 5th, 1916. Some live topics of interest to swine raisers will be opened for general discussion.

The Kentucky Dairy Cattle Club will hold its annual convention during "Farmers' Week" at the Agricultural College at Lexington on January 7th, 1916. All during the week there will be on exhibit the dairy products competing for the handsome prizes that are being offered. This club offers membership to any one interested.

HORTICULTURE IN INFANCY

Greater Interest Is Being Taken Each Year.

Horticulture as an agricultural pursuit is still in its infancy in Kentucky. Each year greater interest is being taken and in a short time Kentucky will rank as one of the greatest horticultural states in the Union. Several growers have already attained remarkable success. They will appear on the program of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society January 6th during the annual Farmers' Week meeting at the College of Agriculture at Lexington, as well as will speakers from other states. Practical problems will be discussed.

In addition a first class show will be held, for which a large premium list has been prepared. For further particulars address Department of Horticulture, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

CORN GROWERS ARE ACTIVE

Annual Convention Looked Forward To By Many.

The annual show and convention held by The Kentucky Corn Growers' Association has come to be an event looked forward to by all the leading farmers of the state. The show will be held this year during the week of January 4, and on the 6th will be held their annual meeting. The show has grown phenomenally from year to year, and this year a premium list appropriate to a show by far the largest in their history has been prepared. No Kentucky farmer can afford to miss this great event and the opportunity to get acquainted with the best farmers and stock men of the state. The show will be held as a part of Farmers' Week at the Agricultural College at Lexington.

FAMOUS FOR HER HORSES

Good Time and Lot of Information Is Promised.

Kentucky has always been famous for her horses, and it goes without saying that a good time and a lot of information is in store for all who attend the meeting of the Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association, to be held January 6th, at the Agricultural College, at Lexington, as a part of the Farmers' Week exercises.

The man who attends the horse breeders' or any other meetings will have the free privilege of attending any or all of the other meetings and see the various exhibits, all of which will constitute a rare treat.

SHEEP RAISING IN KENTUCKY

Kentucky is hard to equal in natural adaptability for sheep raising and as a matter of fact she has not altogether neglected her opportunities, for many of the best flocks in the country are within her borders. The Sheep Breeders of Kentucky will get together in their annual convention on Friday, January 7th, during Farmers' Week at the Agricultural College at Lexington.

PRODUCTION OF ALFALFA

The production of alfalfa in Kentucky has probably more than doubled in the past two years and is increasing with acceleration. There are now so many of Kentucky's best farmers growing alfalfa and learning its value as a feed for all kinds of live stock that last January they got together and formed a state association of alfalfa growers. They will have their second meeting on January 4th, at the Agricultural College, at Lexington. They will discuss all kinds of questions regarding production, use and marketing of alfalfa.

HUEY WILL CASE

After Consuming Two Weeks of The Courts Term

The Jury Returned a Verdict Setting Aside the Will After An Hour's Deliberation.

The hearing of testimony in the Huey will contest was concluded at noon, Friday, and when court convened in the afternoon Attorney O'Neal of counsel for contestants proposed that the case be submitted to the jury without argument, to which, after a brief conference with their clients, the court agreed. The court then read the instructions to the jury which referred to its room and in about an hour returned into court a verdict setting aside the will and council for the propounders at once took necessary steps to take the case to the court of appeals. The verdict was unanimous and but one ballot was taken in the jury room. The trial consumed many hours of the day and the seventy-five and eighty witnesses testified. O. M. Rogers and Judge R. O. Williams, the latter Commonwealth's attorney in Kenton county, made a hard fight in behalf of the propounders, while John O'Neal, who was assisted by Brown and Polin, made a capable and skillful effort in the interest of the contestants. The propounders of the will are Thos. A. Huey and his two sons, Thos. and Jas. A. Huey, a brother and two nephews of the testator, James L. Huey; the contestants are Geo. H. Stevenson, Thos. and John Garrison, the nephews, and Mrs. Alonzo Utz and Mrs. N. B. Bristow, nieces of the testator. The estate is worth approximately $80,000 and was willed to Thos. A. Huey and his two sons, Thos. and James. The contestants claim that owing to his physical condition at the time James L. Huey was not competent to make a will. Dr. O. E. Senior, the attending physician, O. M. Dixon, the nurse, and O. M. Rogers, draftsman of the will, each testified that Mr. Huey was competent to make a will at the time of its execution. Dr. Wolfstine, of Covington, and Frank Eckman, of Covington, each testified as medical experts.

A great many persons were disappointed because of the conclusion there would be no arguments made by the attorneys. Several had come quite a distance for the purpose of seeing the trial, to the speeches, which had been been gun would have lasted until noon Saturday if not longer.

A Weary Willie Given Lodging.

Jas. Williams, alias Jas. Lewis, a Weary Willie, showed up in Burlington last Saturday night shortly after dark and while the wind was sweeping over the land he was anything but spring zephyrs. The man was not clad to stand much cold and he wanted shelter for the night. He was directed to Jailer Adams, who made a room in the upper story of the jail in which he locked his guest for the night. The man said he was a Canadian by birth, had spent part of his life in the State of Maine, from where he went to West Virginia where work had become so scarce that he had to strike out. He claimed to have worked on the boats that ply the Ohio and Mississippi rivers until he knows every inch of the river from Pittsburgh to New Orleans. DESIGNS FOR UNINSULATED ICEHOUSES Pole Icehouse—Uninsulated—Fig. 1.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Several typical designs of farm icehouses which dairymen may find economical have been prepared by the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture. Men of experience often have different opinions regarding the exact details in the construction of such buildings, but it is believed that if the instructions and designs given are followed satisfactory results will be obtained.

Pole Icehouse—Uninsulated.
Floors—To consist of 12 inches of coarse gravel tamped into place as shown in drawing.

Walls—Set up posts about three feet centers, as indicated on drawing, extending three feet in the ground, and capped by a plate made up of two pieces of 2x4. Sheathe the inside with one-inch boards. The posts and boards below the ground line should be treated with some preserving compound.

Ceiling—No ceiling is provided.

Roof—The same type of roof may be employed as with the framed houses.

Doors—A door may be provided by cutting out the boards between two posts in the end of the house and closing the same by placing short boards across the opening on the inside and packing sawdust against them to hold them in place.

Drainage—Drainage to be provided for by sloping the floor toward the center of the house so that the water will tend to run to the center. A ditch is dug as indicated and filled with gravel and small stones. This ditch is led outside to a suitable point, where there is a sufficient fall to carry away the water. If advisable, a three-inch porous drain tile may be provided as shown for the uninsulated frame house. This drain should be properly trapped, however, to prevent the entrance of warm air.

Framed Icehouse—Uninsulated.
Floor—To consist of 12 inches of coarse gravel tamped into place as shown in drawing.

Walls—On a 2x10-inch mud sill place 6x8-inch sills. Set up 2x4-inch studs spaced about 2 feet centers, and on the inside of these nail 1-inch boards. The studding to be capped by a 2x4-inch plate as indicated. The mud sills and sills should be treated with creosote.

Ceiling—No ceiling is provided.

Roof—The same type of roof may be employed as in the insulated framed house.

Doors—A door may be provided as suggested for the pole icehouse.

Drainage—To be provided for by sloping the floor toward the center of the house so that the water will tend to run to the center. A ditch is dug as indicated and a 3-inch porous drain tile laid, being packed around with small stones and gravel. The tile should be led outside and efficiently trapped to prevent the entrance of warm air.

Framed Icehouse—Uninsulated—Fig. 2.

FILL DITCHES AND GULLIES

Stones Are About Best Material for Filling Depressions—Water Is Permitted to Drain Through.

(By R. I. THROCKMORTON, Kansas Experiment Station.)

The little ditches and gullies that form on rolling farms grow rapidly if neglected, and deep channels with steep sides result. By stopping the flow of the water in these small streamlets with such material as straw, brush and stones, they can be made gradually to fill themselves. Such obstructions cause the soil to be deposited and the ditch will be filled up back of the barrier. If measures are not taken to prevent the small depressions on a slope from growing, they rapidly enlarge in three directions, becoming deeper, wider and longer.

The best way to stop up small ditches and make them fill up is to make a dam of stones. Stones are about the best material for this purpose, because they collect the sediment and at the same time let the water drain through, and a water-hole is not formed.

When a ditch is very shallow, only a few inches deep, a board held in place with stakes is often sufficient to stop further erosion. Straw is also very good for these shallow ditches. It is very effective in catching the soil, but is sometimes washed out by a hard rain. Cornstalks are even better than straw. Brush can be used, too, but is hardly dense enough when used alone. Straw and brush together are better than either alone. If cement dams are built, some way must be provided for the water to get through, or else a pond will be formed. Cement dams are really not worth the extra cost.

METHODS FOR FEEDING MEAL

Practical Experience Has Shown That It Is Most Economical to Mix Meal With Ensilage.

The plan for cutting the fodder or hay and mixing the bran, millfeed and cornmeal with it and feeding it moistened is preferable, in our opinion, to any other method, says a writer in Baltimore American. By feeding meal dry or made into dough some portion of it will pass into the fourth stomach and escape only partially digested.

The plan of mixing the meal with water and making a thick slop is preferable to feeding it dry or in a doughy state.

The meal then passes, as it does when mixed with the feed, into the rumen or paunch, whence it is passed, after undergoing rumination, into the reticulum or second stomach, in a condition fitted for perfect digestion in the third and fourth stomachs and the bowels.

If onsilage is fed, mix the meal with the ensilage. This method of feeding, we have followed for a number of years with milk cows and fattening cattle, and after careful tests, know from practical experience that it is the most economical way to feed meal. There is no waste of feed and a larger quantity of milk may be given.

Extra Care in Fall.

As eggs are highest in price from October to January, it is important that the fowls be given extra attention in fall and winter so they will produce the most eggs during this period. On stormy days the fowls should be kept in the house. They should be fed three times a day, in the morning, at noon and late in the afternoon.

POULTRY

FEED HOPPER FOR DRY MASH

Device May Be Made of Any Size to Suit Flock—Slanting Top Keeps Fowls From Roosting.

I find this to be a very good feed hopper for dry mash. The dimensions given are those of my hopper, but it may be made in any size to suit the size of your flock, writes Mrs. Leo Hopper for Mash or Grit.

H. Johnson of Langsville, O., on Farmers Mail and Breeze. It may also be made into two or more compartments by putting in partitions and so feed shells, dry mash, grit, etc., at the same time. Notice that it has a slanting top. By setting it against the wall the chickens cannot roost on it. It also has a slanting bottom which makes the contents work to the front.

LEARN TO FEED PROFITABLY

Most Difficult Period in Feeding Starts With Baby Chicks—Good Mixture for Dry Mash.

Profitable feeding is something every farmer and poultryman must learn. Without it the most vigorous chicks that were ever hatched could not develop into standard, mature birds. The most difficult period in feeding starts with the baby chicks. If stunted when small, it is "runty" forever; if fed and cared for properly when young it can rustle for itself to a limited extent later.

The baby chick should never be fed until forty-eight hours old, and then a mash of coarse bran and charcoal mixed with hard-boiled eggs is all it will need for two or three days. After the first few days it may be fed mixed grain five times daily, and the mash of bran and eggs three times daily. A good chick ration may be made by mixing ten pounds cracked wheat, ten pounds cracked corn (flint) and ten pounds, "steel-cut" oats. The dry mash is made up of ten pounds bran, ten pounds shorts, five pounds corn meal, five pounds meat scraps and two and one-half pounds charcoal. Feed sour milk if available, giving chicks all they will consume.

ROOSTS MADE VERMINPROOF

Gas Pipes Used for Supports, Instead of Wooden Timbers, Aids in Keeping Parasites Away.

One of the largest poultrymen uses gas pipes instead of the usual wooden fixtures to support his roosts, and thus makes them almost entirely free from mites and other parasites which are so troublesome to poultry raisers. The pipe is bent as shown in the illustration and to hold the roosts in place holes are bored at proper intervals, through which bolts are inserted, projecting far enough above the pipe to hold the roosts in position. The roosts are made as usual and are laid on the pipe without fastening, thus making it easy to remove them for cleaning, etc. The pipes need not be over three-fourths of an inch in diameter, and will be found to be one of the most satisfactory supports for roosts yet devised.

MAKING MONEY FROM SQUABS

Little Chance for Profit With Pigeons Unless Birds Are Kept Free From Insect Parasites.

There is very little chance of making money from squabs unless through cleanliness pigeons can be kept comparatively free from disease and insect parasites. The stock should be removed from the breeding pens. The house should be kept dry, clean, well ventilated, and free from drafts. The yards should be kept clean either by scraping the surface and adding fresh sand or gravel or by cultivating the land and planting it to grain if possible. Only good, sound grain should be fed.

Lower Fowls Vigor.

With the general exception of well-cared-for, open-range flocks, the conditions under which practically all owls are kept, result in a constant tendency toward the lowering of the birds' constitutional vigor.

ONE PORTION DESSERTS.

For the children who cannot have the heavy rich desserts that the older people enjoy, the following simple dishes will be easy to prepare and most wholesome. Any fruit stuff which is prepared by adding sugar and fruit pulp to the white of an egg and beating well, is a dessert usually attractive to children. Prepare the fruit pulp if a cream by straining or scraping, if a banana by rubbing through a sieve.

Snow Pudding—Dissolve two teaspoonsful of gelatin in half a cupful of hot water, add three tablespoonsful of sugar and one and a half tablespoonsful of lemon juice; stir until the sugar is dissolved. When it is cool enough to be well set, add a little to a time to a well-beaten white of egg, beating until the whole is stiff. Turn into a wet mold and serve with cream.

Baked Caramel Custard—Put two tablespoonsful of sugar in a small saucepan, place over the heat and stir constantly until the sugar is melted and a light brown in color; add two thirds of a cupful of salted milk and pour the mixture over a slightly beaten egg; stir in a few drops of any flavoring, add a dash of salt, strain into a custard cup and place in a pan of hot water to bake in a slow oven until firm.

Orange Trifle—Soften a teaspoonful of granulated gelatin in a tablespoonful of cold water, then stand over hot water until melted; add a half cupful of orange juice and a quarter of a cupful of sugar; pour the mixture on the well-beaten white of an egg and beat thoroughly; cool and beat until spongy; place in a small mold and serve with cream and sugar.

Stuff the hollow of an apple which has been cored with dates, figs or nuts and raisins, and bake as usual. The little people find this a most enjoyable dessert, and it is especially wholesome. Serve with cream or plain.

A slice of bread with the crusts removed, soaked in any fruit juice and served with cream and sugar is a quick and dainty dessert to prepare for the little people.

POULTRY FACTS

SCRAPS GOOD FOR CHICKENS

Parings Left From Potatoes, Pumpkins, Squash, Apples, Etc., Make Excellent Feed.

Save all the parings, potato, pumpkin, squash, apple, etc., and when cooking your noon meal use these for the chickens. When it is cooled, stir in enough wheat bran to make a stiff mash. This makes an excellent but economical dinner. Give them an occasional mess of parings chopped fine without cooking. Turnips and beets are much relished by the fowls when eaten green.

If you have cabbage, take a small-sized head, fasten it to a wire and hang low enough that the fowls can reach it easily. You will be surprised to see how quickly they will clean up a cabbage in this way.

Don't feed your fowls milk in the watering trough. Have a separate trough for each. Be sure to feed a quart of milk each day.

Don't forget to water fowls when the weather gets cold. Milk doesn't quench their thirst, as I have often seen them turn from a pan of milk to the watering trough and drink an enormous quantity.

Keep a dust box in the henhouse when the hens are confined.

should have two or three thicknesses of paper overhead and on all sides. This is commonly formed by the roof and sides of the building, and the dropping boards for the floor.

As the dropping boards are commonly 3 feet 8 inches wide, this width will admit of using three roosts, which may be made of poles or 2 by 4s, slightly rounded, nailed edgewise on cross-

CARE AND FEEDING OF FOWLS

Birds Which Have Been Developed by Careful Attention Degrade Quickly When Neglected.

Poultry raising shows us that progress is made in two ways—by inheritance and by care in the development of the offspring. Or, in other words, a character which has developed in an animal, even though it was not apparent in its parent, is likely to be transmitted to its offspring. It is for this reason that close attention and great care should be given to the subject of care and feeding of fowls, for fowls which have been developed by careful attention will quickly degenerate when neglected.

Our knowledge of these things leads to the formulation of some general rules which should be studied and observed.

1. The land fowl should be made to "scratch" or "pick" or "tear" its feed.

2. It should be kept dry.

3. Its feed must consist of animal, vegetable and mineral matter, with sufficient water to moisten it.

4. Its reasoning powers being small, man must assist it by placing foods before it.

The waterfowl should have access to running water. I know this is an opposite opinion to that of a famous duck raiser, but waterfowls for breeding purposes will thrive best when they have free access to running water.

Oyster Shells Are Needed.

Oyster shells are furnished the chickens to stimulate the production of eggs. The hen that is laying freely will eat a lot of oyster shell as her body requires the ingredients that make up the egg shell. For this reason oyster shell should be supplied all the year around and in the winter it is especially necessary to keep up the supply of high quality eggs when eggs are high.

Sand or Gravel Necessary.

Fresh sand or gravel is absolutely necessary to the comfort of the hen this winter. Cover wood or cement floors at least three inches deep and earth floors from six to twelve inches.

FIXING UP CHICKEN HOUSE FOR WINTER

Interior of Poultry House.

(BY N. E. CHAPMAN.)
"Have you fixed up the chicken house?" This question was recently asked at a meeting of farmers, and only one raised his hand in the affirmative.

Nail down loose battens, siding, shingles or roofing. Put in whole glass where any is broken. Use building paper, rather than burlap, for the latter is often wet from dews and causes dampness.

If the house is of wood and single-boarded, line it with building paper of some kind. The roosting chamber pieces of 2 by 5 roosting on the dropping boards. The length of the three roosts will be determined by the number of fowls, giving 8 feet for ten hens.

The roosting chamber must be made larger or smaller, according to the number of fowls kept, by a movable partition of light framework, covered with cloth or building paper. A curtain of muslin, or burlap, or some other material, is hung in front of the roosts, to prevent drafts and conserve the natural heat of the flock. By the use of the partition and curtain, the comfort of the flock may be maintained in all kinds of weather.

Ample nest room should be provided, for supplying which cracker boxes may be divided and placed on supports beneath the dropping boards. Eight nests are sufficient for 25 hens.

A dust box should be placed in front of a window, and kept filled with sifted hard-wood shavings.

There should be a hopper for dry-mash on the wall; also one for grit, shells and charcoal.

A water table should also be provided, so that the water may not be easily tipped over, or filled with litter where the hens are scratching. The floor, of whatever kind, should be covered with litter to the depth of six inches; and this should be renewed as often as it becomes foul or damp. The grain feed should be scattered in the litter, to induce exercise.

It is conceded that the muslin front gives the best ventilation. Too much glass will cause the house to be too warm when the sun shines, and too cold at other times. At least one-half of the open surface should be covered with muslin, burlap or some other cloth material. In a house with gable ends, a stage left may furnish sufficient ventilation. Hens will lay well in any house that is dry and comfortable, if fed a well-balanced ration of farm-grown feeds.

IMPORTANCE OF PURE WATER

Hens Soon Learn to Enjoy Fresh, Cool Drink, Just as Human Beings Do—Improves the Egg.

Eggs are made up of what hens eat and drink, and their taste as well as general appearance can be changed in a few days by such foods as onions, garlic, fish, stagnant, muddy water, etc. As the average egg is about 60 per cent water, the importance of plenty of pure, fresh water is very evident. The mudhole beside the tank where the other side of the watered or the wallow in the hoglot are not "all right" for the hens, though they may drink it and live for a long time when forced to by the absence of a drinking place of their own. But hens will soon learn to enjoy a fresh, cool drink just as human beings do. The square five-gallon tin can, in which much kerosene is sold, split in halves the long way will make a pair of nice drinking places, that if set in the shade and cleaned daily, are very good and in some places very cheap.

The main essentials of these water fronts should be tightness, lightness, easy cleaning, and not over five inches depth when full.

Substantial Henroost.

The farm fowl, if given her preference in selecting a roost, would doubtless choose a substantial apple limb rounded just right to allow her to hold on with ease. A good two by four with the upper edges planed round like an apple bough makes a strong, substantial roost.

Guaranteed Eggs.

"Guaranteed eggs" are those laid by fowls judiciously fed on the purest of food, kept in the cleanest of houses and always put on the market in a fresh condition.

Make Hens Work for Grain.

Much benefit is likely to result, without any possible harm, if the hens are compelled to work in clean litter for their grain at all seasons.

Infertile Eggs Best.

Infertile eggs with without marketing conditions much better than fertile eggs.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side."

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. THE DICKE HIGHWAY

Why Boone County Ought Not To Expect Outside Donations,

And Why It Should Not Accept Such Assistance In Its Building

EVEN IF IT WERE OBTAINABLE.

Some months ago, at a Dixie Highway meeting in Walton I stated that Boone county ought not to expect outside donation in building the Dixie Highway, and ought not to accept it if offered. I had never heard at that time from any credible source that a thing was possible. I had heard suggestions of that kind by persons wholly uninformed on the subject. Since making that statement, have met with some criticism in the county for making it and have heard of some difference of opinion on both positions.

As to the first position, the Dixie Highway is nothing more than a series of good county roads, to be well built, connected and marked so as to make a continuous route from Chicago to Miami, Florida. It was conceived and started by private, public spirited individuals, who have spent liberally of their time and money, and who will have to give liberally of their time and money, in travel, advertising and in speaking and writing. From the first it has been promoted in this way and no other. It has never been hinted or suggested by any friend or promoter of any other thoughtful person that any of it, should or would be built by anybody, or financed by anybody except the counties and towns through which it passes. It is true friends and advocates of good roads generally believe that the National Government should take some part in National Highway building and hope after long years of agitation that this will be accomplished and that thereby the agricultural sections will receive their rights. In other words, a large number of people, including many distinguished statesmen believe that the National Government ought, in the interest of the general welfare, to put the main roads of the country in the same category with the rivers and harbors and public buildings. This was the policy of the Government for twenty-five years previous to 1832, since which time it has done nothing except in the last twenty-five years in the "Good Roads" Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, has built some roads, analyzed some road material and published a number of valuable pamphlets. The writer was fortunate in hearing a very full discussion of this subject at the National Good Roads Convention at St. Louis, in 1903. I am thoroughly convinced that it would be a wise National policy and I have and will give it cordial support at all times. But we need not expect to receive national aid to good roads in any form and to any substantial extent, for several years. National aid is however a very different thing from donation.

This article concerns the subject of donation of funds by outside individuals or organizations. To those who are so thoughtless as to expect it, I put the question, who is to give and where is it to come from? All individuals, counties, towns and cities have their own roads to maintain and the roads in their respective boundaries comprise so much of the Dixie Highway. Boone county is on a par with the best of them in location, material and per capita wealth. Any county on the route would have to expect Boone county to donate money to help build their Dixie Highway or other roads as we have to ask them, and some of them a great deal more, because we have not the difficulties of the city of Covington where many of them have and we are a great deal richer than most of the counties from Chicago to Miami. Do you realize that Boone, though smaller in area and population than Grant county has nearly double her wealth, and that leaving out the city of Covington we have as much wealth as Kenton county. With this fact staring us in the face, who in Boone county would expect any citizen in Grant or Kenton county to give to any fund for sake of helping miserably Boone county build its share of the Dixie Highway or any other road? A more unreasonable thought never entered any man's head.

But the unreasonable nature of the thought is exceeded by the unfairness and unmanliness of the willingness to accept such help if proffered.

It is very true that Charity is a great virtue. I believe in giving and receiving in a proper way. But he who seeks charity when he does not need it is universally condemned and despised. He who accepts it when he does not need it, or accepts from those in the same circumstances and condition is but little if any more deserving of respect. Personally I had just as soon see a train load of meat and flour shipped into Boone county from Chicago or New York, Cincinnati, Kenton county or Grant county for free distribution among the people as that from the same source or any other source in the world outside of Boone county should be used to pay a subscription to help build our roads. I am willing to go the limit, on a State tax or national aid on some form system, applied to the whole country, that that charity, pauperism for Boone county. NEVER!

It is a fact known to every man in Boone county that a good piece of land is worth more than the value of the land that it passes. There is not an acre of land in Boone county to which this does not apply. This is not a neighborly thing, but it is a fact. It has not been proven true. The U. S. Government in one of its bulletins says that it is true throughout the country. Boone county has about three hundred square miles and at 640 acres per square mile, this makes 192,000 square miles, which at the lowest added value is $200,000, practically a million. Less than half that sum would put every mile of our roads on good ground and good grade and macadamize the whole four hundred miles. I am referring to good, ordinary, substantial roads. But when it comes to referring to conditions such as would result from a road like the Dixie Highway, which will be a road of national importance, and over which there will be no doubt develop a great deal of national travel, it would be difficult to measure the advance in value of the land by which it passes, and lying on it. For the benefit of persons living along the line of the proposed highway who are not opposing it, but who are completely depending for their neighbor in Kenton or Grant counties to put it thru for them, I will say that J. B. Neeson, the engineer who built the famous Columbia River Highway, told me in August, 1915, standing on a section of that highway, wonderful road that it is, that it had quadrupled the value of every foot of land that touched it. It was just then being completed for forty miles east from Portland, Oregon, to the county line. What the value of the land may yet do is problematical, but if it never does more than quadruple its worth in itself is a wonderful thing.

If pikes and good roads do that for a county, if highways do that for counties, thru which they pass, what should we expect of any person in Boone county crying for help in hesitating about what he should do, in squeezing that dollar instead of investing it to make five? Why should he hesitate to state and take full responsibility for the statement that every dollar spent wisely and honestly in road building will yield an increased value to the land it touches, in convenience to its owner and to the community at large, and that it will not make it a lot of money out of him? If that is true what a lot of money is being made out of him by pulling and sickly financiers are we in Boone county that we delay in handing out money to help for help in our road improvement. It is time for Boone county to awake to the old adage that "God Helps them who Help Themselves."

NEW DISEASE PROVES FATAL.

Chicago Lawyer Planning Philanthropic Work Is Killed By Automobile Gas.

Chicago, Dec. 25.—Eugene M. Humphrey, a lawyer, is dead at his home here today of what physicians term "petromoritis," or automobile gas poisoning. According to physicians it was the first fatal case in Chicago from that cause.

An idea of the violence with which "petromoritis" attacks its victims was given today by Dr. John D. Ellis, head of the department of occupational diseases of Rush Medical College.

"The thing is new science in some of its aspects," said Dr. Ellis. "Persons who are subject to vertigo may be attacked when in close, air-tight garages. The danger lies in a failure of certain elements in the gasoline to oxidize. In any event there is a quick rendering of a victim faint, and the exhaust of an automobile continues the result is almost instant death."

Typical post-mortem showings are those of brain and lung congestion. Humphrey went to his garage last night to get his automobile, in which he intended to deliver a number of Christmas lectures to families. An hour later his body was found on the floor of the garage; the engine of the automobile was running and the small room filled with gas fumes.

Alice Virginia, only child of Carl and Mary Schree, Welsh of North Bend, Ohio, was born March 1911, died Dec. 19, 1915. The doctor who attended her was greatly surprised by the parents, who had the sympathy of their many relatives and friends. There is something in the fact that she was Heavenly Father's youngest child and that "some time will understand." Mrs. Welsh is a daughter of John C. Schree of this county.

Villa Gives Up the Fight.

At one time Gen. Francisco Villa, former bandit, though he is, may have been accused in part, at least, by motives of patriotism in carrying on warfare in Mexico against the supporters of his former chief, Carranza. However, in continuing his hopeless struggle after the recognition of that leader by the U. S. Villa showed that he was willing to place personal pride and profit above the welfare of his stricken land. Defeat and desertion by his following have been his lot, as he might have foreseen. Now Villa concedes that his fight is hopeless and is planning to retire to the United States.

These and similar developments further tend to justify the course of the Washington government in recognizing Carranza. With the effect of that recognition was not to decide the question of supremacy as between Carranza and Villa, but merely to shorten the disorderly warfare following a contest in which Carranza had already demonstrated the greater strength and the greater executive ability.

The effect of the elimination of Villa must be highly beneficial to the peace of Mexico. With the opposition of that forceful leader removed, Carranza should have a reasonable opportunity to show whether he can develop a national government worthy of continued recognition by the United States.

What They Want.

What they want for New Year's gifts:

E. E. Kelly, a new lighting plant.

M. L. Riddell, a self-heater that will heat.

Newton Sullivan, a large box-ball parlor.

W. D. Cooper, a cure for a bum ankle.

Dudley Blyth, another rural wagon route.

Chas. Goodridge, an increase in road machinery.

Judge Cason, good health and plenty of work.

Boss Edding, reduction in the price of gasoline.

R. H. Carter, more weddings at which to officiate.

Herbert Kirkpatrick, a better price for skunk pelts.

Garnett Tolin, a preventive for punctures and blow-outs.

Bert Sullivan, a car load of young bass to put in his pond.

Rupert Rogers, a receipt for avoiding proposals during 1916.

Chas. Fowler, a few new ones to spring when the occasion demands.

Kirk Tanner, an old hen that can be kept in the pan while cooking.

Albert Conner, a good profit on the remainder of his 1915 purchase of the weed.

Camille Maurel, instructions how to break in a few more fingers on his typewriter.

Charles Westbay, a preventive for carbuncles on the neck during the cold weather.

Jack Sandford, a set of teeth that will be in state of preparedness at all times for big dinners.

Post Office Department Talking Economy.

The postoffice department is talking of economizing in the matter of rural routes in Kentucky. It is said that where carriers make their routes in half a day or less, the department will recommend a cut in their salaries.

Jack Sandford, a set of teeth that will be in state of preparedness at all times for big dinners.

It seems the department made an inspection last July of the routes and the time required for carriers to make them. It is decided that many in Kentucky were having too easy a time of it. Hence the decision to cut their pay.

Kentucky Congressmen have represented to the department that July is not the proper time to make such inspection, as the weather conditions are at their best then besides the mail is lightest at that season, thus enabling the carriers to go their rounds in the shortest time. But when the bad weather sets in and the roads become muddy and slippery the time is necessarily increased. A hard fight will be made to keep the department from doing anything of the kind to its faithful rural servants.—Blue Grass Clipper.

Good Resolutions

Only a few more days now and the year 1916 will be gone for ever. If you have accomplished nothing you are worse off than at the beginning of the year because resolutions made and broken weaken the resolves next time.

The words of the poet sing in our ears and lead us about for a new beginning for the new year, it might be well to take an invoice of ourself, our surroundings and the prospects for the future, and prepare to work to them. We are getting into the winter with her long nights and golden opportunities to read and improve and a few good books and journals which treat on our chosen life work will furnish the means of advancement if properly used.

Remember that it has been said that it is not luck nor chance nor fate, but the grit to get there that makes men great. Do some-on the route would have as much right or reason to expect Boone county to build their Dixie Highway or other roads as we have to ask them to build theirs. We have a great deal more because we have the difficulties in grade, or material, that many of them have and we know that they do not have the money of the countries from Chicago to Miami. Do we realize that Boone county is smaller in area and population than any of the other counties mentioned double her wealth, and that leaving out the city of Covington we have as much wealth as any of them. With the money entering us in the face, who in Boone county would expect any citizen in Grand Rapids to contribute to any fund for sake of helping miserly Boone county build its share of the Dixie Highway or other roads? INTERVIEWING "DAD."

"Say, pa, teacher says I have to write a paper on state sovereignty, so I got to find out all I can about it. Do you think, pa, that a state has a right to do as it pleases, or can the U. S. make it do as it says?"

Mr. Barton looked at his eyes from the page and fixed them on his son's face. "Pretty deep subject for a thirteen year old," he commented. "Yes, but I don't know if I do believe in state rights and I know why that fantic teacher of yours started the subject. She thinks that Hobson Amendment should be foisted on us all. I tell you it isn't fair and it'll never carry."

"Why, pa, it isn't right to sell booze is it?"

"I don't say it is right, but I do say the United States has no business to interfere with the states what to do in the matter. Each state should settle that for itself."

Tom's eyes widened with interest. Usually the result of his efforts to obtain information from his father was disappointing. Now, however, he was fortunate, and seemed certainly to have struck a subject of interest, for Mr. Barton laid down his paper and faced about, the eager to impress his views. This was not an opportunity to miss and Tom was quick to grasp it.

"Dad, teachers says the government is like a parent and the states are like the children, and that while the states can do some things to please themselves just as children can, yet the government can just step in and make 'em do, or make 'em stop, just as you would with a child. If it each state could do just as it pleased."

"Well, son, that teacher of yours does not know it all, smart as she thinks she is! I tell you, each state has its own government and makes its own laws."

"How would it be then, pa, if England or Germany should start in to whip one of our states? If the other states didn't want to help, what's to hinder them licking us, one at a time?"

"I'd like to see them do it! The states don't have to say they'll do that matter. If a foreign foe touches one of the states, he touches all of them, or if one person is molested, the whole United States is ready to defend him."

"Well, dad, teacher says that bootleggers are worse than war. I should think if Uncle Sam takes such good care of his own folks, he'd knock those booze sellers off the earth."

"He hasn't the right, I tell you. He could withhold a federal license if he wished, but each state has a right to make its own laws regarding the stuff. Of course, if this Hobson Amendment carries, then if three-fourths of the states go dry, the other will have to do as they say, and it isn't fair."

"Looks to me like it ought to be the other way about," said Tom. "I'd like to see three-fourths of the states go dry, but say, father, did three-fourths of the states go against slavery when Lincoln freed the slaves?"

"Certainly not. That was different. Slavery was degrading. It placed no value on human life, and for a money value it caused untold suffering. It was a menace to the peace of the country, and as such, of course, the President had the right to declare it should cease, which he did."

"Well, father, I've been thinking of a new possibility. I should think the President would do that way now. All the things told over about slavery are just the same with alcohol—the suffering, and the children made into slaves, slaves to drink, and the folks made into wicked people, thieves and murderers, and gamblers. Teacher says that more men die every day from drink than from the drowning on the Titanic. Why, this is lots worse than that slavery. I should really think that if the President could do that to the states, he could do the same now for us. Couldn't we get him to, father?"

"No use. You see all the states claim to have the right to raise money for improvements, running the government, etc., as they think best, and they fear they cannot get along with the revenue from the saloons."

"Does everybody—all the grown ups, I mean—love to raise the revenue?"

"All who have property have to pay taxes, and the money thus raised goes for that purpose, but I do not know how to raise the saloon—that is, not directly."

"Do we help raise the saloon revenue?"

"Certainly not. We don't patronize the saloon. Of course, if they were to go in the hole, we should have to make it up by paying bigger taxes."

"I should think it would be the poor doctors that would be in the hole, but, dad, if it's right to get the revenue that way, seems like we ought to go and buy booze, we ought to help out and do our part."

"Now, my boy, don't worry about that. There'll be plenty to buy it. We don't use it; let the ones who do pay the tax. They don't have to be boozers if they don't want to."

"Teacher says though, pa, that one boy in every five has to become a bootlegger to keep his head going, and, dad," continued Tom, his misty eyes and unsteady voice showing how much in earnest he was, "I'd rather be a bootlegger than to have Johnnie be one. Just couldn't bear to see Johnnie

JUDGE J. W. CAMMACK

Who Retires From the Bench With the Closing of the Year. Last Term of Court Held in Boone.

Just preceding the adjournment of circuit court last Friday evening a bar meeting presided over by County Attorney N. E. Riddell was held at which the attorneys present made speeches highly laudatory of Judge J. W. Cammack as a man and official. The usual resolutions were adopted and an effective parting scene followed. Several days before the adjournment of court N. E. Riddell and Garrett Tolin went to Cincinnati where they purchased a nice five case and had it shipped to Judge Cammack at Owenton. The piece of office furniture was purchased by the members of the bar as a token of the esteem in which they held Judge Cammack as an official.

Judge Cammack was one of the most industrious judges who ever occupied the bench in this district and was honest and impartial in his rulings and courteous to attorneys, litigants and witnesses at all times. He made a host of friends in this county.

Only a few days of 1915 remain. Only a few more days and the year of 1915 will be gone forever. If you have accomplished nothing you are worse off than at the beginning of the year because resolutions made and broken weaken the resolves next time. The words of the poet sing in our ears as we near the last days of the year: "Count that day lost whose low descending sun, Views from thy hands no noble action done." With the closing of the year the new year begins for the future and lay out plans for the future and prepare to work to them. We are getting into the winter with her long nights and golden opportunity to read and improve and a few good books and journals which treat on our chosen life work will furnish the means of advancement if properly studied. Up Goes Gasoline

The greater demand for crude and refined oils abroad with the addition of an increased demand and a lower production of the United States last year used approximately 2,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline and that during the coming year will require half as much more.—N. Y. Sun.

Dispatches received recently stated that $1.25 per barrel for Oklahoma announced by a local company was the highest since the continent first became a prominent factor. It is three times the price asked last August. The cause for this rise is due to the gradual exhaustion of the Cushing pool. This well is producing approximately 80,000,000 barrels a day. A year ago the production was 300,000.

The output of the local oil refineries is sold out far into the spring. It has been estimated that the 2,000,000 automobiles in the United States last year used approximately 2,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline and that during the coming year will require half as much more.—N. Y. Sun.

Notice of Discontinuance.

Notice is hereby given that there will be offered at the regular January term of the Boone County Court, to be held in Burlington, Kentucky, January 24, 1916, a petition for discontinuance and reestablishment of a road known as the Burlington and Union road, leading from the toll-house on the Florence and Union turnpike, about one mile northeast of Union, to a point where said Burlington and Union road intersects the Burlington and Gunpowder road near Pleasant Valley school house, which is about 2½ miles from said beginning point.

The road which is to be discontinued, from the point of beginning follows the meanders of Fowler's creek, crosses and recrosses same several times till it reaches a fork of Gunpowder creek, crossing same, after which it crosses Border's Branch and then returns to the said branch and follows up the same till it reaches the said Burlington and Gunpowder road.

Notice of the above was given the undersigned December 13, 1915. All persons will be under notice of the above.
C. W. GOODRIDGE, County Road Engineer.

MAKE MONEY IN DAIRY

Better Prices Secured for Milk in Winter Than in Summer.

Average Farmer Can Pay More Attention to Work in Cold Weather Than When Crops Are Growing—Cows Must Be Fed.

(By R. B. RUSHING.)

The profits in winter dairying are often greater than those obtained from the milk that is made in the summer. This, however, is because prices for milk, cream and butter are usually much better in the winter than in the summer and often the question of labor is not so acute in the winter season.

It is necessary to have some of my cows come fresh in the fall where such profit is to accrue from the winter dairying. About half the cows coming fresh in the fall equalize the milk supply the year around.

The cost of producing winter milk should not be contrasted with summer milk in figuring profits, because the cows have to be kept anyway, and just about as much feed would have to be fed if the cows were drying up as if they were in milk, if they are fed as they should be.

There is of course more feed given in the winter when the milk production is being stimulated, but that additional feed is about the only charge that should be added. Since the cows have to be fed anyway the whole year around, the average cost of feeding should be figured summer and winter. Adding to that the little extra feed that must be given to stimulate milk production, should be the real cost of winter milk production. Milk and dairy products are easier to market in the winter than in the summer, the milk being cooled with cold air and the cream kept in the same way.

I always look forward to the winter dairying as I do to winter profits in the poultry yard. I think that all will agree with me that the largest profit to be made from winter laying, and I, for one, have found it just so with the winter dairying.

When a man has a well-filled silo there is no reason why the milk flow should not be kept up during the winter. The feeding of the good sweet silage will afford June pasture during January and February.

By being thus supplied with the succulent feed, with the addition of enough concentrated feed to balance the ration the milk flow will be kept up to its average in the summer.

There is another point in favor of dairying in the winter for the farmer who is not making dairying his specialty. Dairying, like everything else, must have personal supervision and the average farmer can give much more attention to the work during the winter than he can during the summer when the work of making the crops is pushing hard.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Be master of your own barn.

Study rations for each cow.

Grow your own feeds to the utmost.

Milk comes by invitation, not force.

Seek June conditions in feeding in December.

Tickle the cow's palate and increase production.

Study the whole problem from a business standpoint.

Test, weigh, weed out. The margin of profit allows no guess work.

Beings in the milk fail insure quality, quantity, and cleanliness.

More sunshine for the big producers, more fresh air for the whole herd.

No man can succeed by being simply a machine capable of performing so much labor.

Be content with nothing but reaching after more.

Clean every particle of fertilizer out of the drill before putting it away, or the parts will rust.

Good cows are never cheap, are hard to find and harder to buy. Reinforce your dairy from your own best cows.

Be sure by feeding a mass of mixed feed under the name of mixed feed, you know all how.

CURING MEAT FOR HOME USE

One of Essentials for Good Meat is Properly Designed Smokehouse—It Should Be Fireproof.

Why pay 25 cents a pound for smoked meats when you can smoke it for nothing with a little hickory or maple wood or a few coals? Not many years ago when most farmers knew how to butcher and cure meats few of them were without a smokehouse and a meat storing room of some kind, writes Leah Ruth Lippincott in Farmers Mail and Breeze. The development of the centralized plant or packing house has caused a great majority of our farmers to lose the art of home curing. It will be profitable, with the present high prices of cured meat and market values of live stock to cure meat for home use or even the local trade.

This should be a fireproof building. The accompanying figure, furnished by the North Dakota Agricultural college, shows the side section of a concrete structure that is about the right size for the average farm. This house also is suitable for storing meat. It is cool and sanitary. If a good lock and burglar alarm are put on the door the meat will be comparatively safe from thieves.

The fire box is placed on the outside of the building for convenience in controlling and replenishing the fire and smoke. There is little danger of the meat overheating with this arrangement. This house will cost about $65 with cement at 50 cents a hundred and lumber at $30 a thousand. This does not include the labor of construction.

Forty-eight sacks of cement, 4 loads (1½ yards) of sand, 8 loads of stone, one load two 2 by 8 by 12s for door frames, three 2 by 4 by 1½ for meat hooks. Lumber for forms: Eighteen 2 by 4 by 10s; sixteen 2 by 4 by 8s; 600 board feet sheathing.

WELL-TILLED FARM IS BEST

It is Not Number so Much as Quality and Care Given That Combine to Bring in Not Results.

A few sheep, a small herd of cows, one or two good brood sows, a flock of Plymouth Rocks or Wyandotte hens, and a few turkeys, on a small farm, well cared for, will bring better net results than large flocks, big herds and big droves. It is not the number so much as the quality and the care given that combine the net results; some men think they must have a big farm to make anything; such men often make out of pocket. There is economy in working as much land and growing as many crops as can be well taken care of, but there is no economy in attempting more than can be well done.

A veteran farmer used to say that he planned his work in the winter so that he would have under cultivation just what could be thoroughly worked with his regular help and he was usually able to get his work done at the proper time, and was not obliged to slight his work. And he generally managed to have as good crops as any of his neighbors and he did not work hard, either. If farmers would but take a lesson from this, break up less land and spend more time in thoroughly fitting it for the crop they would have time to cultivate it more thoroughly and to harvest it in proper condition and attain larger crops from the small area than they do from the larger.

EXPERIMENT WITH HOG FEED

Relative Value of Potatoes and Corn Obtained in Test Held at the Wisconsin Station.

The relative value of potatoes and corn as feed for hogs, obtained in a test at the Wisconsin station, is given as follows: Four hundred pounds cornmeal fed alone produced 100 pounds of gain; 222 pounds cornmeal with 736 pounds of potatoes, weighed before cooking, produced the same number of pounds gain.

Professor Henry who conducted the experiments, says: "From this we learn that 736 pounds of potatoes effected a saving of 173 pounds of cornmeal, 412 pounds of potatoes taking the place of 100 pounds of cornmeal."

Professor Henry in his book "Feeds and Feeding" also says that the Copenhagen station found 400 pounds of cooked potatoes equal to 100 pounds of mixed grains for swine. Since corn has somewhat higher feeding value than the grains used in this test, it is fair to say that 4.5 bushels (60 pounds each) of potatoes after cooking, are equal to one bushel (56 pounds) of corn in feeding pigs.

Sunlight is Natural Tonic. Sunlight is a natural tonic for the little pigs, and they revel in it.

GOOD ROADS

MILEAGE OF CONCRETE ROADS

Growth in Popularity Indicated by Rapid Increase in Recent Years in United States.

The mileage of concrete pavements in the United States has increased rapidly, and it is likely to continue to increase, according to a new bulletin of the United States department of agriculture. This bulletin gives the estimated amount of concrete pavement in the United States in 1914 as 19,200,000 square yards; in 1909 it was only 364,000 square yards.

The principal advantage of concrete pavements which have led to this increase in popularity are said to be:

1. Durability under ordinary traffic conditions.
2. A smooth, even surface offering little resistance.
3. Absence of dust and ease with which it may be cleaned.
4. Comparatively small cost of maintenance until renewals are necessary.
5. Availability as a base for another type of surface if desirable.
6. Attractive appearance.

In commenting upon these advantages the bulletin states that the durability of concrete roads has not yet been proved by actual practice, because there are no very old pavements as yet in existence, but from the condition of those which have undergone several years' service it seems probable that they will be found to wear well.

The disadvantages of concrete as a road surface are:

1. Its noise under horse traffic.
2. The wearing of the necessary joints in the pavement, and the tendency to crack, with its consequent rapid deterioration.
3. The difficulty of repairs when these become necessary.

In the past efforts have frequently been made to overcome these objections to a certain degree by covering the concrete pavement with a bituminous wearing surface. At the present time, the specialists in the department hold that this cannot be economically justified, although it is possible that future investigation may change the situation in this respect. In the present state of road science, however, it seems that where traffic conditions are such that a bituminous surface on a concrete road is practicable a bituminous-surface macadam road would be equally practicable and certainly cheaper. Where traffic is too heavy for macadam road the bituminous surface is likely to give way and the macadam, in which it falls tends to produce excessive wear on portions of the concrete.

For a successful concrete road, hardness, toughness and uniformity are the most essential qualities. These can be secured to a great extent by care in the selection of the constituent materials and the proportions in which they are mixed. Sample specifications are included in the bulletin, No. 249, "Portland Cement Concrete Pavements for Country Roads." These specifications are believed to typify the best engineering practice as it has been developed up to this time. They cover such points as materials, grading, subgrade and construction.

Good Roads Appreciated.

"Motor cars," said Mr. Chuggins, "have done more than anything else to make people appreciate 'good roads'."

"But your machine is constantly breaking down, regardless of the road."

"Yes. But it's a great comfort not to have to climb around in a mud-hole while I am fixing it."

Farmer Saves His Horses. In considering roads, remember that no town looks so good to the farmer that he will kill his horse to get there.

Improve Rural Conditions. Good roads will improve every condition of rural life; and they will cost you no more than poor roads are costing you now.

Increases Farm Value. The better the roads to a farmer's residence, the closer it brings his farm to town, thereby increasing the value of the farm.

Isolated Town. If the roads around a town are bad, it might as well be on an island.

ECONOMY IN ICE-HOUSE CONSTRUCTION

Wooden Ice House, Insulated With Sawdust or Mill Shavings. (Perspective View.)

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Generally speaking, the construction of an ice house is a question of economy for the dairyman. The cost of harvesting and storing, interest on the money invested, repairs, and depreciation on the building should offset the saving in the melting of ice; beyond this it is not good policy to go.

The location of the house should be such as to shield it as much as possible from the wind and from the direct rays of the sun.

The function of an ice house is to prevent the outside heat from passing into the interior and melting the ice; therefore the problem is to minimize the passage of heat by interposing in the walls a material or a construction which will resist its transfer from the outer to the inner side of the building. There is no material known that will entirely prevent the passage of heat; however, there are materials which offer a high resistance and are termed nonconductors or insulators. The best insulators appear to be those that contain the greatest amount of entrapped air confined in the smallest possible spaces.

Formerly it was the practice in constructing buildings for the storage of ice or for cold-storage purposes to provide a series of air spaces some of which were as much as 12 inches wide, the supposition being that they were dead-air spaces. As a matter of fact, however, as the air in contact with the cooler surface will while in contact with the warmer surface, it produced a circulation tending to equalize the temperature of the sides of the air space. Therefore an air space 1 inch wide is practically as good as one 12 inches wide. Air circulation is valuable, however, between the insulated ceiling and the roof of an ice house in order to break up the heat radiation through the roof.

No entrance or exit of air should be allowed to take place in a room where ice is stored, especially at or near the ground line, as the cold currents of air at the bottom will filter through. If the walls and foundations are kept absolutely tight at the bottom, an opening at the top has but little effect, as the warm air entering will remain at the top of the room. When it is necessary to remove ice from the house, the door should be kept open as short a time as possible, and where a covering material is used the ice should be covered. In a properly insulated house a great advantage is that no covering is required. The ice is packed on the floor of the room, depending on the insulated walls and floor for protection from the outside heat. But in the cheaper houses it is better to cover the ice about with a covering of sawdust or mill shavings. A layer of the insulating material should be placed directly on the floor and the ice stacked thereon; there should also be a layer packed between the ice and the walls. Ice should never be placed directly on the ground, soil being a fairly good conductor of heat, especially when wet, as the floors of ice houses are sure to be. The larger percentage of waste, however, is due to the entrance of heat through the insulation of the walls and floor; consequently they should be carefully constructed.

Insulation. As sawdust and shavings are shown in some of the typical designs, it is not to be understood that they are the best insulators for this class of buildings. They are used because they are cheap and can be had in any part of the country, and if kept dry are good insulators. It is a very difficult problem, however, to keep them dry, and when they are to be used great care should be exercised in the construction of the walls in order to keep out the moisture.

Planing-mill shavings are better than sawdust for insulating purposes; they are elastic, do not settle readily, and do not absorb moisture so readily as sawdust; and, most important, are free from dirt, bark, or chips. When used as filling for walls or ceiling, they should be well packed into place to prevent settling.

Sawdust has in the past been used to a great extent in rural districts for insulating walls of small cold-storage buildings, due to the fact that it is available in most country districts and usually without cost. It is not a very satisfactory material for insulating purposes, however, as it is always more or less damp. Furthermore the dampness not only destroys its insulating value, but it favors the growth of mold and rot, first in the sawdust itself and, then in the walls of the building. The rotting and the consequent heating cause the sawdust to settle and leave open spaces which further weakens the insulation. When sawdust is to be employed it should be thoroughly dried before use.

There are several makes of commercial insulators that are a great deal better than either shavings or sawdust and are cheaper in the end, but their initial cost is somewhat greater. They are nearly uniform in their insulating value, and moisture has but little effect upon them. They are practically fireproof, occupy but little space, and will retain their efficiency indefinitely. To get the best results, however, they should be installed by experienced men.

Drainage. Provision should be made for thorough drainage. In houses that have the floor below the level of the ground, sufficient drainage usually can be obtained through the soil, especially if the soil is porous. It may be necessary, however, with a clay soil, to excavate a foot or two and fill in with cinders or gravel, and to place a 3-inch porous tile under the floor. This drain should be properly trapped or sealed to prevent warm air from entering the building through the floor. In place of the tile a satisfactory drain may be constructed in houses having a ground floor by digging a ditch under the floor of the house and filling the ditch with broken stone or gravel, well packed into place. This drain should be led out with sufficient fall to carry away the water.

All floors should be sloped downward toward a center of the room to prevent the ice from falling against the walls of the building and in houses having water-tight floors to carry the water to the drain.

Ventilation. There is bound to be more or less melting of ice, no matter what the construction of the building may be, and this will cause moisture to settle on the walls and ceiling of the room. If the building is of wood construction the moisture is absorbed by the wood, and rot and decay follow. Therefore wooden houses should be provided with means of ventilation which can be controlled at will. The ceiling of such houses should be sloped up to the center in order to assist the circulation and carry the warm, moisture-laden air to the ventilator. In those houses in which some form of commercial insulation is used that will take a cement finish on the interior no ventilation is considered necessary. The building should be so constructed that there will be a circulation of air through the outer walls and at the eaves to the ventilator on the roof, as these air currents tend to break up the heat radiation through the walls and roof.

Waterproofing. It is of the utmost importance that brick, concrete, and wooden buildings be waterproofed. Brick and concrete work may be rendered waterproof by painting the outside of the wall with white lead and oil or by coating the walls with a preparation of paraffin or asphalt, or by some of the patented compounds. The preparation containing paraffin or asphalt should be applied hot, and the walls should also be heated previously to application.

There are on the market several water-excluding paints and compounds for preserving wood. Creosote is considered one of the best preservatives, provided the wood is thoroughly impregnated with it, but on account of its odor it should not be used in houses where food products are stored.

BE ECONOMICAL IN FEEDING

Policy for Farmer to Give Fowls Such Grains as He Has on Farm, Thus Eliminating Cash Outlay.

With regard to feeding poultry it is always wise to be economical and yet give sufficient of the right food. It is policy to feed such grains as one has on his farm, and supplement with certain feeds which can profitably be purchased for the fitting of the birds for market.

By thus doing we eliminate any heavy outlay in cash, may utilize inferior grain and only purchase those which in better growing and fitting will be incorporated into the foods and make the balanced ration.

Good Horses in Demand. Good horses are in such demand now that it will pay any farmer with good horse sense to sit up and take notice.

THE FARMER AND WIFE TEACH

The little chap in blue overalls, holding his home-made "Farm Day" flag, was one of the school children to help in this new celebration in Hart County last September. Perhaps "Farm Day" ought not to be spoken of as a celebration at all, because it is merely the school children going to school to a good farmer and his wife for a day. But then it was a celebration for the good neighbors and parents of the school children, so perhaps it was something of a mixture of a celebration and a going to school that pleased everybody immensely.

Farm Day goes to show that new things in the life of the rural schools are springing up everywhere, and the only difficulty in using them rationally is, that the change of administration at Frankfort is putting into office a new man as Superintendent every four years. No matter how strong a school man he might be, he has no time in which to develop school matters over a long period, and so the school and the children suffer.

On the 10th of September the children and teachers of 23 schools were visiting. Each school had selected the best farm and home in the neighborhood to visit for the whole day. Everybody had been notified a week in advance, so that each child and every visitor brought a lunch. Instead of "readin', writin'" and "arithmatic," under the teacher's supervision, the farmer and his good wife took charge. The farmer took the youngsters out to see his cattle, while he explained what he considered the best plan of feeding to make them a profitable proposition. Horses and mules, cows and calves, tobacco patches, cornfields and meadows were inspected and estimates made of crops still on the land or in the barns.

The girls were taken in hand by the good housekeeper and shown through her home from cellar to garret. Her methods of handling her milk and cream and butter were explained in full. Her turkeys, chickens and geese were visited. She told them what she considered the best broods and gave them her ideas of the feeding and the care of fowls. She even got out her winter supply of jams, jellies, preserves and canned fresh fruits and vegetables and told her audience what she considered a reliable plan of "putting up garden and orchard sans" so that it would be certain to keep.

The farmers were delighted because it made the children see the farm from a proper viewpoint. The housewives were charmed because the children saw how closely connected good farming and good housekeeping were. The neighbors were pleased because the day became an informal social gathering which centered about the school. The teacher was glad to be able to have the children busy with real things and real problems, while their own parents and neighbors looked on.

If every county in the state could have a "Farm Day" or a half dozen of them scattered through the year, it would force the matter of education close home to every parent. As was mentioned above, one of the great stumbling blocks to definite and well-organized advancement in the schools of the state is that the school system is tied up in politics. This is not the fault of the school men and women, but the fault of the people. If the people love their children, and they do, they will see to it that the schools are lifted out of politics for all time to come.

GET RID OF THE STUMP

SCHOOLS ARE THE KEYS.

Fine farms, good roads, comfortable homes, and blooded stock in a community are things to have, but they do not necessarily develop good schools for the children of all the people. That this is true can be seen by a day's drive through many of the richest and most prosperous counties in old Kentucky. But good schools, sending out into the community year after year a steady stream of educated citizens, means that they will produce good roads, fine farms, blooded stock, real homes, and every good thing in life. Farm lands without trained brains lose their fertility. Good roads without a real citizenship go to pieces. Fine stock without technical skill loses its value. Real homes without the light of education grow dark and dismal. The school is the only safeguard in our state or in any neighborhood. Fine, strong rural schools and the children on Kentucky's many farms are the keys which alone can unlock the door to a glorious golden future for the dear old Commonwealth.

DIFFERENT TYPES OF DAIRY ICEHOUSES

Farmer's icehouse with milk room.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The dairy division of the United States department of agriculture has been investigating the different types of icehouses in use by dairymen, and has studied the advantages of each type. Only a small number of the icehouses examined by the department's specialists were built of new lumber.

In many instances ice was stored in the cellar under the house or barn, or in the corner of some building, such as a woodshed, corncrib, or barn, or under the driveway leading to the barn, and occasionally it was simply stacked outdoors with no roof for protection. Where the ice was stored in cellars, open sheds or in stacks, the loss from melting was comparatively large, depending on the ventilation, drainage and care in packing. Where the cost of harvesting ice is a small item, dairymen often say that it is less expensive to store in such places than to go to the expense of building an up-to-date icehouse. Where ice is stacked outdoors and covered with some form of insulation, it is necessary to put up from 30 to 50 per cent more than the amount previously allowed, so as to provide for the heavy shrinkage.

The ice should be stored as near the milkinghouse as possible, in order to save labor in removing it to the milk tank. A great many dairymen find it an advantage to have the milk room in one end of the icehouse. In this way the cost of a separate laundries is eliminated. The small amount of time and labor required to transfer the ice to the cooling tank generally acts as an added incentive for the free use of ice. It is highly important that the milk room, whether combined with the icehouse or standing alone, be located so that objectionable odors will be avoided.

In comparing the different methods of storing ice, it was found that where the cost of ice was comparatively high it was advisable to spend enough money in building and insulating the icehouse to protect the ice from melting as much as possible, but in cases where the cost of the ice was small it appeared that the owners were often justified in building a cheaper storage with a relatively high loss of ice from melting. The dairymen therefore should consider both the cost of construction and the cost of the ice in selecting the type most suitable for their requirements.

Some farmers store their ice in roughly constructed bins. One of this sort was seen, made by placing large posts of irregular sizes three feet in the ground and about four feet apart, and upon these were nailed a miscellaneous lot of boards; no roof was provided. The shrinkage was reported from 30 to 50 per cent. Ice might be stored in this manner for some purposes, but this method is not recommended for a dairy farm. Furthermore, a bin of this sort is very unsightly and is an indication of slack methods in farming. Where ice is cheap and building material high, it might be permissible as a temporary arrangement; but it is not so economical a method as may appear at first sight, for the cost of the ice lost in shrinkage would generally amount to more than the interest on the cost of constructing a serviceable icehouse.

An instance was observed in which a corner of a woodshed, about twelve feet square and ten feet high, had been converted into an ice shed. This corner of the woodshed had been roughly boarded up and about 14 inches of sawdust placed around the ice on all sides, top and bottom. The cost of the building was very little, and the shrinkage was reported at about 20 per cent. The owner stated that softwood sawdust is a much better insulation than hardwood sawdust.

The icehouse in the illustration measures 15 by 30 feet on the outside and 8 feet high. At the front or south end a room 15 by 6 feet is partitioned off and used for a milk room. The remaining space, 15 by 14 feet by 8 feet high, after allowing for 6 inches of wall, 12 inches of sawdust on the sides, 12 inches on the bottom, and 18 inches on the top, will provide space for about 17 tons of ice. This house is built on high, sloping ground, where the soil is porous, consequently the drainage is satisfactory. The foundation is made of concrete (mixture 1 to 6), 1 1/2 feet wide at the bottom and sloping gradually until the top measures 8 inches. The sills which rest on the foundation are 6 by 6 inches, upon which are erected 2 by 6 inch studs with 24-inch centers. On the top of the studs rests a 2 by 6 inch plate, and the studs are sheathed inside and outside with rough boarding. The outside is then covered with weatherboarding. The roof has a two-thirds pitch and is constructed of 2 by 4 inch rafters, 24-inch centers, boarded and covered with shingles. In each gable is located a slat ventilator, 2 1/2 by 1 1/2 feet, which with the high pitch of the roof allows for an abundance of free circulation of air over the ice. The milk room is provided with two glass windows 3 1/2 by 2 feet, one in each end. The milk room is provided only with a movable ice-water tank, 3 1/2 by 4 by 2 feet, in which are placed the cream cans. A rope and pulley which are fastened to the ceiling are used in transferring the ice from the icehouse up and over the wall and lowering it into the tank. The material and labor for constructing this combination milk- and icehouse amounted to $125. The shrinkage on the 100 cakes in storage was estimated at about 15 to 20 per cent. The ice in this house cost 2 cents a cake, exclusive of hauling and storing.

GOOD FEED FOR YOUNG FOAL

Colt Should Be Taught to Nibble at Grain With Dam—Weaning Made Rather Easy Task.

Are you giving that young foal the proper care? To become a strong, sound horse, when matured the foal must be well nourished and given every advantage possible.

The foal should be taught to eat grain very early. By placing the feed box from which the dam eats before now, the foal, at about two months of age, will begin nibbling with the mother, and will soon acquire a taste for the grain.

A pen built in one corner of the field made high enough to keep the foal out and allow the colt to pass under will make it possible to feed the foal grain with very little difficulty. Allow the mare in the inclosure with the foal for a few times, and it will soon learn to go in itself. Keep a liberal supply of grain, preferably oats and bran, and perhaps some cracked corn, in the feed box. To induce the dam to loiter about with the colt, have the pen near a shade tree or the salt box.

By weaning time the foal will have become thoroughly accustomed to eating grain and will wean very easily, sometimes being in better condition as a result of this additional feed.

SERIOUS DISEASE OF CALVES

Diphtheria Is Very Contagious and Contracted Principally by Young Animals—Some of Symptoms.

Calf diphtheria is a serious disease appearing among calves three to five days old. Infected calves refuse to drink or suck, have some discharge of saliva from the mouth and there are inflamed patches inside the mouth which gradually develop into ulcers. There is fever, and an offensive odor from the mouth. The disease is very contagious and is contracted principally by young calves and pigs up to six or eight months old, although occasionally adult cattle and hogs have it.

Dr. M. H. Reynolds of the Minnesota station advises treating the sores by first cleaning with a 3 per cent solution of creolin in warm water and then treating twice a day with a solution of permanganate of potash, two ounces to a gallon of water, this treatment to be kept up for about a week. The potash solution should be made the fresh each time. Thoroughly clean up the calf pen and yards and spray with disinfectant.

Neglected Fruit Trees. Neglected fruit trees are not worth the ground they occupy; besides they are an eyesore to everyone, and when infested with worms and insects they are a constant nuisance to the neighborhood. There ought to be laws prohibiting any man from allowing trees of this kind to remain on his farm.

Proper Place for Tools. Gather up tools and other implements that are usually scattered all over the place at this season of the year, or you'll be the loser when the first snow falls and covers them up till they cannot be found again during the whole winter.

FOR BETTER ROADS

GUIDE-BOARD QUITE USEFUL

Diagrammatic Illustration of District With Township Sections Indicated by Different Lines.

The Scientific American, in describing a guide-board invented by W. A. Fusch of Decatur, Ill., says: This invention is a guide-board bearing a diagrammatic illustration of a district with township sections and roads indicated by differentiated lines, and having a movable device adapted to be set in the guide-board at any desired point which serves to indicate the location of said guide-board in the particular district or township delineated by the map on its face. The guide-board has a border on which are inscribed names of towns and other locations lying outside the one in which the guide-board itself is located, and also the distances of such towns and locations from points indicated on the map proper.

PREPARE ROADS FOR WINTER

Before Ground Freezes Smooth, Drag and Pack Center of Road to Provide Needed Drainage.

See that all drain ditches along the road are opened before the ground freezes; then smooth, drag and pack the center of the road, and you will have provided for the essential drainage, without which we cannot expect to have good highways. All roads should be picked out of the track before they freeze to the ground, harvesting both man and beast when they pass over them during the winter months. Low places at bridges and culverts should be filled and leveled up to make winter travel more durable. Repair holes in bridges, to guard against serious accidents by some horse getting his foot fast—perhaps breaking his leg.

TO MAKE CONCRETE CULVERT

Directions Given for Making Small Bridge Strong Enough to Stand Travel of Heavy Teams.

Our borough construction force builds a very good concrete culvert in the manner shown in the sketch, writes James M. Kane in Popular Mechanics. The sides A are first built, and the forms removed before the concrete is completely set. Benchlike wood forms are then placed at intervals between the sides A and boards laid on them, then paper spread over the surface of the boards. The concrete is then put on top of the paper. Short pieces of railroad iron are laid in the concrete to reinforce it. After the top has properly set, the supports are driven out, or broken down with a long iron rod. The boards are then easily withdrawn. This culvert is strong enough to stand the travel of heavy teams as well as automobile trucks.

Virtues of Good Roads. Good roads will increase health, wealth, happiness, education, religion, morality, civilization and prosperity.

Drainage is Essential. Drainage is the first essential of the construction of good roads and still it is very frequently the last to be considered.

Easy on Horse and Wagon. Good roads are easy on you, easy on your horse, easy on the wagon, easy on the harness.

Happier Social Life. Good roads bring a better school life, a closer church life, a happier social life.

Morning Light Strongest. The morning light is from ten to thirty per cent stronger than that of the afternoon, varying with the season. The light-transmitting properties of different kinds of glass vary greatly. Thus the loss of light from glass as compared with outdoor light ranges all the way from thirteen to thirty-six per cent or more. The practice of lapping the panes causes an average loss of light of about eleven per cent. The transmission of light naturally increases as the angle of the roof more closely coincides with a right angle to the sun's rays.

His Natural Thought. A South Dakota railroad is noted for its excruciating roadbed. A new brakeman was making his first trip over the road at night and was standing in the center of the car, grimly clutching the seats to keep erect. Suddenly the train struck a smooth place in the track and slid along without sound. Seizing his lantern, the brakeman ran for the door. "Jump for your lives!" he shouted. "She is off the track!"

Gunpowder and Dynamite. While both gunpowder and dynamite are explosives, they fall into different structural classifications. Gunpowder is a nitrate mixture, whereas dynamite is a nitro compound—that is, the former is a combination of nitrogen solution mixed with other ingredients, and the latter is a compound of nitro-glycerin absorbed by a porous inert solid material.

Cooks Held in High Honor. There is no better proof of the delicacy of the Greek palate than the honor in which cooks were held. They placed their trade with the greatest freedom, and, not being attached to this master or that, they were called in by the rich on occasions of brilliant festivity. What wonder then the cook's was a respectable profession, becoming a free man?

An Old Friend. Humorous Artist—"I've brought you an original funny joke this time. A friend-of-mine thought of it." Editor (after reading it)—"Yes, it is funny; but I prefer the drawing that was published with it in the 'seventies!'" Punch.

Loss of Water With Age. The slow but sure loss of water with age has been noted in the tissues of rats and other animals. There is more water in the bodies of young animals than in adults, and the quantity of nitrogen and phosphorus they contain also diminishes with age.

The Linen of Ireland. In 1658, the year of the accession of William III, the export of linen from Ireland barely reached $30,000 worth; in 1741 it reached $3,000,000; in 1779, $7,500,000, and in 1825 the declared value was $14,455,090.

After His Own Heart. Museum Attendant—"The bill of this prehistoric bird had thousands upon thousands of little holes all over it. Congressmen (enthusiastically)—"Magnificent! What an ideal one to introduce in congress!"—Judge.

Where the Earth is Thickest. Scientists have figured that the earth is thickest along an imaginary line drawn from the top of Chimborazo, a mountain in Ecuador, and a point on the coast of Sumatra, where the land is fairly high.

Comfortably Fixed. Student (to visitor, as they settled down for a chat)—"I am extremely satisfied with my apartments. I have a dining room, a study, working room, and bedroom, and just think how convenient—all in one!"

How It Became Known. "Why do you think his wife is going to bring divorce proceedings?" "I know it, my dear. In the past month she has had at least a hundred photographs taken of herself at home with the children."—Puck.

Ylang-Ylang. Ylang-ylang, or cananga oil, is derived from the flowers of Cananga odorata and is regarded as one of the most delicious odors in the market. It is also produced in the Philippines.

Fathered Visitors to Panama. A number of the birds in Panama are mere winter visitors from the United States. These include such familiar varieties as sparrows, tanagers, orioles, flycatchers, swallows, thrushes, warblers and catbirds.

Something for Nothing. Something can never be got for nothing, repeats the wayside philosopher. On the contrary, there are some things that can be got for nothing. Love is one, when it's unrequited. Advice is another.

What Really Counts. A girl may have beautiful eyes, but she isn't so apt to succeed as the one who has plenty of cheek.

Eyesight of the Indian. American Indians claim that they can see at least one-tenth farther than the average white man.

The statement that Rev. W. E. Mitchell of Georgetown, was considering a call to take charge of the Walton Baptist church was circulated more because of a desire to have this excellent gentleman and minister as the pastor of the church, than because of the remotest chance of securing his services as he holds the arduous position of vice president of the Baptist College at Georgetown.

Anxious to See Grandpa.

Thos. F. Curley received a telegram from his father, Hon. Francis Curley of Tucson, Arizona, last Thursday, that his home was blessed by the arrival of a daughter and that she was as pretty as a picture and would be glad to see grandpa at any time.

Moved to New Building.

Richey & Renaker move this week to their new building from the W. B. Norman stand. Their new building is a model of modern neatness and affords them much better facilities for their rapidly increasing business.

Christmas Observed by Churches.

The Christmas time was very happily observed by the Baptist church Christmas eve by a pleasing program by the Sunday school children after which a distribution of candies, fruits, nuts, etc., was made. The Sunday schools of the M. E. and Christian churches combined a very interesting program at the latter church. The scholars were remembered by a bountiful distribution of good things. Both entertainments were well attended and much merriment was enjoyed by the good cheer that abounded.

Auto Truck Put out of Commission.

J. M. Arnold who represents the Standard Oil Co., in the retail sale of oil in this quarter, had his gasoline auto truck put out of commission last week in attempting to cross a swollen creek near Napoleon. Robt. Arnold was operating the machine and when he came to the creek thought he could make a jump drive. The water, but the water was deeper than anticipated and when it struck the deep part the cold water crossed the engine and the hot cylinders caused the cylinders to crack and put a stop to the further progress of the machine, which had to be hauled home and put in the repair shop. The expense of the repairs was about $75 but the machine is now making its regular trips.

Mountain Evangelical Work.

Rev. A. Kirkpatrick spent the past two weeks in Owaleysco, doing evangelical work in the interest of the Baptist church, responding to a special invitation to come to the mountain of Ky. and help in the good work of up-building that splendid section of the State, where the people are constantly exhibiting a desire to make it one of the best parts of this great Commonwealth, religiously, morally and from a business point of view. The people there are of the most hospitable class, kind and generous, and a visit to them brings them close to the heart of Jesus. They are given an royal treatment by the people and his meetings were largely attended and he was given the marked attention and the excellent sermons deserved. He held meetings in different parts of Owaleysco county, and to his own engaging, and to his ride on a mule over the mountains a distance of nine miles.

Died Suddenly.

Lawrence Roberts, one of our old and highly respected citizens, died very suddenly at his farm near town last Thursday. He had been ill for some time but was able to be about and at the time of his death he was getting in his buggy for the purpose of coming to Walton to consult his physician when he was seized with a paroxysm of pain and fell over dead. He was taken to his home but he was beyond earthly aid. Mr. Roberts was a native of Ireland and he died, and his age was 79 years, one month and twenty days. For nearly eighty years he resided in the same neighborhood and in that long period of time he witnessed this section grow from a wilderness inhabited by wild beasts and Indians to its present high state of civilization. He was a good citizen and was esteemed by all for his many good qualities. He was married to Miss Nannie Kenyon also a native of Boone county and she with five daughters and three sons survive him. He mourns the loss of a kind husband and devoted father. He is also survived by two brothers Jas. Roberts of Edinburg, Missouri, and Daniel Roberts of Verona. The children are Mrs. Mattie Ransom, Mrs. Bertha Baker, Mrs. Ada Moore, and Miss Kate and Eva Roberts; Eugene V. Arthur and Rev. John Roberts. The funeral took place Christmas day, the services being conducted by Rev. Jos. B. Harris of the Methodist church of Covington, the deceased being a member of that denomination. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Walton.

Death of Mrs. George Carroll.

Death always carries with it visitation the greatest of sorrow, for the parting of loved ones at the grave makes a separation that is difficult to reconcile and particularly was this the case in the death of Mrs. Geo. Carroll who passed to her heavenly reward at her home near Banklick, Tuesday, Dec. 21st, after a lingering illness from that fell destroyer consumption, as she left behind her four little children, two sons and two daughters, besides her faithful husband, to feel the loss of a kind and affectionate wife and mother whose every wish was their happiness and welfare. Their lot would be sad indeed but for the hope of being united with her in that celestial abode when their time comes to lay down life's burdens. Mrs. Carroll was a woman of those loving characteristics that endeared her to every body and to her family she was all that meant love and happiness. She was a woman of the highest character and her friends and neighbors who were loved for her many virtues, and they with heartfelt sympathy feel the deep affliction that has fallen on this little family. Mrs. Carroll who was a native of Ireland was in her 45th year. Her maiden name was Temple, and she came to this country with a little girl. She was a faithful member of the Catholic church and a high mass was said over her remains by Father Dwyer. She was dependent Catholic church last Thursday morning, after which the interment took place in the Catholic cemetery at this place.

Walton Masonic Lodge elected officers for the ensuing year, viz.: W. M. Ernest W. McElroy; S. W. Chas. S. Boles; J. W. Edmund M. Johnson; Secretary: Dr. C. C. Metcalfe; Roy D. Stanner and Geo. Grubbs. Installation at the regular meeting Friday night, January 7.

Overalls for Women

A dispatch from Savannah, Ga., says: All the shops in Georgia are buying now boys' size overalls for housewives. Georgia housekeepers have learned the comfort and danger of sweeping and cleaning with windows with flappy skirts at their ankles. Diseases gathered dust and the germs 'got in the way.' Overalls are the source of comfort in housekeeping. And, if they are soiled, what matter. They are easy to wash or replaced at small cost.

Many women are taking to the innovation, which made its first appearance in Chicago. Young women particularly are no longer willing to put their gowns and their lives by washing windows and hanging pictures in unwieldy skirts. And Georgia women have not outgrown the fashion or doing their own work. There are young wives in Savannah and other Georgia cities who even scrub their own floors. But many of them are now openly wearing overalls instead of dresses for their housework.

"I have been keeping house for five years," said Mrs. E. W. Davidson, "so you see I am not at all a beginner. I'm a practical housewife and I find that unbuttoned overalls are the best for sweeping floors and cleaning windows and the like are overalls. They can be neat and white instead of dingy and old, and they don't need to be unlavishly. Skirts hold the dust and are much in the way. If you wear a nice dress you are sure to get it dirty. A nice dress you don't look well in it. The upshot of the whole thing is that overalls are the ideal dress for the housewife. The convenience of the garb should not count, because women are not supposed to be on exhibition when engaged in housework."

Even women who hesitate to adopt the new dress are inclined to agree with Mrs. Davidson on general principles. "I do not ever hang pictures, and while balancing on the fourth rung of the ladder look charming," she asked, "did you ever scrub a floor, actually scrub it, on your hands and knees, and look the picture of grace? Did you ever set out hot foot after old Mr. Dyer and while you were chasing him, seem adorable?"

THE STATE PRESS.

Groeslan, the imported Percheron stallion owned by the Neave Percheron Horse Company, was sold last week to Alva Hedgecock for $200. The horse cost the company $2,600—Falmouth Outlook.

In a turkey contest in Madison county Mrs. Effie Oldham captured all three prizes. Her twelve young hens weighed 153 pounds; twelve young toms 210, and six of each 365 pounds.—Chilman Madisonian.

Charley McQuinn, a prominent Methodist preacher of the Calaboose section of Wolfe-co., while on duty at the State Penitentiary, was shot and killed by a party of men who were about the penitentiary. He was not expected to survive.—Jackson Times.

The Harrison County fiscal court last week voted to appropriate $800 to supplement an equal amount made available by the United States Department of Agriculture for the purpose of employing a competent farm demonstrator to reside in the county and render such service in farm instruction work on farms of the county as will be required by a committee of farmers, in conjunction with the county Board of Agriculture and Board of Magistrates.—Cynthiana Democrat.

That the use of acid phosphate on most any kind of grain crop will double the yield has been clearly proven this year by John E. Day, who has been farming in the south of here. Some time ago Mr. Davis informed us that he had two acres of corn on which he had used 400 pounds of acid phosphate to the acre, and that it was a great deal better than the other corn he had planted on much better land. So last Friday he was in town and informed us that he had finished gathering his corn and that the yield was just double what it was on the land where he did not use the phosphate. These two acres yielded seventy bushels of corn per acre, while the few acres adjoining this which was better land, only yielded 35 bushels of corn per acre. All this corn was given the same cultivation.—Cadiz Record.

Boyd Osborne, who lives near the mouth of Sugar Creek, on the Kentucky River, has been quite successful as a trapper this fall, and his latest catch in one of his deadfalls establishes a reputation for him. That is, he has caught a fishy "cat" which was surprised with envy by others who follow this profession. One day last week he set a deadfall near the edge of the river for a coon that he knew had been in the spot and the trap was baited with a large piece of chicken, a very toothsome morsel for his "coonship," but that night the river rose and the trap was entirely submerged. Three days later the river fell and left the trap high and dry. When Mr. Osborne surprised he found it contained a large catfish that weighed exactly ten pounds. That may sound a little "fishy," but it was proved for by several of the neighbors who were called in to see the wonderful catch.—Lancaster Central Record.

KENSINGTON.

Miss Lydia Rouse and pupils of district 3 gave an entertainment Christmas eve, consisting of dialogues, The Christmas tree was enjoyed greatly. Many of the parents and several others were present. Messrs. Marion Walton and Marion Stephenson furnished the music. The school was dismissed for the holidays.
